FATHER ROONEY'S LECTURE.

(Continued from First Page.)

not the second, since not even the slightest indication of figurative language is perceptible in these words: "This is my body; this is my blood;" and certainly not the third, since numbers was it ever understood that the human body or blood was signified or represented by bread and wine. Furthermore, in a very nature of a metaphor requires that the sign or image should be known to the audience either from the nature of the thing itself, or from custom or from the fact that men understand it to refer to such-a-thing; or, if there be any doubt as to the application of the metaphor, the audience ought to be disposed to know its meaning either by previous or subsequent explanation in the employment, otherwise this manner of speech would be foolish and false. But in the application of this rule of Hermeneutics Bread, neither from the nature of the thing itself, nor from any institution, nor from use, nor from the understanding of men, was ever regarded as a sign or figure of the body of Christ, nor the wine of His blood; nor did Christ on any occasion dispose His audience by explanation either previous to the employment of the words of the institution or subsequent to their use that He intended bread and wine to be figures of His body and blood. Under every consideration, therefore, it is impossible that they should be a metaphor in the words of the Institution, or that bread and wine should be signs of the body and blood of Christ. unless Christ by a special decree should raise them to this dignity, and instruct His audience that such was His intention. Did He do so? Not at all; nor is there a shadow of reference to such a thing... On the contrary, Christ, with all the solemnity of a God, is continually insinuating the necessity of eating His flesh and of drinking His blood. But let us examine the conduct of our Lord at the last supper, and let us dwell on the meaning of the words used, and we will soon see the doctrine of the Real Presence in all its glory and beauty. What did Christ do at the last supper in the presence of His apostles? He took bread into His sacred hands, and blessed it and broke it and gave it to His disciples. What did He say? He said: This bread which I have taken into my hands, blessed and broke, and which I now distribute to you, is no longer bread, but it now my body. What body? The same body which shall be delivered up for the world. Here there is no reference made, no allusion whatever to a figurative body to an image or representation of Christ. In this manner, the choice was taken into His sacred hands. He blessed it and gave it to His disciples to drink. But what did He say was in the chalice? This is my blood, which shall be shed for many for the remission of sins; that is, in this chalice which I now give you, is the very blood which shall be poured out to-morrow for the redemption of the world. Surely God let no room for cavilling in the words of the institution. Protestants have a rule called the Confession of Faith, and in the first article of that Confession they say: "It is not allowable to men or angels to change the Holy Scriptures, either by adding to them or by taking from them." And yet in the face of this rule, and notwithstanding the clearness of the words of the institution, they insert, in point of fact, the word "figure" or "image" where God never put it, namely—where God says: "This is my body; this is my blood," they have, or so understand them words: "This is the figure of my body; this is the figure of my blood." They have not the slightest foundation of authority for so doing. I have placed before you more than twelve texts from the Holy Scriptures, where our Lord, in speaking of the Holy Eucharist, employed the terms "flesh," "body," "blood," and Protestants cannot produce even one text from their Bible and erroneously translated Bible where the term or word "symbol," "image" or "figure" of the body or blood of Christ occurs. But what most serious consequence will flow most logically if we have not the Real Presence in the Eucharist? If we have not the Real Presence in the Eucharist, if the Catholic doctrine of the Real Presence is false, then Christ deceived His apostles, and through them the whole Church, for we must bear in mind that the Real Presence has been uniformly taught by the whole Church from the beginning. Christ, then, has led us into, at least, material idolatry. Nor is this the only consequence that would inevitably flow from the defect of the Real Presence in the Eucharist. If we have not the Real Presence, I will boldly assert, and indubitably prove that we are not redeemed, that Christ is not the Messiah, that the law let is in imposition, and that the Jews alone have true faith! These are startling words! Yes, and they are true, if our doctrine of the Real Presence be false! How do you prove the truth of these words? my adversaries exclaim. Well, listen to the proof. Did not Christ, at the last supper, speaking of the wine, in His usual figurative style, when He was giving His body and blood to His apostles, "This is my body, which is given up for you; this is my blood, which shall be shed for you." (Luke, 22d chap., verses 19 and 20) He certainly according to His words, gave them the very body and very blood that were to be offered on the cross for the world. The question now arises, did He die really and truly on the cross, did He have real flesh and blood on the cross, or did He offer Himself up substantially for us? If He died truly for us on the cross, if He had His real body and blood there, then we have the Real Presence in our Eucharist, for He told His disciples that he gave them the very body and the very blood that would be on the cross. In other words, was it His real body or only a fantastic body that was on the cross? Undoubtedly, whichever was on the cross, that Christ, we, according to His own words. If He was truly on the cross, we have the Real Presence; if He had only a fantastic body on the cross, then He only gave at the last supper a figure, an image of Himself, and the Protestants are right in holding to the figurative presence; but logically and substantially they must also hold, and we will hold with them, if they are right in their figurative presence, that Christ only died substantially, in appearance, and not in reality! This is, incontrovertibly, the logical deduction from Protestant view of the Eucharist. But there is another stringent logical conclusion and equally certain that flows from this. If He only died fantastically for us, He did not die at all, and hence we are not redeemed; that Christ is a base impostor, and that the sooner we return to the religion of the Jews, and await the coming of the true Messiah, the better it will be for us. I have proved that we Catholics have the Real Presence, and hence Christ died truly for us, and I triumphantly defy the world to logically deduce one inference or conclusion from our doctrine. Now all the opponents of the Real Presence must hold one of two propositions: they must admit that Jesus Christ could not give His true body and blood to us in the Eucharist, or if He could, He didn't wish to give them to us. Every believer in the figurative presence of Christ in the Eucharist must be caught on one or other horn of this dilemma! If our adversaries say that Christ could not give us His true body and blood, in the Eucharist, then I ask what has become of His omnipotence, that infinite power which changed the water into wine, at the marriage feast of Cana, which multiplied the loaves in the desert, which drew all creatures from nothing, which has wonderfully united the human nature to the divine in the the Hypostatic union? Or is it more difficult to change one substance into another than to create things, or draw them from nothing? And those opponents of the Eucharistic Real Presence really to reunion on the first article of their creed, in which they profess to believe in an omnipotent God, or do they wish to set bounds to that omnipotence and to measure it according to the weakness of the human imagination. But if they say He could, indeed, give us His real body and blood in the Eucharist, but that He did not wish to do so, then I ask why did He use words that mean nothing else but the Real Presence, for of the bread He said: "This is my body," and of the wine He said, "This is my blood." Are the myteries of the Trinity and Incarnation more plainly worded? They are not. If He only intended to give us Himself figuratively, why didn't he employ words which would denote a figurative presence, such as those: of the bread: "This is a figure of my body," and of the wine, "This is a figure of my blood?" For the simple reason that He never intended a figure, as we have most conclusively shown from His own divine words. I now pass to the argument in favor of our glorious doctrine from St. Paul. This great apostle, after narrating that he received the history of the institution of the Eucharist from Christ Himself, says of him who receives it unworthily, that "he shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. (1st Corinthians, chap. 11, verse 27.) But if there are only simple bread and victuals' wine in the Eucharist, how can a man be guilty of the body and blood of Christ, even if he receives the sacrament in a bad disposition? What court in the world will decide that a man is guilty of murdering one because he breaks my statue or defaces my image? I admit that to insult the image or the statue of any person is to insult the person, but will that insult to the image or statue the offender to be regarded as a murderer of the person, or as guilty of his blood? To no other crime but that of receiving unworthily the Eucharist is the charge against the guilty of the body and the blood of the Lord" applied; and why, because both body and blood are in the holy Eucharist. This one text has no meaning, if the Protestant Eucharist be the right one, it can only have meaning when applied to the Real Presence unworthily received. Besides, Protestants can never receive unworthily. Either they have faith or they haven't; if they have faith, they receive worthily; if they haven't, they only receive bread and wine, according to their own teaching. It is clear St. Paul wasn't a Protestant. But this great apostle further adds in the 29 a verse of the same chapter: "For he that eats and drinks unworthily, eateth and drinketh judgment to himself, not discerning the body of the Lord." According to the Protestant apostle, a man receives unworthily, and thus eats and drinks his own damnation, as the Protestant translation has it, by not discerning the body of the Lord. But, if the body is not there at all, how can a man be said to eat and drink his own damnation, by not discerning the body of the Lord? He ought rather to be praised for not discerning what cannot be discerned! He ought to be commended for not imagining a thing present when it is not. How, then, does St. Paul use such strong language, if there is only a figure of Christ in the Eucharist? Why say that a man eats and drinks his own damnation by not discerning when he ought not to discern? It is clear St. Paul was an out and out Catholic, that he held our doctrine of the Real Presence, and hence the expression "by not discerning the body of the Lord's mess eats and drinks judgment to himself," that is, in receiving the holy Eucharist, must distinguish that divine food from all other food, and receive it with disposition that such celestial food demands.

[CONCLUDED NEXT WEEK.]

— The King of Italy died at Rome at 2:30 P.M., January 9th. He received the consolation of religion before his death. In the afternoon the sacraments were administered to the King, who received the priest with great serenity. The King then summoned Prince Humbert, the heir-apparent, and his wife, the Princess Margherita, to his bedside, with whom he conversed for a few moments. Afterwards the malaria eruption increased. The King then summoned all those who were in the habit of approaching him. He addressed to every one present a few words and a few minutes after died. The news of his death soon spread through the city and caused great emotion among the people. All the shops were closed. Prince Humbert was proclaimed King of Italy. He confirmed the present ministers in their posts. It is stated that King Victor Emanuel confessed to Monsignor F. Meranelli, the Secretary of the Apostolic palace, who was sent to him by the Pope. He was also visited by Monsignor Cari, the Pope's domestic prelate. The American ambassador was present, with Prince Humbert, the Princess Margherita, and the State dignitaries when the King received the communion and extreme unction from his Chaplain. The two prelates who were sent to the Quirinal by the Pope towards the Papal benediction. It is said the Pope exclaimed he would have gone him all in solicitude the sacraments but for his infirmities.

— A telegram from Rome, dated 4th January, says: Cardinal Manning has submitted to the College of Cardinals a proposal, that on the death of Pius IX., the ministers assemble at Malta. The Sacred College is divided in opinion on the matter. The Italian Cardinals are indisposed to accept the proposal.

The Cocoine Liniments are of two kinds The White is for the human family; the Yellow is for horses, sheep, and other animals. Testimonials of the effects produced by these remarkable Preparations are kept at our office for inspection and may be procured of our agents, or by mail from the Office of THE COCOINE COMPANY, 46 Day street New York City.

Produce Market Report.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 16th, 1878.

The very general rains with which the State at large was visited last week, seemed to have had a tension of increasing the farmers' hold upon the surplus Wheat crop of the State, something much that has been now for a long and very expensive year time of need, fearing another year of drought and short crops, has thus hidden stores—not to be made available at this figures. Fortunately there is for farmer no longer want, and the well to do farmers are saw anxious to sell at most the wants of shippers. Consequently, these free offerings have been in excess of immediate prices for grain and a corresponding advance in freights, from 20 to 40 shillings to Great Britain.

FLOUR.—We quote current prices as follows: Superfine at $3@3 25; Extra superfine, $3 50@3 75; Extra, family and fancy, $4 50@5 75 while for Buckwheat Extras, such as Golden Age, Golden Gate, Sunflower, Railroad City Mills, Sperry, Rochester City Mills, Niles Mills Vallejo, command the extremes of the local market: as by $5@7 15 per bbl all in cloth bbl of grain.

WHEAT—By reason of the copious rains, increasing the water flow in streams, as in a freshet, according to location, and much more than we had less season, Wheat offerings are more liberal and prices have yielded some 10c per ctl. since the first of the year, but coming foreigns to the United Kingdom to advance in full rate. Our stock in the state is likely to turn out larger than was supposed at in December by some of the trade. Just before New Year and during holiday week a purchase was made of 30,000 ctls for export at $1 37 1/2, and which to day may be considered the extreme rate of choice milling. Transactions for the week, so far as made public, embrace the following lots, yet we are informed, we believe that they do not include all the cargo purchases made for export: 2,000 ctls choice Walla Walla by a shipper @ $1 37 1/2; 1,000 ctls choice shipping, $1 35; 2,000 ctls superfine, $1 17 1/2; 1,275 ctls do, $1 20; 14,000 ctls choice Sonoran milling, $1 37 1/2; and ctls superfine; 1 bag 2,000 ctls do choice milling, $1 37 1/2; 1,000 ctls shipping, $1 25 @ ctl.

BARLEY.—There is no special inquiry, causing a dull market, stock liberal, with free offerings, sales for the week include the following lots: 75 ctls good bar feed, $1 40; 1,000 ctls good bay brewing, $1 45; 1 ctl sks bay feed, $1 35; 400 sks do, $1 45; 200 ctls choice do, $1 50; 800 ctls good bay brewing, $1 37 1/2; 400 sks bay feed, $1 45; 300 ctls good coast feed $1 37 1/2; 600 ctls bay feed, $1 37 1/2; 300 sks do, $1 50 @ ctl.

OATS.—We continue to receive supplies from Oregon. The most demand is fair. Sales for the week embrace the following lots: 120 sks Oregon feed at $1 62 1/2; 200 ctls do do, $1 60; 100 sks Honeycomb feed, $1 40; 100 sks do, $1 60; 75 sks poor Oregon feed, $1 37 1/2; 200 sks good do, $1 65; 300 sks do, $1 37 1/2 @ ctl. Choice country commands as high as $1 65@1 75 @ ctl.

CORN.—The supplies of new Northern are liberal. Sales for the week embrace the following lots: 1,100 sks large Yellow, $1 65; 300 sks small round do, $1 60; 300 sks do, $1 70; 400 sks large Yellow, $1 65; 24 sks white, $1 87 1/2; 900 sks large Yellow, $1 37 1/2; 50 sks small round, $1 75 @ ctl. The range of large new Northern is $1 35@1 50 @ ctl.

RYE.—The receipts are light. We note from the wharf good at $1 37 1/2, from store, $1 40@1 50 @ ctl.

BEANS.—We quote: Pinks, $2 37 1/2; White Mammoth, $4; Mammoth Pinks, $4; Butter, Cream, Sugar, Adelaide, $3@3 50; Timothy, $3@3 50 @.

BUCKWHEAT.—We quote a good article at $1 50 with a sale of 100 sks at this rate.

BRAN AND MIDDLINGS.—The mill price in jobbing lots, $17 50@18 per ton, approximately.

CORNMEAL.—We quote fresh ground California at $30@31 per ton in sacks.

OIL CAKE MEAL.—The mill price is $31 @ ton, less the usual discount to the trade.

GROUND BARLEY.—The mill price is $30@32 @ ton.

HAY.—The supply is large and free, and the market very firm at $19@21 for common stock; $17@18 for good, and $22@23 @ ton for choice.

BEANS.—The market is firm with an upward tendency. We quote Bayo, 3 1/2c; Butter, 3 1/2c; White, small, 4 1/2c; Pea, White, 3 3/4c; Lima, 4 1/2c; Pink, 3 1/2c; Red, 4c.

HOPS.—During the past week 30 bales good Oregon were sold for 20c. We quote the market fair for good Pacific, prime to choice, 18@19c; for the unsorted for Russian River, Sales of 41 bales Oregon of good quality at 17c.

HONEY.—Receipts are generally light for the season. An active trade of both China and Russian still readily at quotations. We quote Strained 10@12c; Comb is dull and in demand at 12@15c for fancy; dark, 10@14c.

POTATOES.—Choice Varieties are quotable at $1 25@1 37 1/2; common and inferior qualities in large supply and dull at local 12½. Sweets are in fair supply and the demand light at $1 50 @ ctl.

ONIONS.—Receipts have been large. The supply had been nearly all transacting room. The demand for Eastern is quiet at $2@2 25 @ ctl.

BERWICK.—Cucumbers scarce and in demand. Prices are firm at $1@1 50 @ ctl for good to choice.

HIDES.—Dry are nearly and correspond to the demand and rates of Eastern market, failed are firm with limited supply. Prices are nominal and dull. We quote present prices: Dry, 17@18½c; Dry Kip and Calf 17@18½c; Salted Hides, 8½@9½c; Salted heavy Calf, 8@10c; Sheep Pelts, 50@75c; Shearlings, 10@15c; Kid, 10@15c.

THE LARGEST COMBINED

FURNITURE,

CARPETING

—AND—

Upholstery House

—ON THE—

Pacific Coast.

W. J. HENEY & CO.,

725 MARKET STREET,

(BANCROFT'S BUILDING)

Draperies and Lambrequins, of every description and material, made to order from entirely new and original designs.

Will always guarantee the finest assortment, latest styles and lowest prices.

☞ Goods delivered in Oakland or Alameda free of charge.

☞ Open Evenings until January 1st

THE GRAND

OPENING

—AT—

THE ARCADE,

—OF—

PROFOUND ADMIRATION

—OF THE—

LADIES OF SAN FRANCISCO

AT OUR EXHIBITION OF DRESS

GOODS

—AND—

SILKS

☞ Our Immense Stock enables us to meet the wants of all parties, and we would respectfully state that our present display is more variously extensive than our BOOT GOODS EXHIBITION ever witnessed in California.

OUR DRESS GOODS

—AND—

SILKS

Are most worthy public attention, as we have taken special pains to make these departments unexceptionable.

Glroasetin Suitings,

Drap d'Eclair,

Neigeuse Cloth,

Ragdusa Suitings,

Knicker Costume Cloth.

The above are some of the latest designs in the Dress Department, and are especially deserving the examination of our patrons.

There is a tremendous rush on our KNICKERBOCKER COSTUME CLOTH, which we are now offering at 37½ cents.

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,

924, 926, 928

MARKET STREET,

—AND—

25 Ellis Street,

SAN FRANCISCO,

NEXT "THE BALDWIN."

NEW HOUSE

—AND—

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

—OF—

I. M. WENTWORTH & CO.

We would respectfully invite you to call and examine our extensive stock of

BOOTS AND SHOES,

AT OUR NEW HOUSE

867 MARKET STREET,

OPPOSITE POWELL AND GROVE, AND THE BALDWIN.

Where we keep a full line of Ladies' and Gentlemen's wear of ALL DESCRIPTIONS, of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and those of the most celebrated Eastern and French makers. Having our own Tannery and Factory, and being Wholesale Importers of all the various kinds of goods, we claim to have better facilities for giving

Entire Satisfaction in Quality, Fit and Price,

Than any other house on the Pacific Coast. Merchants' prices only will be charged for our own make of CHILDREN'S SHOES.

We have in connection a Department for Custom Work, where we make to measure any style of BOOTS SHOES and SLIPPERS to fit feet of peculiar proportions, and to suit the most fastidious taste.

I. R. SHAW, Manager of the Retail Department.

I. M. WENTWORTH & CO.,

1864. Pioneer Manufacturers of San Francisco. 1877

ASSIGNEE'S SALE OF

BOOTS & SHOES!

CLOSING OUT

For the Benefit of Creditors.

779 MARKET STREET, NEAR FOURTH.

Call at once as I cannot describe such another chance as this nor recite for years.

SPECIAL ANNOUNCEMENT.

Every Housekeeper in the Country

Should read this very carefully and learn how to secure a handsome set of Silver Plated Spoons, worth $3.

The Douglas Silver Plating Company, No. 88 Randolph Street, Chicago, Ill., have, during long bankrupt sales of Eastern manufacturers, purchased over 100,000 Sets of the best known make Silver Plated Spoons, and offer them to the public at about half the usual price. Desiring to introduce them into every household, they will, for a short days only, in every instance where they deem it a profitable opportunity of securing a PERMANENT CUSTOMER, sell a set of these spoons on receipt of the price, namely, $3 per set, and will pay all expenses of carriage, etc., and the following voucher properly filled in.

VOUCHER. DOUGLAS SILVER PLATING CO.,

88 RANDOLPH ST., CHICAGO, ILL.

Enclosed find $3 cents in payment for one dozen Spoons, and I agree, upon receipt of spoons, to show them to my friends as a sample.

REMEMBER: ALL SILVERWARE Fully Warranted.

Cut out the above voucher, fill it up carefully and enclosed it with thirty cents to Douglas Silver Plating Company, No. 88 Randolph Street, Chicago, Illinois, and you will receive your Spoons by return mail.

Remember that this offer is a bona fide one, and that the Company will not deal with any other than those who will avail themselves of this offer.

William Kosegarten,

Manufacturer of Upholstery Goods, Feathers, Mattresses, Pillows, etc.

Nos. 1 and 2 Sansome st., cor. Pacific st.

SAN FRANCISCO.

SENECA FALLS

BELL FOUNDRY.

FOR CHURCH, ACADEMY, Factory, Depot, Steamboat, Locomotive, Plantation, Fire Engine, etc.

Bells and Prices, with Wheel-Hangings and Frame-Complete:

Lbs.	Price.	Lbs.	Price.
No. 0 ...75 lbs	$10 00	No. 4 ...350 lbs	$40 00
No. 1 ...100 lbs	15 00	No. 5 ...500 lbs	60 00
No. 2 ...150 lbs	20 00	No. 6 ...750 lbs	75 00
No. 3 ...250 lbs	30 00	No. 7 ...1,000 lbs	100 00

☞ Purchaser to pay freight on bells. Circulars sent free. Please mention this paper. 1877

PROF. HENRY A. DANG

Late of Oxford University, England, and Professor of Modern Languages, Ohio Wesleyan University, Delaware, Ohio, and Vice President Ohio Female College, California.

Offers his services to gentlemen for whom he will act as Tutor, Lecturer, or Lecturer.

A Thorough Classical and English Tutor.

Either at his own apartments or at the residence of his pupils. 1877

331 Geary Street, Cabin Square, P. O. Box 1877

WILLIAM H. KNIGHT,

Dealer in Pianos and Organs,

Corner Fourth and Jessie Streets,

SAN FRANCISCO.

JUSTICE STORE,

No. 14 Sixth Street.

A Full Line of Gents' Furnishing Goods

—AND—

SILKS

The celebrated JUSTICE WHITE SHIRT, only $1. Justice Linen Finished SHIRT OF DRAWERS 50c. Warranted Perfectly the great JUSTICE OVERALL, which will last twice as long as any other. Pure thread, and warranted not to rip.

Heavy Woolen Underwear, 45 cents each.

SOCKS, 8 for pair for 25 cents.

Go to the Justice. We mean Justice, and Justice pay stand their by guaranteeing from an Dom forget the number.

14 SIXTH STREET.

OWEN McCABE,

Importer and dealer in all kinds of

Feathers, Down, Irish and German Linen Tickings.

The above are some of the latest designs in the Dress Department, and are especially deserving the examination of our patrons.

There is a tremendous rush on our KNICKERBOCKER COSTUME CLOTH, which we are now offering at 37½ cents.

KAST'S

FASHIONABLE SHOE STORE

HAS REMOVED TO THE Corner of Market and Dupont Streets.

SWINDLERS

PHILO WANTED.

$12 A day at home. Agents wanted. Outfit and terms free. TRUE & CO., Augusta, Maine.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

Catholic Books,

PRAYER BOOKS,

Miscellaneous Books,

School Books,

CHURCH ORNAMENTS,

Catholic Goods,

Staple and Fancy Stationery of every description.

All orders will be promptly filled. Libera terms to Schools and Priests.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Corner First and Fountain Streets, SAN JOSE.

The Monitor.

VOL. XXI. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 14, 1878. NO. 20.

DEATH OF HIS HOLINESS POPE PIUS IX.

Imposing Obsequies at the Cathedral.

Sermon by His Grace the Archbishop.

The news which it was our duty to communicate to our readers last week, and which, for reasons stated, we then refused to believe, has since been corroborated and its correctness established beyond doubt. We refer, of course, to the telegrams from Rome, which reached this city last Thursday, stating that his Holiness Pope Pius IX. had breathed his last in the Vatican on the same day. The reason for our questioning the reliability of this intelligence, was the fact that the revolutionary newspaper correspondents were in the habit of reporting the death of the Pope on all occasions when it suited their purpose or seemed likely to help on their crusade against the Catholic Church. In the absence, therefore, of official and authentic information from the proper ecclesiastical sources, we felt justified in treating the news as a mere rumor. Indeed, it may be remembered by our readers that, so persistent were the Italian journals in misrepresenting the state of that Holy Father's health, and in announcing his death, the venerable Pontiff himself, with that genial humor, which was so prominent a characteristic in his nature, made the remark, "Whenever I take up one of these papers and do not find in it a notice of my death, it seems to me as if the editor had forgotten something." But these gloomy prophets of evil were destined to feel the simple truth at least once. How ever robust he might have been, the Pontiff was aged and infirm, and he could expected that the end was so near at hand on Wednesday, 6th inst., as the time for the last sacraments, and the last rites of the Church, during the night that his sacraments were administered to him. At three o'clock on the afternoon of Thursday he presented the appearance of death, but the doctors imagined that it might be only a syncope. At forty-seven minutes past four, however, all doubts were removed, and it was generally that the great and glorious Pontiff had passed to the enjoyment of his eternal reward. The last words he spoke were letting his long and illustrious reign, that venerable the Church I have loved so well and so sincerely." Official information of the death which had befallen the Catholic world reached his Grace the Archbishop late in the afternoon of Thursday, and he communicated the intelligence to the pastors in his archdiocese by the following circular which was read in the various churches last Sunday:

Rev. Inter Sir It was with pain, no doubt, that you read the detailed account of the death of our Holy Father, which it is my duty to communicate to you that the melancholy news which I received yesterday, namely, that Pius IX is no more with us on earth, but he has gone to his rest, and is now in the Mother in Heaven. He loved the Church dearly and holily; he was a man of tender and scarcely irreproachable, but most edifying under adversity, and most edifying under adversity tranquil, under persecution he was meek; in the discharge of his office he was the model of zeal and zealous shepherd gentle, amiable and charitable to all, yet the uncompromising defender of truth and of the cause of God, although alike by friends and foes. It is not advisable, in the present state of the universal mind, to enter the world will place him beyond the reach of our prayers; but I feel it my bounden duty to offer up to God suffrages for the dead, whether they belonged to the life or the eternal lesion whether they were Priests or Bishops, or Popes, or Princes, or Kings, or Princes, or Princes, or Princes

WINTER.

BY CHARLES P. O'CONOR.

("Calm Thesma.")

[Read at the Sonnet Hall, London, by the Author, during the delivery of his Lecture on the "Poets and Poetry of Ireland," January 1, 1872.]

Clang the bells from tower and steeple, God's great love, the day of rejoicing,
Joyful peace the Old Year melly wafts the material chime;
Wake the echoes of the centuries and the giant old notes swelling,
Chiming music to the Old Year down, the sorrow of time.

Come the Night in my window, bringing memories of old Ireland,
Rude grey castles in Erkena, mouldrous glens fog in the mist;
All the lonely, the mighty London rooms in my life value of Ireland,
Ireland, the storied ocean roar, and over head and dim.

Above the roaring of the hawkers, deaf the continuous jangle the noisy,
Hear the Ocean's distant, hoarse, and sad breaking
Hear the Ocean's distant, hoarse, and sad breaking
Hear the Ocean's distant, hoarse, and sad breaking

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 24.

February.
17—Sunday—Septuagesima Sunday.
18—Monday—St. Simon, Bishop and Martyr.
19—Tuesday—Feria.
20—Wednesday—Feria.
21—Thursday—Office of the Blessed Sacrament.
22—Friday—Chair of St. Peter at Antioch.
23—Saturday—St. Peter Damian, Bishop, Confessor and Doctor of the Church. Vigil of St. Matthias.

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY EVENING FEBRUARY 16

Subscribers will please specially look at the printed label on the margin or wrapper of the paper; the date there shown is when the subscription expires. They should also know that their taking the paper from the postoffice renders them liable for the subscription price so long as they continue to do so. Persons have no excuse to make for papers being sent after the time their subscription expires. If they wish their paper discontinued, by not taking it from the office the postmaster is bound to notify the publishers of their fact, and to have the paper stopped. We make this explanation for the information of those who make the excuse, when asked for payment, that they said for it as long as ordered but still continue to take it from the office.

PIUS THE NINTH.

The great Pontiff, who, during a whole generation, has ruled the Church of God, has closed his career on earth, and is gone to the reward of his labors. It has been truly said that the value of a man's life can only be known when it is closed by death, and humble the bier of our dead Father, it is surely fitting that we, Catholics, should seek to read the lessons taught by his works and sufferings during the lengthened time of his sojourn with us. That they should be fully explained in the space of our poor record, is, indeed, impossible. The full significance of a life so nobly, yet so strangely checked amidst strange vicissitudes, is not to be set forth in a newspaper column. It is enough if we can grasp the leading points of such a career, at least those which seem to us the most significant; and this is all we shall attempt to do, leaving to others the task of treating in detail, the various monuments of man which are more or less closely connected with it.

HIS YOUTH.

In Pius the Ninth, we find personified, so far as such an expression may be used, the spirit of the Catholic Church; and the treatment which he received from the world thrown a clear light on question which has bewildered even many Catholics. It has been over and over repeated that the revolt against the Christian Faith, which began with the Protestant reformation, which culminated in the Reign of Terror, and which has found a satisfaction in the hot rooms of the Paris Commune, was caused by the corruption of the Church; and its failings were so exactly described—or, humanly speaking, so exactly foreseen—by the infidel philosophy, that, in short, he who runs may read the lesson, that the spirit of infidelity, and that, in short, in the Church and outside of it, the principle which would make a man or a people independent of God, is the spirit which has been at war against him from the first to prevent the true discharge of his functions.

And that

"Pius IX. himself believed in, and revived the Inquisition, and no one who knowed his career can entertain a doubt that he would have exercised the power he would have claimed for it, if he had been in the plenitude of his power, and swept into all heretical condemnation, and have suppressed whatever he pleased to call, with equally unexceptionable energy. He was not a great man truly, but he was a good man. It may frequently be weak and a foolish man."

Heavy charges these; but how do they stand beside the facts given by the Record-Union itself in the very same page? Strange as it may be to many, it is true that Pius IX. was, in his youth, a liberal, and that, in short, he was what would be called, in the world, a man of liberal principles, and that, in short, he was what would be called, in the world, a man of liberal principles, and that, in short, he was what would be called, in the world, a man of liberal principles

WEEKLY CALENDAR

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

TUESDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 19

[illegible]

PIUS THE NINTH.

The great Pontiff, who, during a whole generation, has ruled the Church of God, has closed his career on earth, and is gone to the reward of his labors. It has been truly said that the value of a man's life can only be known when it is closed by death, and hardly the last of our dead Father, it is surely fitting that our Catholics, who I wok to read the lessons taught by his works and sufferings during the lengthened period of his sojourn with us. That they should be fully explained in the space of one column, or, indeed, impossible. The full significance of a life so marvelously prolonged, amidst such strange vicissitudes, is not to be set forth in a newspaper column. It is sufficient if we can grasp the leading points of such a career, at least those which seem to us to be most significant, and then we will we shall attempt to do, herein, to others the task of tracing in detail the various events and men which so more or less closely [illegible]

[illegible]

[illegible]

[

Records of Mary Hudson.

A correspondent of the World, writing from Troy, Rensselaer County, N. Y., states that in attending the funeral of the venerable Mary Hudson, who died at the Hudson Tea Company some years ago, a singular collection of relics. Among them is a yellow-bound volume, with the words "Memorial" written on the back, and inscribed on the opening page of the volume, with the following words:

"Mary Hudson, Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age."

Her Bible Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Hymn Book Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Psalm Book Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Catechism Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Sermon Book Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Prayer Book Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Pocket Book Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Diary Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Ink Horn Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Pen Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Pencil Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Paper Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Ink Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Pen Knife Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Scissors Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Thimble Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Needle Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Thread Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Pin Cushion Commenced in the year 1799, in the 12th year of her age.

Her Pin

New Advertisements.

PALMER BROS.

726 to 734

IMPORTERS OF

MILLINERY

AND

FANCY GOODS

AND LADIES'

FURNISHED UNDERWEAR,

Hosiery, Embroidery, Goods and Gents' Furnishing Goods.

OUR MOTTO:

LOW PRICES.

SPECIALTIES:

New Advertisements.

CHICKERING

PIANO WAREROOMS,

21 Post Street,

L. K. HAMMER,

PHILADELPHIA

BREWERY.

SECOND STREET, NEAR POLSOM,

SAN FRANCISCO.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

PATRIOTIC BADGES

St. Patrick's Day, in

Pacific Coast Agency.

GENUINE

J. H. GUTTER WHISKEY.

A. P. HOTALING & CO.,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

LECTURE

BY

Rev. Father Buchard, S. J.

In St. Ignatius' Church, Market St.,

FOR THE BENEFIT

OF

Thursday Evening, February 28, 1878

Subject: "The Prisoner's Friend."

THE "EXCELSIOR"

COPY BOOKS

JUST PUBLISHED

BY

MICHAEL FLOOD,

No. 831 Market Street,

THE YOUNG CATHOLIC'S COMPANION.

SECOND EDITION,

Containing the Catechism, Prayer Book and Hymn Book Complete. Strongly Bound in Cloth. Price: Twenty-Five Cents.

NEW BOOKS:

NEW CATHOLIC DIRECTORY for 1878, containing a full report of the Dioceses of the United States, British America, Ireland and Australia. Price $1 00

THE TEACHER OF MAN 1 50

DARK 1 50

MYSTERY OF THE SACRED HEART, in various styles of bind 1 50

MARY MAGDALENE 1 50

CATHOLIC FAMILY ALMANAC 25

GERMAN ALMANAC 25

FUN AND HUMOR, Illustrated 1 75

ALL TO PROMOTE CHARITY TO THE SOULS IN PURGATORY 15

MICHAEL FLOOD,

Catholic Bookseller,

831 MARKET STREET.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL BOOKS

— FOR —

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY COMPANY'S SERIES

— OF —

ILLUSTRATED SCHOOL BOOKS,

EDITED BY

Rt. Rev. Bishop J. L. Spaulding, D. D., Bishop of Peoria, Ills.

THE "YOUNG CATHOLIC" READERS,

PUBLISHED BY THE

CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

The Ladies of the Sacred Heart are known to stand in the front rank of Catholic teachers in every quarter of the world. There can be no better judges of the merits of text books for Catholic schools. They are versed in all the details of the science of education. No institution educates more accomplished and thoroughly-instructed pupils than their Academies. A commendation of any school book, after having passed the searching criticism of these able educators, is a surety of its unmerited merits. Like praise from Sir Hubert, "it is praise, indeed." Listen to their approval of the Young Catholic Series:

"The Young Catholic Readers are decidedly the most popular school books that have ever been issued for the use of Catholic schools. They satisfy more fully than any readers now published in this country, the needs of both teacher and pupil. They are free from the blemishes and deficiencies which we have found in other compilations. With the advantage which these books supply, the rapid progress of all scholars of ordinary talent is secured.

"We have tried them both in parochial and academic schools and we have reason to rejoice at their success. We would consider their universal adoption in the schools of this country as one in the advancement of Catholic education.

ELDERS OF THE SACRED HEART.

Clifton, Cincinnati.

THE YOUNG CATHOLIC SERIES OF READERS is thoroughly Catholic in all its lessons.

It is the best graded set of Catholic Readers now published.

The lessons are not made up of mere selections. Many of the Historical and Biographical sketches being written expressly for this Series.

The Books are printed on the best quality of paper, and bound in the most substantial manner.

From Sisters of Mercy, Mt. St. Mary's, Manchester, N. H.

CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY:

GENTLEMEN:—We have been using "The Young Catholic's Series of Readers" one year in our schools, and we are happy to express our cordial approval of each of them, from the First to the Sixth.

While they retain most that was, and is, valuable in the different series used in our schools, they give our pupils some slight knowledge, at least, of the best Catholic literature, and thus communicate an impulse to the study of our own literature, in which the Catholic youth of America are so deficient.

Memory go serves nothing more readily than the reading lessons learned in childhood, and we look upon each one of the lofty lessons interspersed in these books as the germ and of a rare harvest.

Respectfully,

M. E. XAVIER, Mother Superior,

Convent of Mercy, Manchester, N. H.

From the Sisters of Notre Dame, Reading, near Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, O., January 14, 1878.

SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

NEW HOUSE

AND

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

OF

I. M. WENTWORTH & CO.

We would respectfully invite you to call and examine our enterprise stock of

BOOTS & SHOES,

At our New House

No. 667 MARKET STREET, OPP. POWELL, EDDY, and THE RAILWAYS.

Keep a full line of Ladies' and Gentlemen's wear of all descriptions, of

OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and those of the most celebrated Eastern and French makers. Having our own Tannery and Factory, and being Wholesale Importers of all the various kinds of goods, we claim to have better facilities for giving than any other house on the Pacific Coast. Manufacturers' prices only will be charged for our own make of CHILDREN'S SHOES.

Entire Satisfaction in Quality, Fit and Price,

We have in connection a department for Custom Work, where we make to measure any style of BOOTS, SHOES and SLIPPERS to fit feet of peculiar proportions, and to suit the most fastidious.

I. R. SHAW, Manager of the Retail Department.

I. M. WENTWORTH & CO.,

864 Pioneer Manufacturers of San Francisco. 1877

WINTHROP

PORTABLE

RANGE

COMBINING all MODERN IMPROVEMENTS, BEAUTIFUL in DESIGN, DOUBLE TOPS, PATENT CURVE FLUE and CHECK DRAFT, which SAVES one-third the FUEL for ECONOMY, and GIVES VENTILATION. The WINTHROP RANGE is pronounced by all who have used them to be the BEST

COOKING RANGE

In the MARKET. Every RANGE Warranted.

A LARGE STOCK OF

PARLOR, OFFICE AND COOKING STOVES.

NEW STYLES.

Tinware, Woodenware, Etc., in Store and Warehouse. Will sell at bottom Very Cheap to Cash Purchasers.

CRAB. BROWN, NO. 12 SPRUCE STREET,

Opposite the WINTHROP RANGE. Sole Maker and Proprietor.

Goods carefully packed and shipped to all parts of the Coast free.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

Catholic Books,

PRAYER BOOKS,

Miscellaneous Books,

School Books,

CHURCH ORNAMENTS,

Catholic Goods,

Staple and Fancy Stationery of every description.

All orders will be promptly filled. Liberal terms to Schools and Priests.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Corner First and Fountain Streets,

SAN JOSE.

THE MONITOR.

OFFICE—522 Clay street, between Kearny and Montgomery (third floor).

LYONS & O'SULLIVAN, Publishers.

RICHARD O'SULLIVAN ..... Editor.

DENIS LYONS ..... Business Manager.

All communications should be addressed to LYONS & O'SULLIVAN.

TERMS (Payable in advance):

Served by carriers, per week ..... 10c.

Mail subscribers, per year ..... $ 4 00

Six months 2 25

Poland or any of the British Provinces $ 6 00

Postage in each case prepaid by the publishers.

Advertising Rates.

1 square 1 time	$1 50	1 square 4 mos	$10 50
1 square 1 month	4 00	1 square 5 mos	12 00
1 square 2 months	7 00	1 square 6 mos	13 50
1 square 3 months	9 00	1 square 1 year	18 00

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE.

EASTERN.

NEW YORK, February 14.—The steamer China arrived this morning from Liverpool, and reports: February 9th, while the officers were relieving each other, during a heavy gale, a sea struck the ship, carrying away rails and screens on the starboard side of the upper bridge, taking overboard Edwin Balem, chief, and Owen Harris, second officer. Both were lost.

NEW YORK, February 14.—A telegram from Washington says the Union Pacific Railroad Company paid out $100,000 for legal services last year, and adds: "It is believed this money was used to help along the Republican cause here last Winter, and probably a Committee of the House will be ordered to investigate the matter."

WASHINGTON, February 14.—In the Senate Railroad Committee this morning, Mr. Sturgis, attorney of the Central Pacific Railroad and the Southern Pacific Company of California, appeared in opposition to the Texas Pacific Railroad bill, and advocated the proposition of the California Company for authority to extend its line eastward and to be granted lands heretofore granted to the Texas Pacific Company, but alleged to be subject to forfeiture by reason of a failure to construct the road between Colorado River and El Paso.

HARTFORD (Conn.,) February 14.—The funeral of Hon. Gideon Welles, ex-Secretary of the Navy, was held at St. John's Church this afternoon. The pall-bearers were: Hon. G. Fox and William Faxton, both Assistant Secretaries of the Navy under Mr. Welles; Governor R. D. Hubbard, ex-Governor J. R. Hawley, M. F. Merritt, of Stamford; A. E. Burr, Henry K. Morgan, of this city, and Colonel J. J. Broome, of the United States Marine Corps.

CHICAGO, February 14.—Before Justice Meech to-day John Ryan admitted that he had, in company with Samuel Harrison, his stenographer, stolen and sold "The Daughter," and several other plays. Ryan was held to the Criminal Court in $600 bail. Harrison has gone to Philadelphia to avoid proceedings against him. The proceedings are watched with much interest, as a new point of law is involved, of great importance to playwriters and owners.

HELENA (Montana,) February 13.—A rich strike has recently been made in the Snowdrift mine, about twenty-two miles northwest of Helena. Fifteen hundred ounces, valued at $24,000, from the mine are now on exhibition. The vein is 13 feet wide.

NEW ORLEANS, February 14.—The ground of a new trial in the Anderson case was gone over to-day, there being new evidence about a juror who was a minor, under trial, expression of opinion by a juror, Littlefield's absence, and the absence of other important witnesses. The evidence adduced as to the minor juror was conclusive. Senator Zachariah testified he believed Anderson was not present at the opening of the Vernon Parish returns. The defense cross-examined Zachariah, and the Court stopped them. The defense claimed they could prove that the assistant Attorney-General had stated to Senator Zachariah that Littlefield was not put on the stand because his evidence would assist Anderson. The Court, however, would not allow this view.

WASHINGTON, February 15.—The President upon the recommendation of the Secretary of the Interior, to-day accepted the eighth section of the Southern Pacific Railroad of California, being forty-two miles, commencing one hundred miles south of Goshen and running to a point where the Company began to build northward toward Los Angeles under a clause attached to the Texas Pacific Act. All the rest of its completed road in California had been previously accepted, and patents for railroad lands along this section will be issued without further delay.

WASHINGTON, February 15.—The President has nominated Bayard Taylor Envoy Extraordinary and Minister Plenipotentiary to Germany.

OMAHA (Neb.,) February 15.—The cut of the Republican valley embankment on the Union Pacific Railroad, involving the legality of $550,000 bridge bonds issued to aid in the construction of the Missouri River bridge, was to-day amicably adjusted and dismissed.

SALT LAKE, February 15.—The Legislative Committee to-day was charged the recommendation in the Governor's message, asking legislation against polygamy, report, stating that it is considered by the State as a civil ordinance; and they cannot legislate against religious beliefs and practices.

NEW YORK, February 17.—This evening a fire broke out in a six story iron-front building known as Brooklyn Block, in Twenty-third Street, near Second Avenue. The Twenty-third Street Presbyterian Church, on the east, and the Second Covenanters' Presbyterian Church, on the west side, were entirely destroyed. The total loss is variously estimated from $600,000 to $1,000,000.

WASHINGTON, February 17.—Senator Jones says he has no doubt but that the Secretary of the Treasury will sufficiently carry the provisions of the Silver bill into effect by utilizing all the available capacity of the Mints for the coinage of silver bullion; and that in the event of that officer's manifesting any disposition to restrict silver coinage to the bear minimum of $2,000,000 per month prescribed by the bill, which seems to be apprehended by some members of the House, it will be very easy for either branch of Congress to stimulate his action by means of an advocating resolution.

WASHINGTON, February 17.—The report of the Supervising Architect of the Treasury Department for 1877 states that the total appropriations for the San Francisco Custom-House have been $662,000, and that the smallness of last years appropriation will compel the suspension of work at an early day. The Supervising Architect also reports that the total appropriation for remodeling and furnishing the San Francisco Sub-Treasury building was $117,000, of which amount something over $6,000 remained in the Treasury unexpended.

NEW YORK, February 18.—The passage of the Silver bill seems to have had no effect whatever upon the Wall street market.

NEW YORK, February 18.—Among the treasures of Marshfield lost in the recent fire were Hunter's fine portrait of Webster; a marble bust of Pope Pius IX.; portraits of Queen Victory; miniatures of the children of Webster, and a sculpin table, presented him by King Ferdinand of Naples.

NEW YORK, February 18.—The difficulties between Thomas Lord, Sr., and his mulattoes, growing out of the marriage of that gentleman to Mrs. Hicks, were brought to a conclusion to-day by a settlement between the parties.

NEW YORK, February 19.—The Times' special from Albany says: The Payonister's move on the New York Central Railroad passed through this city yesterday loaded with silver, with which metal the Company is paying its employes. There are thousands of men to be paid, and every man whose wages are $40 per month, receives to-day only $36 66.

CHICAGO, February 18.—The Postoffice Department came into possession, on Saturday afternoon of $5,000 of Canadian money, which was stolen while on its way from Bell & Smithers, New York agents of the Bank of Montreal, to Fort Benton, Montana, last August. These bills were in the hands of Abe Zigman, a pawnbroker, who from Nebraska, who called himself Harmon, and who claimed to have come by the bills honestly.

NEW YORK, February 18.—A Virginia dispatch, figuring upon four and a half months' returns of the Medical tax-receipts, estimates that Richmond consumes 3,250,000 drinks annually. This is equal to 406 drinks annually to each voter.

EUROPEAN.

LONDON, February 14—Evening.—In the House of Commons this afternoon, Sir Stafford Northcote confirmed the statements already made regarding the passage of the Dardanelles by the fleet.

In the House of Lords, Lord Derby read a dispatch from Prince Gortschakoff informing him of the Russian occupation of Constantinople, which, Prince Gortschakoff adds, is merely a pacific measure.

ST. PETERSBURG, February 14.—Several newspapers call attention to the statement made last year by Bismark, that Germany would use her efforts in the Eastern question for the maintenance of general peace. They say Germany is all the more entitled to assume the part of arbitrator, as by her military precedence and her disinterestedness in the Eastern question she is the only Power who could effectively discharge such mission by declaring herself against the power who should fire the first cannon.

VIENNA, February 14.—The Sultan respondents are entertained by the French Minister in Washington that the Paris Exposition will be postponed. This fear amounts almost, if not quite, to an expectation, and is based upon the apparent probabilities that England will be involved in European troubles, and that a more or less general war may speedily result.

CHICAGO, February 17.—A Paris correspondent says: It is reported the Circassians, who retreating before the Russians, suffocated with suffocation 200 women and children, who had taken refuge in a cave.

HAVANNA, February 14.—During the last few days, official and private telegrams received leave no doubt but that the insurgents, headed by their chiefs, are trying to arrange terms of peace all over the island. Havanna newspapers speak of proximate peace as sure, and it appears only exact terms remain to be settled, when they will be proclaimed by the Government. To-day's papers publish a telegram, dated Santa Cruz, 15th instant, stating that Maximo Gomez, Cuban Gomez, and all the chiefs, are working in favor of definite peace, and that hostilities are suspended all over the island.

HAVANNA, February 16.—A newspaper printed in the interior of the island has published the following official dispatch, from Gen. Pieto headquarters, dated San Juan, February 10th, on the conditions for peace:

Article First—The Island of Cuba is to receive the same political organization and administrative concessions as enjoyed by Puerto Rico.

Second—Ample pardon for all political offenses committed since 1868, and liberty to those persons under sentence as political prisoners, and a general pardon to deserters from the Spanish lines.

Third—Liberty to be given slaves and Chinamen within the insurgent lines.

Fourth—No person recognizing by virtue of the twenty Spanish authority can be called to do any service which goes beyond established in the whole territory.

Fifth—All persons desiring to leave the island are to be furnished means to do so, without touching village or city, if so desired.

Sixth—Capitulation of each force to take place on uninhabited spots, where arms will be deposited.

Seventh—The Spanish General-in-Chief for the purpose of facilitating addresses of other departments to these conditions is to grant free passes to roads by sea and land.

Eighth—The foregoing bases are to become ordered general for all departments of the island accepting these propositions.

The Spanish troops received orders to suspend operations, remaining on the defensive. Practical guides have been dispatched to make known these conditions to all insurgent bands. The insurgent Congress and government has received itself into a Central Committee for treating for peace.

HAVANNA, February 15.—Captain-General Jovellar left yesterday for Nuevitas, to confer with General Martinez Campos, it is supposed upon definite arrangements for peace.

The dispatches of later date contain no feature of interest to our readers, and the claims of more important matter preludes us from giving them space.

Mis H Stolne 14dec77

The Monitor.

VOL. XXI. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 21, 1878. NO. 21.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Cor. First and Fountain Sts.,

SAN JOSE, CAL.

Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

Musical Instruments,

Music Books, Sheet Music,

Musical Merchandise in General.

Agent for Pianos made by

STEINWAY & SONS, New York.

KRANICH & BACH, New York.

C. ROMERO, Boston.

AND FOR SOHMER PIANOS

Horace Waters & Sons, and the Burdett Organ Company.

My stock is large, fresh and complete, and I am able and will sell on as favorable terms as any house in the trade.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

From the Argonaut.

EDUCATION.

Mr. Stephen Deuster John W. Taylor, president of the Board of Education, and Rev. Sumner McCoppin was "an honest man," an ignorant politician, and a dull public-school administrator. Taylor, it was conceded, was guilty of one important instance in his position. In point of knowledge of our public affairs, of public school system, the Nova Scotia compares the Senator. Mr. Taylor, right and Mr. Taylor. Only one-tenth of the public schools of the State are under the control of the Board of Education, and the Board is composed of men who are to be supported then by the State, in the public schools, and the Board of Education, and the Board of Education, and the Board of Education

Produce Market Report.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FRIDAY, FEB. 1ST, 1878.

Fallow [illegible] the week ending the 1st inst. [illegible] since the 1st of January. With twenty [illegible] of rain and warm weather [illegible] good crops are assured. [illegible] holders [illegible] make [illegible] sales preparatory to another harvest. The [illegible] of the market which follows provide the [illegible] and further information to the country [illegible]

FLOUR. The market for low grade Superfine for export, favors the buyer, but for standard Extras there is no visible change. We quote current prices as follows: Superfine at $4 75@5; Extra Superfine, $5 00@5 25; Extra Family and Bakers Extra, $6 50@6 75, while Silk dressed Extras continue to the extremes of the local market, viz: $6 75@7 25 per bbl all in cloth, bl and qr sks.

WHEAT. The wheat market since the latter part of last week has been steadily declining. The latter rapid rise in freights to the United Kingdom and not a few of English crops being exhausted and even 2p. for Wheat, the present asking price for choice lots. Transactions for the week are within the range of $1 75 to $2 00 for shipping. Liverpool quotations February 11, 12s 5d@12s 3d; average, 12s 3d@12s 6d. At the close we note a sale of 20,000 ctls choice milling at $1 95.

BARLEY. There has been a sharply declining tendency and leading holders are not disposed to submit to any decline, having confidence in the future of the market by reason of a conservative light stock, and feeling well assured that all will be required before the appearance of the new crop. We submit the following sales of the week: 500 sks Coast feed, $1 82½ ⅌ ctl; 4,000 Gla Grain, $1 80 in trade; 1,700 sks Bay Feed, at $1 60; 600 sks choice Bay Feed, $1 62½; 1,000 sks Coast Feed, $1 80 ⅌ ctl, 100 tons old Barley, $1 50; 50 tons new crop do, $2 50; 100 tons do, $1 65 subject. Bran, is held at $1 [illegible] 70 f ton, also [illegible]

OATS. The market holds its own for choice lots, say 50c ⅌ ctl. We note sales of 38 sks Humboldt Feed at $1 70 ⅌ ctl, 350 sks good Feed, $1 70, 200 sks Coast Feed, $1 62½. The range of the market being $1 50@2 00 ⅌ ctl as extremes, the latter rate for choice milling.

RYE. The market holds firm for all sorts of lots with quite a fair demand. Sales for the week include the following: 100 sks small round at $1 82½ ⅌ ctl; 1,200 sks large yellow from the wharf, $1 90; 500 sks do, $1 87½ ⅌ ctl.

RYE. The demand is light and the price nominal at $2 25 ⅌ ctl.

SEEDS. We quote: Flax, 30c⅌bu; white Mustard, 50c⅌; Mustard, brown, 50c⅌; Hungary, 60c; Alfalfa, 9c⅌lb; Timothy, 8c⅌lb; Rape, 4c ⅌ lb.

BUCKWHEAT. We quote a good article at $1 80.

BRAN AND MIDDLINGS. The mill price in jobbing lots, $25@27 50 ⅌ ton, latter, $30@32.

CHICKEN FEED. We quote Fresh, ground California at $35@39 ⅌ ton in sacks.

BEANS. The market is firm with an upward tendency. We quote Bayos, 4½; Butter, 4½; White, small, 3½@3½; Pea, White, $3 25@3 50; Lima, 4½; Pink, 4½; Red, 4½.

HAY. The market flags with small range of sales at $18@20 50 for good to choice, latter rate for best wheat.

GROUND BARLEY. The mill price is $30@30 50 ⅌ ton.

OIL CAKE MEAL. The mill price is $44 ⅌ ton, less the usual discount to the trade.

HIDES. Advices from New York of late date show a sharp decline in rates for Dry with a dull market. Prices in this market have dropped to conform with the Eastern, by which they are governed. We now quote Dry at 16c; Dry Kip and Calf, 12@13c. Wet Salted are steady at Delta are dull. We quote light salted Hides, 8c; Kip, 6c; heavy salted Steers, 8c; Salted Calf, 10@10c. Sales of 50,000 lbs Salted within the range. Pelts, long Wool, cheaper, range from 30@35c; short, 20@30c; Shearlings, 15c; all in good order.

TALLOW. Market firm at 6½@7c for Crude and 9c for Refined, at which price sales have been made for export and local trade.

HONEY. The crop of old Comb Honey is well nigh exhausted. Prices are nominally at 16@18c ⅌ lb, according to quality. The fine rains which have fallen throughout the Southern part of the State insure a large crop the coming season, but will not equal by half the yield of former years, many colonies of bees perished during the drought. Strained Honey is in fair supply at 12@14c, with light demand.

HOPS. The general market is quiet. Sales of 130 bales at 5½c to close a consignment. Choice are scarce at 6@10c.

WOOL. The stock is too insignificant to afford material for all articles. Prices are entirely nominal. A sale is reported of 60,000 lbs Oregon private.

POTATOES—Receipts for the week have been been large, and the market, especially for choice varieties, closes firm at quotations: Prime Early Rose at $2 00; Humboldts, $1 00@1 25; Petaluma and Tomales, $1 50; Sacramento River's, $1@1 25; Oregon, $1 25@1 50; Rivers are in light supply at $1 25@1 50 ⅌ 100 lbs.

ONIONS. There are very few choice in market. Fair conditioned are offering at 50c ⅌ 100 lbs; choice would command 60@65c.

CATTLE. Good Beef Cattle and Mutton are scarce and prices for all choice stock have a strong upward tendency. Other varieties are plentiful, rates unchanged. Slaughterers' prices are: Beef, per quarter, first quality, 7@8c ⅌ lb; second quality, 5@6½c; Mutton, 5c⅌ ⅌ lb; fat choice. Calves are scarce at 5@7c ⅌ lb. Hog receipts are moderate with very few choice and hard offering, the bulk of all received being sold and in poor condition. There is a fair demand at improved prices. We quote rates on foot for all descriptions at 6@6½c; dressed, 8@8½c, the latter an extreme rate for choice hard hogs. Roasting Pigs, $1 25@1 50 each.

POULTRY AND GAME. The receipts for the week have been light, the supply not being equal to the demand. We quote the present rates as follows: Hens, $6 50@7; Roosters, old, $5@6; young, $6@10; Broilers, in good demand at $6@7 50; Game Ducks, $6@10 ⅌ doz; Game Fowls, $7 25@7 50 ⅌ pair; Turkeys, alive, 20@22c ⅌ lb; dressed, 25@28c ⅌ lb. The supply of geese is moderate, with a good demand at rates quoted. We quote prices as follows: Venison, 56@7c ⅌ lb; Quail, $1@1 25 ⅌ doz; Mallard Ducks, $20@7 50 ⅌ doz; Teal Ducks, $1 25@1 50 ⅌ doz; small Ducks, $1@1 25 ⅌ doz; Hares, $1 75@2 25 ⅌ doz; Rabbits, $1@1 25 ⅌ doz; Snipe, $1@1 25 ⅌ doz; common, 50c ⅌ doz.

DAIRY PRODUCTS. The severe storms of the past week interrupted communication with the Better and Egg producing districts, and the market was for the time being entirely bare of the usual supplies of fresh products. The price of Fresh Butter remains unchanged, but there has been an advance in the price of Eggs, as will be noticed in our quotations. To-day we are in receipt of Fresh Butter by rail in sufficient quantity to meet immediate demands. We quote best qualities at 30c@32c, the latter the extreme for Fancy Dairy by the single box; inferior grades are quotable at 20@22½c and dull. Choice Pickled Roll is in large stock, holders anxious to realize, consequently prices are nominally nominal, say 20@22c. California Egg and Firkin is in excessive stock and extremely dull at merely nominal rates, though 16@17c is asked. The stock of Eastern is large, but in limited demand at 16@22½c, as to quality. California Cheese is unusually scarce with a ready market for all the choice grades at 19@20c; Eastern Cheese is in fair supply with daily receipts by rail to meet all demands, selling within the range of 19@22½c, the latter rate for extra New York Cream. Strictly choice fresh California Eggs are scarce, now on stale at 40@45c; Eastern are in light supply, market weak at 28@30c as to condition, with limited demand.

FRUIT. The market is dull, and will be until there is a prospect of fair weather; arrivals are light. The heavy rains of the past few days has put a temporary embargo on the river and bay department. We quote: Apples: Yellow, 75c@$1 50 ⅌ box, common, 50@75c ⅌ box; Pears, Winter Nelis, $2 ⅌ box; K. Beurre, 75@$1 00 ⅌ box, common, 50@75c ⅌ box; Oranges, California, $12 50@30 ⅌ M; Lemons, Sicily, $10@11 ⅌ box; Los Angeles, $1@2 25 ⅌ M; Limes, Mexican, $10 ⅌ M; Los Angeles, $6@8 ⅌ M; Bananas, $2 50@5 ⅌ bunch; Pine Apples, $6@10 ⅌ doz; Cocoanuts, $6@10 ⅌ 100; Dried Fruit, Apples, 6@7c ⅌ lb; Peaches, 8@9c ⅌ lb; Pears, 5@6c ⅌ lb; Plums, 3@4c ⅌ lb; Prunes, 12@13c ⅌ lb; Figs, White, 40c ⅌ lb; Black, 40@7c ⅌ lb; California Raisins, $1@2 ⅌ box; $1 25@2 25 ⅌ half box; $1 50@2 50 ⅌ qr box; Blow'rs, $1 75 ⅌ box.

VEGETABLES. Cabbages, 2½@3c ⅌ lb; Marrowfat Squash, $7@8 ⅌ ton; Green Peas, new crop, 10@20c ⅌ lb; Chili Peppers, 20@25c ⅌ lb; Garlic, 4@5c ⅌ lb; Okra, dry, 12@15c ⅌ lb; Cauliflower, $1 ⅌ doz.

New Advertisements.

PALMER BROS.

726 to 734

MARKET ST.

IMPORTERS OF

MILLINERY

AND

FANCY GOODS

AND LADIES'

FINISHED UNDERWEAR,

Notions, Household Goods and Gents' Furnishing Goods.

Manufacturers for Boys and Mens Nice Fitting Suits of French Beaver, Diagonals, California and Oregon Cashmeres and Scotch Tweeds.

OUR MOTTO:

"LOW PRICES."

SPECIALTIES:

Ladies Hats and Bonnets Latest Style. Hats and Bonnets Trimmed to Order. French Milliners Flowers and Feathers.

Human Hair Switches, $1 00 and 1 pearls. Lace and Nail Stuffs, Valic Neckties and Ribbons.

Shetland Shawls, Fichus Belts, Dress Buckles, Collars and Cuffs, Aprons, Embroideries, Ruching in Crepe lisse.

Taslon, Lace, Worsteds, Canvas, Tidies, Card Boards.

2 to 6 Button Kid Gloves, 75 and $2.

Handkerchiefs, Stockings, Gauntlets, Toilet Articles, Face Powder, Perfumery, Dress Trimmings, Button Hooks.

Sewing Articles, Best in Market.

Corsets, French Woven, Thomson's Glove Fitting, Table Cloth, Cloth.

Parasols, Umbrellas, Bustles, 50c and $2 50.

Infants Goods of every description. Ladies and Children's Suits, Wrappers.

Ladies Cotton Underwear of "Sterne."

Ladies Merino Underwear of Norfolk and New Brunswick.

Infants Flannels, all the best Brands.

Infants' Cashmere Cloaks, $1 25 to $10 00.

JUST PUBLISHED.

The Life of

POPE PIUS NINTH.

Drawn from the Most Reliable Authorities.

BY

Rev. R. Brennan.

300 Pages, Finely Illustrated.

Sent by Mail, postpaid, on receipt of the price.

STANDARD BOOKS for libraries and the general reader sold cheap.

New Books and New Stationery Received Daily.

School Books and School Supplies in Large Variety. Prices Moderate.

A. ROMAN & CO.,

Stationers and Booksellers,

11 MONTGOMERY ST.,

SAN FRANCISCO. fel 4-2m

HAMS!

CHOICE EASTERN SUGAR-CURED HAMS Retailed at FIFTEEN CENTS per pound.

Linsley & Co's Yeast Powder the Best in the World. Try it.

LINSLEY & CO.,

505 and 507 Sansome Street, near Clay. fel 4-3m

AN ALPINE AVALANCHE.

In the summer of 1864, a party of tourists, while visiting the Alps, climbed, with great difficulty, to an elevated and snow covered plateau in order to obtain a better view of Swiss scenery and contrast the beauty and richness of midsummer below with the bleakness and sterility of mid-winter around and above them. In playing rolled the mass into large balls, they succeeded it over the edge of the plateau. In falling off it struck softer snow, which immediately gave way, and soon an avalanche was tearing down the mountain side burying and destroying everything in its course. As the handful of snow became the irresistible avalanche, so the hacking cough with sore throat and hoarseness, if neglected, probably develops into that dread destroyer, Consumption. In the early stages Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy will effect a cure, though if the blood be affected or impoverished it must be purified and enriched by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, which is explained in the book of extracts and testimonials, which will be sent gratis by the proprietors, Buffalo, N. Y.

Mary Ann Ferguson, of Ashtabula, Ohio, writes: "Your Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets have cured me of a very severe cough and pain in the side, from which I had suffered some three years, since with pleurisy pneumonia, which left me with a tired feeling so much that gradually grew worse until physicians gave me up to die with consumption. I tried several remedies that are advertised to cure consumption, but without obtaining any relief or benefit. Seeing your Golden Medical Discovery and Pleasant Purgative Pellets advertised, I concluded to try them, and I found them to be all that you claim for them. My health has remained complete for over two years. Enclosed find $1 50 for copy of your Common Sense Medical Adviser."

Yours respectfully yours,

JASON T. BARTHOLOMEW.

New Advertisements.

CHICKERING

PIANO WAREROOMS,

31 Post Street,

L. K. HAMMER,

fel 4-1m Sole Agent Pacific Coast.

PHILADELPHIA

BREWERY.

JOHN WIELAND - - - PROPRIETOR.

SECOND STREET NEAR FOLSOM,

San Francisco.

Amount of Beer sold in 1877, 40,000 barrels. fel 4-1m

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

PATRIOTIC BADGES for St. Patrick's Day, to be worn on the Hat, received from Ireland, where they are sold by millions, a full-length picture in gold and green.

Of St. Patrick and Robt. Emmet.

Mounted in a gold frame, with a green silk bow attached. These Badges are used in Processions and as Society Decorations. Sold wholesale by the sole agents on the Pacific Coast, NATHAN JOSEPH & CO., 641 Clay Street. The Badges are elaborately enameled and very attractive. Country orders supplied by mail or express, cost no more per dozen by mail. fel 4-1m

Pacific Coast Agency.

GENUINE

J. H. CUTTER WHISKIES.

A. P. HOTALING & CO.,

San Francisco. fel 4-1m

LECTURE

BY

Rev. Father Buchard, S. J.

In St. Ignatius Church, Market St. on this evening.

The Sacred Heart Presentation Convent Free Schools, cor. Taylor and Ellis Streets.

Thursday Evening, February 28, 1878.

Subject: "The People's Fault."

Admission - - - - One Dollar.

Lecture to commence at 8 o'clock.

THE "EXCELSIOR"

SERIES OF

COPY BOOKS.

The Most Beautiful System of Writing ever Issued.

COMPLETE IN NINE NUMBERS.

Only 80 cents per Dozen.

This system, unlike others, teaches no superfluous rules, useless flourishes, or unnecessary strokes. It combines elegance with simplicity, and embraces only those graceful, easy movements which nature and good taste suggest.

An analysis of the principle is given over each copy.

Special attention is called to the head lines of this series, which are engraved by one of the best artists in the United States.

The beauty and elegance of this system have called forth the highest praise, while the success of the series has induced publishers to introduce a host of imitations.

The paper used in this series is of the very best quality, and the books are as well made as those of any house of Copy Books now published. Specimen copies free. Address

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY,

LAWRENCE KEHOE, General Agent,

No. 9 Barclay Street, New York.

M. FLOOD, San Francisco. A. WALDTEUFEL, Fell, San Jose. fel 2

NOTICE

HIBERNIAN SOCIETIES.

Societies or individuals requiring Flags, Banners, Scarfs, Regalia, etc., should call on the undersigned before purchasing elsewhere. A large supply of Ancient Order Regalia constantly on hand. Also, Gold and Silver Trimmings, Wholesale and retail. Prices moderate.

B. PASQUALE,

644 Washington street, San Francisco.

NOTICE OF SOLE TRADER.

NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT I, Maria K. Sherman, of the City and County of San Francisco, wife of Manuel Sherman, that she intends to, and will make an application to the County Court of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, on the eighteenth day of March, 1878, at the March term of said Court for an order and decree permitting and authorizing her to carry on and transact business in her own name, and on her own account, as a sole trader, pursuant to the provisions of Title 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure of the State of California, relating to sole traders.

The business she intends to carry on is that of buying and selling, and trading generally in Real Estate, in said City and County, and elsewhere in said State.

MARIA E. SHERMAN.

Dated February 9, 1878.

M. Cooney, Atty. fel 4-5t

JUST PUBLISHED

BY

MICHAEL FLOOD,

No. 831 Market Street,

THE YOUNG CATHOLIC'S COMPANION.

Containing the Catechism, Prayer Book and Hymn Book Complete, Strongly Bound in Cloth. Price: Twenty-five Cents.

NEW BOOKS:

THE CATHOLIC DIRECTORY, 1878 containing a full report of the Dioceses of the United States, British America, Ireland and Australia. Price [illegible]

GOD, THE TEACHER OF MAN KIND. [illegible]

GOLDEN SANDS. [illegible]

THE TREASURY OF THE SACRED HEARTS to cut to order. [illegible]

THE HOLY ROSARY. [illegible]

THE CATHOLIC FAMILY ALMANAC. [illegible]

IRISH AMERICAN ALMANAC AND IRISH ALMANAC, illustrated. [illegible]

A SERMON TO PROMOTE CHARITY TO THE SOULS IN PURGATORY. [illegible]

MICHAEL FLOOD,

Catholic Bookseller,

No. 831 MARKET STREET.

As Book-selling is our principal business we offer the lowest price. fel

H. B. SLAVEN,

CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST,

Fine Toilet Articles,

Perfumery, Combs,

Brushes, Etc., Etc.

AGENT FOR

Percy's Vitalized Phosphates

THE BALDWIN PHARMACY,

Express Building,

Market, Powell and Eddy Sts.

THE LEADING

TEA HOUSE!

HANLY & CO.,

922 MARKET STREET, 922

(Hermitte Florists Building.)

SUGARS AT COST.

12 Good Candles for 25 cents

1 Box (20 bars) Soap for 75 cents

3 lbs. Splendid JAPAN TEA, $1 00

1 lb. Best English Breakfast Tea for 90 cents

4 lbs. good Fresh Ground Coffee for $1 00

3 lbs. very best Mixed Coffee for $1 00

Goods delivered to any part of the city FREE.

GEO. T. HANLY & CO.,

YOU WILL FIND

THE LARGEST STOCK AND STOCK OF WATCHES

AND JEWELRY

AT

ANDERSON & RANDOLPH'S,

CORNER OF

Sutter & Montgomery Sts.

WATCHES REPAIRED.

THE NEW WORK (Illustrated) "The Irish Race in California."

BY DR. O'REILLY.

Issued in the Press and will be ready for delivery in thirty days. fel 4

FAMILY

DRUG AND PRESCRIPTION STORE.

JOHN C. MOODY,

Apothecary,

For the last 15 years on Kearny Street,

HAS REMOVED

TO THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF

POLK AND PINE STS.

Prescriptions prepared with care from the purest drugs and chemicals.

CHARGES MODERATE.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL BOOKS

FOR

CATHOLIC SCHOOLS.

THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY COMPANY'S SERIES OF

ILLUSTRATED SCHOOL BOOKS,

EDITED BY

Rt. Rev. Bishop J. L. Spaulding, D. D., Bishop of Peoria, Ills.

THE "YOUNG CATHOLIC" READERS,

PUBLISHED BY THE

CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

The Leaders of the Sacred Heart are known to stand in the front rank of Catholic teachers as eminently qualified for the work. There can be no better judges of the merits of school-books for Catholic schools. They are versed in all the details of the science of education. No institution enjoys more accomplished and thoroughly instructed pupils than theirs. Hence, if these able educators, in a search of the unequalled merits. Like grass to cows, so Hilbert's Catechism, prove indeed a Lactis to their approval of the New Series.

The Young Catholic Readers are the most popular school books that have ever been issued for the use of Catholic schools. They satisfy more fully than any others, and are used in more country, the needs of both teacher and pupil. They are free from the blunders and low standard of morality which characterize Catholic books. They are Catholic in tone, and supply the rapid progress of all scholars of ordinary talent.

We have tried them in our parochial and academic schools and we have reason to express of the contrary. We would render their universal adoption in the schools and academies of our country of Catholic education.

LADIES OF THE SACRED HEART

Clifton, Cincinnati.

THE YOUNG CATHOLIC SERIES OF READERS is thoroughly Catholic in its tone.

It is the most practical set of Catholic Readers now published.

The series are not made up of mere selections. Many of the Historical and Biographical sketches have been written expressly for this Series.

The books are printed on the best quality of paper, and bound in the most substantial manner.

From Sisters of Mercy Mt St Marys, Manchester, N. H.

Catholic Publication Society

Gentlemen: We have been using The Young Catholic series of readers one year in our schools, and we have pleasure in expressing our approval of them, from the First to the Sixth.

While the text is such as to interest the young, we find it also in accordance with the principles of Christian education.

We feel assured that such a series, and in suitable for the different classes, will do much towards giving our pupils some slight knowledge at least, of the best Catholic authors, and thus contribute to the study of our own literature, in which the young people of America are so deficient.

Memory preserves lifelong traces of the reading lessons learned in childhood, and we look upon the best of the holy lessons interspersed in these books as the germs sown of a rich harvest.

Respectfully yours,

M. M. XAVIER, Mother Superior,

Convent of Mercy, Manchester, N. H.

From the Sisters of Notre Dame, Reading, near Cincinnati.

We cannot but express our high appreciation of the unrivaled School Series of the CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY, namely, the GRAMMAR SCHOOL, SPELLER AND DEFINER, YOUNG CATHOLICS SERIES OF READERS, STANDARD ARITHMETICS, etc. The Society is also publishing our translation of Rev. Father Gazean's HISTORICAL SCHOOL SERIES, ANCIENT, ROMAN, MEDIEVAL and MODERN HISTORY. The first named is already in print, the second in press and the others in course of translation.

(Signed) SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

Cincinnati, O. January 14, 1878. jan 11

NEW HOUSE

AND

RETAIL DEPARTMENT

OF

I. M. WENTWORTH & CO.

We would respectfully invite you to call and examine our extensive stock of

BOOTS & SHOES,

At our New House

867 MARKET STREET, OPP. POWELL & EDDY and HILLYARD'S.

Where we keep a full line of Ladies and Gentlemens wear. Full description of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and those of the most celebrated Eastern and French makers. Having our own Factory and Factory and being Wholesale Importers of the various kinds of goods, we claim to have better facilities for giving

Entire Satisfaction in Quality, Fit and Price,

Than any other house on the Pacific Coast. Manufactures prices only will be charged for our own make of CHILDREN'S SHOES.

We have in connection a department for Custom Work, where we make to measure any style Boots, Shoes and SLIPPERS to suit fancy or peculiar proportions, and to suit the most fastidious taste.

I. R. SHAW, Manager of the Retail Department.

I. M. WENTWORTH & CO.,

Pioneer Manufacturers of San Francisco. 1864. 1877.

WINTHROP

PORTABLE

RANGE

COMBINING ALL MODERN IMPROVEMENTS, BEAUTIFUL in DESIGN the DOUBLE TOPS, PATENT CURVE FILE and CHECK DRAFT, which SAVES one-third the FUEL. For ECONOMY and CONVENIENCE the WINTHROP RANGE is pronounced by all who have used them to be the BEST

COOKING RANGE

In the MARKET. Every RANGE Warranted.

A LARGE STOCK OF

PARLOR, OFFICE AND COOKING STOVES.

NEW STYLES.

Tinware, Woodenware, Etc., in Store and Warehouse, Which I am Selling Very Cheap to Cash Purchasers.

CAUTION. Be sure you get the WINTHROP, as there are many imitations of the RANGE.

CHAS. BROWN, NO. 18 DUPONT STREET.

(Agent for the WINTHROP RANGE.) Near Market, San Francisco. Goods carefully packed and shipped to all parts of the Coast C. O. D. fel 4-1m

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

Catholic Books,

PRAYER BOOKS,

Miscellaneous Books,

School Books,

CHURCH ORNAMENTS,

Catholic Goods,

Staple and Fancy Stationery of every description.

A catalogue will be published in the course of the ensuing month, and will be sent to any address.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Corner First and Fountain Streets, SAN JOSE.

THE MONITOR,

PUBLISHED EVERY

SATURDAY MORNING,

BY

LYONS & O'SULLIVAN, Publishers.

Office, Corner First and Fountain Streets, San Jose.

Advertising Rates.

[illegible]

The Monitor.

Vol. XXI. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY EVENING, FEBRUARY 21, 1878. No. 21.

A. WALDTEUFEL,

Cor. First and Fountain Sts., SAN JOSE, CAL.

Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in

Musical Instruments,

Music Books, Sheet Music,

Musical Merchandise in General.

Agent for Pianos made by

STEINWAY & SONS, New York.

KRANICH & BACH, New York.

C. ROZNIECK, Dresden.

AND FOR ORGANS FROM

Horace Waters & Sons, and the Burdett Organ Company.

My stock is immense. Orders are respectfully solicited, and will be promptly filled. Liberal discounts to Schools and Clergymen.

TELEGRAPHIC INTELLIGENCE

EASTERN.

[illegible]

EUROPEAN.

[illegible]

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

From the Argonaut

EDUCATION

When Mr. School Director John W. Taylor, in his place in the Board of Education, declared that Senator McCoppin was "an ignorant man, an ignorant politician, uneducated and unlettered, he was guilty of a piece of most important modesty in assuming the position, in the point of education and knowledge of our public affairs, usurping the public school system, the School Director from Ward Seventeen compares most unfavorably with the Senator. Mr. McCoppin is altogether right, and Mr. Taylor altogether wrong. Only one tenth of all the children attending the public schools are receiving instruction in the languages, and it costs forty per cent. each more to educate those children than it does the other nine-tenths who cannot afford this luxury. There are seventeen thousand children of school age, drawing $120,000 per annum for teaching languages. There are thousands of children for whom there are no school houses, the public free school system is being abused. Money is being squandered and tax payers robbed in the interest of foreign pedagogues and foreign demagogues.

We do not undervalue education, nor underestimate the importance of the higher branches of learning. The education that is demanded of a free public school system, in our judgement, carries with it no obligation to teach the ornamental branches, or to give instruction in the higher walks of learning. Free public schools mean, primarily, instruction for the poor. It means, in our country, an opportunity for all classes to acquire a knowledge of the rudimentary elements of an English education. It requires a certain and limited amount of knowledge as necessary requirements of good citizenship. It supposes that a certain amount of intelligence is demanded for the proper exercise of those duties that belong to citizens in a government of universal elective privilege. To tax the rich to educate the children of the poor is not the function of the State; to tax anybody to educate the children of the poor is usurpation of legislative power, a crime, and comes from sentimentalism, and not from a sensible estimate of the relations of the laboring poor to the community at large. There are two grades of schools we would support—one in the whole, and the other in part—from the State treasury. The lower grade schools, taught mostly by women, where the children of the poor may acquire a knowledge of the elementary branches of learning, reading, writing, and, as the one higher university, that the road is opening to that higher and more perfect education that is essential to the full development of the intelligent capacities of a community. The commonplaces are easily acquired, and we would as soon be taxed to teach Chectaw as French, German, Spanish, or any one of the foreign languages. We resent the insolence of that political tyranny that enables a foreigner to put his hand in our pocket to teach our children a dead language which is in the native language of the alien parent. We resent the imposition of taxes that are both squandered and wrong to the children, instruction in the ornamental branches of useless sycophantism. The fact is, there are certain elements of education that conflict that are discreditable. Sectarianism run crazy over the idea that education is a panacea for all social and political ills, demagogism that stands in awe of that part of the German and foreign community that demands the exclusion of religion from the political power, a necessary element that surrounds the question of salary to the Board of Education, the ways by-law teaching speculation, high wages to those making laws who are supposed to instruct in the higher branches, jobs for building school houses, jobs in supplying books, janitors, carpenters, and school supplies. We should like to have more of our public affairs conducted by men who are essential parts of the community, and by men who are educated and continued, used to following the orientation, at which the Pope was insulted with the Tiara or triple crown. This country, having reference rather to his temporal power as the sovereign of Rome, than to his spiritual dignity as Vicar of Christ, it is needless to say will by constitution this season. The general opinion of the newly elected Pope is that for learning, tact, energy, dignity, amiability, real moral worth and sincere piety, the Sacred College could not find a more deserving Pope than Cardinal Pecci.

Rome—Election of the Pope.

The Cardinals went into Conclave on the evening of the ninth day after the decease of Pius IX., Monday, February 18th, on Tuesday they were two ballots, one in the forenoon, the other in the afternoon, with a election on Wednesday morning, at the third ballot Cardinal Pecci received the requisite number of votes. He accepted the nomination and made choice of the name of Leo XIII.

We have no doubt it will be interesting to our readers to know some of the details which follow the election, which we take from the "Encyclopedia Ecclesiastica" "When the vote of two thirds of the Conclave shall have agreed on one person the first Cardinal Deacon shall announce the name to the assembled Cardinals. The Pope, after having signified his acceptance, is clothed with the Pontifical ornaments, invested with the Fisherman's Ring, and designates the name by which he is to be known in the Church. The Cardinals kneel before the Pope and present to him the Vatican to St Peter's, where the Pope takes the seat of honor, which he is conducted, and the new Pope is placed in the Pontifical Chair in presence of the assembled Cardinals, Bishops, clergy, and people of Rome. Some distinguished prelate then addresses him, which as the representatives of Catholic nations, etc., with the usual reverences, after which the Pope gives the general absolution and benediction to all present and to the world. This is the essential part of the ceremony, and by which alone the election is consummated and continued, used to follow the coronation, at which the Pope was invested with the Tiara or triple crown. This ceremony, having reference rather to his temporal power as the sovereign of Rome, than to his spiritual dignity as Vicar of Christ, it is needless to say will by constitution this season. The general opinion of the newly elected Pope is that for learning, tact, energy, dignity, amiability, real moral worth and sincere piety, the Sacred College could not find a more deserving Pope than Cardinal Pecci.

Emmett's Centennial.

For some time past the Tom Moore Literary Club has been arranging for a celebration of Ireland's martyr. They have succeeded in to date to do in their effort to arrange enthusiasm among Irishmen. As the result of their efforts, Rev. John H. Kelly, of Saint Anthony's church, last evening, a very popular and talented speaker, has been selected to deliver the oration on the occasion. His post record as an orator gives to the impression that he will do ample justice to the solemn and patriotic occasion. James F. Nolan, a talented young Irish Catholic, has been appointed poet. This poet has shown himself to be a man who can lay his capability and satisfactorily discharge his duties and service. It is meet to be thus. The Poet's service will be rendered to the Club and Poet's service will be rendered to the Club and Poet's service will be rendered to the Club and Produce Market Report.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 14, 1878.

Falling weather and falling prices have been the rule ever since the year began. With twenty inches of rain and warm genial weather good crops are assured, and that should be a holdoff of grain in warehouses to make clearing sales preparatory to another harvest. The details of the market which follow preclude the necessity of any further comments in this connection.

FLOUR—The market for low-grade Superfine for export, favors the buyer, but for standard Extras there is no visible change. We quote current prices as follows: Superfine at $4 75@5 Extra Superfine, $5 50@5 75; Extra Family and Bakers' Extra, $6 00@6 75; while Silk-dressed Extras commands the extremes of the local market, say $6 75@7 25 per bbl (all in cloth lf and gr sks).

WHEAT—The Wheat market since the last weekly review has been steadily declining. The last quoted free in freights to the United Kingdom cost and allow of English orders being extended at even 2½ for Wheat—the present asking price for choice 1877. Transactions for the week are within the range of $1 75 to $2 00 for shipping; Liverpool quotations February 13, 12s 6d@12s 9d sterling; 12s 9d@12s on 15th. At the close we note sales of 20,000 ctls choice milling at $1 95.

BARLEY—There has been a sharp decline in prices, and leading holders are not disposed to submit to any decline, having confidence in the future of the market by reason of a comparative light stock, and feeling well assured that all will be required before the appearance of the new crop. We submit the following sales of the week: 800 sks Coast feed, $1 32½ gr cdl; 4,000 ctls do do, $1 35, in two lots; 150 sks Bay Feed at $1 40; 300 sks choice Bay Feed, $1 40; 1,000 sks Coast Feed, $1 37½ gr cdl; 100 tons and Barley, $1 50; 50 tons seconds do, $2 50; 100 ctls Barley, $1 50; 50 sks brewing is held at $1 45@1 70 for choice sale.

OATS—The market holds its own for choice lots, say 56@57 lbs, with note sales of 200 sks Honeyhills Feed at $1 70 gr cdl; 350 sks some Feed, $1 70; 300 sks dark Coast Feed, $1 87½. The range of the market being $1 55@2 00 gr cdl as circumstances the latter rate for choice milling.

CORN—The market is quite firm for all sound lots, with quite a fair demand. Sales for the week include the following: 100 sks small round at $1 65; gr cdl; 1,200 sacks large round from the wharf, $1 60; 600 sks do, $1 62½ gr cdl.

RYE—Is quoted at $1 40 in light and the price nominal—say $2 25 gr cdl.

SEEDS—We quote: Flax, 86@88c; white Mustard, 86@90c; Mustard, brown, 80@85c; Hemp, 6@6c; Alfalfa, 9@10c; Timothy, 8@10c.

BUCKWHEAT—We quote a good article at $1 40.

BRAN AND MIDDLINGS—The mill price is steady at $16 50 per ton; latter, $20@22.

CORNMEAL—We quote Fresh ground Cornmeal at $2 25@2 50 per ton in sacks.

BEANS—The market is firm with an upward tendency. We quote Bayos, 4@c; Butter, 3½c; Small, 3½@3½c; Pea, White, 3½@3½c; Lima, 4½c; Pink, 4@4½c.

HAY—The market keeps with small supplies at $16@19 50 for good to choice, latter rather best wheat.

GROUND BARLEY—The mill price is $26 per ton.

OIL CAKE MEAL—The mill price is $44 per ton, less the usual discount by jobbers.

HIDES—Advices from New York of late date show a slight decline in rates for Dry with a dull market. Prices in this market have dropped to conform, and the quotations of which they are governed. We now quote Dry at 16c; Dry Kip and Calf, 18c; Salted, 7c. Wet Salted hides Tolls are cull. We quote light salted Hides, 6c; Kip, 6c; heavy, salted Steers, 8c; Salted Calf, 10@10c. Sales of 10,000 lbs Salted within the range. Wool—Fine, 20@22c; medium, 22@25c; short, 20@22c; Shearlings, 15c; all w gr.

TALLOW—Market firm at 6½@7c for Crude and 8c for Refined, at which price, sales have been made for export and local trade.

HONEY—The crop of old Comb Honey has well nigh exhausted. Prices are steady at 16@18c per lb, according to quality. The new yields have come fairly throughout the Southern part of the State and indications of the coming season are but will not equal the yield of former seasons. Extracted Honey is in fair supply and in good demand. Sales of 2,000 lbs Honey at 8½c.

HOPS—The Hop market is quiet. Sales of 100 bales at 5½c to close a consignment. Outside quotations are 6@7c.

WOOL—The stock is too insignificant to afford material for an article. Prices are entirely nominal. We note in receipts of 40,000 lbs Coquimbo.

POTATOES—Receipts for the week have been large, and the market, especially for choice varieties, down from a position, we quote Early Rose at $2 00; Humboldts, $1 60@1 75; Extra Superfine, $5 50@5 75; Extra Family and Bakers' Extra, $6 50@6 75; while Silk-dressed Extras commands the extremes of the local market, say $6 75@7 25 per bbl (all in cloth lf and gr sks).

WHEAT—The Wheat market since the last weekly review has been steadily declining. The last quoted free in freights to the United Kingdom cost and allow of English orders being extended at even 2½ for Wheat—the present asking price for choice 1878

Ave Maria.

Ave Maria!
Swelling gradly through the woodlands up the mountain's rough deifies
Through the valley where the singed willows drop yellow smiles—
Over the meadow and the meadow—over the lakelands—brought the chiefs,
Sing, in anthem loud and joyous, all the sweet odd evening bells:
In a chorus, like of angels,
When before the throne they sing
Hymns of praise and hymns of gladness
To the Lord and God their King.
So the bells all utter music
That the winds waft far and wide—
So the bell bells ring forever
In the merry eventide:
Ave Maria!

Ave Maria!
Thus the angel spake to Mary—Mother Mary—
as the glorious,
And that solemn stillness reigning in that quiet little room,
In the far-off land of Judea that the Virgin's feet had trod,
When she lived a life of saintliness in union with God:
And the lily of the valley
Was not humbler than than she;
Nor the angels up in heaven
Purer in their purity;
And she let fading, now she's listening
To the music as it swells—
Rippling, drawing, sighing, sighing mode
Of the grand old evening bells!
Ave Maria!

Ave Maria.
Glorious Mary! Virgin Mary, fill with holy joy
my soul,
While the woodlands sing thy praises, and the Angelus doth toll!
Queen of earth and Queen of heaven, waft God's glory wide and far—
Silke upon the world's tempest as the welcome morning star.
As the evening bells then utter
Music solemn to the ear—
Music heavenly and angelic
That my soul doth love to hear,
I bend me down and murmur
Forth a prayer on bended knee—
Mother Mary, stainless Mary,
Praise and glory be to thee!
Ave Maria!

OWEN ROE.

Dublin Shamrock.

CHARITY.

Eloquent Lecture—No Charity Outside the Religion of Christ.

THE SISTERS OF CHARITY.

We owe to the New Orleans Morning Star the following report of a most sublime eloquent lecture, delivered by the Right Rev. Bishop Gross, in St. Alphonsus' church, New Orleans.

THE SUN OF CHARITY.

Lord Byron, in one of his strange yet beautiful poems, describes the fearful consequences which would ensue if the sun were removed from its place in the heavens; but it seems to me, dearly beloved, that there is another sun whose removal would prove, in many respects, as disastrous as that described by the English poet in his quaint yet masterly manner. That sun is Charity, which warms the heart of man and fills the world with its beautiful and heroic virtues. If we go down into the bosom of the family, do we not see how the sweet charisma of a mother's love pervades the atmosphere of home? The new-born babe, one of the most helpless of created beings, is entrusted with perfect confidence by God himself, to the care of a mother's love—that love which endures while life exists and which is stronger than even death itself. In a righteous one (not Rome, pagan Rome, with all its wealth and power, with all its eloquence and arts, with all its admiration of the great, and all its appreciation of the beautiful, never knew the meaning of the word—Charity. Among its many public monuments, reared in honor of its heroes and its kings, there was not one edifice erected for the benefit of the poor.)

Rome placed her warriors upon the pinnacles of fame, but left her little ones to perish by the roadside. She hal crowns and laurels for her philosophers and sages; but no compassion for the poor, and no sympathy for the afflicted.

And do we not see the same thing to day in pagan China, where thousands of innocent babes are thrown out upon the roads to die. Charity came into the world with our Saviour, Jesus Christ; and the religion He established has constantly insinuated, from that day until this, the same divine and exalted ennobling lesson.

Christianity teaches all the phases of charity. It finds us sen in the poorest, lowliest cottage, a prince of the celestial kingdom—as fair to the throne in heaven. I know of no better way to make you see this than by telling you the story of Lazarus—that poor, diseased and filthy wretch who knew not what kindness meant, except such as was given him by dogs. These brute friends of the beggar licked his sores, but otherwise he was neglected, abandoned and forgotten. And yet beneath those rags, which covered only loathsome sores, beneath that flesh so diseased that vermin fed upon it; yes, in that repulsive beggar, dying so destitute of all human comfort that his only resting-place was a dung-hill—in this poor wretch the angels saw a glorious soul, crowned with sanctifying grace and beautiful in the eyes of its Creator. That beggar was a prince, for whom a throne and crown were waiting, whom angels were prepared to escort into the courts of heaven, and for whom a glory was reserved, far surpassing all the pomp and splendor of an earthly king.

COLUMBINE AND THE BEGGAR.

Another story which illustrates this phase of charity is that of Columbine and the beggar whom he found before his door. The saint, who was a married man, and one who well knew all the peculiarities of his spouse, no sooner saw the miserable plight of the sick and suffering wretch who asked his help, then he resolved to bring him to his own luxurious home. Tenderly lifting in his arms, and pressing against his rich garments, the poor man, whose foul rags scarcely covered his nakedness, Columbine carried his home, bore him to his own room, and laid him down upon his own rich and luxurious couch.

While the saint was leaning the sores of the beggar and washing his emaciated limbs, his good wife entered the room and took up at a single glance the whole condition of affairs.

[We will not presume here to report the reverend lecturer's words; for the excellent humor, the quaint intonation, and the indescribable suggestions are beyond the reach of any written characters. But after describing the torrent of indignant eloquence which poured from the lips of the lady wife and careful housekeeper, and making his hearers sympathy for the astonished wife almost equal their admiration for the saint, the speaker continued.]

The good woman, having exhausted the whole vocabulary of reproaches, went up to her own room and sat down to meditate upon the ruin of her sheets and the desolation of her counterpane. But she was a pious Christian as well as a most careful housekeeper, and her faith told her that her husband was doing right—that he was performing an act of virtue, and that she ought to go and help him. Accordingly she descended the stairs, went to the room and quietly opened the door. Columbini having finished the dressing of the sores, engaged in his devotions, while the bed, whose sides sheets were whiter than the driven snow, and whose stately pillows lay in such a state from trifid wounds or bleeding sores, behold, the bed—was empty! A perfume of heavenly sweetness filled the room; and the good woman knew that in that bathtome beggar her husband had served an angel unawares.

THE LADY AND THE SLAVE.

But we need not go back to the early ages of the church to see this same sweet charity exercised towards the poor and lowly. I was once giving a mission in the State of Maryland when I received a visit from a lady, requesting me to come and see a poor old slave who had long been a faithful servant in her family. The old man, she said, was very ill, but she thought him well disposed towards our holy faith, and she trusted I would prepare him for the sacraments. I went to see him with the lady, and found him occupying a garret room which was reached by a ladder. I shall not describe the room itself; but you can understand that it was very humble and uninviting. It was impossible for me to go every day, because I was then conducting a mission at a great distance, and I felt unwilling to baptize the old man unless he could receive proper instruction. As soon as I expressed my perplexity to the lady, she immediately offered to instruct the poor man herself and prepare him for the reception of the sacraments. And this she did, going every day to that poor room, climbing up that rough stairway, and spending hours of her time in this noble manner, until I was enabled to give him the sacraments and prepare him for the hour of death, which followed soon after his reception into the Church.

I would not tell you how called I was by this wealthy and high-born lady's charity as displayed towards a lowly, aged slave.

THE POOR, THE CHILDREN OF GOD.

There is a second phase of Christian charity even more beautiful than the first. Faith teaches that every poor, abandoned one, every helpless outcast, every sick and suffering creature, is a child of God—a child of the Heavenly Father. Ah! if we had a little one whom we had lost, how thankful we would be if some kind friend should rescue our poor darling, take him in from the cold night air, clothe his trembling limbs and comfort his little sorrowing heart! How eagerly we would seek for an opportunity to return the kindness done to our beloved child! In the same manner should our Heavenly Father act toward those who befriend His little ones.

THE SISTERS OF CHARITY.

It is this which makes the sweet Sisters of Charity a ray in the orphan left to the mercies of a heathen world. They supply the place of the parents who have left it, giving it all of a mother's love for the sake of the Father in heaven. I was once asked by a surgeon in the United States army to let him know the secret of all the devotion displayed by priests and Sisters in moments of danger, in times of epidemics, etc. "We them in a strange land, faithful to the sick and dying, when all others fly from them? Your Master. In every sick person, in every suffering member of the human family, they see a child of God. Far from seeking the applause of men, they rather shrink from it, for we see the modest priest consoling his good works from the observation of the world, while the Sister of Charity hides even her name from the knowledge of the prince. I remember a few years ago, that during the prevalence of yellow fever in one of our Southern cities, a Sister of Charity was stricken with the plague while discharging her duties of nurse in the fever hospital. She died and was buried. No monument was raised above her bosom, no tablet was erected to her memory. She had given all that can be given to the service of the poor—her health, her strength, her sensibility, and even life itself, and yet her resting-place was only marked by a plain, white cross, with the simple words: "A Sister of Charity."

"THE WHITE BONNET."

What was her name? Who was her father? who was her mother? The only answer to these questions was: "A Sister of Charity." She had worked for the Father in heaven, and to Him alone she looked for recompense.

And perhaps many of you may have heard of the poor wounded soldier who had been gathered through the care of a Sister of Charity, and who, when the death-hour come, was asked if he wished to see a clergyman. "I know nothing of any religion," he replied, "but I would like to belong to that Church which gives those sisters its white bonnet." And when at last a priest was brought to the dying man, he called about for his sister. Her ministrations had been so kind, so unselfish, so tender, so like a mother's love, that he wished to be a member of the Church which followed such a Sister of Charity.

Let me

WEEKLY CALENDAR.
FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 2.

February.
24—Sunday—Sexagesima Sunday.
25—Monday—St Matthias, Apostle.
26—Tuesday—[illegible]
27—Wednesday—Feria.
28—Thursday—Feria of the Blessed Sacrament.
March.
1—Friday—Feria.
2—Saturday—Office of the Immaculate Conception.

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY EVENING FEBRUARY 21.

SUBSCRIBERS will please specially look at the printed label on the margin or wrapper of the paper; the date thereon shows when the subscription expires. They should also know that this taking the paper from the postoffice renders them liable for the subscription price as long as they continue to do so. Persons have no excuse to make for papers being sent after the time their subscription expires if they wish their paper discontinued, by not taking it from the office the postmaster is bound to notify the publishers of that fact, and to have the paper stopped. We make this explanation for the information of those who make the excuse, when asked for payment, that they paid for it as long as ordered, but still continue to take it from the office.

☞ Old and respected friend, Wm. Watt God's Gloster, has kindly consented to act as our agent in Sacramento, and we bespeak for him the welcome he richly deserves from our numerous patrons there. Mr. Gloster will deliver to the carrier boys, collect the money, and do all other necessary business connecting both then and there. Mr. Gloster's address is Mono Mode solemn to the ear
Music heavenly and angelic,
That my soul doth love to hear,
I bend me down and murmur
Forth a prayer on beaded knee—
Mother Mary, stainless Mary,
Praise and glory be to thee!
Ave Maria!

—Dublin Shamrock. OWEN ROE.

CHARITY.

Eloquent Lecture—No Charity Outside the Religion of Christ.

THE SISTERS OF CHARITY.

We owe to the New Orleans Morning Star the following report of a most sublime and eloquent lecture, delivered by the Right Rev. Bishop Grosa, in St. Alphonsus' church, New Orleans.

THE SUN OF CHARITY.

Lord Byron, in one of his strange yet beautiful poems, describes the fearful consequences which would ensue if the sun were removed from its place in the heavens; but it seems to me, dearly beloved, that there is another sun, whose removal would prove, in many respects, as disastrous as that described by the English poet in his quaint yet masterly manner. That sun is Charity, which warms the heart of man and fills the world with its beautiful and benign virtues. If we go down into the bosom of the family, do we not see how the sweet charities of a mother's love pervade the atmosphere of home? The new-born babe, one of the most helpless of created beings, is entrusted with perfect confidence by God himself, to the care of a mother. What love, what tenderness, what endurance, and which is stronger than ever was only woman's love? Wrapped in banks should Hope, with all its wealth of eloquence and prominent position among the institutions. California being, as it were, the most favored spot in the United States, there money was most easily got and fortune the most swiftly accumulated, these institutions could not spring up and flourish with marvellous rapidity as it happened. Population increased, the State, business increased, and men, emboldened by recently high profit were made to lay aside their hands so frequently that institutions that even pretended to be charitable, were neglected, specially of the wildest kind were entered and, in the natural course of things, serious failures were the result.

As time passed on and matters in this state gradually settled down to the level that had long prevailed in the East, when men no longer dreamed of picking up fortunes in a year or two, the banks adopted a more cautious policy and adhered more closely to the recognized canons of commercial transactions. Consequently they were compelled to refuse the interest allowed to depositors. But still, in the minds of many, more especially those who, having but little, were anxious to make as much out of that as possible, there remained a not unreasonable but yet unreasonable desire for the old high rates of interest. They did not like to see the productive power of their little savings reduced, and they looked about for other means of investment. There were not wanting individuals ready and eager to take advantage of the trouble of those poor people, and soon savings banks of quite a different kind from the old were started in profusion. In most cases they were started without a dollar of capital; there was no person of sound reputation or acknowledged responsibility connected with them; but then they made fine promises, and for a time declared liberal dividends. These mushroom institutions before long became possessed of hundreds of thousands of dollars belonging to hard-working people and others who could ill-afford to lose a dime.

One by one, however, they met the only fate that could possibly be in store for them. They disappeared, leaving unmistakable evidence of fraud, deceit and robbery behind them. Last year, as will long be remembered, had an unhappy notoriety for the number of failures of such villainous institutions. How many of their "Presidents," "Directors," and "Managers" had to fly the country we do not care to count. To-day, we know, all the energies of our city detective force are directed towards the capture of two prominent rascals who have hitherto managed to evade justice, although a large reward is offered for their apprehension.

Now, when men hope that the worst is over, and that, notwithstanding the prevalent distress among the unemployed, better times are in store for San Francisco and for California, we find certain parties engaged in the bad work of trying to shake the confidence of the people in our really sound and perfectly solvent savings banks. Individuals who undertake to lead the workingmen, and who loudly profess to alleviate their present distress, demand that their followers shall withdraw their deposits from the banks. Most unfounded statements are made as to the financial position of the banks; their managers are denounced as thieves and robbers; the public are told that their money is being squandered and that they had better take out what is left before all is gone. The men who speak thus are uneducated and entirely unacquainted with the workings of monetary institutions. They are not even able to form an intelligent idea upon the subject. So heaven help those who are led away by their foolish harangues!

If the people did take their money out of the banks, what could they do with it? Keep it at home and run all the chances of fire or robbery as well as the temptation to spend it little by little, perhaps, upon what they would otherwise do without! Take it to the Savings Bank for themselves! I was then comfortable, and had long ago at all distances, and I felt unwilling to see these old men imposed on and cheated out of their hard-earned savings. As soon as I expressed injudiciously to the lady, she immediately forced to interest the poor man herself and prepare him for the reception of Lee sacraments. And this she did, going every day to that poor man's house, climbing up that rough stairway, and spending hours of her time in this noble manner, until I was enabled to give him the sacraments and prepare him for the hour of death, which followed soon after his reception into the Church.

I need not tell you how edified I was by this wealthy and high-born lady's charity as displayed towards a lowly, aged sheep.

THE POOR, THE CHILDREN OF GOD.

There is a second phase of Christian charity even more beautiful than the first. Faith teaches that every poor, abandoned one, every helpless outcast, every sick and suffering creature, is a child of God—a child of the Heavenly Father. Ah! if we had a little one whom we had lost, how thankful we would be if some kind friend should receive our poor darling, take him in from the cold night air, clothe his trembling limbs and comfort his little sorrowing heart! How eagerly we would seek for an opportunity to return the kindness done to our beloved child! In the same manner does our Heavenly Father act toward those who befriend His little ones.

THE SISTERS OF CHARITY.

It is this which makes the sweet Sisters of Charity take up the orphan left to the mercy of a brother world. They an spite the place of the parents who have left it, giving it all of a mother's love for the sake of the Father in heaven. I was once asked by a surgeon in the United States army to let him know the secret of all the devotion displayed by Sisters and Sisters in moments of danger and epidemics. My reply was, faithful to the Gospel of Christ, which teaches us that the poor are our brothers, and that what we do unto them we do unto Christ himself.

Sen. Senate, on January 21st, his bill having reference to the interments in cemeteries. It must be apparent to every reflecting person that the time will come when it will be injudicious to continue burials in the cemeteries now in use at Lone Mountain. The city is spreading and in the course of years it will extend beyond that place. Therefore it is in accordance with modern ideas upon such matters that provision should be made for the procuring of burial places at a greater distance from the city limits. Still, we think that the Senator's action is a little premature. As yet at all events the dwellings in the neighborhood of the cemeteries are not very numerous, and it is not likely that they will increase with much rapidity during the next five or six years. There are no grounds, that we are aware of, for supposing that these cemeteries by reason of their proximity have any bad effects on the health of the inhabitants in the vicinity much less upon the health of the city at large. They are certainly not overcrowded, and we have never heard complaint that the interments were not properly performed. Again, it appears to be a really mistaken idea that burial places are of necessity unwholesome or detrimental to the health of those who live near them. Provided that the bodies are interred at a proper depth no bad effects can possibly arise, whether the cemetery be located inside of a city or outside of it. For this good medical authority can be adduced. We remember reading some time ago a very clever article in a highly respectable English Medical Magazine in which the view was sustained and the popular prejudices against cemeteries were discussed and refuted. A proof was adduced from the proverbial longevity of sextons and all who are engaged in the burial of the dead. So, if we agree with Senator Donovan in believing that the time will come when burials in Lone Mountain should be no longer permissible, we are not inclined to accept the grounds he assigns as sanitary reasons that he is disposed to give. Considerations of public decency and respect for the dead would influence us more as strongly. To come to the particulars of Senator Donovan's bill, we do not think it at all necessary to insist that no body shall be removed for reinterment, even by a relative or friend, until it had lain in the ground for three years. We think such a provision would work great cruelty and injustice to the friends and relatives of deceased persons. What harm could arise from permitting removal for reinterment at any time, provided sufficient precautions were taken in the casket? Again, Section 297, as framed by Mr. Donovan, would entirely prohibit interments in Lone Mountain after the first day of January, 1866, and we are decidedly of opinion that this provision would be better dispensed with. It is not called for by any exigencies of the case. In Calvary cemetery many of our most prominent Catholic families have large plots in which rest the remains of their deceased relatives, and they have erected costly monuments to their memory. The expense of erecting them ranged all the way from one thousand to sixty thousand dollars. It would certainly be afflicting to the feelings of those families to prevent any further use of their mortuary plots after the lapse of seven years from now. And the same argument will hold good in the case of the humblest and poorest, whose dear and loved ones lie under the sacred soil of Calvary Cemetery. It would, we are sure, answer all Mr. Donovan's purposes, and meet all the possible requirements of the city, if the opening of fresh ground for burial were prohibited after the specified date. Section 298 in the Senator's bill reads rather too vaguely. It makes it a misdemeanor to permit a human body or remains to rest in a receiving vault for more than sixty days. The propriety or impropriety of this will evidently depend altogether upon the nature or character of the vault in which the remains are placed. We cannot conceive how objection could be made to their being for an indefinite time in a niche well cemented and made air-tight. We could extend our criticisms but we refrain from doing so. Senator Donovan will perceive that he has undertaken an extremely delicate task. The sacredness of burial places is all Christian people is every where recognized. There are few things about which Christians, and especially Catholics, are sensitive as any kind of a burial place. There was a moaning in the young girl's natural love forgot to be remembered, snuggled with a Chi, therefore, for the representative of a suffer an instant father we had decided, after and ing off her jewelled cross she gave it better beggar.

That night, while kneeling in her, wrapped in an extasy of delight, the a perceived a bright light filling all the pal and in its midst stood Jesus Christ hold her jewel in His hand. "My child, he said, "you thought you gave this jewel to a beggar; but it was to Me you did this deed, for I will keep this cross until the day of judgment, so as to show to all the world how much my Catherine loved Me!"

Our good deeds towards the poor, of which we have perhaps forgotten, in our gentle charities will be one day jewels our Lord's dear hands to show how much we loved him. The sentence reserved for every Christian on the last day is made to depend on the charity shown towards the poor. Our Lord named us of this with pl' ous divine lips, "I was hungry and ye gave me to eat. I was naked and yeclothed me I was a stranger and ye took me in." And when we shall say, "Lord, when did we see Thee hungry and fed Thee, naked and clothed Thee? then we shall learn in every poor creature to whom we gave a drink, every afflicted person whom we relieved, every suffering one whom we succored, represented Jesus Christ Himself, or all that we did to the least of these we done unto Himself. But the strongest argument I can use in behalf of the exercise of charity, an argument unanswerable to all others, is the example of our Lord Himself, faithful to the Gospel of Christ, which teaches us that the poor are our brothers, and that what we do unto them we do unto Christ himself.

MICHAEL-SHEA, the News Dealer, appears to be well satisfied with his new place at 815 Market street. His business is increasing rapidly. He has added to his ordinary stock of Books, Religious and Secular Magazines, Irish News Papers, Spectacles, Eye Glasses, etc., a very fine lot of Photographs of his departed Holiness Pope Pius IX., which as with all characteristics of his stock he offers for sale at temptingly low prices.

It may be well to inform our city readers that Rev. J. B. McNally has received full authorization from his Grace the Archbishop to deliver his lecture before the Tom Moore Literary Club, on the occasion of the Emmett Centennial Celebration, 4th March.

We desire to inform our friends in the neighborhood of Potrero and, indeed, our subscribers generally, that owing to the inclemency of the weather, and the impassable state of the roads, our agent, Mr. J. C. Drake, will not venture his travels for some time.

We are endeavoring to re-organize the departments in the original and selected matter of THE MONITOR, so as to render it more of a newspaper than it has been. A crush of unexpected news has somewhat interfered with our efforts this week.

SUBSCRIBERS in Marysville and its vicinity will please to take notice that Mr. Thos. J. Power is authorized by us to receive money for this paper and receipt for the same. Delinquents, and all wishing to stand clear on our books, are respectfully invited to call upon that gentleman at their earliest convenience and settle up with him. We have to thank Mr. Power for this and many other kindnesses to THE MONITOR.

Cardinal McCloskey has transferred to St. John's College, at Fordham, N. Y., a large plot of ground adjoining the college, for the nominal consideration of $1.

Publications Received.

New Ireland. By A. M. Sullivan, Member of Parliament for Louth. New York: Peter F. Collier, 38 Park Place. On sale at J. B. O'Connor's, 103 Sixth street, corner Mission.

In passing our opinion on a book which has already overpopulated the shelves of nearly all the Eastern and Irish papers, we must feel a task of some delicacy. The reviews of our contemporaries, both European and American, have generally been much ahead of the work itself, and our criticism is, therefore, somewhat of the nature of a second hand story. Still, as the book itself has been only one-half before us, and, moreover, as we believe the views hitherto expressed on its merits have been in so moral somewhat too sweeping, either in praise or blame, we shall endeavor to lay our opinion on it before our readers. The writer, as our readers are well aware, is the former editor of the Dublin Nation and a prominent member of the Home Rule party in the British Parliament. The utterances of such a man must necessarily have an importance beyond their purely literary merits, as being those of a representative Irishman, however many of his countrymen may differ from him in opinion. When the chosen representative of a large class of Irishmen gives to the world his sentiments regarding the contemporary story of his country, the world naturally attaches to them something of the weight of a manifesto of political faith—if not of an actual plea in favor of his constituents. Such, however, is very far from the true nature of Mr. Sullivan's book. It is simply a series of sketches, drawn from his experiences in life in Ireland during the last thirty or forty years, and slightly connected together in a fashion very much known to Californians and the Pacific Coast as the Spanish "Fly Ranchos" is the close counterpart of "New Ireland," and the latter, we are sorry to say, has been written much more to suit the Engish literary market with a look than because the author had anything, of value to say in the cause of Ireland. Anecdotes of life in Ireland would be a more fitting title for the work, and, readable and entertaining as it undoubtedly is, we cannot help feeling that it is written in a spirit hardly becoming a man so long identified with the leading national paper of Ireland. It is altogether too "Bohemian" in tone for its subject; and we can not but regret that the man who wrote the "Story of Ireland" so well should employ his pen on these sketches. The book is divided into chapters almost entirely disconnected, and each other, on such topics as "The Schoolmaster Abroad;" "O'Connell and Repeal;" "The Ribbon Confederacy;" "Father Mathew;" "Young Ireland;" "The Irish Landed Estates Court;" "The Brass Band;" "The Suicide Banker;" "The Phenix Conspiracy;" "The Fenian Movement;" "Irish Priests;" "Fate of Genius;" "Irish Disestablishment;" "Home Rule;" "The Kerry Elections," and other topics of less general interest. It will be seen that there is a lack of subject matter; and we must say, this of a monthly serial published—not in Dublin, nor in Cork, but in Limerick—but in Montreal. Such, however, is really the case. Neither the Shamrock, published in the Dublin Irishman office, nor Young Ireland, emanating from the Nation office, is comparable to it. The contents of the number before us are, "Eveleen's Victory," a tale; "To the Irish at Home," poetry; "England's Greatest Queen," a faithfully drawn portrait of the teenagent Elizabeth; "The Future of the Irish People;" "Pius, the Great," poetry, possessing a sad interest at the present time; "The O'Donnells of Glen Cottage," story; "Lending a Hand," poetry; "An old anecdote well told; "Light," poetry; "How the Confessional Works;" "Catechism of the History of Ireland," an admirable feature which we cannot too highly commend. There are also many shorter articles of much merit, readable paragraphs, household hints, facetiæ, and all the minor matters that go towards making up a really good magazine.

The Catholic World, February number, contains the following articles: "Cardinal Wiseman, the Core Herd," poem; "Confession in the Church of England," a most instructive and interesting paper; "Michael the Scandive," a story of much power and pathos; "A Final Philosophy;" "A Great Bishop," a biographical sketch of Bishop Von Ketteler; "The Old Stone Jug," an American story; "Brother and Sister," sonnet; "Christianity as an Historical Religion," a scholarly defense of faith; "There was no Room for them in the Inn," poem; "The Home Rule candidate," a pleasing Irish tale; "A Child Beggar," poem; "The Isles of Arrica," an agreeable sketch of a famous locality; "In Retreat," poetry; "Preachers on the Rampage," a splendid assault on the preachers who distinguished themselves by their bigotry and anti-Irish feeling on the occasion of the recent demonstration into the Chinese question in San Francisco; "A Little Sermon," poem, and the usual criticisms on current literature.

The Catholic Record, January number, presents a varied table of contents, and all the articles may be described as brazilian. The more important among them are, "Will Mohamedanism Outlive the Turkish Empire?" "Literature and the Arts and Science in the Dark Ages;" "Natural Science in its Higher Aspects;" "A plea for Plain History;" "Two Vocations," a brief sketch of the careers of Mother Marie de la Providence and Mother Mary Seton; "Dishonored," a very promising story; "Today," a fine piece of poetry; "How Professor Carter Lectured a Ghost;" "Bury the Dead," poetry, and the usual book notices and editorial remarks.

PIUS IX. AND IRELAND.

Archbishop Alemany in his sermon on the death of the Pope referred to the warm sympathy and affectionate appreciation which His Holiness often manifested towards the people of Ireland, on account of their heroic fidelity to their holy faith. The Pontiff himself in a sketch of the life of the deceased Pontiff published in the New York Sun we find some interesting anecdotes illustrative of the fact.

IRISH INDEPENDENCE.

He was naturally gifted with a quick humor and keen appreciation of the ludicrous. Some of the great centers where dwell the ancient Celtic race the Sean Gallacy, Irishmen were fain to think, will not a little of the Celtic wit. His reputed wit was rather of a kind which pleased, without ever leaving a sting behind. A distinguished Irish Bishop, who was paying his first visit to Rome, was presented to the Pope, and he was the author the justice to say that the charms of style are not wanting to give them interest, but still as Irishmen, we are sorry to see them in perpetual "The Arrival of O'Connell is both amusing and instructive, and we must regret that the writer of the "Story of Ireland" has written "New Ireland."

The Harp, published by Tillies and Callahan, Montreal, Canada, February number. We have no hesitation in pronouncing this by far the best magazine of its class printed either in Ireland or out of it, for Irish readers. It is strange that we should have this to say, this of a monthly serial published—not in Dublin, nor in Cork, nor in Limerick—but in Montreal. Such, however, is really the case. Neither the Shamrock, published in the Dublin Irishman office, nor Young Ireland, emanating from the Nation office, is comparable to it. The contents of the number before us are, "Eveleen's Victory," a tale; "To the Irish at Home," poetry; "England's Greatest Queen," a faithfully drawn portrait of the teenagent Elizabeth; "The Future of the Irish People;" "Pius, the Great," poetry, possessing a sad interest at the present time; "The O'Donnells of Glen Cottage," story; "Lending a Hand," poetry; "An old anecdote well told; "Light," poetry; "How the Confessional Works;" "Catechism of the History of Ireland," an admirable feature which we cannot too highly commend. There are also many shorter articles of much merit, readable paragraphs, household hints, facetiæ, and all the minor matters that go towards making up a really good magazine.

The Catholic World, February number, contains the following articles: "Cardinal Wiseman, the Core Herd," poem; "Confession in the Church of England," a most instructive and interesting paper; "Michael the Scandive," a story of much power and pathos; "A Final Philosophy;" "A Great Bishop," a biographical sketch of Bishop Von Ketteler; "The Old Stone Jug," an American story; "Brother and Sister," sonnet; "Christianity as an Historical Religion," a scholarly defense of faith; "There was no Room for them in the Inn," poem; "The Home Rule candidate," a pleasing Irish tale; "A Child Beggar," poem; "The Isles of Arrica," an agreeable sketch of a famous locality; "In Retreat," poetry; "Preachers on the Rampage," a splendid assault on the preachers who distinguished themselves by their bigotry and anti-Irish feeling on the occasion of the recent demonstration into the Chinese question in San Francisco; "A Little Sermon," poem, and the usual criticisms on current literature.

The Catholic Record, January number, presents a varied table of contents, and all the articles may be described as brazilian. The more important among them are, "Will Mohamedanism Outlive the Turkish Empire?" "Literature and the Arts and Science in the Dark Ages;" "Natural Science in its Higher Aspects;" "A plea for Plain History;" "Two Vocations," a brief sketch of the careers of Mother Marie de la Providence and Mother Mary Seton; "Dishonored," a very promising story; "Today," a fine piece of poetry; "How Professor Carter Lectured a Ghost;" "Bury the Dead," poetry, and the usual book notices and editorial remarks.

PIUS IX. AND IRELAND.

Archbishop Alemany in his sermon on the death of the Pope referred to the warm sympathy and affectionate appreciation which His Holiness often manifested towards the people of Ireland, on account of their heroic fidelity to their holy faith. The Pontiff himself in a sketch of the life of the deceased Pontiff published in the New York Sun we find some interesting anecdotes illustrative of the fact.

IRISH INDEPENDENCE.

He was naturally gifted with a quick humor and keen appreciation of the ludicrous. Some of the great centers where dwell the ancient Celtic race the Sean Gallacy, Irishmen were fain to think, will not a little of the Celtic wit. His reputed wit was rather of a kind which pleased, without ever leaving a sting behind. A distinguished Irish Bishop, who was paying his first visit to Rome, was presented to the Pope, and he was the author the justice to say that the charms of style are not wanting to give them interest, but still as Irishmen, we are sorry to see them in perpetual "The arrival of O'Connell is both amusing and instructive, and we must regret that the writer of the "Story of Ireland" has written "New Ireland."

The Harp, published by Tillies and Callahan, Montreal, Canada, February number. We have no hesitation in pronouncing this by far the best magazine of its class printed either in Ireland or out of it, for Irish readers. It is strange that we should have this to say, this of a monthly serial published—not in Dublin, nor in Cork, nor in Limerick—but in Montreal. Such, however, is really the case. Neither the Shamrock, published

GENERAL CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

Rome.

The latest by cable from Rome says:

The congregation of Cardinals on Friday heard the late Pope's last wishes and instructions relative to the Conclave and his funeral. They were unsealed and read pro-public coherer by the Chamberlain to all the Cardinals now in Rome.

The arrangements for the obsequies of the late Pope and the choosing of his successor are progressing. The attitude of the Italian Government has reassured even the most timid, and there are some indications of the pomp of the Papacy coming forth from its Vatican retreat. The church bells have been tolling all day.

WITH FULL RITES.

It is certain that no undue haste will be made, and that none of the proscribed formalities will be omitted. As soon as the Popes dol the Ambassadors to the Vatican asked the Camerlingue to follow the ancient usage regarding the funeral and the election of a successor. Cardinal Pecci replied that that was the intention of the majority of the Sacred College.

THE SACRED COLLEGE ASSEMBLING.

Forty-three cardinals are now here, and ten more have sent notice by telegraph of their intention to come. The French cardinals are expected to reach here to-morrow, and the Austrian and Spanish cardinals Sunday and Monday. All the cardinals have been informed of the meeting of the Conclave, which will assemble immediately at the Vatican.

THE FUNERAL AT ST. PETER'S.

The Cardinal-Vicar's announcement of the death of the Pope says his funeral will be celebrated at St. Peter's Cathedral, and orders prayers for the repose of his soul to go up in all the Catholic churches throughout the world. A public lying-in-state of the Pope's remains is anticipated.

MORTUARY SERVICES.

Funeral services will be held in all the churches throughout the world. The Cathedral is expected to be very imposing.

THE BURIAL.

The remains are to be temporarily deposited in the Choir Chapel of St. Peter's, and finally buried in the crypt. The Conclave will decide whether the funeral shall be public or private.

RULERS OF THE CHURCH AD INTERIM.

Cardinals Bilio, Pecci and di Pietro will govern the Church pending the election of a Pontiff.

THE NEW SECRETARY OF STATE.

Cardinal Simeoni has assumed in exercise the functions of Secretary of State. The conduct of affairs devolves upon Mgr. Lagusi, Secretary of the Sacred College of Cardinals.

THE ITALIAN GOVERNMENT'S TRIBUTE.

The Official Gazette of the Italian Government pays a tribute of eulogy to Pius IX., and promulgates orders for the suspension of all public amusements while the remains are lying in state.

The Italian prefects and military authorities have received the order to hoist the Papal sovereign honors, but await an ecclesiastical invitation before attending the funeral.

PREPARATIONS FOR THE CONCLAVE.

Probably the Hall of the Consistory will be chosen for holding the ballot for the new Pope. Prince Chigi, Marshal of the Conclave, has assumed his functions and given orders for the necessary changes in the doors of communication and the removal of persons now living on the same floor on which the Conclave assembles.

THE CANDIDATES.

The candidates for the Papacy are Cardinals Cretti, Bilio, Pecci, Bonaparte, Innocente Ferrieri and Camilla di Pietro.

ROME, February 16.—The Conclave will meet on Tuesday. The Cardinals are moderate party are very confident of success. In Monday's Consistory the Cardinals discussed the proposition of the Sacred College binding the new Pope to a predetermined line of policy. Cardinal Pecci, the Camerlingo, spoke against the proposal, which was supported by Cardinal Manning. By a large majority it was decided that the Pope should have the fullest freedom of action. Foreign Cardinals arriving here announce that the Catholics in their respective countries is favorable to a conciliatory policy.

ROME, February 16.—A majority of the Cardinals have agreed to hasten the Conclave to elect a Pope in four or five days.

It is said that Cardinal Bonaparte will be made by the British Cabinet in Rome as a protest against the Papal Bull of Pius IX. and the approval given to it by Great Britain. The Cardinal Prince is a Vice President of the Irish College in Rome, and Monsignor Talbot, the Papal Chamberlain, is a Papal deputation, also called upon him, to congratulate and have a friendly chat with the young demonstration. Kirby, who thought that the Pope's death would be the signal for reparation to make as British subjects, claimed benefit in the settlement of the matter. There was great indignation on the part of Monsignor Talbot, and an letter was written by the Cardinal. Whereupon Dr. Kirby called on the Holy Father and represented to him that neither he nor his wanted to march through the streets of Rome as the British flag, as they had a flag of their own, a good-looking flag and designed by themselves. The Pope was amused. "By all means," said he, "get your own flag made for me to see it and let me see it, and you will it." Here was a situation. Monsignor Talbot, the Cardinal Prince Dr. Kirby and his men on the morrow! Early in the morning, however, an officer from the Vatican brought to the Irish College a document signed by Pius IX. Kirby Filius Pimbarbelatis to His Holiness, and thus given him precedence over Monsignor Talbot. So the Green won the day, and Rome then saw the Papal Irish choose for a banner the green flag and proposed the battle cry of the Irish. Faire non contentar Sassenach. The Pope laughingly remarked, as he looked on the green flag and proposed the battle cry of the Irish. Faire non contentar Sassenach. The Pope laughingly remarked, as he looked on the green flag and proposed the battle cry of the Irish. Faire non contentar Sassenach. The Pope laughingly remarked, as he looked on the green flag and proposed the battle cry of the Irish. Faire non contentar Sassenach.

THE IRISH ZOZAVE.

Another day, during the same glorious period, he is taking his walk from the Vatican, he met a group of four of his defenders. He was in a good humor, and stopped to get out of the way a remarks who had taken too much Roman ale, and the Pope, who was a good Roman ale, and the Pope, who was a good Roman ale, and the Pope, who was a good

Why Catholics Sympathize with Turkey.

A fortnight ago we published a letter from a well-known Catholic writer which expressed regret at our having throughout the present crisis in the East sided with the Turk against the Russian. To-day we publish in our correspondence columns a reply from one of our readers who cannot accept the "anti-Turkish point of view" as a logical one for a Catholic. We might be content to leave the matter here, but it has appeared to us that it might be well to briefly state why it is that we think that at the present time Catholics should not be found on the side of Russia and against Turkey.

There was a time when the Turks were an active danger to Europe, but their last onslaught was made nearly two centuries ago. There was a time when the Popes yearly decreed spiritual penalties against any who afforded help to the Turks—the enemies of Christendom—but, as our anti-Turkish correspondent himself tells us, the decree ceased in 1770, more than a century ago. The Popes had recognized the altered state of things. The Turks had ceased to attack the States of Christendom, and no one would contend that the fact that their religion was a false one could make them permanent objects of active and unprovoked hostility. The Turk had never been a persecutor. There is not in our martyrologies the name of a single martyr who died by the Turkish sword. Once his wars with Europe ceased—and they ceased before 1700—he became a protector of Christendom in the East. The statement seems a bold one, but the facts of history bear it out. The Christian communities were allowed extensive privileges, the authority of their bishops was recognized and supported by the State; churches were allowed to be built and protected by the same law which made the mosques inviolable; public processions were permitted even in the capital, as they are to this day.

Meanwhile Russia was rising into a great power. She had made her Church, which was itself a schism from the schism of the East—a servile engine of the State. From the first she persecuted the Catholics in communion with Rome, and the extensions of her rule was synonymous with the extension of the area of persecution. The history of Poland is a proof of this. She has persecuted. She still persecutes. We know that at this very time while we write Polish Catholics are suffering for their faith in Russian prisons. The same policy of intolerance is to be found in what we must call the dependencies of Russia. In Montenegro no religion but that of the Vladika is tolerated. In Servia no Catholic church is allowed to be built, and in Belgrade Catholics can only hear Mass in the Consular chapels.

In the interest, therefore, of the Catholics of the East, the substitution of the Russian for the Turkish rule would be a thing to be deplored. Not only would the Catholics certainly be more or less persecuted, but the Greek Church, which has its center at Constantinople, would be consolidated with the Russian Church, and this organization would increase tenfold the power of the Russian schism, and, so far as human foresight can go, would raise another obstacle to the union of the East and the West. It is in the interest of the Church that the schism should be prolonged, for it enables them to maintain the Russian Church as a powerful engine of State. But the Russian Church is a purely national one. The Greek Church in the Turkish Empire, in Servia, and in the Greek Kingdom and the Bulgarian Church are four separate bodies. If Russia extends her power, she will be able to draw all these into the iron framework of her ecclesiastical system, and they will then be much further from reunion with the Holy See than when they were not even an independent bodies, whose direct interest, though as yet they see it not, is to unite themselves with Rome, and so preserve their ecclesiastical freedom from absorption into Russia. In the interest, therefore, of free toleration for the Catholics of the East, and of the hopeful reunion of East and West, it is well that Russia should be held back from Constantinople and the Turkish power maintained in Europe. Turkey certainly no longer menaces the Christians of Europe, while Russia is certainly spreading further and further her persecuting empire.

So far we have spoken only of interest, but there is a higher motive for aiding with the Turk in the present struggle. We must not do evil that good may come of it; and if Russia had a just quarrel we should side with her, and trust to Providence to protect our brethren of the East when they fell under her sway. But her quarrel is emphatically unjust. We need not go into the question of the goodness or the badness of the Turkish Government. It is enough to say that there is no Government in Europe against which its enemies cannot draw up a bill of indictment. Russia draws up such a bill of indictment against Turkey. There were abuses undoubtedly, but the Turks were striving to remedy them. In any case, Russia, the old enemy of Turkey, chose for her attack the moment when the party of reform in Turkey was on the point of success, and the Sultan Abdul Asaiz was about to be deposed by Midhat and Hussein Avni. Insurrections were excited by Russian organizers in the Turkish provinces. These insurrections and their repression were made the pretext for expostulations from Russia, and for appeals by Russia to Europe. Never before in history did the delegates of foreign Powers meet in the capital of a friendly country to decide how that country should be governed; but Turkey was asked to allow this new principle to be applied to her affairs, and the Conference met at Constantinople. On the eve of the Conference, Russia mobilized her army, so that the assembly had to deliberate with 400,000 bayonets menacing Turkey. The Turks on the very day when the Conference opened proclaimed a new Constitution—a Constitution which, in the midst of war, they have faithfully carried into effect, and which contained concessions of all the reasonable demands that Russia had put forward for the better government of the subjects of the Porte. The Conference proposed to Turkey that her internal government should be handed over to a foreign committee of supervision, and her provinces occupied by a foreign gendarmerie. To concede such demands as these would have been suicide. Turkey refused, but at the same time proposed out how many of the other demands made by the Conference were already granted. The Conference broke up, a powerful peace was made with Servia, and terms of peace were negotiated with Montenegro. Russia, however, in order to keep open a wound in the side of Turkey, would not allow her pensioner, the Prince of Roumania, to come to any compromise with the Turks, and the negotiations broke down. An armistice which had been concluded with Montenegro was to expire in April. Russia occupied the interval in negotiating the London Protocol, by a note appended to which her Ambassador called on Turkey, which had not been the first to arm, to commence disarming. Turkey refused to make herself defenseless, but expressed her readiness to disarm if she were given sufficient guarantees that Russia would at the same time demobilize her army. Russia took the Porte's refusal to accept the Protocol and disarm as a final defiance, and declared war.

Two months before, Lord Augustus Loftus, our Ambassador at St. Petersburg, suggested to Gortschakoff that it would be well to give the Turks twelve months, or, at the very least six months, to prove they were in earnest by actually carrying their reforms into effect. The Russian Chancellor replied that, on account of the expense of keeping the army mobilized, Russia could not wait more than two months, and the war was, therefore, precipitated to save a few million roubles, and Russia refused to wait for proof of Turkish sincerity. — —

The war is an unjust and a wanton one, waged in defiance of treaties, and for the alleged reformation of abuses which Russia herself had fostered, and which required no war to remove them. On the ground of justice, therefore, as well as of interest, Catholics, as a body, have ranged themselves on the side of the Turks. This is a matter in which the opinion of Catholics in Turkey is of importance, and almost to a man they side with the Sultan. The Catholics of Bosnia have publicly protested against being removed from the sway of the Porte by annexation to Russia, and the Catholics of Albania are in large numbers fighting as volunteers in the Turkish army. Though a few have joined the Montenegrins, Mgr. Hassoun, the Bishop of the Catholic Armenians, has declared himself perfectly satisfied with the position of the Catholics of the Armenian Rite under the rule of the Porte. In Bulgaria and Roumelia no Catholics have joined the Russians. The only sympathizers with them are the Greek Catholics in Roumelia, who have apparently forgotten the story of the Church in Poland, anxious to see the Turkish Government destroyed, and, as a necessary consequence, their brethren of the East brought under the persecuting rule of Russia and her satellites.—London Weekly Register.

A HEROIC INSIGNIAN.—On Thursday, January 21, the steamship Metropolis, bound for Panama, with 200 railroad laborers, forty-eight other passengers and crew, and 500 tons of iron, was wrecked on Currituck beach, North Carolina. Prominent among the heroes of the Metropolis tragedy stands this humble and unpretentious looking Irishman, Timothy O'Brien. By his own unaided exertions he rescued from the breakers and surf nearly fifty persons. Timothy is a native of the county Limerick, Ireland; is about 45 years of age, five feet six inches high, very stoutly built, a Hercules in strength, and of the greatest physical endurance. He is the second week from which he has escaped with his life, the first being that of the steamer Golden Gate, which was lost off Acapulco, on the Pacific coast, in 1863. She was burned to the water's edge, and O'Brien was one of the twenty-five persons who swam ashore, a distance of seven miles. Soon after the Metropolis struck on Thursday morning, and began to break up, there was a general rush for the rigging. O'Brien secured a position high up the mainmast, but when it became apparent that the only chance for life was to swim ashore he boldly jumped from the rigging, over the heads of the others, and struck out for the beach, which he reached safely—the fifth man from the wreck. Realizing the peril of his fellow-passengers, O'Brien hastened over to the Currituck club-house, three-quarters of a mile distant, where he procured a pair of overalls and a quantity of matches. He returned, built a fire on the beach, and, with logs the wreck which marks him a hero. The sea was full of the struggling victims buffeting with the breakers, and, one by one, they were drawing, never to rise again with life, when O'Brien, at ten o'clock, plunged boldly in to their rescue. One by one he brought the nearly-exhausted and, in some instances, half-dead victims ashore, and placed them in the hands of others at the fire. He never halted until five o'clock in the evening, when the last survivor had reached shore. In the seven hours during which he was thus engaged, O'Brien had saved nearly fifty people, many of whom would have perished but for his great coolness and his manly courage.

The last and crowning act of this great feat of humanity was the rescue of Mrs. Irene Hunt, the only woman saved from the wreck. She was struggling feebly with the breakers, supported only by a life-preserver, but completely exhausted, and about to sink. O'Brien saw her awful position, and, calling to a young man named John Doherty to help him, he started through the surf for the dying woman. Twice the treacherous waves snatched her from his friendly grasp, but at last he caught her and, with Doherty's assistance, brought her ashore in a unconscious condition. She was alive, however, and was at once submitted to the somewhat barbarous remedy of being rolled upon a barrel to get the salt water out of her, and then placed upon a bed-tick beside one of O'Brien's fires. In about thirty minutes she revived to find her husband beside her. He had washed ashore about forty yards beside the bow-bench, and when dragged out his first exclamation was, "Is my wife drowned?" He was told she was saved, and, recovered, was carried to her side, where he remained until she opened her eyes to realize that both had escaped watery graves.—Catholic Mirror.

FATHER FABER AND HELL IT ETERNAL PUNISHMENT.—In almost the last sermon ever preached by that lamented son of English Oratory, the saintly and gifted Hev. Frederick William Faber, occurs the following remarkable passage:

"The devil's worst and most fatal preparation for the coming of Antichrist is the weakening of men's belief in hell eternal punishment. Were they the bare words that I might ever say to you, nothing should I wish to say to you with more emphasis than this—that, next to the Blood of the Precious Blood, there is no thought in all your faith more precious or more useful to you than the thought of eternal punishment.

In view of the ominous and powerful agitation of this subject at present in the non-Catholic world, and which threatens to loosen, and eventually uproot the old-fashioned belief in hell among our separated brethren, these words delivered by Father Faber more than a dozen years ago, come with the prophetic force of a voice from the dead to strengthen the faith of the unstable upon a salutary point of doctrine.

PROTESTANT AUTHORITIES ON SECULAR EDUCATION.

From an able letter in Stratford, (Ont.) Beacon, signed E. H. Kilroy, D. D., we make the following extract:

To substantiate my statements that secular or non-sectarian schools are not capable of bringing up children Catholics, or what are called orthodox Protestants, I place before your readers the testimony of the following unimpeachable Protestant witnesses.

1. HURLEY.—"If I am a knave or a fool, I cannot be a Christian or write won't make me less of one or of the other."—Lay Sermons, III., 36-41.

2. HERBERT SPENCER.—"We have no evidence that education as commonly understood is a preventive of crime; dull minds and piercing intelligence both yielding criminals. Nor can the reason should have been lonestand Napoleon have been just."—State Education Self Disarming, pp. 13-15.

3. PROFESSOR MAX MULLER.—"Truth is not found by multiplication and addition only."—Lecture on Science and Language, p. 35.

4. COWIN.—"It is the duty of families, and the clergy to combat any adverse, and positive religious instruction is not given."—La Liberte de Lenseignment Superieur, p. 19.

Let us now examine the results of purely secular education in the United States:

HORACE MANN, (for many years secretary of the Massachusetts Board of Education) —"The object of the common school of Massachusetts was given to every child in the commonwealth a free, straight, solid path way by which it could walk directly up from the ignorance of an infant, to a knowledge of the primary duties of man, and could acquire a power and an invincible will to discharge them."

RESULT—"I do not hesitate to affirm that our population, at the time and in the proportion fact and truth, is not sustained by these columns of solid and ever-enduring adamant—intelligence and virtue, and that loss a new superstructure be put beneath every buttress and angle of this lonstel temple of liberty, it will soon crumble and fall—for the people have an invincible will not to discharge their duties."—Reply to the Remarks of St Boston School-masters, p. 28.

WILLIAM O'BOURNE (a well-known writer, who has devoted much time to the consideration of education): "The Bible in less nature must be fed, cherished and developed, or the nation will become a nation of skeptics, and virtue almost a forgotten name. Can the State be safe while hundreds of thousands of its youth are growing up without any moral education?"—History of Public School Society.

REV. DR. SPEAR—"Secular education is neither Protestant nor Catholic, heterodox nor orthodox, Christian nor pagan. It is an education that would be useful and successful in one's life, if there were no God and no future for the human soil."—Religion and the State.

REV. DR. STOWE (in a report on elementary public education before the General Assembly of Ohio, Dec., 1839): "Every good and well informed man knows that, as a general fact, it is impossible to impress the obligations of morality with any efficiency on the heart of a child, without any appeal to some code which is sustained by the authority of God."

The Railroad Ride of a Husband to See his Dying Wife.

[From the Kansas City Times.]

One of the most remarkable trips on record has just been made on the Atchison, Topeka and Santa Fe Railroad, from Kansas City to the Rocky Mountains. A rich gentleman named W. S. Dunn arrived in this city from the East on Thursday morning, on his way to visit his sick wife at Manitou Springs, Col. On the train he had received a telegram stating that his wife was in a critical condition, and could not live more than a few hours. The husband, who was a middle-aged man, evidently a merchant, seemed to be much affected by the news, and at once made inquiries for a special train. He offered a large sum of money for a special engine to run to Pueblo ahead of the regular train, but could not obtain one here. The officials decided that a special should be forwarded to Topeka, the head-quarters of the road, and offered $250 for a special locomotive to run at special speed across the plains. His offer was accepted, and at 3 o'clock on Thursday afternoon the devoted husband started from Topeka on his breakneck errand of love and duty. Away went the locomotive and car, with its solitary but sorrowing passenger, over the prairies of Kaw valley, down into the valley of the Neosho and Arkansas, then down the high divide between the Neosho and the Arkansas rivers, which was reached before night had closed in. Then, after taking water, the impatient husband and his iron horse were started up the Arkansas valley to the base of the Rocky Mountains.

He reached Pueblo, Col., about 7 o'clock on Friday morning, and then, only waiting for a breakfast, took the Denver and Rio Grande (narrow gauge) to the Springs, and started up to Manitou, a distance of fifty miles, over Ute Pass. Ten miles up Fake's Peak, in the zone so his dying wife, he was well satisfied with the result of his four hours' ride. The distance from the route was fifty miles per hour, the average for about forty-five miles. It is the fastest time ever made over the fifteen miles of the Missouri river to the Rocky Mountains.

THE successor of Victor Emmanuel, who has taken the title of Humbert I., will very probably prove a more bitter enemy of the Church than his deceased father was. Victor Emmanuel did what he did unwillingly, and because his ambition got the ascendancy over better feelings. Humbert has no such feelings. He is said to be a Freemason and a skeptics, and virtue almost a forgotten name. Can the State be safe while hundreds of thousands of its youth are growing up without any moral education?—History of Public School Society.

REV. DR. SPEAR—"Secular education is neither Protestant nor Catholic, heterodox nor orthodox, Christian nor pagan. It is an education that would be useful and successful in one's life, if there were no God and no future for the human soil."—Religion and the State.

REV. DR. STOWE (in a report on elementary public education before the General Assembly of Ohio, Dec., 1839): "Every good and well informed man knows that, as a general fact, it is impossible to impress the obligations of morality with any efficiency on the heart of a child, without any appeal to some code which is sustained by the authority of God."

GEORGE WASHINGTON (farewell address): "Of all the dispositions and habits which lead to political prosperity, religion and morality are essential supports. What ever may be conceded to the influence of refined education on minds of peculiar structure, reason and experience both forbid us to expect that national morality can prevail in exclusion of religious principle."

My next is from the work of Hugh Seymour Tremenhere, styled "Public Education in the United States." The Rev. Dr. Edson, Rector of the Protestant Episcopal Church of Lowell, Mass., gave him this report:

"My experience of now nearly 30 years as a pastor has, I am sorry to say, forced upon me the painful conviction that our Public School system has undermined, already among our population, to a great extent, the doctrines and principles of Christianity. I find the children well grounded in the ordinary elements of what is called common education, clever and acute in worldly matters that concern them, but perfectly ignorant of the notions of moral obligation and duty, and indisposed to submit to any authority whatsoever, even from an early age. The Protestant children will not come to Sunday school; the Catholic children are well looked after by their priests, and I have no doubt that nearly the whole of them attend some Sunday or other catechetical instruction. In a considerable number of the many public schools I visited in the United States I have been struck by the absence of good manners on the part of children.—Tremenhere.

Professor Agassiz, in his researches into the growth of the social evil in the Eastern States, reports "that a large number of the unfortunate women and girls trace their fall to the influence which surrounded them in the public schools."—New York Catholic World, January, 1872 p 446.

A New England physician, in a work dedicated to Hon. William Sprague, ex-Governor of, and United States Senator from Rhode Island, describes in 1871 the results of the secular school system:

"Irreligion and infidelity are progressing past pass with the advance guards of immorality and crime, and all are fostered, if not engendered, by the materialistic system of school instruction. The entire absence of all religious instruction from the school room, which has resulted from the impossibility of harmonizing the multiform creeds * * * are fast bearing fruit in a generation of infidels, and we are becoming worse than the pagans of old, who had at least their positive sciences of philosophy and which was a criminal offense. Notes in Society, p. 51.

THE Richest Man on Earth.—A report comes from Paris that the California Irishman, Mr. J. W. Mackey, has lately benefitted everybody by the extravagance of his living, and some of the newspapers have been computing his fortune together with the fortunes of the two richest men of the civilized world. The tables show a heavy balance in his favor.

	Date of Wealthiness.	Rothschild.	Mackey.
Capital	£20,000,000	£25,000,000	£25,000,000
Per year	800,000	2,000,000	2,750,000
Per month	66,000	170,000	200,000
Per day	2,000	5,000	7,000
Per hour	80	200	300
Per minute	1.10	4	5

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA INEZ COLLEGE.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED ON the Santa Ines river, in a beautiful valley at the eastern slope of the San Rafael mountains, four miles, in a direct line, from the ocean, and two miles by stage from Gaviota Landing. There is no more delightful spot in the Santa Ines Valley. Forests of live oak, sycamore and laurel, give to the plain and foothills the appearance of a verdant sea. The dry season, so inseparable in other parts of the State, but adds an additional charm to the grateful shades of Santa Ines. It was already more appropriate for the education of youth than that in which beauty and affluent contend for the mastery; where the gently-rounded hills and undulating plain seem to be carved for the rugged mountains; where the limpid tributaries of the hills hasten to swell the Santa Ines, and the balmy breath of the forest and the flower is stirred by the joyous music of nature's lyre.

The genial influence of Christian teaching exercised in such a place is indeed calculated to cause the mind to look through nature up to nature's God.

The healthiness and salubrity of the climate of Santa Barbara are not unknown to the medical profession. Those who have lived in Southern California, have visited the balmy air, amidst the beautiful and varied scenery of this county, who have returned improved in health of body and mind. In view of these facts, Santa Ines may be safely recommended as a most desirable health resort.

By request of his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop, the Brothers have put back the charge of the College. A limited number of boys between the ages of eight and sixteen will be received. For particulars, address St. Mary's College, San Francisco, or any regular trips from San Francisco to Gaviota. ad12

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS NOW in operation, and which has already received honors, will commence its Second Session on MONDAY, January 7, 1878. The Course of Studies embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once	$15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter	62 50
Washing, per quarter	12 50
Physicians' fees, (unless it may be preferred that they shall be paid for at the usual per quarter)	12 50
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but there is no deduction to be made for pupils who may be absent a portion of the term.

Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Parents will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session. ad 4

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE.

SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA

THE SEVENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL Session will commence TUESDAY, August 15, 1877. This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1852 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies six large buildings, with extensive yards, playgrounds, gardens, orchard, vineyard, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a philosophical apparatus, a cabinet of natural history, collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has a museum containing 5,000 specimens, a Chemical Laboratory, Photography and Commercial Business Rooms, and a Library of 8,000 volumes. The roof been finished, that leaves nothing to be desired on that score.

TERMS:

Entrance fee (to be paid but once) $ 10 00
Board and tuition in English, scholastic year 150 00
Washing, Mending, Bed and Bedding, per month 12 00
Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.

Payments are required to be made half-yearly in advance.

For further information apply to
REV. P. VERDAGUER, S.J., Pres.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

BENICIA ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED under the care of the Sisters of Charity. The location is one of the most healthy and desirable in the city. The grounds are extensive and the building large and well adapted.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:

(Invariably half yearly in advance)

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per annum $200 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month, $6 50 ..... 65 00
Guitar, per month, $5 ..... 50 00
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 15th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Benicia, Solano Co., Cal.

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE,

344 Jessie St., bet. Fourth & Fifth,

SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS LITERARY INSTITUTION WAS incorporated, according to the laws of the State, on the 6th day of January, 1855, and proceeds to confer academical degrees with "such other honors as are granted by any University in the United States."

The design of the Institution is to give a thorough Classical, Mathematical and Philosophical education. But, besides the classical course, it also, a Commercial Course.

The College is furnished for day-scholars only.

TERMS PER MONTH

(Payable in advance):

Tuition, in Preparatory Department $3 00
" in Grammar Department 5 00
" in Higher Department 6 00

EXTRA CHARGES:

For the use of Instruments in Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, first year, per month $3 00
For the use of Instruments, etc., second year, per month 5 00
For each Academical Degree 10 00

REV. JOHN PINASCO, S. J.,
President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive and the building large and well adapted.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS

(Invariably half yearly in advance)

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per annum $200 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month, $6 50 ..... 65 00
Guitar, per month, $5 ..... 50 00
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 15th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

OF SAN FRANCISCO,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

THIS INSTITUTION, CHARTERED IN 1866, chartered in 1868 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on Fifteenth street, opposite the Old Mission Church.

A large addition has recently been erected to the more ample accommodation of boarding pupils.

The course of instruction embraces all the branches necessary to the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

Parents, in confiding their children to the care of the Sisters, may feel perfectly satisfied that every attention will be given to their intellectual and moral culture, while the system of government combines sufficient firmness, with maternal solicitude, to insure the real progress and advantage of the pupil.

The Twelfth Annual Session will commence Thursday, July 19, 1877.

TERMS:

Per quarter session, (payable in advance.)

Board, tuition, washing, and use of bed, $60 00
Music, with use of instrument 15 00
Vocal Music 5 00
Drawing and Painting 5 00
Washing worn at the Academy 25 00

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (in advance.)

Rhetoric Classes $5 00
Grammar Classes 4 00
Intermediate Classes 3 00
Primary Classes 2 00

These pupils residing at a distance from the College, and desiring a lunch at noon, will be charged 25 cents a day, in addition to the above terms.

Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation, $20 00 per month.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the Lady Superior. SISTER SUPERIOR.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian B os.,

offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

TERMS:

Board and Tuition (French and Spanish included)	$250 00
Washing	50 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the institution)	10 00
Piano, Harp, Vocal Music, Drawing and Dancing form extra charges.

For further particulars apply to the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

ACADEMY OF ST. ACNES.

STOCKTON, CAL.

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Directed by the Dominican Sisters

TERMS

Entrance fee (to be paid but once) $ 10 00
Board and tuition in English, scholastic year 150 00
Washing, Mending, Bed and Bedding, per month 12 00
Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.

Payments are required to be made half-yearly in advance.

For further information apply to
REV. P. RAYMONDA, Sister Superioress.

The Immaculate Heart of Mary,

FOR THE

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per annum $200 00
Entrance fee, to be paid but once 10
Tuition on Piano, per annum 60 00
French " " " 25
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the use of Piano.

The Silver service establishment is also the property of the Institute.

For further particulars apply to the Superioress, as above. ad24

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian B os.,

offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

TERMS:

Board and Tuition	$250 00
Washing	50 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the institution)	10 00
Piano, Harp, Vocal Music, Drawing and Dancing form extra charges.

For further particulars apply to the Brothers of the Christian Schools.

MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

CHARTERED IN 1869, AND CONducted by the priests of the Congregation of the Mission. Terms for scholastic year, $250.

For further particulars apply to
REV. T. REID, C. M., President.

MT. ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,

CONDUCTED BY THE

Sisters of St. Dominic,

RENO, NEVADA.

For particulars address
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Hibernia Savings and Loan Society,

N. E. corner of Montgomery and Post Streets, San Francisco, January 25, 1877.

A regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Society, held this day, declared a dividend for the current year, payable on and after the 21st inst., payable free and after this date, at the rate of Twelve Per Cent.

EDWARD MARTIN, Secretary.

SEEDS FREE

Send at once for our Sample Packets of Flower and Vegetable Seeds, also Annual Catalogue of Seeds for 1877, free to all who send a 3c. stamp to pay postage. Try our Seeds. They ARE fine.

Niagara Plant & Seed Co., Buffalo, N. Y. feb4-4t

SENT FREE on application—BRIGGS & BROS Flower and Vegetable Catalogue. Price copy—couple stalks to SELL SEEDS LOW. ROCHESTER, N. Y. or CHICAGO, ILLS.

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. JOHN'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

SAN JUAN ..... CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION IS UNDER THE direction of the Sisters of the Sacred Heart of Mary. The location is remarkably healthy, the buildings large, the grounds spacious and well adapted for healthful exercise and recreation.

The scholastic year commences August 16 and terminates June 24.

TERMS

(Payable half yearly in advance):

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per annum $200 00
Entrance fee (to be paid but once) 10 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month 6 00
French, per month 2 50
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, plain and ornamental Needlework, nor for the use of Piano.

Boarders are received at any time through the year.

For prospectus and further particulars apply to SISTER CARMEN ARGELAGA, ad16 Superioress.

SAVING FUNDS

Loans Negotiated.

Interest Allowed.

Drafts Issued.

Collections Made.

Exchange Bought and Sold.

Gold Dust Received.

Gold Coin Received.

Gold Coin Loaned.

Gold Coin Exchanged.

Gold Coin Bought.

Gold Coin Sold.

Gold Coin Drafts.

Gold Coin Checks.

Gold Coin Interest.

Gold Coin Dividends.

Gold Coin Deposits.

Gold Coin Loans.

Gold Coin Exchange

AGRICULTURAL.

The State.

From Sidiyou to San Diego, and from the coast to the Sierra Nevada range within the confines of the state, one report comes of a favorable season and the assurance of a good crop. In not a few sections the rivers have overflowed their banks and enriched valley lands, and the rains have washed fertilizing soil on the slopes of the foothills, but these losses are trivial, compared with the general prosperity insured by the rain. The overflow in Sacramento valley, if no further mischief is done, will be productive of ultimate good. The sediment left by the flood when the waters drain off will, in most cases, enrich the soil and raise the level of the land, and there will be abundant time to plant and mature a crop. Of course, those who suffer immediate loss and inconvenience do not join in the general jubilation but when the present inconvenience is over, and their fields are covered with golden grain, they will forget it all in anticipation of the profit they will reap from a prolific harvest.

In the dry belt of counties the rain has been sufficient to create an ample supply of forage plants for live stock, and prices have consequently increased. The owners of sheep and cattle are, therefore, in a much better position now than they have been any time during the past twelve-month. Feed being plentiful their stock will improve in condition and fetch much more money a few months hence, as present rates, than they are now worth. Ventura county, which suffered grievously from drought, is secured not only of a good harvest, but the uplands are covered with feed. The gain from the prolonged drought is noticed by the Free Press, namely, that the greater part of the squatters have died through lack of food, a point in favor of the farmer which he will not fail to realize when harvesting his grain. The outlook in Los Angeles is reported to be the most promising kind. A large increase will be made in the area planted with fruit trees and vines in Los Angeles county, and although we have not seen yesterday's issue of reports from other portions of the state, we have reason to believe that attention is generally being given to the branch of agricultural industry. Tulare, Kern, San Bernardino and Santa Barbara are certain of a crop. Landowners in several sections of those counties have made provision against future drought by building ditches and canals for irrigation; but, as a rule, the rain will be sufficient this season. Farmers in San Joaquin county are satisfied with the season, and, from past experience, realize the advantage of irrigation. The Mokelumne Ditch and Irrigation Company is steadily at work constructing a dam of stone masonry 200 feet in length, with an overfall of 30 feet. At Webster's bridge, just east of the town of Lancha Plana, and already it is 20 feet high. The principal section of the canal, 8 miles of Bear creek, has been laid out, and will be constructed this season. When completed it will irrigate 150,000 acres of land lying between Dry creek and Mormon slough, and between the foothills and tule lands. The cost of the dam will be $30,000. No Chinaman has been employed. This is an important work for San Joaquin county, and when completed it will make the farmer of that district independent of the vicissitudes of the weather. Good crops will be assured, rain or no rain.

The only speculative question which now exercises the minds of wheat growers will keep up. This depends entirely upon foreign politics. Should war break out between England and Russia prices will be sustained; but if peace be established much lower rates will rule. It is hardly safe to count much upon war until blood has been drawn, and then look out for a long spell of high prices.

With respect to prices the outlook is favorable. The European war does not promise soon to come to an end, and therefore little export of breadstuffs from southeastern Europe may be expected. If enough be grown to meet home demand and military requirements, it will be as much as can be reasonably counted on; whereas, should the war become general, involving all the great powers, America must be regarded as the sole available source of supply for at least the British markets. Imports into England of Australian wheat would be next to impossible, owing to the risk of capture by hostile cruisers and the enhance created by war risks. Should Russia be the source of supply it, it must be written off when considering the prospect of contingency. The United States and Canada are therefore the mainstay of the wheat-consuming nations of Europe, because India should be precisely the same relation toward England in the event of war between Russia and Turkey, because, India has to replace its famine stocks, which must be a considerable item. High prices for next season's crop may therefore be safely calculated upon, unless some unforeseen contingency compels peace abroad. Moreover, the harvest in the British Isles has been light and the produce inferior, so that high rates must rule for the balance of the wheat's crop which has yet to be marketed. The agricultural outlook of the State is consequently cheerful. Farm products bring high prices now, and may be expected to bring remunerative rates all through this season and the next. Beef, mutton and pork fetch higher figures than ruled for several seasons back; while by the cultivation of alfalfa and root crops farmers can feed and fatten a greater number of domestic animals per acre than formerly. No industry in the State promises better in the near future than farming.—Evening Post.

The Storm and the Rain-Fall.

Throughout the State, in almost every locality heard from, the rain-fall and storm of Sunday, 17th inst., was more violent of the season—furious as some of them had already been. The greatest damage to property, in doubtless, in the northern counties, from Colusa and Tehama further on toward the Sierras and the Siskiyou range, as we have outlined in our previous issue, will cost a step to their running for days or weeks to come. Bridges have suffered, in some more or less damaged in almost every section. In Amador county, the place known as Chinatown, on the North Fork of Jackson creek, was swept, and fifteen of the Chinese known, with eighty-six and two women besides, were lost in the flood. Great destruction of property is reported in that region. The Vallejo railway trestle was somewhat torn, and on that and other roads some of the bridges were damaged or swept away. The Sacramento and Oregon railroad, above Tehama, is washed out in many places, and travel on it will be for some time suspended. The upper fireplace, tributary to the Sacramento, are swollen to an unusually high stage and were booming at last accounts, and the Sacramento itself was rising rapidly and bearing upon its rushing surface a great deal of drift wood. It was 24 feet 8 inches above low-water mark at midnight. There are fears of another flood.

The total rain-fall for the season, as reported in the various points of the State show an extraordinary difference in quantity, north and southward and toward the mountains. Possibly, in some instances, the inaccuracy of the rain-gauges used may account for the wide variance, but with due allowance for this contingency, it is manifest, that certain localities have been scanty drenched, while others, not forty miles distant, have enjoyed no more than a sufficiency. For instance, at Healdsburg, Sonoma county, the rain-fall, up to the 12th, is given at over 45 inches, while at Petaluma, in the same county, 30 miles nearer San Francisco, the quantity, up to February 14th, had been a fraction over 27 inches—a 18 inches less. Again, in St. Helena, Napa, it was 35 inches, and at Vallejo, only 19 inches, while Martinez, across from Benicia, had still less—a bare 17 inches. Stockton, San Jose and Los Angeles stand lowest—respectively, to February 14th, 10.66, 11.30, and 12 inches. Grass Valley, high up in Nevada county, had a rain-fall, to the 16th, of nearly 21 inches, and Auburn, in Placer county, also among the hills, forty miles nearer San Francisco, about 21 inches. So far as reported, Healdsburg stands highest and Stockton lowest, in rain-fall in this city, to date, is a fraction over 23 inches. These figures will be interesting to almost every class of readers.—Evening Post.

Review of the English Grain Market.

LIVERPOOL, February 15.—A leading grain circular says: The foreign political situation has strengthened the wheat trade, and though caution generally prevails, prices are somewhat dearer at most markets, as well as for off coast and future arrivals. Make a looking up all round. At this market to-day there was a good attendance. Sales of wheat moved steadily to the full average extent, holders of red and white easily making an advance of 1d@2d per cental on Tuesday's currencies. California and Oregon, though suitable as a mixture, are more quotably dearer. Sack and barrel flour were in improved request at full prices. In corn there was a good business on spot, prices for old and new 6@3d per quarter dearer than on Tuesday.

Produce Market Report.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING FEBRUARY 21, 1878.

Comparatively little business has been done in grain thus far during the current month of February. In fact, the grain movement has been confined to the holiday season. The reason of this is to be found in the almost incessant rain-fall with which the State has been visited. We have had nearly six weeks of continuous wet, giving us a rainfall for the season of over twenty-four inches in this city, but in the State at large the quantity of waterfall given varies materially according to the locality. It may be say that there are no complaints from any quarter for lack of water, we have sufficient to insure full average crops, and with a favorable season there is not a question but that we will garner the biggest harvest ever known upon the Pacific Slope.

FLOUR—The market for low-grade Superfine for export, favors the buyer, but for standard Extras there is no visible change. We quote current prices as follows: Superfine at $4 75@5; Extra Superfine, $5 50@5 75; Extra Family and Bakers' Extra, $6 50@6 75; while Silk-dressed Extras commands the extreme of the local market, say $6 75@7 25 per bbl (all in cloth bf and 5 lb sks).

WHEAT—The Wheat market since the late heavy rains has been steadily declining. The last rapid rise in freights to the United Kingdom does not allow of English orders being executed at even 2¢ for Wheat—the present asking price for choice lots. Transactions for the week are within the range of $1 75 to $2 05 for shipping. Liverpool quotations February 15, 12s 3d@12s 3d average; 12s 9d@12s 9d club. At the close we note sales of 20,000 ctls choice Milling at $1 95.

BARLEY—There has been a sharp decline in prices, being the result of an attempt to break the market. Notwithstanding, 20,000 ctls changed hands. We submit the following sales of the week: 20,000 ctls Feed, $1,05; 2,000 ctls Feed, 95c; 2,000 ctls do do, $1 50; 5 tons hay, 12c; 10 tons Hay Feed at $13 00; 500 sks choice hay, $19; 1,000 sks Coast Feed, $1 50 @ ctl; 100 tons old Hay, $13 50; 500 sks Feed, 90c; 800 sks do do, $2 00; 100 tons Oat, $22 50@ 30 ⅌ pair; Turkeys, alive, 20@22c ⅌ lb, dressed, 25@27c ⅌ lb. The supply of game is moderate, with a good demand at rates quoted. We quote prices as follows: Geese, $1 50@1 75 ⅌ ctl; Quail, $10@12 ⅌ doz.; Mallard Ducks, $9@2 50 ⅌ doz; Teal Ducks, $2 50@3 50 ⅌ doz.; small Ducks, $10@12 ⅌ doz.; Hare, $1 75@2 25 ⅌ doz.; Rabbits, $10@12 ⅌ doz.; Snipe, $10@12 25 ⅌ doz.; common, 50c ⅌ doz.

DAIRY PRODUCE—The receipts of butter in the State interrupted the communication with the Butter and Egg producing districts, and the market was for the time being comparatively bare of the usual supplies of fresh produce. The price of Fresh Butter remains unchanged, but there has been an advance in the price of Eggs, as will be noticed in our quotations. To-day we are in receipt of Fresh Butter by rail in sufficient quantity to meet immediate demands. We quote, best qualities at 30@32c, the latter the extreme for Fancy Dairy by the single lb; inferior grades are quotable at 25@27½ and dull. Choice Pickled Roll is in large stock, holders anxious to realize, consequently prices are merely nominal, say 20@22c. California Ham and Pork is in excessive stock and extremely dull at merely nominal rates, though 18@20c is asked. The stock of Eastern is large, but is limited demand at 16@22½c, as to quality. California Eggs are in moderate supply with a ready market for all the choice grades at 19@20c; Eastern are chosen in fair supply with daily receipts by rail to meet all demands, selling within the range of 19@22c, the latter rate for extra New York Cream. Strictly choice fresh California Eggs are scarce, now quotable at 20@21c; Eastern are in light supply, market weak at 20@30c, as to condition, with limited demand.

FRUIT—The market is dull, and will be until there is a prospect of fair weather; arrivals are light. The heavy rains of the past few days has put a temporary embargo upon trade in this department. We quote: Apples—Choice, 75c@$1 50 ⅌ box; common, 50@75c ⅌ box. Pears—Winter Nelis, $1 50 ⅌ box; Bartlett, 75@$1 00 ⅌ box; common, 50@75c ⅌ box. Oranges—California, $12 50@15 ⅌ M. Lemons, Sicily, $10@11 ⅌ box; Los Angeles, $12@13 ⅌ M. Limes—Mexican, $10 ⅌ M. Cocoa Nuts—Cocos ⅌ M. Bananas, $2 50@3 ⅌ bunch. Pine Apples, $60@10 ⅌ dozen. Cocoanuts, $50@7 ⅌ M. Dried Fruit—Apples, 4@6c ⅌ lb; Peaches, 8@9c ⅌ lb; Pears, 5@6c ⅌ lb; Plums, unpitted, 1½@1½c ⅌ lb; Prunes, 12½@15c ⅌ lb; Figs White, 6@8c ⅌ lb; Black, 6@7c ⅌ lb. California Raisins, $1@2 ⅌ box; $1 25@2 25 ⅌ box; $1 50@2 50 ⅌ ½ box; Blowers, $1 75 ⅌ box.

VEGETABLES—Cabbages, $1@1 12½ ⅌ ctl; Marrowfat Squash, $7@8 ⅌ ton; Green Peas, new crop—18@20c ⅌ lb; White Peppers, 7@10c ⅌ lb; Garlic, 4@6c ⅌ lb; Okra, dry, 12@15c ⅌ lb; Cauliflower, $1 ⅌ doz.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

THE GRAND OPENING ... AT ... THE ARCADE.

PROFOUND ADMIRATION ... OF THE ... LADIES OF SAN FRANCISCO AT OUR EXHIBITION OF DRESS GOODS ... AND ... SILKS.

We are now offering at our extensive establishment a full line of Ladies' and Gentlemen's wear of all descriptions, of

OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and those of the most celebrated Eastern and French makes. Having our own Tannery and Factory, and being Wholesale Importers of all the various kinds of goods, we claim to have better facilities for giving

Entire Satisfaction in Quality, Fit and Price,

Than any other house on the Pacific Coast. Manufacturers' prices only will be charged for our own make of CHILDREN'S SHOES.

We have in connection a department for Custom Work, where we make to measure any style of BOOTS, SHOES and SLIPPERS to fit feet of peculiar proportions, and to suit the most fastidious taste.

I. R. SHAW, Manager of the Retail Department.

I. M. WENTWORTH & CO., 1864. Pioneer Manufacturers of San Francisco. 1877.

SULLIVAN KELLY & CO., Northwest cor. Pine and Front Sts. Where they offer for sale the Largest Stock of PAINTS, OILS, GLASS, ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST, AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES. 101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET. 110 PINE STREET.

FAMILY DRUG AND PRESCRIPTION STORE. JOHN C. MOODY, Apothecary, For the last 15 years on Kearny Street, HAS REMOVED TO THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF POLK AND PINE STS.

Prescriptions prepared with care from the best of drugs and chemicals. CHARGES MODERATE. no 17.

NEW HOUSE AND RETAIL DEPARTMENT OF BOOTS & SHOES, AT OUR NEW HOUSE 867 MARKET STREET, OPP. POWELL & EDDY, AND THE ELDRIDGE.

Where we keep a full line of Ladies' and Gentlemen's wear of all descriptions, of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and those of the most celebrated Eastern and French makes. Having our own Tannery and Factory, and being Wholesale Importers of all the various kinds of goods, we claim to have better facilities for giving Entire Satisfaction in Quality, Fit and Price, Than any other house on the Pacific Coast. Manufacturers' prices only will be charged for our own make of CHILDREN'S SHOES. We have in connection a department for Custom Work, where we make to measure any style of BOOTS, SHOES and SLIPPERS to fit feet of peculiar proportions, and to suit the most fastidious taste. I. R. SHAW, Manager of the Retail Department.

I. M. WENTWORTH & CO., 1864. Pioneer Manufacturers of San Francisco. 1877.

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO., 924, 926, 928 MARKET ST., AND 25 ELLIS ST., SAN FRANCISCO, NEXT TO "THE BALDWIN." THE CLEARANCE SALE ... OF ... D. LANDERS ... WILL BE ... Continued Until Further Notice, And during the week I shall offer still GREATER INDUCEMENTS. BED SPREADS, Half Price. BLANKETS, Half Price. TOWELS AND NAPKINS, Half Price. SILKS AND DRESS GOODS, Half Price. I am Selling Cartwright & Warner's English and Merino Underwear at less than Eastern Manufactured Goods. Now is the time to Buy them. During the continuance of this sale all Goods will be sold strictly for CASH. All persons indebted to the late firm will please make immediate payment. D. LANDERS, SUCCESSOR TO BYRNE, LANDERS & BYRNE, THURLOW BLOCK, 126 Kearny St. j424

New Advertisements.

JUST PUBLISHED ... BY ... MICHAEL FLOOD, No. 831 Market Street, THE YOUNG CATHOLIC'S COMPANION, SECOND EDITION. Containing the Catechism, Prayer Book and Hymn Book Complete, Strongly Bound in Cloth. Price: Twenty-five Cents.

NEW BOOKS: THE CATHOLIC DIRECTORY for 1878, containing a full report of the Dioceses of the United States, British America, Ireland and Australia. Price $1 00. GOD, THE TEACHER OF MANKIND 2 00. GOLDEN SANDS 1 00. THE TREASURY OF THE SACRED HEARTS, in various styles of binding. THE HOLY ROSARY 1 50. THE CATHOLIC FAMILY ALMANAC 25. IRISH AMERICAN ALMANAC 25. IRISH WIT AND HUMOR, illustrated 1 75. A SERMON TO PROMOTE CHARITY TO THE SUFFERING POOR 15. MICHAEL FLOOD, Catholic Bookseller, No. 831 MARKET STREET. Books sent by mail post-paid on receipt of advertised price. f67

THE LEADING TEA HOUSE! HANLY & CO., 922 MARKET STREET, 922 (OPPOSITE FLOOD'S BOOKSTORE). SUGARS AT COST. 12 Good Candies for - - - 25 cents. 1 Box (20 bars) Soap for - 75 cents. 3 lbs. Splendid JAPAN TEA, $1 00. 1 lb. Best English Breakfast Tea for - 90 cents. 1 Good Fresh Ground Coffee for $1 00. 3 lbs. very best Mixed Coffee for $1 00. ⅌ Goods delivered to any part of the city FREE. GEO. T. HANLY & CO.,

THE "EXCELSIOR" SERIES OF COPY BOOKS. The Most Beautiful System of Writing ever Issued. COMPLETE IN NINE NUMBERS. Only 80 cents per Dozen. This system, unlike others, teaches no superfluous rules, useless flourishes, or unnecessary curves. It combines elegance with simplicity, and embraces only those graceful, easy movements which nature and good taste suggest. An analysis of the principles may be found on next page. Special attention is called to the head lines of this series, which were engraved by one of the most skilful artists in the United States. The beauty and elegance of this system have called forth the highest praise, while the success of the series has induced publishers to imitate it. Beware of imitations. The paper used in this series is of the very best quality, and the books are as well made as those of any series of copy books now published. Sample copies free.—Address THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY, LAWRENCE KEHOE, General Agent, No. 9 Barclay Street, New York. M. FLOOD, San Francisco. A. WALDTEUFEL, San Jose. f67

LECTURE BY Rev. Father Buchard, S. J. In St. Ignatius' Church, Market St., FOR THE BENEFIT OF The Sacred Heart Presentation Convent Free Schools, Rev. Taylor and Ellis Streets. Thursday Evening, February 28, 1878. Subject: "The People's Fault." Admission - - - One Dollar. Lecture to commence at 8 o'clock.

NOTICE HIBERNIAN SOCIETIES. Societies or individuals resuming Place, Banners, Scarfs, Regalia, etc., should call on the undersigned before purchasing elsewhere. A large supply of Ancient Order Regalia constantly on hand. Also, Gold and Silver Trimmings, wholesale and retail. Prices moderate. E. PASQUALE, 644 Washington street, San Francisco.

CATHOLIC SCHOOL BOOKS FOR CATHOLIC SCHOOLS. THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY COMPANY'S SERIES OF ILLUSTRATED SCHOOL BOOKS, EDITED BY Rt. Rev. Bishop J. L. Spaulding, D. D., Bishop of Peoria, Ills. THE "YOUNG CATHOLIC" READERS, PUBLISHED BY THE CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY.

The Ladies of the Sacred Heart are known to stand in the front rank of Catholic teachers in every quarter of the world. There can be no better judges of the merits of text books for Catholic schools. They are versed in all the details of the science of education. No institution educates more accomplished and thoroughly-instructed pupils. A commendation of any school book, after having passed the scrutiny of those able educators, is a surety of its unequalled merits. Like the Sacred Heart, Silas Tait, "it is praise, indeed." Listen to their approval of the Young Catholic Series:

"The Young Catholic Readers are deservedly the most popular school books that have ever been issued for the use of Catholic schools. They satisfy more fully than any readers now published in this country, the needs of both teacher and pupil. They are free from the blemishes and deficiencies which we have found in other compilations. With the advantages which these books supply, the rapid progress of all scholars of ordinary talent is assured.

"We have tried them both in parochial and academic schools and we have reason to rejoice at their success. We would consider their universal adoption in the schools of this country an era in the advancement of Catholic education.

LADIES OF THE SACRED HEART, Clifton, Cincinnati."

THE YOUNG CATHOLIC SERIES OF READERS is thoroughly Catholic in all its lessons. It is the best graded set of Catholic Readers now published. The lessons are not made up of mere selections. Many of the Historical and Biographical sketches being written expressly for this Series. The Books are printed on the best quality of paper, and bound in the most substantial manner.

From Sisters of Mercy, Mt. St. Mary's, Manchester, N. H.

CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY: GENTLEMEN—We have been using "The Young Catholic's Series of Readers" one year in our schools, and we are happy to express our cordial approval of each of them, from the First to the Sixth.

While they retain most that was, and is, valuable in the different series used in secular schools, they give our pupils some slight knowledge, at least, of the best Catholic authors, and thus communicate an impulse to the study of our own literature, in which the Catholic Youth of America are so deficient.

Memory preserves nothing more carefully than the reading lessons learned in childhood, and we look upon each one of the holy lessons interspersed in these books as the precious seed of a rich harvest. Respectfully yours, M. M. XAVIER, Mother-Superior, Convent of Mercy, Manchester, N. H.

From the Sisters of Notre Dame, Reading, near Cincinnati.

"We cannot but express our high appreciation of the unrivaled School Series of the CATHOLIC PUBLICATION SOCIETY—namely, the GRAMMAR SCHOOL SPELLER and DEFINER, YOUNG CATHOLIC'S SERIES OF READERS, STANDARD ARITHMETICS, etc. We have been using the Grammar School Speller, Fathers Ganess's HISTORICAL SCHOOL SERIES, ANCIENT, ROMAN, MEDIÆVAL AND MODERN HISTORY. The first named is already in print, the second in press, and the others in course of transcription. (Signed)— SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME" Cincinnati, O. January 14, 1878. ja11

A. WALDTEUFEL, Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Catholic Books, PRAYER BOOKS, Miscellaneous Books, School Books, CHURCH ORNAMENTS, Catholic Goods, Staple and Fancy Stationery of every description. All orders will be promptly filled. Liberal terms to Schools and Priests. A. WALDTEUFEL, Corner First and Fountain Streets, SAN JOSE.

THE MONITOR. Office—622 Clay street, between Kearny and Montgomery (third floor). LYONS & OSULLIVAN, Publishers. RICHARD O'SULLIVAN, ..., Editor. DENIS LYONS, ..., Business Manager. All communications should be addressed to LYONS & O'SULLIVAN. Terms (Payable in advance): Served by carriers, per week ... 10c. Mail subscribers, per year ... $4 00. Six months ... 2 25. To Ireland or any of the British Provinces 5 00. Postage in each case prepaid by the publishers. Advertising Rates. 1 square 1 time, $1 50 | 1 square 4 mos $10 50. 1 square 1 month, 4 00 | 1 square 5 mos. 12 00. 1 square 2 months 7 00 | 1 square 6 mos. 13 50. 1 square 3 months 9 00 | 1 square 1 year 25 00. The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

[Telegraphic]

Saturday, March 2d.

Austria, in consequence of Germany's confidential representations, has abandoned the idea of war. The willingness of Russia to grant concessions to Austria arises from the fact that the Princess of Roumania and Servia have resolved to accept Austria's protection if it is obtainable.

Russia is disposed to come to an amicable arrangement regarding the Straits, but irritation at England's supposed design to form an offensive alliance with Austria is increasing.

The Turkish Minister of War has relieved the Governor of the Dardanelles to prevent any mass-of-war, whether British, French or Austrian, from entering the Sea of Marmora.

The Porte is fully prepared to sign the Treaty of Peace, excepting the clause concerning the iron-clads, on which Russia is unlikely to insist, and hence the signature of the treaty is expected by Saturday.

The North German Gazette attacks the territorial waters jurisdiction bill now before the English Parliament, and charges the English Government with speaking out plain language to the foreign merchantmen passing the straits of Dover, which the Gazette thinks is the real national war-cry for the trade of the whole world.

Duke Ulrich Pfeffer-Pasquier, President of the Senate, and half a dozen other Senators, have withdrawn from the Debaucd group, known as Constitutional Republicans, to secure the passage of the Government bill on amnesty, on a stage of siege.

Sunday, March 3d.

The Russians have made substantial concessions regarding the boundaries of Bulgaria. This point is now settled. The question of an indemnity was debated today. To facilitate its payment, Russia has abandoned her claim to the Turkish fleet. The signing of peace conditions is near at hand.

Reliable intelligence from various quarters across that the entry of a portion of the Russian army into Constantinople may shortly be expected, irrespective of the question of delay in the signature of peace.

The Czar has called out four divisions of the reserves, with artillery.

An exacting Cabinet Council was held today. Prince Milan presided. All the military authorities were present. It is said it was resolved not to resign territory which Servia has conquered. Rumors that Servian army will for the present remain out of full war footing. Artillery reserves are being organized. Prince Milan will return to headquarters at Nisch. It is hoped, however, Russia will yield to Servia's wishes.

Monday, March 4th.

The treaty of peace was signed. Grand Duke Nicholas announced the fact to his soldiers at a review at St. Stefano today.

The Russian Minister has laid claim on the Egyptian and Bulgarian tributes.

St. Petersburg and Vienna correspondents confirm the report that the treaty of peace was signed. At St. Petersburg the enthusiasm over the peace was almost unprecedented. There was an immense crowd before the palace shouting an angry "Viva Nicholas!"

A correspondent at Vienna states: The Austrian and British Ambassadors have been instructed to protest if the Russians enter Constantinople.

There are fears of famine in certain parts of Peru, owing to a failure of the overall crops for want of rains in the interior, while on the coast, where rains have been almost unknown, there have been disastrous floods.

A new volcano has been discovered, by an officer of the United States flag-ship Omaha, in Patagonia, and the name of the ship Omaha is proposed for it.

Tuesday, March 5.

The Foreign Ambassadors have not received the text of the treaty. They accord certain whether it is definitive. It is understood, however, that an exchange of ratifications within a fortnight is obligatory.

A Paris correspondent says it is asserted that Germany is trying to induce England to occupy Egypt, and thus protect her interests in a way which could not offend France or Russia.

London. In the House of Commons, Hardy, Secretary of State for War, in answer to a question, said the matter of defence of Constantinople by troops of England was being carefully considered.

Wednesday, March 6th.

A Paris correspondent says: Jules Ferry, a thoroughly reliable source that France and Italy intend to propose the neutralization of the Suez Canal and the Dardanelles.

It is confirmed that the Peace Treaty includes a clause providing that dates junction must be exchanged at St. Petersburg within one month.

The Government is making every effort to secure a majority of fifteen or twenty in the debates for the vote of credit, and seems confident of success.

Even the Hungarians are gradually beginning to acquiesce in the annexation scheme.

A report is current that Austrian troops have already commenced a southward movement.

A disruption of the Semmerling group known as the Constitutionalists is authoritatively announced by the Nobel, their organ. Twenty members have declared for freedom of action.

The difference arose concerning the election of life Senators and the degree of opposition to be affixed to M. Dufaure's Government.

Thursday, March 7.

The Agence Russe states that Germany and Austria have assented to the proposal of a congress, and that the Chief Ministers of the Powers, to be held at Berlin. The assent of other Governments is expected. Prince Gortschakoff is much better and will go to the Congress.

It is regarded settled that only the Treaty Powers will take part in the Congress, although other States will be allowed to bring their views under its notice.

A correspondent at Berlin says: In consequence of the reiterated request of Russia, Prince Bismarck will probably consent to preside over the Congress at Berlin, if England agrees to be present.

It is suspected in official circles here that Lord Beaconsfield will purchase or seize Mitilene for a naval station to counterbalance the increase of Russian influence at Constantinople. It is said such a step would be looked upon with comparative indifference by Russia, as England is already able to blockade the Dardanelles.

Official intelligence has been received in Calcutta that the Turks are marching against the insurgents at Makrinitz, and desperate fighting is expected. The Turks threaten bombardment of the Piræus. A battle is also imminent at Kardizza.

The Austrian Government has resolved to propose the annexation of Thessaly and Epirus to Greece.

By the disruption of the Orleanist group, the Government gains about twenty supporters for M. Dufaure's policy, including the Duke of Broglie, Amoroy and Colquerize bills. About eleven Orleanists will probably join the Legitimists.

EASTERN.

There is trouble in the Virginia Legislature, the House adjourned leaving the Senate unable to do anything. The veto of Governor Hateley with regard to a bill prohibiting the reception of pensions for taxes going into the School fund was the cause.

There is a general strike among the laborers on the Welland Canal, Canada. It is thought to be the commencement of a more extensive one.

Preparations are being made at Washington for the change of the new silver dollar.

The penal service bill has been approved by the House committee on banking.

Ex-Senator Benjamin Wade died March 2d.

The State of Virginia is virtually bankrupt.

A second cable has been laid between Jamaica and Santiago de Cuba.

RICHMOND.—The House of Delegates today adopted a resolution instructing the Finance Committee to report a bill for the exchange of stock of the State to the holders of coupons and registered bonds. The bonds are to be so change to be either registered or coupon, but coupons to be forfeited while in possession of the State. The bonds to be non-taxable, and having fifty years to run, and bearing a rate of interest not greater than 3.65 per cent.

Railroad Men in Council.

NEW YORK.—A meeting of railroad managers and freight agents was held today. The business of freight was the chief topic. Western freights. A general meeting will be held today.

PHILADELPHIA.—Superintendent Pollock, of the Mint, will issue to-morrow two hundred half dollars, coined from the silver dollars now being coined in that institution.

ST. PAUL.—A Bismarck special says: The last silver bridge across the Missouri River near Fort Lincoln, Dakota, was burned last Summer. Congressman Gunn, of Minnesota, introduced a bill on the Union Pacific legislation, to replace two iron spans which were blown down last Summer, which bill, it is said, has been substituted for the same.

New Hampshire Greenback Convention.

PORTSMOUTH (N. H.).—The Greenback State Convention have nominated for Governor, Samuel Flint.

A fearful tornado took place in Kentucky, many people killed and damages about $50,000.

The Cincinnati Commercial says that we can memorialized in most of the principal cities in the United States and Canada.

CONGRESSIONAL

A bill has been introduced in Congress authorizing the deposit of silver bullion and the issuing of certificates thereof, and authorizing the payment of duties, taxes, and all public and private debts.

The Committee on coinage resolved that there should be increased mintage facilities. Pacific Railroad bill authorizing the sale of Fort Yuma reservation.

The House Committee will recommend the passage of the Stanfilian claim in the city of San Francisco.

There are prospects of a favorable Committee report on the Colorado desert land project. A combination has been formed to defeat the new tariff bill.

Senator Booth introduced a bill authorizing United States Courts to adjudate the claims of legal representatives of dose and Pablo Apis for the lands in Los Angeles, Southern California.

Horace Davis presented resolutions of the California Legislature asking for the repeal of all laws permitting the employment of Government officers at public expense.

Dawes asking an appropriation for completion of the stone dry dock at Port Orford, the establishment of tri-weekly mail service between Chicago and Port Orford, via Portland and Portland, and an enactment granting a portion of the Presidio Reservation to the city of San Francisco as a public park.

Dawes has decided to President Hayes in person a copy of the conditions drafted by Swift and adopted by the California Legislature on the Chinese question, the object being to call attention to what Davis considers an uncommonly compact and forcible argumentation on unanswerable grounds. The President received his assurance of earnest consideration of the subject involved, and intimated that his present Secretary Sherman takes a cheerful view of the case, and complains chiefly that the sale of four per-cents has stopped, but European bondholders are beginning to see that even if they are paid in silver the interest will be much larger than upon any other bond they can find in the market. The Secretary's theory is, that he will pay silver in circulation as fast as possible, purchase silver bullion with gold, and retire greenbacks in the Treasury for internal revenue tax, thus gradually contracting the greenback circulation possibly, within the first year to $300,000,000 the limit fixed by the Resumption Act, and will in that day bring legal tenders to par in advance of actual resumption.

It may be stated that the Government will extend a formal recognition to the Government of Diaz in Mexico at an early date, and Diaz will make no pledge or stipulation; but extensive correspondence has developed an earnest desire on the part of friendly relations, and for avoidance of cause of complaints.

The Senate has passed the land bill was passed by the Senate, they are to be $25, $50 and $100, respectively, in coin fifty years from the date of their issue.

Director Leuderman recommends calling the trade dollar and their recoinage into the silver dollar.

CALIFORNIA LEGISLATURE

Bennett presented a petition from citizens of Alameda in favor of the McCapple Language bill. The Bill after much discussion was passed the Senate.

Shirley, seconding to notice, moved to reconsider the vote by which the Language Bill passed in the Assembly yesterday, and asked that the consideration be postponed until Saturday, after the main business of the citizens of San Francisco has been held on this question.

The Chair ruled that notice of reconsideration was out of order.

Lewis appealed from the decision of the Chair but on a call of the roll the decision of the Chair was sustained by 23 ayes to 13 noes. This was the Bill immediately to the Assembly.

The Senate passed Swift's Fence Bill, but amended so as to the title "to prevent the destruction of bogus election tickets and to prevent fraud on voters."

Curtis, from the Sacramento Delegation, reported favorably on the Bill authorizing the trustees to remit taxes in the flooded districts of Sacramento. Rules suspended and Bill passed.

The Bill calling a Constitutional Convention, which passed the Senate, was lost in the Assembly.

Noonan, from the San Francisco Delegation, reported favorably on the Bill providing for a Commission to revise the St. Francis Church, regarding Montgomery Avenue. Rules suspended, and Bill passed.

The Bill to repeal the Bill passed, under suspension of the rules, substitute for Swift's Bill to prevent destruction of voters, and to secure the purity of elections in San Francisco.

Hale introduced a Bill appropriating $100,000 as deficiency in expenditures for the State Fair for the fiscal year 1877.

A communication was read from the Sill Commissioners to McCapple, stating that it was their opinion that it should be passed as early as practicable, as the State was paying interest on $90,000, and the expenditure was saving to their money.

Rules were suspended and Bill passed. The following Bills were finally passed by the Assembly:

Amending the Quackery Act of last session, providing the issue of certificates to the Medical Society of California, the Eclectic and Homœopathic Societies.

Assembly Bill providing for extermination of the Mexican Cattle Plague.

Shirley's Bill affording opportunity for the redemption of bonds which have been sold to the State.

McCapple's Bill providing for the formation of corporations.

Bill from the San Francisco Delegation reported the McCapple substitute for Coffey's Police Bill.

MC CAPPLE'S POLICE BILL.

On motion of McCapple the rules were suspended to consider the Bill at once.

The substitute was then adopted by the following Ayes 21 Noes 4.

The Bill as amended by the substitute was read a third time and passed. It now goes to the Assembly for concurrence or otherwise.

Bill to incorporate the town of Berkeley, in Alameda county, was passed.

Howe's Bill, opening Army street in the city of San Francisco, was passed.

Conroy's Bill, establishing the grade of Alabama street, between Jones and Taylor, was passed.

Swift's Bill, to prevent confiscations in cities of the second class, was passed.

Early forty-five other local Bills were passed, entirely cleaning up the special file.

Emmet's Centennial.

The centennial anniversary of Robert Emmett was generally celebrated Monday evening last at Pacific Hall, under the auspices of the Tom Moore Literary and Social Club, of the Emmett Guard, Captain Cleary commanding, the entire company being detailed as a guard of honor on the occasion. President J. H. Gilmore paid a worthy tribute to the lamented patriot. He pointed out difficulties attending the uprising of 1803, and urged his hearers to take every precaution to make the next blow a final and decisive one against the oppressive rule of England. Mr. James T. Noon, poet of the occasion, was then introduced, and in an eloquent manner delivered an original poem, being frequently interrupted by applause. Rev. John B. McNally, of East Oakland, delivered the oration. It was a masterly finished effort; he aroused the audience to such a degree of enthusiasm that they several times rose to their feet and cheered him. Mr. Barton Hill, of the California Theater, recited the dying speech of Robert Emmett, in a manner that elicited the feelings of all present. Miss Minnie Walton, Mr. Kinrossand others contributed to the success of the entertainment. Now that the celebration is over, the Tom Moore Literary and Social Club may well congratulate themselves on its success. They have in every way manifested the enthusiasm of their patron in arranging for, and fitly carrying out, the celebration of Emmett's centennial.

There was a very large audience, numbering over a thousand, assembled in the Metropolitan Temple, Monday evening, the centennial anniversary of the birth of Robert Emmett, to hear Rev. G. H. Pepper preach on "Ireland and her People." The lecturer began by briefly sketching the early colonizations of Ireland. Then he traced upon the characteristics of the three races who peopled Ireland. Afterwards he spoke of the British misgovernment of the country, together with the capacity and exactions of the landlord class. He ably formulated the causes of complaint now existing against England, and repeatedly declared that which the Irish wanted was a complete severance from England. He concluded with a fine eulogy of the young patriot-martyr, Robert Emmett. Mr. Harry Edwards, of the California Theatre, then read Emmett's famous speech. He had not memorized it, and therefore had to make use of a book. The result was he was unable to deliver it with the feeling and pathos it calls for. Indeed, to speak plainly, Mr. Edwards did not do himself credit. The fault is not his, the poem was equally unfortunate; it was but indifferently delivered, though the gentleman who had charge of it evidently did his best to do it justice. In our supplement will be found all the details with the oration and poem in full.

The Philhistorian Entertainment.

The Philhistorian Literary and Debating Society of St. Ignatius' College gave a literary entertainment in the large hall connected with that institution on Monday evening. Quite a large number of the press, and the alumni of the institution, and of the youthful debaters were present. Presents the interest which the public fe

LECTURE

ON

"THE PEOPLE'S FAULT,"

BY

Rev. Father Buchard, S.J.

In St. Ignatius' Church, February 28, 1876, in aid of the Sacred Heart Presentation Convent, Taylor Street.

Love of country, and a desire that the principles upon which our fathers of a century ago built up this Government, may be perpetuated, is my apology for the remarks I am about to offer upon men and the times, as our country's history of the last twenty-five years presents them to us. Following up that history to the present, we find that, amid the wild whirl of politics, principle is going down; and with principle, law; with law, order; with order, government; for principle, law, order, government, stand or fall together. Strike down any principle and you have taken a rock from the foundation of government. Men and the times are shifting the foundation of this government from the rock of principle to the sands of policy; and, as surely as they do it, reason tells them; and history thunders the same in their ears, this government shall fall. Devise and attempt to carry out the wildest schemes of policy, but so long as you touch not principle, so long as you respect the inviolability of principle, there may be danger, but there still is hope. Violate, purposely and deliberately, principle, and there is more than danger, without any hope, there is destruction. Our late civil war dealt terrible blows against the principles upon which the union of those sovereign states was built, and the force of each blow has justly recoiled upon the very parties who struck them, and the whole fabric of government still reels with the shock. Cannons were planted, North and South, and sent their murderous balls, not only against forts, but against principles. Soldiers, North and South, lifted and leveled their muskets and fired, not only against their fellow-countrymen, but against right. Forts fell and brave men died; but no cannon yet has ever taken the range of principle, and never a grave was yet dug deep enough for right. There is a certain terrible logic in events. The battle against principle did not close when General Lee delivered his sword to General Grant. No; that battle is still raging. When the soldiers had done their work the demagogues of the land began. With pen and speech and pamphlet; with fraud and bribery and falsehood; with threat and treachery and every vile appliance, they have been warring, bloodlessly, yet, not the less violently, against constitutional principles. I repeat that battle is still raging; it is growing fiercer; the ranks of the combatants are closing. One day or other, for weal or for woe, the contest will be decided. I care not, my friends, to forecast the future, as no prophet. But who looks into that future without misgiving? No one. Who feels secure? No one. Who now has the good old faith in the stability of our institutional Very few. And why! Because passion rules the hour. But why does passion rule! Because principle has left the government. But why and how has principle left the government! Because it first left the hearts of the people. Ah! there it is, there is the source of all our evils, want of principle in the hearts of the people. Politics and politicians may reach and reply some of the evils that oppress the country and darken the future; but neither politics nor politicians can reach the hearts of the people. And they must be reached and purified. If they are corrupt, how secure a people's government! If the government be not pure, how can it last? The people have fallen far away from political truth and justice and integrity. They must be reformed; but, how shall it be done? Blaming as I do the politicians of the country for the evils which oppress it and endanger its very existence, I go back of them and I blame the people more. A corrupt people will produce immoral, naturally and necessarily, corrupt politicians; a pure people will produce pure public men. For it is the fairest of tests to judge of the character of any people by that of its leading men. And, if a people elect, support and applaud men of loose principles, and of little or no moral worth; if they place such men in positions of trust; if they delegate to these powers, which the wisest and truest fear to possess, and tremble to exercise, are not the people themselves responsible for the evils which such men create? The abuse of power is traced back to the source of power. We blame the fountain if the stream be corrupt. We blame the people for their politicians. These are the outgrowth of the body politic. They are the fruits of the tree, and by its fruits we judge it. "A good tree cannot produce evil fruit; nor can an evil tree produce good fruit," is a political, as well as a moral maxim. Why, then, such continual complaint of our politicians! It is the people's fault. Why such complaint of the corruption, the venality, and other infamies of our politics! It is the people's fault. Corrupt politics spring from corrupt politicians, corrupt people. One necessitates the other. To purify politics, you must purify the politicians; to purify the politicians, you must purify the people. That our politics are a very Augean stable no one will deny. That the corruption is becoming worse and worse, no one will gain say. That this state of things, if we have any desire to escape ruin, must be remedied, all admit. That our politicians, with the tremendous trusts in their hands, are not to be trusted at all, nearly every one will concede. Here and there, from the midst of the people, a voice of warning is raised. Now and then, brave men and true, who care more for principle than for false public opinion, step forward and sound their clarion blast. At times, honest and upright politicians, uncontaminated by the almost general corruption, sound the notes of alarm. But the people in their majesty, where are they! In their majesty, did I say? Yes in the majesty of their principles, their honor, their power, their rights; yes; in the grandest majesty of conscience. In their majesty, did I say! But what has become of that vaunted majesty! What do we see! Constitutions violated, time-honored laws trampled, as if they were vile things in the mire, inviolable rights invaded, justice mocked in the halls of justice, liberties trod in the earth, gross hands from their altars in the temple of liberty. Have not the people witnessed such outrages! Aye, and worse than witnessed, approved them! What do we see! Great and good men thrust aside to give way to the vile and the necessary; men whose brides could never buy forced to yield place and precedence to those whose consciences could be purchased for the paltriest pittance; intelligence forced to obey the dictates of ignorance; integrity obliged to bear the caress of corruption; true men, and men of soul, driven from position and deprived of influence by the soulless and the false. Have not the people looked upon such outrages and let some them! Votes bought and sold, not merely here and there, but everywhere; elections carried by fraud and intimidation; bayonets barring the way of freemen to the ballot-box; arrests without cause; trials with bought testimony; convictions without law; judgments and deaths without justice. Have not the people seen such things and stood still! What more do we see! Usurpations of the most daring kind by their representatives; the executive denounced and defied in the legitimate exercise of the very powers which the people had conferred upon him; the judiciary attacked in their constitutional privileges; the halls of Congress made foul with language that would disgrace the lowest haunt of depravity; the sessions of the people's Legislature turned into orgies, where rivalry and passion ran riot; the interests of the people neglected and, and turned to the advantage of a newborn moneyed aristocracy; the treasures of the Government made the sport of party purposes; the offices of the Government filled, not for the people's advantage, but for the benefit of parasites and sycophants, forced for the ostensible purpose of paying the people's debt, and when collected, wantonly squandered; the highest officers in the Government running around the country and states was built, and the force of each blow has justly recoiled upon the very parties who struck them, and the whole fabric of government still reels with the shock. Cannons were planted, North and South, and sent their murderous balls, not only against forts, but against principles. Soldiers, North and South, lifted and leveled their muskets and fired, not only against their fellow-countrymen, but against right. Forts fell and brave men died; but no cannon yet has ever taken the range of principle, and never a grave was yet dug deep enough for right. There is a certain terrible logic in events. The battle against principle did not close when General Lee delivered his sword to General Grant. No; that battle is still raging. When the soldiers had done their work the demagogues of the land began. With pen and speech and pamphlet; with fraud and bribery and falsehood; with threat and treachery and every vile appliance, they have been warring, bloodlessly, yet, not the less violently, against constitutional principles. I repeat that battle is still raging; it is growing fiercer; the ranks of the combatants are closing. One day or other, for weal or for woe, the contest will be decided. I care not, my friends, to forecast the future, as no prophet. But who looks into that future without misgiving? No one. Who feels secure? No one. Who now has the good old faith in the stability of our institutional Very few. And why! Because passion rules the hour. But why does passion rule! Because principle has left the government. But why and how has principle left the government! Because it first left the hearts of the people. Ah! there it is, there is the source of all our evils, want of principle in the hearts of the people. Politics and politicians may reach and reply some of the evils that oppress the country and darken the future; but neither politics nor politicians can reach the hearts of the people. And they must be reached and purified. If they are corrupt, how secure a people's government! If the government be not pure, how can it last? The people have fallen far away from political truth and justice and integrity. They must be reformed; but, how shall it be done? Blaming as I do the politicians of the country for the evils which oppress it and endanger its very existence, I go back of them and I blame the people more. A corrupt people will produce immoral, naturally and necessarily, corrupt politicians; a pure people will produce pure public men. For it is the fairest of tests to judge of the character of any people by that of its leading men. And, if a people elect, support and applaud men of loose principles, and of little or no moral worth; if they place such men in positions of trust; if they delegate to these powers, which the wisest and truest fear to possess, and tremble to exercise, are not the people themselves responsible for the evils which such men create? The abuse of power is traced back to the source of power. We blame the fountain if the stream be corrupt. We blame the people for their politicians. These are the outgrowth of the body politic. They are the fruits of the tree, and by its fruits we judge it. "A good tree cannot produce evil fruit; nor can an evil tree produce good fruit," is a political, as well as a moral maxim. Why, then, such continual complaint of our politicians! It is the people's fault. Why such complaint of the corruption, the venality, and other infamies of our politics! It is the people's fault. Corrupt politics spring from corrupt politicians, corrupt people. One necessitates the other. To purify politics, you must purify the politicians; to purify the politicians, you must purify the people. That our politics are a very Augean stable no one will deny. That the corruption is becoming worse and worse, no one will gain say. That this state of things, if we have any desire to escape ruin, must be remedied, all admit. That our politicians, with the tremendous trusts in their hands, are not to be trusted at all, nearly every one will concede. Here and there, from the midst of the people, a voice of warning is raised. Now and then, brave men and true, who care more for principle than for false public opinion, step forward and sound their clarion blast. At times, honest and upright politicians, uncontaminated by the almost general corruption, sound the notes of alarm. But the people in their majesty, where are they! In their majesty, did I say! Yes in the majesty of their principles, their honor, their power, their rights; yes; in the grandest majesty of conscience. In their majesty, did I say! But what has become of that vaunted majesty! What do we see! Constitutions violated, time-honored laws trampled, as if they were vile things in the mire, inviolable rights invaded, justice mocked in the halls of justice, liberties trod in the earth, gross hands from their altars in the temple of liberty. Have not the people witnessed such outrages! Aye, and worse than witnessed, approved them! What do we see! Great and good men thrust aside to give way to the vile and the necessary; men whose brides could never buy forced to yield place and precedence to those whose consciences could be purchased for the paltriest pittance; intelligence forced to obey the dictates of ignorance; integrity obliged to bear the caress of corruption; true men, and men of soul, driven from position and deprived of influence by the soulless and the false. Have not the people looked upon such outrages and let some them! Votes bought and sold, not merely here and there, but everywhere; elections carried by fraud and intimidation; bayonets barring the way of freemen to the ballot-box; arrests without cause; trials with bought testimony; convictions without law; judgments and deaths without justice. Have not the people seen such things and stood still! What more do we see! Usurpations of the most daring kind by their representatives; the executive denounced and defied in the legitimate exercise of the very powers which the people had conferred upon him; the judiciary attacked in their constitutional privileges; the halls of Congress made foul with language that would disgrace the lowest haunt of depravity; the sessions of the people's Legislature turned into orgies, where rivalry and passion ran riot; the interests of the people neglected and, and turned to the advantage of a newborn moneyed aristocracy; the treasures of the Government made the sport of party purposes; the offices of the Government filled, not for the people's advantage, but for the benefit of parasites and sycophants, forced for the ostensible purpose of paying the people's debt, and when collected, wantonly squandered; the highest officers in the Government running around the country and states was built, and the force of each blow has justly recoiled upon the very parties who struck them, and the whole fabric of government still reels with the shock. Cannons were planted, North and South, and sent their murderous balls, not only against forts, but against principles. Soldiers, North and South, lifted and leveled their muskets and fired, not only against their fellow-countrymen, but against right. Forts fell and brave men died; but no cannon yet has ever taken the range of principle, and never a grave was yet dug deep enough for right. There is a certain terrible logic in events. The battle against principle did not close when General Lee delivered his sword to General Grant. No; that battle is still raging. When the soldiers had done their work the demagogues of the land began. With pen and speech and pamphlet; with fraud and bribery and falsehood; with threat and treachery and every vile appliance, they have been warring, bloodlessly, yet, not the less violently, against constitutional principles. I repeat that battle is still raging; it is growing fiercer; the ranks of the combatants are closing. One day or other, for weal or for woe, the contest will be decided. I care not, my friends, to forecast the future, as no prophet. But who looks into that future without misgiving? No one. Who feels secure? No one. Who now has the good old faith in the stability of our institutional Very few. And why! Because passion rules the hour. But why does passion rule! Because principle has left the government. But why and how has principle left the government! Because it first left the hearts of the people. Ah! there it is, there is the source of all our evils, want of principle in the hearts of the people. Politics and politicians may reach and reply some of the evils that oppress the country and darken the future; but neither politics nor politicians can reach the hearts of the people. And they must be reached and purified. If they are corrupt, how secure a people's government! If the government be not pure, how can it last? The people have fallen far away from political truth and justice and integrity. They must be reformed; but, how shall it be done? Blaming as I do the politicians of the country for the evils which oppress it and endanger its very existence, I go back of them and I blame the people more. A corrupt people will produce immoral, naturally and necessarily, corrupt politicians; a pure people will produce pure public men. For it is the fairest of tests to judge of the character of any people by that of its leading men. And, if a people elect, support and applaud men of loose principles, and of little or no moral worth; if they place such men in positions of trust; if they delegate to these powers, which the wisest and truest fear to possess, and tremble to exercise, are not the people themselves responsible for the evils which such men create? The abuse of power is traced back to the source of power. We blame the fountain if the stream be corrupt. We blame the people for their politicians. These are the outgrowth of the body politic. They are the fruits of the tree, and by its fruits we judge it. "A good tree cannot produce evil fruit; nor can an evil tree produce good fruit," is a political, as well as a moral maxim. Why, then, such continual complaint of our politicians! It is the people's fault. Why such complaint of the corruption, the venality, and other infamies of our politics! It is the people's fault. Corrupt politics spring from corrupt politicians, corrupt people. One necessitates the other. To purify politics, you must purify the politicians; to purify the politicians, you must purify the people. That our politics are a very Augean stable no one will deny. That the corruption is becoming worse and worse, no one will gain say. That this state of things, if we have any desire to escape ruin, must be remedied, all admit. That our politicians, with the tremendous trusts in their hands, are not to be trusted at all, nearly every one will concede. Here and there, from the midst of the people, a voice of warning is raised. Now and then, brave men and true, who care more for principle than for false public opinion, step forward and sound their clarion blast. At times, honest and upright politicians, uncontaminated by the almost general corruption, sound the notes of alarm. But the people in their majesty, where are they! In their majesty, did I say! Yes in the majesty of their principles, their honor, their power, their rights; yes; in the grandest majesty of conscience. In their majesty, did I say! But what has become of that vaunted majesty! What do we see! Constitutions

Hence, the nation that separates religion from politics "is nigh to ruin." But you may say: "We are an exceptional race—a chosen people. God has lavished upon us his choicest gifts; He has given us a land 'overflowing with milk and honey'; an earthly Canaan, a garden spot of earth, which reminds us by its beauty and richness and grandeur of the Eden home of our first parents. The sons are white with our forefathers and groan under the weight of our commerce. Our mines are many; deep and hoard. Our merchants are the princes of the land. Talent and genius have crowned labor and industry with the never-fading laurel of immortality. Invention has made herself a patent for everlasting admiration. As a nation we stand on the summit of national grandeur. What more do we need?" Ah! my friends, we need religion. Without religion no country can long maintain its morals uncorrupted; and without morality, virtue life and efficacy into the laws, the country declines and falls. The possibility of a country of infidels was once imagined by a few French atheists; they denied all authority except natural reason; they taught that the savage was the primitive state of man; and with old Lucretius, held that "fear made their gods"; they divorced religion from education, and, indeed the minds of the youth with the sophisms of an atheistical philosophy. France became temporarily a country of infidels—a country without religion—but where religion is present to furnish first principles and to keep the ever-fermenting mind under proper control, the inexorable logic of passion will always carry false principles to their last fearful result—a result which filled France with the horrors, tragedies, heroisms and saturnalia of blood. No country can long survive or play her proper part in the progressing panorama of history if religion be not there to exercise her moral and restraining influence; or where the influence of thought of the country are not directed by the christianizing power of religion. Mere intellect, wealth and power are not sufficient to maintain and perpetuate our Government. Athens and Rome had all these, and they fell, because they had not God's religion. We want something more, then, "We want religion—that religion which will consolidate and unify the whole people, like the diamond, than which nothing is more compact, brilliant and precious; that religion which brings the past, present and future together, and, amidst all changes, remains unchangeable; which makes all look to one common end, and fills up the harmonising void of our aspirations. We want that religion which cannot be shaken from its base, when passion and caprice array themselves against it for destruction; that religion whose power is from above—whose foundations are on the everlasting mountains of eternity; that religion which can alone illuminate our pathway and give the light of faith where fettering, feeble reason fails; that religion which lifts the veil of the dim, shadowy future, and shows us what our country shall be in the distant ages, if always governed by sound religious principle. Yes, with religion at the helm, the proud old ship of State, with all her broad white sails, shall dashing through the spray, with the colors of liberty all flying from every mast-head, till pierce her course unchanged amid the wrecks of time. Her progress will be onward and upward, higher and still higher, as the eagle when he takes his flight in the face of the sun; higher, as the stars when, in their courses, they encircle the footstool of the immortal throne; higher, as the soul of man when it leaves the prison-house of clay and soars to the country of the Blessed—the Home of its Father and its God.

Grand Oration of Bishop Lynch

AT THE

Papal Requiem in the Cathedral Church of New York.

The Right Rev. gentleman took for his text:

"Psalms, LXXIX, 10-13.—"I have declared Thy justice in a great Church; lo, I will not restrain my lips, O Lord, thou knowest it. I have not hid Thy justice within my heart; I have declared Thy truth, and Thy salutare. I have not concealed Thy mercy and Thy truth from a great council. Withhold not, Thou, O Lord, Thy tender mercies from me; Thy mercy and Thy truth have always upheld me. For evils without number have surrounded me.

He then spoke as follows:

This week, my brethren, has seen millions and millions of hearts filled with sadness. Within a week there was announced an event which moved the minds of men, and their hearts, more, perhaps, than any news of war, of strife, of victory, or of peace. There lay dead in the Vatican at Rome, one whom two hundred millions of men called their spiritual Father. The electric wires flashed the news to every land of Europe, here it scarcely the waters to the shores of Africa; and further on to the Eastern Indies, to China and Japan. It crossed the Atlantic, North and South; and men in this western hemisphere felt sorrow as if they had lost an earthly father. Hence we moved, "Father, said one to me, a stalwart, big-hearted man,

"FATHER, IS IT TRUE?"

"I fear it is." And, though in the public streets, his hands went up to his face and he wept like a child. There is universal sorrow. Thirty-two years ago there was universal joy and applause. Men all through Europe and in this western hemisphere felt the happy event. Thirty years John Mastai Ferretti had been elected Pope. Many of you must remember what pens of joy and of praise filled the columns of the papers and fell from the lips of eloquent men; aye, from those men even assembled among the Cathedrals. From that day down, all through those years, his life was a public life. Every word of his was listened to; every act was scrutinized; every decision went to the hearts of men. His children knew him, strangers approached him; and all through those years, no matter whether they were of the Church or opposed to the Church,

ALL MEN LOVED HIM:

Loved to approach him; loved to receive his blessing; and not one, Catholic, Protestant, Jew or Mohammedan ever once left his presence that did not cherish in his heart a warmer sense of the interview, and the sweetness of the blessing that he had received from that holy, saintly old man. Yes, he is dead! Even the Pontiff is dead! It is appointed for all men to die. Why, I ask, that rejoicing at his elevation! Why, that regretting all through those years! Why, this universal sorrow now! Is it because he was the earthly sovereign of a little tract of Italy! Was it because three millions called him their sovereign ruler?

HIS CIVIL POWER

Was checkered, indeed. He received it with applause and congratulation from very part of the world, and most so from his subjects, and yet within two years and a few months had been stripped of his hands and robbed of his authority. They strove to fix him violence officially, and then person. They said he was a tyrant, and that he was a fugitive at Gaeta, and his enemies said that the civil power had become an end. He was hated by some and loved by others. He was never heard in the churches, and it was hailed in every street of every city and town and village of the States of the Church. A few years after an army of eighty thousand men marched into the land and seized four-fifths of his territory, leaving only the city of Rome and the little district around it. And seven years and a half ago, during the emergency of a great war, that remaining one-fifth was taken from him and over

HE HAS DWELT A PRISONER

In that Vatican. He could not go forth with triumphal processions, with blessings upon himself, without violating the oaths he swore; but he could not and would not allow that. He could not go forth without being insulted to personal insult, affront and danger, in consequence which, though he might not fear them for himself, might bring chaos and disaster on the Church. Thus he was virtually a prisoner for three seven years and a half; it was not for his temporal power—insignificant at its best, and, as the world says, "burned now in the ashes"—it was not for that he was honored. No, he was

SOMETHING MORE AND MIGHTIER

Than that. He was the head on earth, the chief Bishop, the Sovereign Pontiff, the center of unity and centre of authority in that kingdom which Christ established; in that Catholic Church founded by our Saviour, promulgated and spread by the Apostles that has come down all through the seven of years since—that has lived and suffered, and conquered and spread by martyrs, and by the blood of martyrs, and by the sacrifice of millions of lives, and has consolidated and unify the whole people, like the diamond, than which nothing is more compact, brilliant and precious; that religion which brings the past, present and future together, and, amidst all changes, remains unchangeable; which makes all look to one common end, and fills up the harmonising void of our aspirations. We want that religion which cannot be shaken from its base, when passion and caprice array themselves against it for destruction; that religion whose power is from above—whose foundations are on the everlasting mountains of eternity; that religion which can alone illuminate our pathway and give the light of faith where fettering, feeble reason fails; that religion which lifts the veil of the dim, shadowy future, and shows us what our country shall be in the distant ages, if always governed by sound religious principle. Yes, with religion at the helm, the proud old ship of State, with all her broad white sails, shall dashing through the spray, with the colors of liberty all flying from every mast-head, till pierce her course unchanged amid the wrecks of time. Her progress will be onward and upward, higher and still higher, as the eagle when he takes his flight in the face of the sun; higher, as the stars when, in their courses, they encircle the footstool of the immortal throne; higher, as the soul of man when it leaves the prison-house of clay and soars to the country of the Blessed—the Home of its Father and its God.

THE TITLE GIVEN TO HIM

Was a proud one, Catholic, Protestant, Jew or Mohammedan ever once left his presence that did not cherish in his heart a warmer sense of the interview, and the sweetness of the blessing that he had received from that holy, saintly old man. Yes, he is dead! Even the Pontiff is dead! It is appointed for all men to die. Why, I ask, that rejoicing at his elevation! Why, that regretting all through those years! Why, this universal sorrow now! Is it because he was the earthly sovereign of a little tract of Italy!

THE WORLD'S SORROW ON HIM.

his eye was dimmed with tears and the tones of his voice were sometimes inexpressibly sad; for there had manifested in him a disease spilling which if continued would forever bar his entrance to the sanctuary, and would forever darken his life and crush his heart. Oh! how that heart yearned and prayed morning and night in that house and in the churches of Rome, before the Blessed Sacrament, and implored that the cup might move from him that blight. He prayed day and night never giving up. Nor was prayer alone enough for him; work he must do; work is prayer, and of all works prayer to God

CHARITY TO THE POOR.

And unfortunate tales first rank. He gave away that. He sought out the poor, ragged boys of Rome, and brought them to that institution which had been established there for them, and which he focused in the college were through he would send his way to that asylum, or gather boys in the street and send them there, and teach them to read and to write, teach them lessons of catechism and prepare them for the holy sacraments. His prayers and his works of mercy, like those of Tobias of old, ascended before God and was heard. He felt that

THE DISEASE WAS DEPARTING.

And at last he presented himself before the venerable Pope Pius the Seventh, a distant relative of his own, did with tears in his eyes, entreated and implored his consent that at length he might be ordained priest. And the Pontiff placed his hands on the head of the fair-faced young man and blessing him, gave his consent, and said to those around that he was assured that never would he bring dishonor on his name and that through all the sixty-odd years that the young man still lived! (Sensation.) Ordained, was said in the chapel in which so often he had knelt and had taught. Soon he came rector of the asylum, and all his own means and all that he gathered or could gather around, was devoted to that work of Charity. He was known, recognized, loved, admired, and soon was chosen by the Pontiff himself to go as Secretary of Legation, as we would call it, on a mission to the Southern Continent of America, and Chili. Why should I speak of the time spent there? Shipwreck, imprisonment, and trials of many kinds, marked the voyage. They landed at length, and from Montevideo to Buenos Ayres, from Buenos Ayres across the Pampas of South America, up the mountain side of the Andes, down to the western shore to Santiago, on to Peru, back to Chili, again on the Eastern side of America. Everywhere there was the same charity, the same love of souls the same devotedness to the one work and the night of his life, the service of God and the welfare of those he could assist.

HIS FIRST MASS

HOME AGAIN IN ROME.

A new Pontiff ruled, but Leo XII. knew him well; he marked him, and soon Leo appointed him Superior and Rector of the grand orphan asylum in Rome of San Michele, where he had been a child. Work it was that never Pope was so well done. And then bishop of Spoleto and of Imola. Shall I speak of the years he spent there? Shall I speak of the years of his episcopacy? The youth was father to the priest; the priest was father to the people. Work it was that marked his whole administration. Orphan asylums, houses of refuge—anything that could and save those that otherwise would be lost, working to reclaim the erring, seek for, save, those that were condemned; seeking to bring peace where there had been none. That was his work at Spoleto and at Imola; in that he was engaged when those professors scolded speak to us from of the one that had passed through there in his course; of the one that gave such promise of sweetness in his youth and such fulfilling of them as Bishop of Spoleto. Much they hoped for from him, and he lived to see him Cardinal, and three of them lived to see him elected Pope in 1846, and to know that all that had gone before was a preparation that he would do the work of God in that high position to which God had called him, and that he would do it well. Work it was and all the work and all the disappointments, and all the graces of the pontifical had prepared him.

LIFT UP THE FALLEN

WHAT SHALL SAY OF HIS PAPACY!

First of the Church He taught her unity, and maintained it. Unity in doctrine and in charity, progress in extension in every land where men were turning from the worship of the false gods to that of the true, providential reign of thirty-two years and eight months, that will be in all ages shall commemorate. Time and time again he gathered bishops around him 250, 400, and 500 at a time, from Europe and from all parts of the world. In 1854, having first being appealed to by hundreds and hundreds of prelates, and by many, he had sent his circulars throughout the world and gathered the sentiment, the judgment and the wishes of the entire Catholic Church, and

SURROUNDED BY 250 BISHOPS.

In the grand Basilica of St. Peter, he authoritatively defined the doctrine, always held, of the Immaculate Conception, gave unto it form, and before men theological force; made it a declared and defined doctrine of the church. Such commanded others he beatified, and at last he summoned the Vatican Council, the Nineteenth Ecumenical Council of the Church to that same grand basilica, and there the first Constitution were set forth in the teachings of the Church as opposed to all false teaching of Pantheism and infidelity that are now spreading up and down through the minds of men. And there, too, was defined

THE CROWNING DOCTRINE,

so to speak, of the authority of the Church, the doctrine of the infallibility, ex-Cathedra, of the Sovereign Pontiff. The world asked, will that question be touched? Will it be discussed? How will it be decided? And the Pontiff refused that it should be discussed until three-fourths, almost, of the prelates there had asked in writing, that it be admitted, and represented that in their judgment it was a necessity for the interests of the Church that it should be discussed and decided; and it was admitted, it was discussed; all that could be said on the one side or the other was patiently heard, and finally the grand doctrine was promulgated to the Sovereign Pontiff, whereupon the Sovereign Pontiff, in the full exercise of his office, he sets forth and declares the

DOCTRINE OF SALVATION

on any point of faith and morals to be held by the Universal Church of Christ, is then, by the power of Christ, protected from error in the act, and clothed with that same infallibility with which Christ willed that His Church should be clothed in teaching the world. For he is Head of the Church The bishops around him and the faithful are the body. Can the Church live if the head be severed from the body? And the Church of Christ must live, and that head must always, as head, speak law and truth. Men have spoken of it in different modes and ing it. I think God that in this hard shell fend charges as are mooted elsewhere are not heard. Men have misunderstood authority. We know that when

THE AMERICAN CHIEF JUSTICE

on the bench of his Supreme Court, clothed in his judicial robes, having heard the case, speaks as supreme judge, his words are law, there is no tribunal to reverse or correct them. And in order that in giving that law he may not be led to make a decision against equity and reason, men seek for the high office of Chief Justice learned men, broad minded men, just and pure men; no equity can be in the hands, for it is necessary beyond all things to achieve this result that the decision which has force of law shall not make equity and reason yield. And what men seek to obtain and know the desirability of, God in His church achieved; for He can do it; he can succeed where men fail. The Sovereign Pontiff, speaking and defining the doctrines of the Church, is the Chief Justice deciding; and He who established his office, He who is law and truth, He who hath clothed him with authority, He is with him and will see to it that error be not spoken in His name instead of truth. For doctrine, Pius IX. has declared for the Church of doctrine and in unity of charity, when all hearts, and all the Catholic Church stand together as it does to-day! When, in all that long line of pontiffs that preceded him was there one around whom all the bishops gathered so unitedly, so warmly, with so much of personal affection, as it were. When he was in all his history of the Church that the priesthood so stood with their bishops around him? Never. Never was there such hearts by millions and hundreds of millions, held the same faith, held the same doctrine, prayed the same prayers, praying for years for that venerable, sainted, suffering Pontiff in the Vatican, and to-day are praying at the Requiem Masses offered throughout the world! When, in all the past history of the Church was there a Pontiff who died there in exile? I doubt it not. Thank God, though evil days may come upon us,

IN UNITY

WE STAND TOGETHER!

Persecutions may come, but we are united; no weakness may be made, but no check palsy, no heart sinks. Defection! It Valuable to You. Are there? There are those of wickedness; there are those of weakness, there are those of frailty, here and there and everywhere, even as one fell from the Apostolic college. But defection from the Faith? Defection in a body? They speak of the Old Catholics of Germany. What are four priests in all Austria! What are those who have recognized to be half a faith, because God in all things around him; this the Church, and the dust of God to heaven were things always first in his heart. No wonder that to-day not one seven days passed without receiving letters from the Catholics of France, where they had been punished, laid under censure deprived of their bishops, and who now try by aid of the scheming and the money of those who hate the Church to occupy the Sees of the Church, and who, when they had ruled, away back from the days of Charlemagne, for a thousand years. But I shall speak longer.

PIUS IX. WAS A GREAT POPE;

a provident Pope. God gave unto him a length of years to enable him to make his predecessors since St. Peter; and yet, well as he has done his work, earthly troubles may have come to him; but his soul was full of

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
THURSDAY EVENING MARCH 7.

SUBSCRIBERS will please specially look at the printed label on the margin or wrapper of the paper; the date thereon shows when the subscription expires. They should also know that their taking the paper from the postoffice renders them liable for the subscription price as long as they continue to do so. Persons have no excuse to make for papers being sent after the time their subscription expires. If they wish their paper discontinued, by not taking it from the office the postmaster is bound to notify the publishers of that fact, and to have the paper stopped. We make this explanation for the information of those who make the excuse, when asked for payment, that they paid for it as long as ordered, but still continue to take it from the office.

"A Dangerous Game."

The Sacramento Record-Union takes us to task for advising Catholics to act more manfully than they have hitherto done, so as to make their influence more generally felt in the community. Our contemporary can only see in such advice an invitation to form some kind of a new political party which shall consist only of Catholics and work only for the good of the Church. It tells us, in substance if not in words, that such an experiment would be a very dangerous thing, and might provoke an opposition which would result disastrously for Catholicism in this State. We cannot comprehend why the Record-Union should be so much afraid of harmony and unity among the members of the Catholic Church, or why it should indulge in vague and mysterious forebodings of evil because Catholics, as Americans and citizens, endeavor to exercise, in the general community, the influence and weight that righteously belong to them.

We presume that, under the Constitution, our co-religionists have the same rights and privileges as other people—neither less nor more. Less they will not have; more they do not seek. Anything that is permissible according to law, and that does not infringe upon the rights of their neighbors, they are at full liberty to do; and their doing it, or not doing it, rests altogether with their own good will and pleasure. So, if they did want to form a distinct political organization, and try to impress their own views upon the legislation and policy of the State, no man dare say them nay without violating the most dearly-prized principle of republican government. The truth of this must be granted by every intelligent man. But, in order to relieve our contemporary of its fears, we shall declare that we never suggested or intended to approve the formation of a distinctly Catholic political party. It is very far, indeed, from being our wish that Catholics should stand apart from the rest of their fellow-citizen and make a faction of themselves. In matters political they have not, and cannot have, any interests but those they hold in common with every loyal and law-abiding American. Their prosperity and their liberty must rise or fall with the progress and power of the United States.

The columns of THE MONITOR, long before this date, will prove that we would oppose with all our energy any attempt to erect the Catholic body into a separate party. It is no desire of ours to make articles of religious faith a test of fitness or unfitness for place, office or emolument in this country. It is Protestants, or perhaps we had better say, men who call themselves Protestants, who do that. There is not a State in the Union in which cannot be found secret and unhallowed societies, imitators of, or off-shoots from an anti-Republican and un-American organization founded abroad, bitterly hostile to Catholicity, and pledged to prevent all Catholics from holding office or attaining political distinction in this country. Did the Record-Union ever hear of similar societies being established by Catholics in any place in America for elsewhere? Where is the Catholic society whose members are bound by oath not to vote for a Protestant, not to trade with a Protestant, or not to assist a Protestant in trouble? There is no such thing in existence, and we most devoutly hope there never will be.

If Catholics at any time manifest their religious feelings at the polls or in meetings, it is because they are compelled to do so in self-defense. It is because they have to defeat the bigotry and resist the aggressions of slimy and treacherous secret societies, endeavoring to disfranchise them in the hand of their choice and love. There have been convents wrecked, and churches burned, and priests maltreated by Protestants, in this free country, within the memory of living men. Is there any instance known of Catholics having thus wronged or abused their fellow-citizens who differed from them in faith? There is not; and, please God, there never will be. Catholics have no selfish ends to serve; they do not want, in any way whatever, to intrude upon the rights of their neighbors; they only seek to join hands with all true citizens in upholding the honor and advancing the prosperity of this great nation. But it is useless to deny that they have enemies here; that they have sectarian prejudices to contend against, party animosity to disarm, and even in many cases national dislike to overcome. To accomplish these things properly and prudently, harmony of feeling and unity of action are absolutely indispensable. To put the ambition of THE MONITOR to see Catholics throughout the United States so bonded together that it will not be wise for any society, or any politician, or any newspaper, to make hostility towards them, as American citizens, a specialty or feature of policy.

We could even appeal to the article of the Record-Union itself in proof of the necessity of this unanimity. It evinces either a misunderstanding or distrust of Catholics. Evidently our contemporary is under the impression that there must be something morally wrong in Catholics organizing at all, or else that if they do organize they cherish "sinister and dangerous schemes." Is there any reason in the world for believing that American Catholics are not as loyally republican, as patriotically American, as honorable and enterprising business men, as the members of any other church denomination? We do not think that even our contemporary will allege there is. Then why this unworthy fear of, or sectarian animosity against, Catholic organization for lawful and praiseworthy objects? When Catholics do, or attempt to do, anything against the honor and dignity of this country, or against the peace and mutual good will of citizens, it will be quite time enough to sound a note of alarm.

Commendable Legislation.

We are not to be reckoned among those journalists who imagine that all the legislation effected in Sacramento is injurious, to the interests of one portion or another of the community, and that all the legislators are actuated by selfish or corrupt motives. It is easy enough to write in this carping spirit, and there are men weak-minded enough to take it for proof of vigilance and independence. But careful and conscientious investigation will show that though a few of the Assemblymen and Senators may not be possessed of a very high idea of their duties and responsibilities, the majority of them are men sincerely desirous of advancing the prosperity of the community. And they have already done good work. Coffey's Gas Bill is a measure that recommends itself to the approval of every intelligent citizen. It is not oppressive to the Company, and it is decidedly beneficial to the people. Swift's Bill, guarding the purity of elections and preventing abuses, is an enactment that, we hope, will raise the moral tone of all future elections and take away a great moral reproach from politics. McCoppin's Police Bill, and his Bill abolishing the teaching of languages in the Public Schools will effect most desirable reforms that have been long sought in vain. All these are calculated to produce improvement in our city affairs and not an honest word of opposition can be raised against them. They are creditable in the highest degree to the gentlemen who introduced them and made them law. When persons criticise too sharply the proceedings of the Legislature in Sacramento, it would be well to examine what foundation there may be for such criticism. We shall not either praise or blame indiscriminately, but give our opinions impartially on each measure of general interest.

The One-Twelfth Payment Bill.

Senator McCoppin introduced a bill, which has now become a law, restricting the appropriation by the Board of Supervisors for municipal expenditures to one-twelfth for each month of the total revenue for each distinctive fund. Under the operation of this law, a round number of creditors will be deprived of the money justly due them for supplies actually and honestly furnished, and, the worst part of it is, the claims thus included can never be paid, except by an express Act of the State Legislature for that special purpose. In other words, the law so acts that if in any particular department the fund is exhausted for the month, no further claims upon the fund so exhausted can ever be paid, except by special legislation. The Board of Supervisors is left powerless in the matter. Should they pass a claim to payment in excess of the one-twelfth prescribed by the McCoppin Act, themselves or their bondsmen become responsible. There is no alternative, no recourse whatever. It is, on the one side, strict obedience to the arbitrary letter of the law, or repudiation. Under the circumstances, great hardship is already and more will be done to innocent parties. Legislation is now essential, either for a supplementary Act to cover claims due and repudiated by the terms of the Act in force, or an Act to delay the operation of the law until the beginning of the ensuing fiscal year, July 1, 1878. It is hoped that the Legislature will timely provide the all-important remedy.

"Ultramontanism," "Liberalism," Etc. Etc.

In answer to "Enquirer," who wishes us to tell him what is an "Ultramontane," what a "Liberal," and what parties, if any, exist within the bosom of the Catholic Church, we will now only say that we shall take his communication into consideration and will give him all the information he seeks next week. In the meantime we would warn him that all the telegrams coming from Rome and referring to Catholic affairs are totally unreliable, being the compilations of men bitterly antagonistic to the Church. We do not blame the American journals for publishing them because no others are to be got, and American journalists are not as a rule well posted enough in Catholic doctrines or practices to be able to detect errors or misrepresentations. But we think the Catholic newspapers throughout the United States should join in an effort to procure truthful and trustworthy dispatches. A great deal of misunderstanding would be thus removed and prejudices that exist in the minds of even well-meaning Americans would be obliterated—a consummation most devoutly to be wished. We should be very willing to join in such an effort, and we hope to see one made before long.

No Official Intelligence.

The Most Rev. Archbishop has not yet received any official document from our new Pope Leo XIII. Immediately on the arrival of such, his Grace will order the customary services of rejoicing in the various Churches, Te Deum, etc.

The Emmett Celebration.

The celebration of the Centennial anniversary of the birth of the illustrious patriot, Robert Emmett, was carried out in San Francisco in a manner most creditable to the Irish residents of the city. It is something consoling to know that a Catholic priest and a Methodist minister were at the same time engaged in eulogizing the dead patriot, and in defending the cause for which he gave up his life. Here we have, indeed, an agreeable illustration of the progress of unity and nationality in the old country. It is only natural that a Catholic priest should uphold the cause of freedom because from the beginning of the Irish struggle against foreign domination the faithful pastors took sides with their people. But, since the defeat of the United Irishmen, and the passage of the hated Act of union with England, it has been generally accepted that Protestants, especially clergymen, had forgotten or abandoned their nationality. The few noble-hearted men, like Thomas Davis, John Mitchell, John Martin, Smith O'Brien, Rev. McNelson, Isaac Varian, Nelson Underwood, who rose superior to class prejudices and cast their lot with the national party, were almost ostracised by their own co-religionists. In short the British government succeeded perfectly satisfied that in the Protestant population, England had a vigilant, powerful and loyal garrison in Ireland. But great changes have taken place of late. The spirit which animated the Rev. Mr. W. Pepper is abroad among his people and is winning them over to the national cause. Their days of usefulness as a garrison are passing away and will never return. We may say the prospects of national independence never looked more bright than now. The following quotation from the Irish-American, of New York, shows how well understood is the new aspect of affairs:—"Verily, "a soul has gone into Erin" and it will give her a new life, full of strength, and hope and self-reliance:

"Irishmen, Faith and Fatherland are blending together once more. To the bright galaxy of patriotic Irish prelates and priests, we have to add the name of Dr. Croke, the Archbishop of Cashel. Dr. Croke has taken his stand beside our glorious John McHale, Archbishop Lynch, of Toronto, Patrick Lavelle, and Thos. J. Burke, in the ranks of Irish nationality. Even in Dublin a marked change has taken place. When the dead patriot here McCarthy was lowered into his grave the priest gave there to do him honor. This would not be the case some years ago. Brothers, a change is coming. It is here now. The priests will be with the people when the time comes. So away with all foolish bickering with them. They were not against nationality, only against foolish and vain attempts made by incompetent men. As we will have no more incompetents, the priests will be with us. They were right in opposing any abortive revolutionary attempts which had no probability or possibility of success. The Protestant clergmen of Ireland are also coming into line, as witness the address of Rev. Percy Myles, in London, and the patriotism of Rev. Isaac Nelson, of Belfast. Ireland will be a unit at the proper time. Protestant and Catholic, priest and parson will urge on the glorious work.

Philhistorian Debating Society of St. Ignatius College.

We attended the literary entertainment given by this Society on last Monday evening. The College Hall, where it took place, was well crowded, and a highly appreciative audience manifested great interest in the proceedings. The principle feature of the entertainment consisted of a debate on the question: "Has every man and child a right to vote?" and the arguments advanced by the young debaters were very ably and forcibly put. Where all were so excellent, it may be invidious to single out any individual, but the natural, self-possessed and eloquent delivery of Master Phelan elicited general commendation. The music furnished by the College orchestra was of a very high order of excellence.

It is well that the Catholic community should encourage, by their presence at such exhibitions, not only the pupils but also the members of those religious communities who are working so laboriously for the well being of the entire Church and State of California. It is a great source of pride and pleasure to Catholics to look around them and see what has been done in a young city like San Francisco by members of their faith. These three splendid institutions, St. Ignatius College, St. Mary's and the Sacred Heart, educating about 2,000 of our Catholic youth, give bright and cheery prospects for the future.

St. Joseph's Academy, Oakland.

We called in last week to make a visit to this institution, conducted by the Christian Brothers. We were quite surprised and much pleased to find there such a very large number of bright, intelligent boys. We took a part in some examinations just going on, which were not intended to be public, but merely for the purpose of ascertaining the most deserving pupils entitled to promotion. Although taken completely by surprise, yet we must admit, with all candor, that they did well. The examinations were in history, geometry, levelling and surveying, together with christian doctrine. The answering was most excellent. We could not but wonder how we have not yet a sufficiency of such schools.

CORRESPONDENCE.

[We wish it to be understood that we do not, necessarily, endorse either the opinions or statements of our correspondents. To our readers we commit the judgment concerning them.]

"Our Strength."

EDS. MONITOR: Your article on "Our Strength" in your last issue is a step in the right direction. Very few indeed have any idea of our number. If, as you clearly show, we have 120,000 in good standing, it is not too much to say that we are fully half the population of this great city, counting the unfortunates that don't practice. Were this fact fully known, and a little more time to organize, it is certain we would stand quite differently in the estimation of our friends. Look at the Germans, whose wish bears no comparison in number to the Catholic element. Besides, a good part of the German element is Catholic.

How careful the patriotic public men of the day are to show their respect for their interests as Germans. And why? Simply because those good people are not ashamed to be Germans as of of German extraction They feel it does not make them anything worse as citizens, and they demand, what they suppose they have a right to claim as citizens.

I am not an advocate of distinct nationalities in our great commonwealth, but I am an advocate for fair play, equal rights, the conscientious administration of our revenues for the benefit of the whole people. This is the way of true progress.

Let me assure you, Mr. Editor, if you keep on as you have now begun to walk, you will be sustained by an enlightened public. R.

Rev. George W. Pepper's Lecture

EDITOR MONITOR:—Dear Sir—The vast multitude that thronged the Metropolitan Temple on Tuesday night enjoyed a rare treat in the patriotic eloquence of the distinguished orator, Rev. Dr. Pepper. I think there were few present who did not resolve to hear him again when the occasion presents.

Mr. Pepper actually delivered two lectures on Tuesday—two bound in one; one on the Irish people, the other on Emmett. Though there was little new or original, either in the plan or treatment of the former subject, yet his earnestness and smooth oratorical flow caused every patriotic sentiment to be applauded to the echo. Dr. Pepper's style of delivery has too much of the peculiar tone and intonation of the Irish orator to pass unnoticed. Perhaps, to the majority of his listeners, words and even sentences are repeated in a volume of sound. He speaks too much to the front rows and the reporters, which, perhaps, accounts for many things in the press report of his speech that was not heard by the audience. His good-natured jokes at the expense of the Scotch without the Irish. He refers to Jackson as Scotch-Irish, but did not tell us that a great part of the tories who fought at Hanging Rock, where young Andrew commenced his glorious career, were Scotch Irish Tories, and that the famous Francis Morgan as Scotch-Irish, but there was an officer named Morgan who led the tories of South Carolina, and he and all his followers were Scotch, without the Irish. It is well known that the Scotch of one hundred years ago loved George III. as ardently as those of to-day love Victoria. Is this a proof of their liberty and independence? Why then does the learned gentleman indulge in such vague allusions to history!

Sins of omission are often as grievous as those of commission. Mr. Pepper knows that Ireland has not regained a single measure of her lost rights that has not been opposed by Scotland. Scotland has produced many liberal-minded men; but when the greatest of them, Lord Macaulay, showed his liberality towards the oppressed Irish, his liberty and independence loving constituents demanded his resignation, which he indignantly refused to tender.

I might say, in conclusion, that the impression which the lecture, as spoken, tends to make is, that the Irish are capable of great things if led by Protestants.

AN IRISH PROTESTANT.

Publications Received.

The American Quarterly Review, Vol. III., No. 9, Philadelphia: Hardy & Mahony, publishers, 505 Chestnut street. We have no hesitation in declaring that this number is a considerable improvement upon its immediate predecessor. The contents are more like what we should expect from a first-class Catholic Review. The first article, "How Exclusive Ownership in Property First Existed," deals with a subject much written about, yet very little understood by a certain class of American journalists. Those self-sufficient gentlemen will find not a few of their mistakes exposed here. Next comes "Actual Situation of the Church in Countries outside of European Sway," which gives a very fair idea of the work of the Catholic Church as it now goes on, amid toil, difficulty and danger, in India, China, Africa and South America. "The Metaphysics of Insanity, a Psychological Research" followed. It is an extremely able essay upon a mysterious and recondite topic. Next we have "The Aryan Language and Literature," a philological study, interesting to those who love the science of language. Then we get what is more suitable to the taste of the general reader—"The Survival of Ireland." This, which purports to deal with three important queries viz:—"Was there any civilization in the land prior to the English Invasion? Did the English invasion totally create and constitutionally recognize the right of the Irish people to a native parliament? Do undisputed facts justify the assertion that English concessions of acknowledged rights to the Irish, have been generally made under the influence of fear?" is a fine contribution to critical history. The answers are all in the affirmative, as, indeed, truth and justice demand. The latter part of the article is somewhat condensed compared with the beginning, as if the writer thought he was trespassing on space. But it is well condensed and put in intense. "The Bible in American History" discusses the sacred volume as a figure in the annals of this country, and the effects it has had upon the religious feelings of the people. The Mercersburg Movement criticises the singular development in Presbyterianism, traceable to the writings and teachings of Dr. John W. Nevin. It illustrates how weak are the efforts of Protestantism in any direction to create itself from inherent vital energies and contradictions and set up as the true Church of God. The number closes with the usual glossary of books.

Ireland As She Is, As She Has Been, and As She Ought To Be, by James J. Clancy. New York: Thomas Kelly, publisher. This book has been lying on our desk, awaiting notice, for a considerable time, because we were desirous of instituting comparisons between it and "New Ireland" by Mr. A. M. Sullivan. There was sufficient parallelism, for the past twenty-five years has opened a new and extensive establishment at 423 Kearny street. Along with keeping a large stock of his own manufacture on hand, he has made arrangements with some of the largest dealers in Europe and in the Eastern States, by whom he intends to have hats made expressly for his special order and in the latest styles.

SLAVEN'S drug store at the corner of Market, Powell and Eddy streets, does not appear to have been affected with the dull times. On the contrary, that drug store has been well patronized. Excersing great care in filling up prescriptions, and affability to customers, of course, had something to do with it.

We gratefully acknowledge our obligations to the proprietors of the Morning Call for their kindness in permitting us to use their type for the purpose of issuing the Supplement to The Monitor containing the account of the Celebration of the Emmett Centennial.

In order to save ourselves and our subscribers a great deal of unnecessary trouble, we wish to say that it is be our invariable rule to communicate with the office with respect to the advertisements of plate, jewelry, pictures, etc., at reduced prices, which appear in our columns. Those advertisements merely come to us in the way of business. We have no connection whatever with them, and know nothing about them, more than any one reading the advertisements can learn for himself. We do not guarantee their reliability in any shape or form. There seems to be no alternative in the matter, as we find that THE MONITOR is interested in these matters, and we are necessarily troubled with letters of inquiry. The idea is entirely erroneous, and we have nothing to do with such ventures.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS AND WRITERS OF COMMUNICATIONS.—As we have changed somewhat the general make-up of the THE MONITOR, in order to render it more of a Newspaper; and as one-half the paper goes to press on Mondays, the other half on Thursdays, so as to have the very latest intelligence, it will be henceforward impossible to insert long communications unless they are sent in the week before.

REV. FATHER ROONEY, O. P., will deliver a lecture at St. Dominick's Church, on Sunday evening, March 17th, the Festival of St. Patrick. His subject will be "Religion and Patriotism." We are sure St. Dominick's will be full to overflowing on the occasion.

☞ Our old and respected friend, Mr. Daniel Gloster, has kindly consented to canvass for subscribers and collect the money due THE MONITOR in the counties of Sierra, Plumas, Lassen and Modoc. We hope he will receive a kind reception from our friends in those counties.

GOOD THOUGHTS.—To make anything very terrible, obscurity seems, in general, to be necessary. When we know the full extent of any danger, when we can ascertain our eyes to it, a great deal of the apprehension vanishes.—BURKE.

THE condition and characteristics of a vulgar person are that he never looks for either help or harm from himself, but truly opposed by Scotland. Scotland has produced many liberal-minded men; but when the greatest of them, Lord Macaulay,

THE MONITOR.

GENERAL CATHOLIC INTELLIGENCE.

WEEKLY CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 16.

March.
Sunday—First Sunday of Lent, Semi-double White Vestments.
Monday—St. John of God, (from the 5th last.) Double, White Vestments.
Tuesday—St. Gregory I., Pope, Confessor (from the 12th last.) Semi-Double Red Vestments.
Wednesday—Ember Day. The Forty Martyrs (from the 19th last.) Semi-Double Red Vestments.
Thursday—Feria, as in First Week of Lent, Violet Vestments.
Friday—Ember Day. The Lance and Nails of our Lord's Passion. Greater Double Red Vestments.
Saturday—Ember Day, St. Zacharis, Pope and Confessor (from yesterday). Double, White Vestments.

REGULATIONS FOR LENT, IN 1878.

For the Diocese of San Francisco.

1. All the week days of Lent, from Ash-Wednesday, 6th March, till Easter Sunday, are fast days of precept, on one meal, with allowance of flesh meat at the principal.
2. The precept of fasting implies also that of abstinence from the use of flesh meat. But, by dispensation, the use of flesh meat is allowed in this Diocese during Lent, except on the following days, to wit, Wednesdays, and Fridays, the Embers, and the Thursday and Saturday of Holy Week, on which days the use of flesh meat is forbidden, except by dispensation from the respective Pastors, which they may grant whenever they judge it proper to use flesh meat, except by dispensation from the respective Pastors, which they may grant whenever they judge it proper to use flesh meat, except in dispensations to be given to the poor, or to those who have to take the tea or coffee. But persons not fasting are not subject to the above regulations.
3. Some prayers, at option, are recommended during Lent, particularly on those days in which flesh meat is used.
4. Lent being a penitential time, the faithful are requested to lay, before the Tribunal of the Penitentiary, the spiritual wants of the Diocese, and to comply with their Easter duty, which is to be fulfilled from the first Sunday of Lent, by approaching the Sacraments of Penance and Eucharist, in the Parish Churches of their respective districts, or, if they be not in their own parishes, at the Cathedral, or other Churches, or Chapels, where there are Confessors, approved of by the Ordinary, or his Vicar-General, for the purpose of attending, before all other duties, to the salvation of their souls, and they will exhort them to the faithful discharge of their Christian duties, the only one that can secure for them the eternal happiness of heaven. For this purpose they will hold religious exercises in their churches several times a week, according to their prudence may deem expedient.

✝ JOSEPH SADOC ALEMANY,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, February 16, 1878.

LEO XIII.

Long live the Pope! The See of Peter lived again. For, in the language of the Roman Liturgy, "Peter spoke by the lips of popes and emperors may, and do die, and nations perish with them, but the kingdom founded by Christ, on Peter, will only rise with the extinction of the human race. In the chapters devoted to "Ireland As She Is," Mr. Clancy deals with Law and Order, the Land, Tenants-at-Will, the Constitution and the Empire, Industrial Stagnation, Depopulation, Ireland's Ills, Religious Inequality, Education, Taxation, Political and Social Statement. In "Ireland As She Has Been," he briefly, yet graphically sketches her history from the earliest times to the present day, laying stress, of course, upon the infamies of British rule. In "Ireland As She Ought To Be," he merely talks of hints and duties; and he gives an appendix on Ireland and the United States. Mr. Clancy is no tame and cold-blooded historian; but writes strongly because he feels strongly. Yet he supports his statements with facts and figures which will stand rigid scrutiny. If we wanted to give a friend, who is a Protestant, a book in order to win his sympathy and, if possible, to lead him to a Catholic view, we would far sooner give him this volume than "New Ireland." It is a better book and, with the solecism of a page wherein the author seems to endorse the "Skirmishing" idea and preach the doctrine of assassination, much more worthy a man laying claim to the proud title of an Irish patriot.

Poems by Samuel R. Sumner and Charles L. Sumner. New York: The Authors Publishing Company. For sale at Roman's and Chonynski's. It is not easy to determine what to say about this volume. Most of the poems are above the average in merit. They show a facility in versification, and not unfrequently a happiness of expression deserving of commendation. But by far the larger number of these having any pretensions were written for specific occasions, we might almost say written to order, so they show the dryness and hardness peculiar to such pieces except where they are the product of genius of a very high order. If the Misses Sumner are anxious for a specified day and date, and more with spontaneity, they would have produced even a more meritorious volume.

St. Joseph's Manual. Boston: Thomas H. Noonan & Co. On sale at J. B. O'Connor's, Sixth street, corner of Mission. This neatly get up prayer-book contains a selection of prayers for public and private devotion, with epistles and gospels for Sundays and holydays, complete in one thick volume. It appears with the imprimatur of the Archbishop of Baltimore. The desire of increasing devotion to St. Joseph is clearly manifested in the spirit of the compilation; and this will be generally accepted as high recommendation by the many religious societies which are placed under the holy protection of him who was the foster father and loving protector of the Redeemer.

Number of Catholics in San Francisco

Pursuing the investigation to which we directed attention in our last issue, as to the number of Catholics in this city, we find that not only from the mortuary records, but also from those of marriages and baptisms and their comparative proportion to the population, it is quite certain that the number of Catholics in this city cannot be estimated at less than 150,000, which leaves to the non-Catholic portion 126,265 white persons and 13,735 Chinese and colored races. We must acknowledge we did not think the number of Catholics was so large, but as the records are undoubtedly correct, the data on which we base our calculations are conclusive.

The Irish residents of Santa Cruz, and their friends generally, will be glad to see the spirited lecture of our correspondent. However, he will accept our thanks for his courtesy and thoughtfulness.

A HANKERER, who has been engaged in the hat manufacturing business in this city for the past twenty-five years has opened a new and extensive establishment at 423 Kearny street. Along with keeping a large stock of his own manufacture on hand, he has made arrangements with some of the largest dealers in Europe and in the Eastern States, by whom he intends to have hats made expressly for his special order and in the latest styles.

SLAVEN'S drug store at the corner of Market, Powell and Eddy streets, does not appear to have been affected with the dull times. On the contrary, that drug store has been well patronized. Excersing great care in filling up prescriptions, and affability to customers, of course, had something to do with it.

☞ We gratefully acknowledge our obligations to the proprietors of the Morning Call for their kindness in permitting us to use their type for the purpose of issuing the Supplement to The Monitor containing the account of the Celebration of the Emmett Centennial.

In order to save ourselves and our subscribers a great deal of unnecessary trouble, we wish to say that it is be our invariable rule to communicate with the office with respect to the advertisements of plate, jewelry, pictures, etc., at reduced prices, which appear in our columns. Those advertisements merely come to us in the way of business. We have no connection whatever with them, and know nothing about them, more than any one reading the advertisements can learn for himself. We do not guarantee their reliability in any shape or form. There seems to be no alternative in the matter, as we find that THE MONITOR is interested in these matters, and we are necessarily troubled with letters of inquiry. The idea is entirely erroneous, and we have nothing to do with such ventures.

NOTICE TO CORRESPONDENTS AND WRITERS OF COMMUNICATIONS.—As we have changed somewhat the general make-up of the THE MONITOR, in order to render it more of a Newspaper; and as one-half the paper goes to press on Mondays, the other half on Thursdays, so as to have the very latest intelligence, it will be henceforward impossible to insert long communications unless they are sent in the week before.

REV. FATHER ROONEY, O. P., will deliver a lecture at St. Dominick's Church, on Sunday evening, March 17th, the Festival of St. Patrick. His subject will be "Religion and Patriotism." We are sure St. Dominick's will be full to overflowing on the occasion.

☞ Our old and respected friend, Mr. Daniel Gloster, has kindly consented to canvass for subscribers and collect the money due THE MONITOR in the counties of Sierra, Plumas, Lassen and Modoc. We hope he will receive a kind reception from our friends in those counties.

GOOD THOUGHTS.—To make anything very terrible, obscurity seems, in general, to be necessary. When we know the full extent of any danger, when we can ascertain our eyes to it, a great deal of the apprehension vanishes.—BURKE.

THE condition and characteristics of a vulgar person are that he never looks for either help or harm from himself, but truly

...ORS TO POPE LEO XIII.

...nd Te Deums Sung for him in the Catholic Churches.

...e McGlynn's Glowing Tribute to the ...e Supreme Pontiff—Qualification Jus...ing the Latest Choice of the Cardi...

...many of the Catholic churches in New York Te Deums were sung in honor of Pope XIII. In the church of the Transfiguration a circular from Vicar General Quinn read, announcing the arrival of Cardinal McCloskey in Rome, and requesting the prayers of the congregation in his behalf.

Father McGlynn, in St. Stephen's, said that never before had the election of a Pope been preceded by such continued prayer by people scattered over the whole earth. They had prayed that God would grant them a great and holy father, and their confidence had not been misplaced. The wonderfully speedy and peaceful election was a proof that these prayers were heard and answered. Men with eager gaze and keen minds had scrutinized the lives, the habits, the minds, and the virtues of all the Cardinals whose names had not suggested the possibility of their election to the Papal chair. Among all of these holy men Cardinal Pecci had seemed to them particularly marked out by his force and energy, by his sanctity, and by his dignity of manners. Those few of us who had the good fortune to see him found in him all the sweetness, affability integrity, and rectitude of Pius IX., to which was added an untiring energy, with a disposition to attack error by the gentlest and easiest means, by the means that would least shock and least provoke angry antagonism. "It was particularly pleasant," Father McGlynn said, "that in the midst of their grief for Pius IX. the people should find themselves compelled to sing such high praise of his successor. It would appear that Leo XIII. was of such high worth that those Cardinals who knew him most at all had only to look upon him, and converse with him, to become convinced that he was the man singled out of all to fill this holiest and most conspicuous of offices among the children of men. A happy omen which boded the success of the newly-elected Pope of the name Leo. The word indicated strength and dignity. It was a name which had been in the Papal Leos was designated in the Scripture as the lion of Judah. Here Father McGlynn recounted the actions of several of the Leos, beginning with Leo X., a man so great that his age was known as the age of Leo, and closing with St. Leo, called the Great, who had fought the battles of the incarnation of the Son of God. He said that the commencing arms of Rome had prepared the way for the spread of Christianity over the world, and that the commencing arms of commerce were now preparing a more glorious sphere and a brighter triumph for Christianity than had ever been known before.

After the close of a solemn High Mass for the repose of the soul of Pius IX., Anabry Te Deum was sung in thanksgiving for the election of Leo XIII. This was followed by the Hymn of the Holy Spirit. Dr. S. Ann Pierce played as the closing voluntary the overture to "The Meistersinger."

THE WILL OF PIUS IX.

[Reuter's Telegrams.]

ROME.—The late Pope has left two wills. In the first, which is drawn upon his quality as Prince, he leaves the greater part of his 3,500,000 lf. to his successor for the expenses of the Holy See, and an annual allowance of 100,000 lf. to the former Pontifical administration. "In the other second testator, speaking as a private person, leaves his property, viz., 500,000 lf., to be distributed among the poor of Rome.

End of the "Millionaire Jesuit."

FATHER DENNY, S. J., of Loyola College, Baltimore, having returned to town, has given a reporter the following facts, which modify in some degree the statement already published. First, as has already been stated, the struck down by the fever, Denny, dated January 29, 1875, treat all her children alike. Second, in a letter to his mother, dated March 29, 1875, Father Denny, before he entered the Society of Jesus, relinquished his inheritance in favor of his mother's estate, and requested it to be given to two unfortunate sisters. This letter was found enclosed in the same envelope with the will. Third, Mrs Denny granted this request, and changed her will accordingly, adding, however, that if her son ever should be required his share would have been left to himself in fee simple. Fourth, Mrs. Denny, nevertheless, leaves the bulk of her property to her son, Father Denny gave these facts very frankly, but with some reluctance. He, also, expressed his regret that matters of an entirely private and personal nature should have been brought into public notice. He thought this was duty, however, to the Church and College with which he is connected, to make the above statement, whichevinda the story of a "Millionaire Priest."

The above announcement will have the effect of inducing Protestants to make subscriptions to build churches and endow colleges. Father Denny did what few would have done under the circumstances, surrender his right to use and disposed of a share amounting to at least one million of dollars.—Boston Pilot.

Religious Services on Board the Receiving Ship.

Congressman Muller, of New York city, has a resolution adopted to grant to the Navy, on January 26, in regard to the recent order requiring that all the boys on the receiving ship shall be compelled to attend the ship. He requested, on behalf of his Catholic constituents, that the Catholic boys be allowed to go to or adhere, in charge of the proper officer, to a Catholic church. The Secretary seemed very impressed with the idea, and said he did not want to compel any one to attend divine worship against the conscientious convictions. He asked Mr. Muller to make some suggestions in the matter to facilitate the arrangement, so that he could accomplish the desired object without during the discipline of the service. Mr. Muller did so, and Catholic boys can now attend the services of their Church.—Sunday Democrat.

Reply to Father Curci.

The Roman correspondent of the Boston Pilot says that a Father of the Society to which Father Curci belonged has undertaken the examination of the latter's book, on the "Breach Between the Church and Italy." The work consists of ninety-two pages, and has sixteen chapters. The first seven chapters are given to the examination of the doctrine exposed by Curci in his work. The other nine chapters, which are probably the more generally interesting, and will be more widely read, take into consideration the "personal fact," which urged Curci to write his book, and which he dwelt upon at such length in his work. Much of the history of what took place between Curci and the General of the Jesuits is exposed here, and it is seen that if the former did not wilfully write what was not true, he at least concealed a great portion of the truth. Letters of most affectionate character were written by the General to Father Curci to induce him to withdraw from the career of thought and teaching on which he was entering. These letters are, for the most part, reproduced in this work, and are filled with Christian kindness. The Pope, to which it will refer at greater length in a future letter, possesses a special interest.

☞ The clergy of Cloyne have done an act of munificence which deserves prominent notice. In every Irish Catholic journal. They have agreed to give within five years not less than £8,000 to the fund for building the Queenstown Cathedral, and they have already sent in one-fifth of that sum. Considering that their previous contributions amounted to about £6,000, it will be admitted that the sum they have imposed upon themselves is no light one. But then the priests of Cloyne act in everything in a manner worthy of the priests and pastors of the ancient and illustrious see of St. Colman. We may add here that the Most Rev. Dr. Croke, now Archbishop of Cashel, but once of Cloyne diocese, has, with his usual spirit, sent to the building fund a sum of £100.

Dedication of St. Joseph's Cathedral, Hartford, Conn.

To-day, the fifth Sunday after the Epiphany, and also the Festival of the Sacred Heart V., the basement of St. Joseph's Cathedral, this city, was solemnly dedicated by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Gallagher. A congregation of at least 2,500 persons filled the spacious and beautiful temple. Pontifical Mass was celebrated by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Wadhams, of Ogdensburg, N. Y., and the Rt. Rev. Bishop De Goesbriand, of Burlington, Vt., preached the sermon; Bishop O'Reilly, of Springfield, Mass., was also present. Thirty-two priests were present, including the Rev. Father James Fitton, of East Boston, who was settled here in Hartford fifty years ago.

THE NEW CATHEDRAL OF CLOYNE.—The Bishop of Cloyne, in addressing the parishioners on Sunday February 3, in the Queenstown parish church, reviewed the progress of the new edifice which is in course of erection. "He stated that £75,000 had been spent on the new Queenstown building, which was commenced ten years ago, and that it would require £10,000 more before the roof was put in, and the gables and turrets completed. The walls are now nearly finished and ready for the roof, and his Lordship appealed to the people to contribute generously now, so as to have the roof and gables completed before the end of June. A sum of £6,541 had been contributed by the Queenstown people, and the remainder of the outlay had been subscribed outside. A meeting will be held on next Sunday, for the purpose of raising money in aid of the work. Though £75,000 had been expended up to the present, it must be remembered that a considerable portion of that sum was spent in the foundations and in the erection of the public road, which, owing to the uneven character of the ground, had to be supported by a retaining wall, built on arches of solid masonry.—Freeman.

MOTHER DE SALES.—Mother De Sales, or Catherine McDevitt, for many years a Sister of Mercy of St. Catherine's Convent, East Houston street New York, died at the residence of her brother, after a brief illness, from pneumonia. Deceased was the daughter of the late James McDevitt, of East Broadway, N. Y., and died in her seventy-second year, which, with her family, were relatives members of St. James' Church, James street. There are two sisters of deceased also members of the Order in which she ended a truly devoted life. A Requiem Mass was offered up in the chapel attached to the convent, at which the remains were conveyed to Calvary Cemetery the funeral cortege. She was buried in the plot of the Order. The Rev. Father Hegan, chaplain of the convent, read the funeral service at the grave, upon which had been placed a few elegant floral emblems.

OBITUARY.—Rt. Rev. James Whelan, O. P., died suddenly, at Zanesville, Ohio, on Feb. 16th, 1878. The deceased was a victim of paralysis. At the time of his death Bishop Whelan was 55 years old. He was a native of New York, where, it is said, his mother still resides. St. Joseph's, Somerset, was the scene of his labors. He entered his studies and where he was ordained a Dominican priest in 1850. His unusual talents and executive abilities recommended him so strongly that in 1855 he was elected Provincial of the Dominican Order in the United States. In 1856 he was consecrated Bishop of Nashville, where he remained until 1864, when he resigned his See and returned to Ohio, to spend his days in quiet, and in the pursuit of literary and scientific studies, of which he was passionately fond.

MARRIED.

MARTIN—McPEERY.—On the 4th inst., February 27, by Rev. A. Cullen, James P. Martin to Annie C. McPeery, all of San Francisco.
O'NEIL—SULLIVAN.—In this city, February 26, by Rev. Father Larkin, D. O'Neil to Hannah E. Sullivan.
FITZSIMAN—BURKE.—In this city, February 28, by Rev. Father Larkin, Jas. E. Fitzsiman to Lizzie C. Burke.
COYNE—RYAN.—In thisvcity, March 5, by Rev. T. Caraher, Thos. O'Conner to Lizzie L. Ryan, both of San Francisco.
ARNOLD—HICKEY.—In this city, September 27, by Rev. Father Shinnick, Secret

Splendid Speech of Mr. A. M. Sullivan in the British Parliament.

The Solemn Warning of Ireland to the English Nation.

Mr. A. M. Sullivan, whose rising was hailed with enthusiastic cheers by the Irish members said:

Sir.—The house stands indebted to the honorable and gallant gentleman the member for Waterford. His motion has broken "the cold chain of silence" that hung over the Government benches, and has elicited from the honorable and learned gentleman who has just sat down (Mr. Plunket) a speech which, whatever its other characteristics, we have all admired for its varied play of humor, eloquence, and ability. He had no need to apologize to the House for the time he was occupying. This is the business, and this of all others is the subject with which the time of the House should most rightly be occupied. Parliament has been assembled three weeks earlier than usual, and within those three weeks there should be good time for discussing and considering the Irish question—for fully considered and discussed we are fondly determined it shall be. Mr. Speaker, that honest and heartfelt gentleman said of the men amidst whom I stand that they were "masquerading as Home Rulers." Masquerading! The phrase is not offensive, I suppose, or he would not have applied it as I may use it two, and say that the thing which is really intolerable is to see the grandson of the great Plunket masquerading on the floor of this House as an Imperialist.

MAKING OUR OWN CHILDREN OUR ENEMIES.

We are supposed to be concerned just now with the Turkish question. One of the cruel wrongs which the subject Christians under Modern yoke were made to feel was that oftentimes the children of Christian parents were seized and carried into the Turkish camp, trained up in Turkish ideas, embraced the faith and the banner of the conqueror, and appeared many a time, scimitar in hand, to wage war upon their kindred and their race. Even so has it been with such Ireland through many a sad chapter of our country's story. Sometimes by force, sometimes by guile, sometimes by one influence, sometimes by another, the British power has been able to lose away from us children who bore great names, and might have greatly served their country: and we have seen these converts, as to night, skilfully act in the force-front of the assault when their countrymen were to be cut down. Who is our accuser? The voice is the voice of an Shahman; the wit, the ability, the brilliant play of fancy and of genius, the rhetoric, the skill—all, all are Irish, but all are used against Ireland! Who, I repeat, is our accuser! If we stand here to-night, as we do, upon the floor of this House to maintain in the face of the empire and of Europe the protest of Ireland against the memorable crime that robbed her of her constitutional liberties, whose hearts are we fulfilling!—who pledged us to undying hate and eternal war against this crime? The honorable and learned gentleman had the temerity to use a phrase for ever possible in the history of his family when he spoke of men "swearing upon the altar." Who was that great Irishman, that distinguished constitutional lawyer, who declared that if the Irish Parliament were successfully overthrown he would bring his child—ah! why did he not say his grandchild!—and swear him upon the altar of his country to wage relentless war against that transgression! How little did he imagine in that hour that to night the representatives of Ireland should discover in the ranks of their imperial adversaries the heirs of his great name, and in no small degree of his genius, false to his principles and his teachings, false to his lineage and his fame. But, sir, I turn from the man to his arguments. He drew for us a picture of Ireland. Many years ago O'Connell was delineating a sheep-stealer. "In his speech to the jury he drew a glowing picture of the prisoner at the bar as a model husband and father (he was not married at all), a dutiful son, an exemplary citizen, virtuous, pious, industrious, inoffensive. At this point the prisoner in the dock could stand it no longer, and he exclaimed to the astonished judge, 'I never knew my father that I bore so high a character.' Well, sir, we have heard to-night the defender of British rule in Ireland extolling the virtues and excellence of his client; and will may the prisoner at the bar in this case exclaim, "I never knew I was so beautiful, so virtuous, so meritorious as all that." Only believe the honorable and learned gentleman and there is not the slightest need of changing anything—the slightest possibility of improving anything—in Ireland. Everything there is already perfect in the matter of government, law and administration. There is not, if you believe him, a more fortunate spot on the face of the habitable globe. In the house of happiness, peace, prosperity, of beneficent rule and abounding loyalty. (Conservative cheers.) Honorable gentlemen opposite cheer. You evidently think so too. You know all about it.

WHO IS APPOINTED TO SPEAK FOR IRELAND.

You know Ireland better than we do. You are better entitled to speak for it than we, the Irish majority, are. Are you! But pray, by what right does your party hold those benches and rule the destinies of England by the right of a parliamentary majority! In virtue of a parliamentary majority you say you are entitled to speak to the world for England, while in virtue of a parliamentary minority you would claim to speak for Ireland. But, sir, the question before the House is much wider, and greater, and more serious, than the merits of the Irish "bills" which the government has promised. If it were a matter of a better or a worse grand jury law, or a better or a worse intermediate education bill, I for one should hesitate to concur in an interposition like the present. The question we raise is that for which it may be said Parliament has been especially convoked.

DANGER AT HAND.

We have been told in the royal speech of a possible danger near at hand, of precautions and preparations that may be necessary for the defence of the power and stability of the empire. Well, we have come forward to suggest the wisest precaution and the most potential preparation which the government could make. The matter is glazed over by avoiding phrases, but the danger that you all mean is war, a war in which England will have to fight for her very existence as a nation. If that war breaks out, if it be not averted, as I hope it may be, England will find herself in such desperate straits as she has not known for four hundred years. Your army, small but brave and fearless as ever, will behave with its traditional valor; wherever it may be sent, on whatever field it may fight, the army of this country will exhibit those splendid qualities that have justly given it a world-wide fame. I would say as much for it even were it not composed as largely as it is of my own brave countrymen. But there is not a military man sitting in this House who does not know and feel the truth of what I say—that a recent memorable war in Europe has demonstrated that courage and prestige no longer compensate as largely as they used to do sixty years ago against overwhelming odds; and that your army of a hundred thousand, or a hundred and fifty thousand men would be utterly powerless before the hosts that now stand arrayed and disciplined on the continent of Europe. Should this calamity befall, should this trouble for your existence arise, think you that it is upon inanimate sword and bayonet, and ship and gun, rather than upon stalwart arms and patriotic enthusiasm, your best reliance will be! Should that crisis come, right sure am I that amongst the English masses a patriotic fervor will answer to your call. Throughout England and throughout Scotland it will be so, but it will be so in Ireland! In the spirit of the oath which I swore at that table—nay, higher obligations still, by the duty I owe to conscience and to truth—I dare all misconception and outcry to deliver my sentiments on this most momentous and solemn occasion. I have stated that if this empire enters upon a struggle of such magnitude while Ireland is in the attitude which Hungary occupied towards Austria previous to Sadowa, the popular enthusiasm which you will receive in England and Scotland will not respond to you in Ireland (shouts of "Hear" interruption and cheers). I was prepared for your exclamations, and I do not complain, for the statement I have made is serious, and nay, ah! my unwelcome, but time will vindicate the truth of my words and the integrity of my motives.

PREVIOUS WARNING DISREGARDED.

Twenty or twenty-five years ago there stood upon the floor of this House a band of Irish members, struggling, as we struggle now, to persuade you to listen to Irish demands. Study for yourselves what was their fate; read the speeches of the leaders of that time. They were voted down, they were shouted down, they were laughed at, they were denounced or derided. You had in that day—as you always have—some gifted and eloquent Irishman in your service to get up and plead in your work against his countrymen—to contradict their testimony, to tell you, pleasant tidings which you hailed as gospel truths, while their honest warnings of danger were shrieked against as seditious incentives. John Francis Maguire and others ventured to say in this House, as I say now, that there was danger and dissatisfaction in Ireland. They were set upon as almost traitors. They were contradicted and confounded. This House, by overwhelming voices, declared their testimony untrue, and that Ireland was peaceable, contented and loyal to the core. Alas! a year or two barely passed when events threw a terrible light on all this. At that very moment my unfortunate countrymen were being sworn in by the thousand in a secret conspiracy for armed insurrection. Barely a few years passed away when the crowded dock, the convict ship, the penal gang, the triangle and the bloody lash—nay, the scaffold itself—furnished a fearful contradiction to the pleasant testimonies which you preferred to believe; a frightful corroboration to the warnings you denounced and disregarded! What happened then? Did the author of the recent Fenian amnesty which we have heard to-night, measures prayed for in vain in the hour of your tranquility, when concession would have grace and efficacy, were conceded amidst public disquietude and almost panic. Writing some six weeks ago to a friend in Ireland, I said that if Irish Parliament were suddenly overthrown he would bring his child—ah! why did he not say his grandchild!—and swear him upon the altar of his country to wage relentless war against that transgression! How little did he imagine in that hour that to-night the representatives of Ireland should discover in the ranks of their imperial adversaries the heirs of his great name, and in no small degree of his genius, false to his principles and his teachings, false to his lineage and his fame. But, sir, I turn from the man to his arguments. He drew for us a picture of Ireland. Many years ago O'Connell was delineating a sheep-stealer. "In his speech to the jury he drew a glowing picture of the prisoner at the bar as a model husband and father (he was not married at all), a dutiful son, an exemplary citizen, virtuous, pious, industrious, inoffensive. At this point the prisoner in the dock could stand it no longer, and he exclaimed to the astonished judge, 'I never knew my father that I bore so high a character.' Well, sir, we have heard to-night the defender of British rule in Ireland extolling the virtues and excellence of his client; and will may the prisoner at the bar in this case exclaim, "I never knew I was so beautiful, so virtuous, so meritorious as all that." Only believe the honorable and learned gentleman and there is not the slightest need of changing anything—the slightest possibility of improving anything—in Ireland. Everything there is already perfect in the matter of government, law and administration. There is not, if you believe him, a more fortunate spot on the face of the habitable globe. In the house of happiness, peace, prosperity, of beneficent rule and abounding loyalty. (Conservative cheers.) Honorable gentlemen opposite cheer. You evidently think so too. You know all about it.

WHO IS APPOINTED TO SPEAK FOR IRELAND.

You know Ireland better than we do. You are better entitled to speak for it than we, the Irish majority, are. Are you! But pray, by what right does your party hold those benches and rule the destinies of England by the right of a parliamentary majority! In virtue of a parliamentary majority you say you are entitled to speak to the world for England, while in virtue of a parliamentary minority you would claim to speak for Ireland. But, sir, the question before the House is much wider, and greater, and more serious, than the merits of the Irish "bills" which the government has promised. If it were a matter of a better or a worse grand jury law, or a better or a worse intermediate education bill, I for one should hesitate to concur in an interposition like the present. The question we raise is that for which it may be said Parliament has been especially convoked.

DANGER AT HAND.

We have been told in the royal speech of a possible danger near at hand, of precautions and preparations that may be necessary for the defence of the power and stability of the empire. Well, we have come forward to suggest the wisest precaution and the most potential preparation which the government could make. The matter is glazed over by avoiding phrases, but the danger that you all mean is war, a war in which England will have to fight for her very existence as a nation. If that war breaks out, if it be not averted, as I hope it may be, England will find herself in such desperate straits as she has not known for four hundred years. Your army, small but brave and fearless as ever, will behave with its traditional valor; wherever it may be sent, on whatever field it may fight, the army of this country will exhibit those splendid qualities that have justly given it a world-wide fame. I would say as much for it even were it not composed as largely as it is of my own brave countrymen. But it takes nothing from you that belongs to you. The pros of her friendship. You are now, in view of a terrible emergency, possibly at hand, searching Europe through for allies. Perhaps you might succeed in offer you one worth the best you could elsewhere find—the alliance, the hearty and cordial and enthusiastic support of Ireland. I own I have deep reason to wish this question settled, and to see a cordial feeling established between the two countries before dark clouds grow darker, and while yet the reconciliation can be wise and generous and efficacious. The peace, the happiness, the tranquility of Ireland are most dear to me, and if I do my so in an angry, country desolated and destroyed by being made perhaps a battlefield of theoming struggle. I do not assert the ghoulishpoint of some Continental despot making what we would call a aiversion in Ireland, waiting the blood and blighting the hopes of my country in a mere stroke of tactics to serve his own ends. I shudder when I think of such a possibility; and I appeal to you—yes, unchilled by the foregone conclusions of your unwise refusal, I nevertheless rise and record my appeal to you and the English nation to-night, to let us clasp hands in friendship on the only terms on which we can be either allies or friends. Be simply just. That you will do so yet, despite your customary rebuffs, I am as sanguine as I am of my own existence. It is the time which, with your customary unwisdom, you may select for such a step, this alone disquiets me. Austria tried your present policy towards Hungary, and changed it after Sadowa. I hope and pray you will wait for no such hour to accept the proffered hand and secure the loyal aid of the brave and gallant Irish nation.

On Making Use of Catholic Churches and Catholic Services to Serve as Political or as Party Demonstrations.

A recent issue of the London Weekly Register has offered its readers (am to the public in general) a very clear and forcible statement of Cardinal Manning's wise reasons for refusing an open mortuary ceremonian in England in honor of the late Victor Emmanuel. As the subject has been widely agitated of late, not only in Great Britain alone, but on both sides of the water, we think it well to give the rationale of the Register in full:

Cardinal Manning has been reviled by several Protestant newspapers for want of charity towards the Victor Emmanuel. He has refused, say these newspapers, to allow a Mass to be said for the repose of the soul of the late King. The most outrageous charge that his Eminence has been guilty either of the act or of the sentiment imputed to him. At least, on the contrary, permitted days to be set apart for this exercise of Christian charity. He gave this permission at the very first. Hereupon after thought, of his Eminence Cardinal Manning to permit this last act of Christian charity; it was the first and most willing concession. What the Cardinal has not done is to permit a political demonstration in honor of the King of Italy. Victor Emmanuel, an Italian, and the lawful King of Sardinia, might be reasonably prayed for by all Italians; he might be reasonably prayed for by the whole world; but Victor Emmanuel, the King of United Italy, was a king only de facto, not de jure. As King of Sardinia, and a distinguished Italian, he was entitled to the sympathy of all Italians; and, even in Rome, there was a time when one voice in Rome which said "No," and that voice was Pius the Ninth's, and which said "Yes," and that voice was the King's conscience—we can pray Requiescant in pace and may every priest in Italy, and in England, and throughout the world, charitably remember him at the altar.

(WRITTEN FOR "THE MONITOR.")

Robert Emmett.

I.

He came, like a meteor, resplendently flaring
A lightning the land in its sullenness and gloom,
The track of whose beams never waned nor diminished
In all those long years since he went to his doom.

II.

He came to old Erin when tyranny's minions
Had quenched every star-beam that lighted her owl;
But his name proved a beacon of light, grander and brighter,
Than ever heaven's star shone in Ursa Major.

III.

He came when the heaviest and driest were heartsore,
When Hope seemed a phantom and Freedom a dream,
And he flashed such a radiance around and above
That even to-day we fight on by its gleam.

IV.

They thought, when they slew him, the noble, the darling,
That day long ago on the high gallows tree,
They had quenched the last remained the last remnant of courage
From the hearts who were fighting old Erin for thee.

V.

But they knew not the depth of the love that we bore thee,
Nor the hate for your foes, which held away in the soul
Of each man, who renewed the fierce contest unfainted,
With "Vengeance" his watchword, and Freedom his goal.

VI.

Years have passed, dreary years of oppression and bondage,
Since the day, noblest Emmet, you first saw the light;
But the stone is still blank o'er your grave in Glasnevin;
Unpraised still the story you told to write.

VII.

But well write it, thought, better for letter we trace thee
Our hearts' warm lifeblood the marble shall stain;
And we'll tell you the land that you fought for and died for;
That old Ireland is among nations again.

VIII.

Though to-day she be crouching, unnerved and despairing,
At the feet of the cowards who call her their own,
Though her sky be enveloped in Erebus darkness,
And her chains be so strong as the day they were forged.

IX.

Yet we know that the hour that is longest and darkest
Is the hour hour that heralds the dawn of the day;
And our hearts whisper strong, that the dawn is soon breaking,
For the land of our dreams, the old land far away.

KATE DOWLINGS.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA INEZ COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA INLET, CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED ON the Santa Inez river, in a beautiful valley in the eastern slope of the San Rafael mountains, four miles, in a direct line, from the ocean, and twelve miles from Santa Barbara, by rail road. There is no more delightful spot in the Sunshine State than Inez Valley. Forests of live oak, sycamore and laurel, give to the plains and foothills the appearance of a verdant sea. The dry season, so disagreeable in other parts of the State, forfeits an additional charm to the grounds of Santa Inez. All that locality more appropriate for the education of youth of the Sisters, may feel perfectly satisfied of the majority, where the gently rounded hills and undulating plains seem to partake of the feel of the rugged mountains, where the limpid distillation of the little bubbling springs of the valley, and the balmy breath of the forest and the flower is stirred by the joyous voice of nature's choir. The gentle influence of Christian teachers exercised in such a place is indeed calculated to cause the mind to "look through nature up to nature's God."

The healthiness and salubrity of the climate of Santa Barbara are not unknown to the medical profession. Many of our citizens who have for a season inhaled the balmy air, amidst the beautiful scenery of the Inez valley, have not returned improved in health of body and mind. In view of these facts Santa Inez College may be safely recommended as a most desirable resort for health.

By request of his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop of San Francisco, this year will be opened the College. A limited number of boarders will be received. For particulars, address St. Mary's College, Santa Inez, or inquire of the Rev. Superior, Christian Brothers, San Francisco.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED, will open on the 8th of August, 1866, and continue uninterrupted, under the direction of the Sisters of Notre Dame, a scholastic year on MONDAY, January 7, 1867. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a liberal education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once	$15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter	62 50
Washing, per quarter	12 50
Physician's fees, unless it may be gratuitously offered to pass the bill in case of sickness, per quarter	2 50
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, each per quarter	15 00
Extra charge for the French, Spanish or German languages, each per quarter	5 00
Needlework	5 00

Bedding and linen are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE,

SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA.

THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION will commence Monday, August 20th. The main building, 175 feet in front by 60 feet in depth, is now ready for the reception of pupils. The new dormitories, which are 100 feet in length, are unsurpassed for the magnificence of their proportions, the extensive shady playgrounds, covered gallery, spacious dormitories, &c. It possesses a most complete Philosophical Apparatus and valuable Cabinet, Chemical Laboratory, Library of 5,000 vols., practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Navigation, Vocal and Instrumental Music, &c. For the latter a new building 100 feet in length, with the Concert Hall, 60 feet in depth, has been added.

TERMS:

Entrance fee to be paid but once $ 10
Board and tuition in English, per scholastic year 200
Washing 20
Mend. Bedding and Linen 20
Physician's fee, only when called by the Physician 5
Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.
Payments are required to be made half-yearly in advance.

For further particulars apply to
REV. A. BRUNEN, S.J.,
President.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

BENICIA, CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in the healthy and picturesque town of Benicia. The scholastic year commences ten months, opens on the 15th of August, and ends about the middle of June.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly).

Board and Tuition	$225 00
Washing	40 00
Bedding	45 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged for.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE,

344 Jessie St., bet. Fourth & Fifth,

SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS LITERARY INSTITUTION WAS Incorporated, according to the laws of the State, on the 30th of April, 1855, and conferred by order hendemical degrees with "such literary honors as are granted by any University in the United States."

The design of the Institution is to give a thorough Classical, Mathematical and Philosophical education. But, besides the classical, there is, also, a Commercial Course.

The College is instituted for day-scholars only.

TERMS PER MONTH

(Payable in advance).

Tuition, in Preparatory Department	$3 00
" in Grammar Department	5 00
" in Higher Department	7 00

EXTRA CHARGES.

For the use of Instruments in Natural Philosophy and Chemicals, first year, per month	$3 00
For the use of Instruments, etc., second year, per month	5 00
For each Academical Degree	10 00

REV. JOHN PINASCO, S. J.,
President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive and the building is large and convenient.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:

(Invariably half yearly in advance).

Board, tuition, bedding, washing, etc., per annum	$200 00
Piano, use of instrument, per month	50
Guitar, per month, $5	62 50
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.
The school year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

OF SAN FRANCISCO,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED in 1851, incorporated in 1856 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on Jesse street, opposite the Old Mission Church. A large addition has recently been erected to the more ample accomodation of boarding pupils.

The course of instruction embraces all branches necessary to the acquisition of a thorough and refined education.

Parents, in confiding their children to the care of the Sisters, may feel perfectly satisfied that every attention will be given to their mental and moral culture, while the system of government combines sufficient firmness, and maternal solicitude, to insure the real progress and advancement of the pupil.

The Twelfth Annual Session will commence on Monday, June 18, 1866.

TERMS:

Per quarter session, (payable in advance)

Board, tuition, washing, and use of bedding	$60
Music, with use of instrument	20
Vocal Music	10
Drawing and Painting	10
Vacation spent at the Academy	20

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms (per month in advance)

Rhetoric Classes	$[illegible]
Grammar Classes	[illegible]
Preparatory Classes	[illegible]
Primary Classes	[illegible]

Pupils residing at a distance from the College, and desiring a hot luncheon, will be provided at a trifling cost. For Circulars and other particulars apply to the Superiors of the Convent, Jesse Street, or to the Clerks of Plain and Fancy Needlework. 26

Convent Of Our Lady the Sacred Heart,

OAKLAND, CALIFORNIA.

Conducted by the Sisters of Holy Names of Jesus and Mary

THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY situated between Webster street and Brush street, commanding an extensive frontage on the lake. The building, recently erected, is filled with all the modern improvements, and having been spared to provide for the health of its inmates.

The course of study embraces the complete education of a solid and ornamental character.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly in advance).

Board and tuition (French and Spanish included)	$150
Washing	30
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the institution)	10
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing, Painting form extra charges.

For further particulars apply to
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

ACADEMY OF ST. ANNE

STOCKTON, CAL.

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Directed by the Dominican Sisters

TERMS.

Entrance fee to be paid but once $ 10
Board and tuition in English, per scholastic year 200
Washing 20
Mend. Bedding and Linen 20
Physician's fee 5
Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.
Payments are required to be made half-yearly in advance.

For further information apply to
M. RAYMONDA, Sister Superior.

CONVENT OF

The Immaculate Heart Mary,

FOR THE

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per annum 250 00
Entrance fee, to be paid but once 10 00
Tuition on Piano, per annum 50 00
French 20 00
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Fancy or Ornamental Needlework, nor for Spanish language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

Primary, per month $ [illegible]
Elementary and Senior, per month [illegible]
Tuition on Piano, " [illegible]
Harp, " [illegible]
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery and Fancy or Ornamental Needlework, nor for Spanish language.

N. B.—The Academy, establishment is also the novitiate of the Order.

For Prospectus and further particulars address as above.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian B

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSical Course receive the degree of A. B.; Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time possible.

Weekly progress cards are sent to every parent taught in the Commercial department, without special attention. The daily exercises of students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the class-room.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance).

Board, Tuition and Washing	$250
Bedding and Mending	20
Physician's Fee and Medicines	10
Vacation at College	50
Day Students
Music and Drawing form extra charges.

REV. R. JUSTIN, President.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

CHARTERED IN 1869, AND CONducted by the priests of the Congregation of the Mission. Terms for scholastic year.

For further particulars apply to
RAV. E. RUBI, C. M., President.

MT. ST. MARY'S ACADEMY

CONDUCTED BY THE

Sisters of St. Dominic,

RENO, NEVADA.

For particulars address
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

LATE IRISH NEWS.

In looking over the latest files of Irish newspapers, which come down to the date of Fenian, we do not find very much good nothing. Of course the foremost topic, both in the press and in conversation of Ireland, was the death of his Eminence, Paul Cardinal Cullen. Solemn Requiem Masses were said in most of the churches in Dublin and throughout the province. A number of eloquent discourses delivered panegyrics on which the Sacred Dove Valley, Forests of live oak, sycamore and laurel, give to the plains and foothills the appearance of a verdant sea. The dry season, so disagreeable in other parts of the State, forfeits an additional charm to the grounds of Santa Inez. All that locality more appropriate for the education of youth of the Sisters, may feel perfectly satisfied of the majority, where the gently rounded hills and undulating plains seem to partake of the feel of the rugged mountains, where the limpid distillation of the little bubbling springs of the valley, and the balmy breath of the forest and the flower is stirred by the joyous voice of nature's choir. The gentle influence of Christian teachers exercised in such a place is indeed calculated to cause the mind to "look through nature up to nature's God."

The healthiness and salubrity of the climate of Santa Barbara are not unknown to the medical profession. Many of our citizens who have for a season inhaled the balmy air, amidst the beautiful scenery of the Inez valley, have not returned improved in health of body and mind. In view of these facts Santa Inez College may be safely recommended as a most desirable resort for health.

By request of his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop of San Francisco, this year will be opened the College. A limited number of boarders will be received. For particulars, address St. Mary's College, Santa Inez, or inquire of the Rev. Superior, Christian Brothers, San Francisco.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED, will open on the 8th of August, 1866, and continue uninterrupted, under the direction of the Sisters of Notre Dame, a scholastic year on MONDAY, January 7, 1867. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a liberal education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once	$15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter	62 50
Washing, per quarter	12 50
Physician's fees, unless it may be gratuitously offered to pass the bill in case of sickness, per quarter	2 50
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, each per quarter	15 00
Extra charge for the French, Spanish or German languages, each per quarter	5 00
Needlework	5 00

Bedding and linen are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE,

SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA.

THE TWENTY-SIXTH ANNUAL SESSION will commence Monday, August 20th. The main building, 175 feet in front by 60 feet in depth, is now ready for the reception of pupils. The new dormitories, which are 100 feet in length, are unsurpassed for the magnificence of their proportions, the extensive shady playgrounds, covered gallery, spacious dormitories, &c. It possesses a most complete Philosophical Apparatus and valuable Cabinet, Chemical Laboratory, Library of 5,000 vols., practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Navigation, Vocal and Instrumental Music, &c. For the latter a new building 100 feet in length, with the Concert Hall, 60 feet in depth, has been added.

TERMS:

Entrance fee to be paid but once $ 10
Board and tuition in English, per scholastic year 200
Washing 20
Mend. Bedding and Linen 20
Physician's fee 5
Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.
Payments are required to be made half-yearly in advance.

For further information apply to
REV. A. BRUNEN, S.J.,
President.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

BENICIA, CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in the healthy and picturesque town of Benicia. The scholastic year commences ten months, opens on the 15th of August, and ends about the middle of June.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly).

Board and Tuition	$225 00
Washing	40 00
Bedding	45 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged for.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE,

344 Jessie St., bet. Fourth & Fifth,

SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS LITERARY INSTITUTION WAS Incorporated, according to the laws of the State, on the 30th of April, 1855, and conferred by order hendemical degrees with "such literary honors as are granted by any University in the United States."

The design of the Institution is to give a thorough Classical, Mathematical and Philosophical education. But, besides the classical, there is, also, a Commercial Course.

The College is instituted for day-scholars only.

TERMS PER MONTH

(Payable in advance)

Tuition, in Preparatory Department	$3 00
" in Grammar Department	5 00
" in Higher Department	7 00

EXTRA CHARGES.

For the use of Instruments in Natural Philosophy and Chemicals, first year, per month	$3 00
For the use of Instruments, etc., second year, per month	5 00
For each Academical Degree	10 00

REV. JOHN PINASCO, S. J.,
President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive and the building is large and convenient.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:

(Invariably half yearly in advance).

Board, tuition, bedding, washing, etc., per annum	$200 00
Piano, use of instrument, per month	50
Guitar, per month, $5	62 50
No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The school year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

DR. PIERCE'S STANDARD REMEDIES

Are not advertised as "cure-alls," but are specifics in the diseases for which they are recommended.

NATURAL SELECTION.

Investigation of natural science has deeply stirred beyond controversy, that throughout the world of animal life, "the fittest" is the only law that conclusively thrift and prosperity. Does not the same principle govern the commercial prosperity of those inferior creatures supersede a superior ability. By reason of superior merit, Dr. Pierce's Standard Medicines have outrivaled all others. Their sale in the United States alone exceeds one million of dollars per annum, while the amount expected finds up to several hundred thousand more. No business could grow to such gigantic proportions and rest upon any other basis than that of merit.

DR. SAGE'S Catarrh Remedy

Is Pleasant to use.

DR. SAGE'S Catarrh Remedy

Is cure extend over a period of 20 years.

DR. SAGE'S Catarrh Remedy

Has no constitutional effects.

DR. SAGE'S Catarrh Remedy

Cures by its Mild, Soothing Effect.

DR. SAGE'S Catarrh Remedy

Cures "Cold in Head" and Catarrh, of Long standing.

AN ATTENTIVE EAR.

IT SPEAKS FOR ITSELF.

BEAVERS, MASS., April 2, 1877.

MR. EDITOR:—Dear Sir—Having read portions of the remarkable cures of catarrh, I am moved to tell what I know about catarrh, and I fancy the "snuff" and "insuffing-tube" remedies. I suffered from catarrh in all of them they could exhibit a similar cure in the aggregate, for twenty-six years I suffered with catarrh. The nasal passages became so completely glued together, that "snuffing," "inhaling tubes," and "sticks," wouldn't work, though at intervals I would sniff up the wonderful catarrh snuff, until I became a shaker tester for such medicines. I gradually grew worse, and no one can know how much I suffered, or what a miserable being I was. My head school over my eyes so that I was confined to my bed nearly one-third of the time, suffering the most intense pain, which at one time barely escaped my brain. My sense of smell and taste gone, sight and hearing impaired, and constitution broken, and I was hawking and spitting, every weight of the time. I prayed for death to relieve me from my misery. Hearing of your Golden Medical Discovery, I procured a bottle of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy, inclosed one in your pamphlet, and use it with Dr. Pierce's Nasal Douche, and I was cured in half a dozen days. Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy cured me by purging the pipeline

AGRICULTURAL.

Some of our farming friends who are holding wheat for a rise, on account of the prospects of a general European war, would do well to read the following, which is the latest telegraphic intelligence as to the state of the grain market and the effect of the treaty of peace just signed by Russia and Turkey:

THE FOREIGN GRAIN TRADE—A MARKED DECLINE IN PRICES—BUT LITTLE DEMAND.

LONDON, March 5.—The Mark Lane Express says: The peace prospects, the fairly abundant granaried stocks and heavy anticipated arrivals, both from America and Southern Russia, have combined to reduce the wheat trade to a lamentable state. During the past week the inactivity has been such that in the absence of sales it has been a matter of some difficulty to record the fluctuations in prices. That the withdrawal of the prop which the uncertain aspect of political matters furnished the grain trade would deprss values was anticipated, but a concession of a shilling to two shillings per quarter has failed to improve the demand for wheat, which it might fairly be expected to have done. Having regard to the low state into which millers have allowed their stocks to run all over the Kingdom, an explanation is probably to be found in the fact that the supplies in prospective are too heavy to allow the concessions offered to have much weight until some definite idea can be formed of the amount of wheat this country may expect from Odessa, Nicolaeff and other southern Russian Ports: millers will only buy from hand to mouth. That the accumulation of grain in the Black Sea ports is large cannot be doubted for one moment, but we think a large proportion will be found to consist of low-class and badly-conditioned corn, as the demand for transport during the war obliged inland growers to store as best they might on the spot, where of course the appliances for keeping grain in good condition in a country so long a period would be to a great extent inefficient. There is a dragging trade for feeding corn. Barley, oats and oats needed six pence to one shilling per quarter, with very little business, with moderate arrivals off coast. The floating cargo trade for wheat ruled steady, without quotable change in value.

CHOKING.—Choking is by no means uncommon in the horse. It may arise from various causes, from the existence of tumors, or the result of strangles. But choking proper is caused by the impaction of food in the pharynx, or in the gullet just below it, when the "high choke" can be recognized. When choking results from stoppage in the position above named, the animal gives evidence of great suffering, a discharge flows from the nostrils, and froth appears over the mouth and lips; the eyes assume a congested and anxious expression, the breathing becomes laborious, tetanic symptoms of the neck are associated with efforts to vomit, and give evidence that the attempts of the horse to remove the offending impaction are futile. But relief must be afforded and that quickly, if life is to be preserved, which can be attempted by placing a balling iron in the mouth, and then by passing the hand to the pharynx, when sometimes the obstruction can be reached and brought away with the fingers; at other times it cannot. When such is the case, a thick piece of wire terminating with a hook, adapted both as regards length and curvature of bend, must be carefully worked behind the impediment, of whatever nature it may be, and then in one mass, or bit by bit, it must be taken away from the gullet. Sometimes the obstruction consists of some hard substance, such as an egg, which may wholly occupy the pharyngeal opening. When such is the case it will be useless to attempt its removal with a hook; a large darning needle, or better still, a fine trocar, can be driven into the substance, when the contents of the egg can be evacuated, the shell broken down, and symptoms of the "high choke" will subside and almost immediately disappear.

When an obstruction occurs at the thoracic end of the gullet—i. e., just before its entrance into the stomach—it is called the "low choke," the symptoms of which are not so violent as those occasioned when food is impacted near the pharynx. The horse the subject of it evinces signs of distress—he breathes laboriously, and arches his back; if he attempts to swallow water it is returned by the nostrils; when an attempt is made to aid an effort to vomit follows, associated with tetanic spasms of the cervical muscles. Immediately on the appearance of these symptoms administer to the horse a quarter of a pint of linseed oil, and afterwards pass the probang down the oesophagus, and when the offending substance has been reached maintain steady pressure until it has been driven bodily into or dispersed bit by bit into the stomach. About an hour after the probang has been withdrawn, place a bran mash before your patient, if he taste without exhibiting any inclination to vomit, you may rest assured that the horse has been successfully unchoked.

CARE OF YOUNG DAIRY STOCK.—We regard it necessary often to call the attention of dairymen to the necessity of giving the best attention and food to the heifer calves designed for dairy cows. This is just the season that these calves need the best care. As it is important that the heifer should be developed in muscle and frame, rather than in fat, not much corn or other highly fattening food should be given. Feed rather upon oats and bran, or middlings, with a little corn, besides early-cut hay. Calves should have shelter from all cold storms; in fact, they require for the best treatment a comfortable stable. It is not only the heifer-calf that needs good attention, but the yearling heifer. She is now fast developing into a cow, and needs the best food and care. She does not need much grain; if the farmer has early-cut hay, and especially nicely-cured clover, this, with a little bran or cut meal occasionally, will keep up a steady growth. The yearling heifer should be handled by the herdsman daily, so as to become familiar with attention, and she will give no trouble in breaking to milk after coming in.—National Live Stock Journal.

WOOD ASHES as a fertilizer is one of the most valuable within reach of the farmer. The unleached ashes contain more potash, but the leached article is also very valuable; for although a good deal of shrinkage takes place in the process of leaching, the customary addition of lime counterbalances the loss; and, moreover, they are usually sold at a lower figure. Beneficial to all crops, they are especially so in the fruit garden and orchard. In many parts of the country farmers are in the habit of selling their wood in winter in the cities and villages, and rather than go home with their wagons empty, they should make arrangements to carry back ashes and other fertilizers to replace the potash, lime, and phosphoric acid carried off in the crops and the food of the animals they have sold or slaughtered. The ashes should be applied as near the surface as possible, spread or hoed into the seed-bed or applied directly to the growing crops, and the effects will be immediately apparent.—Rural New Yorker.

AN EXCELLENT VARNISH FOR HARNESS.—Procure at the druggist's or apothecary's store half a pound or a pound of gum-shellac, according to the quantity desired; break the scales fine, and put them into a jug or bottle; add good alcohol sufficient to cover the gum; cork tightly, and place the jug where it will be kept warm. In about two days, if the bottle or jug is shaken frequently, the gum will be dissolved and ready for use. If the liquid appears as thick as thin molasses, add more alcohol. To one quart of the varnish add one ounce of good lampblack and an ounce of gum camphor. Such varnish will not render leather hard, but it will keep the harness from being soaked with water, and will keep the surface clean and neat for a long time. A coat of such varnish will effectually prevent the oil in the leather from soiling one's hands. Nothing is better to render a farmer's boots waterproof than an occasional coat of this leather-varnish.

The storm, after continuing nearly seven weeks, seems to have reached its climax on Wednesday last, when the river at Sacramento was nearly 20 feet above low water mark, and on a level at several places with the top of the levee, so that the city was for several hours in imminent danger of a great disaster; but energetic labor at the weak points and a fall in the flood in consequence of the breaking of the levee on the other side of the stream, furnished relief. The towns of Washington, Knight's Landing, Freeport, Courtland, Walnut Grove, Richland, Onisbo are flooded, and Redwood City was inundated for a few hours. The towns along the Sacramento north of Knight's Landing have all escaped without serious damage, and are safe for the season, we presume.

ON OF THE BENEFITS OF THE FLOOD.—It is a pleasure to be able to note the good done by the storm, as well as the damage. From the best information we can obtain, we estimate that 10,000 acres of land, heretofore comparatively unproductive, has been covered from six inches to two feet with a rich alluvial deposit. The "hardpan" covered with this sediment makes the very best grain land. So there is $200,000 to $300,000 added to the permanent wealth of the county.—Colusa Sun, February 23.

Produce Market Report.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MARCH 7, 1878.

Stormy weather and falling prices continue to be the order of the day. With thirty inches of rain and more, according to the Signal Service gauge, and yet raining at this writing with no appearance of a change, we are compelled to report dull times upon the Corn Exchange and very little business doing outside. Ships on the berth are making but little headway taking in cargoes, and yet holders of Wheat and Barley are for the most part anxious sellers and inclined to yield prices for the sake of making a clearing out sale of their remaining stocks in warehouse. One or two round lots of Wheat and Barley mixed sold as low as $1 75 per cental for grinding. As intimated last week, there has been an increased demand for Corn to go to Mexico both by sailing steamer. Oats are without movement. Hay is the firm dearer. Wool and hides are without movement. Tallow is wanted for export.

FLOUR—The market for low grade Superfine for export, favors the buyer, but for standard Extras there is no visible change. We quote current prices as follows: Superfine at $4 75@5; Extra Superfine, $5 50@5 75; Extra Family and Bakers' Extra, $6 25@6 75; while Silver Extras commanding the extremes of the local market, say $6 75@7 25 per bbl (all in cloth bbl and gr'ss).

WHEAT—The price conflict continues to be of the most cheering character, and our late estimate creature of the crop requires no modification, for without any serious or unalloyed drawback we are sure to harvest this summer the biggest crop of cereals ever garnered upon the Pacific Slope. Transactions for the week are within the range of $1 85 @ $1 87 50 for shipping. Liverpool quotations March 6th, 11s 5d@12s on average; 11s 8d@12s 2d on club. At the close we note sales of 2,200 ctls choice milling at $2 07½ per cental.

BARLEY—The ship. Wooseng for Liverpool carried 500 ctls Chevalier. The demand for this kind far exceeds the supply, the stock of bright new Chevalier being incontrovertible. There is, perhaps, a little better feeling in the market for choice bright Feed. Transactions for the week embrace the following lots: 1,600 ctls choice barley, $1 30; 200 ctls very fine feed in lots, $1 35; 2,000 ctls coarse, $1 27½; 2,000 ctls do do, $1 25; 250 sks fair bay feed, $1 27½; 500 sks good do, $1 30; 200 sks choice coast feed, $1 37½; 1,000 ctls do (wrecked), $1 32½; 1,600 sks bay feed, $1 30; 1,800 ctls choice do, $1 32 ½ cl.

RYE—The demand is light and the price nominal—say $1 20 @ $1 25 ½ ctl.

BEEDS—We quote: Flax, 3c@3c; white Mustard, 5c@6c; Mustard, brown, 3c@3c; Canary, 6c@6c; Alfalfa, 9c@10c; Timothy, 8c@10c.

BUCKWHEAT—We quote a good article at $2 20@2 50 ctl.

BRAN AND MIDDLINGS—The mill price is holding firm, $22 ½ ton; latter, $27 50.

OIL CAKE MEAL—The mill price is $36 ½ ton, less the usual discount to the trade.

WOOL—The stock is too insignificant to afford material for an article. Prices are entirely nominal. We note a sale of 25,000 lbs Arizona Wool within the range of 15@18c.

CORN—The Mexican demand is continued, two small schooners having sailed for coast ports with 180 tons, while the steamship Colima, for same, carried 190 tons. Prices are higher. Sales 200 sks White at $2 ⅞ ctl; 150 sks do, $1 95; 200 sks large Yellow, $2 00; 300 sks small round, $1 95; 400 sks large Yellow, $1 92½; 400 sks small round, $1 87½; 200 sks do, $1 85; 400 ctls large Yellow at 1 62½.

OATS—We have nothing of interest to remark; business is light and trade sluggish. Sales 1,200 sks Oregon Feed at $1 45 @ ctl; 200 do, $1 50; in other lots, $1 40 @ $1 45 on market, $1 50@1 60.

HIDES—The market continues to be very steady, especially for Dry. Owing to the severe weather and the great loss of stock, Hides and Skins taken from dead animals have been coming in the market in large quantities. Such are classed as naturals and therefore culls. We would call the attention of shippers to the fact that all naturals stock should be handled with caution, and are sorted to curing. We note quotations: Dry at 18c; Dry Kip and Calf, 12@15c. Wet, salted are firm and steady. We quote light salted Hides, 8c; Kip, heavy, 7½@8c; heavy salted Steers, 8c; Salted Calf, 7@8c. Sales of 40,000 lbs Salted within the range. Pelts are quotable as follows: long Wool, 75@90c; medium, 50@60c; short, 10@30c; Shearlings, 10c; all in good order.

TALLOW—In good demand for local use and for export, especially for the English market. Rendered of fair quality brings 6@6½c; in good order, and well rendered, 6½@7c.

RENDERED LARD—Is in good demand for export, especially for the English market. Rendered of fair quality brings 6@6½c; in good order, and well rendered, 6½@7c.

RENDERED SHEEP—Is in good demand

A. WALDTEUFEL,
Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Catholic Books,
PRAYER BOOKS,
Miscellaneous Books,
School Books,
CHURCH ORNAMENTS,
Catholic Goods,
Staple and Fancy Stationery of every description.
All orders will be promptly filled. Liberal terms to Schools and Priests.

A. WALDTEUFEL,
Corner First and Fountain Streets, SAN JOSE.

THE MONITOR.

OFFICE—622 Clay street, between Kearny and Montgomery (third floor).

LYONS & O'SULLIVAN, Publishers.
RICHARD O'SULLIVAN ..... Editor.
BRIDE LYONS ..... Business Manager.

All communications should be addressed to LYONS & O'SULLIVAN.

TERMS (Payable in advance):

Served by carriers, per week	10c.
Mail subscribers, per year	$4 00
Six months "	" 2 25
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces	" 5 00

Postage in each case prepaid by the publishers.

Advertising Rates.

1 square 1 time	$1 50	1 square 4 mos	$10 50
1 square 1 month	4 00	1 square 5 mos	12 00
1 square 2 months	7 00	1 square 6 mos	13 50
1 square 3 months	9 00	1 square 1 year	25 00

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

[Telegraphic.]

Friday, March 15.

An early meeting of the Congress is no longer probable. Russia displays no particular anxiety for it to meet at all, in consequence of England and Austria—despite the complaisance—Mon. who have considerable influence in causing—everything events which they profess to foresee, say it is by no means certain the Congress will meet, and if it does meet it is not very likely to succeed in consequence of Austrian and English jealousy of Russia's success.

It is untrue that the Porte has given orders to prevent any more British men-of-war on passing the Dardanelles.

The Pall Mall Gazette publishes a letter from a source in Paris which asserts that France at the Congress will endeavor to bring about a compromise, and will refuse to take part in or sanction any partition or radical change of territory.

A Constantinople London special says: It is asserted that Northern Syria has revolted and proclaimed itself separate from the Sultan. It is also reported that Kurds, in the province of Diarbekir, have revolted.

Sunday, March 17.

Ratifications of the treaty of peace were exchanged to-day. The conditions will be published as soon as they are communicated to the Powers. Kossuth Pacha will depart immediately.

Prince Bismarck has notified the Austrian Government that Russia, in consequence of its intervention, has consented to submit all peace conditions, without exception, to the Congress for discussion, should the Congress make a demand to that effect.

Russian troops crossed the river between Matrei Kol and St. Stefano and occupied three villages near Makri Kol. The Porte, by the advice of Mukhtar Pacha, has not yet assented to the Russian occupying Bujukdere. The Russians never have arrived at Domondere, behind Bujukdere.

England has obtained permission from the Porte to disembark some troops on the Island Ostenizza and will land more troops clude to the Sea of Marmora. M. Ozron, dragoman of the Russian legation, has protested against these occupations.

Monday, March 18.

A London special from St. Petersburg says: The treaty leaves a good many points open. It reserves the question of the Straits for the Congress, and leaves the southern frontier of Bulgaria to be determined by an International Commission, according to the majority of the inhabitants. The question of annexation of the port of Kavala is left to the Commission, and this serious difficulties on that point are avoided.

Twelve thousand Turks landed at Volo, and it is expected will attack Mount Pelion. It is anticipated that if the Turks overwhelm the insurgents it will be difficult to restrain the Greek army from re-entering Thessaly.

A London Vienna special states that both Prince Bismarck and Count Andrassy consider that Russia has yielded enough in offering to submit to the Congress any clauses of the treaty it may designate.

Tuesday, March 19.

In the French Chamber of Deputies, Leon Say, Minister of Finance, moved that the Budget Receipts be made an order of the day for ..... and declared ..... and declared ..... confidence in the ..... Republic. The Ministry had the majority by 436 to 34. Thus all fear of a ..... is averted.

Telegrams from Central America is unfavorable. Costa Rica and Guatemala are both preparing for war. The President of Costa Rica purchased a gunboat in San Francisco and had her fitted out as a man of war, and has sent to Europe for a large supply of arms. He is determined, if any cost and by any means, to carry out his scheme of Central American Confederation, and the President of Guatemala is equally determined to oppose him.

A Berlin dispatch states that Emperor William has replied to Pope Leo, congratulating him on his accession to the Papal throne.

The London Times says: The latest phase of difference between Russia and England seems to be that Russia, while admitting the right of the Congress to discuss all points of the treaty, she claims to be ultimately bound by a decision of a majority of the Powers.

Wednesday, March 20th.

A letter to the Political Correspondence from St. Petersburg says: Russia is not displeased to comply with the imperative orders given to her by England before the opening of the Congress. England's course would only render the meeting of the Congress unsatisfactory.

A special from Berlin says: The Russians are constructing a railway from Bourgas to Jambouli. As Jambouli is connected with Adrianople by railway this new line will enable the Russians to send troops from Odessa direct to Constantinople and Southern Bulgaria and the Ægean Sea.

The leading article in the London Times, after considering the terrible consequences that would follow a great war, and the enormous responsibility of the Powers which brings it on, concludes as follows: "Nevertheless, England must adhere to its demand that the entire treaty of San Stefano be submitted to the Congress. The alternative plan suggested by Russia would take the previous question on every clause of the treaty, except those which Russia, of her own accord, brought before the Congress. But a far more important issue than the interests of any Power is at stake. We take our stand upon existing treaties. The one hope of statesmen for the future peace of the world must be founded upon the development of a system of public law, and upon the maintenance and increase of the authority of treaty. If the public law of Europe be valid until—finally repealed, any new arrangement betwe. Russia and Turkey falls upon faits-de-fait in its very nature within the scope of the treaties of 1856 and 1871. It is not in the power of Russia, and it is not even within the competence of the Congress to decide, whether Russia, Turkey, Europe, has already fall with in the signature of the signatories of the old treaty. It is bound i take the new instrument into consideration as a whole.

Thursday, March 21.

A dispatch from Athens reports: Hobart Pacha having agreed not to bombard villages on the coast of Thessaly, the insurgent leaders consented to enter into negotiations with him at Volo today, on condition that their official status be recognized. It is asserted that Hobart Pacha has offered the insurgents autonomy.

EASTERN.

The Committee on Appropriation and Labor Interests, to report a bill prohibiting the use of Chinese coolies, or convicted and not convicted people. The Act to sell, repair or sa[illegible] the present or future public lands for cash. Act for the sale of timber lands, provides for surveyed public lands in California, Oregon, Nevada and Washington Territory, valuable chiefly for timber and unfit for cultivation, may be sold in quantities not exceeding one person or association, at a price of $2 50 per acre, and lands valuable for stone may be sold on the same terms.

A deputation from the Grange of Lodge of Ontario West have presented an address to the Governor-General, in council, expressing hatred to Her Majesty's throne, and calling on the Governor to take steps for the protection of Orangemen of Montreal on the approaching 12th of July. They announce that in the event of such protection not being afforded, they will deem it their duty to make their own defence.

A new temperance Act, to apply throughout the Dominion, was introduced into the Senate. It authorizes any city or county to prohibit the sale of alcoholic liquors, except for the sacramental or sacramental purposes, and subject to ratification by the Dominion electors.

The four California members ..... Congress met called on Fernando Wood today, to present his public opposition to the changes proposed in the tariff bill in the rates for wine and ..... will endeavor to secure a hearing ..... committee.

The Deficiency bill, as reported ..... contains from the Committee on Appropriations ..... only two items distinctly for the ..... namely $50,000 for work on the current fiscal ..... Appraisers' Building during ..... year, and $30,000 for continuing ..... towards the Atlantic and Pacific and Transcontinental ..... Pacific railroads.

The Socialistic Workingmen ..... celebrating the 16th anniversary of the Paris Commune ..... of March anniversary of the ..... were made in The hall was thronged. All ..... The colors of German, English and French ..... were displayed, also the red flags of the Social Labor Party ..... the speeches of and.

The following synopsis of ..... States for the month of February: Bacon and ..... dressed beef, 4,995,950 pounds; 3,854,115 pounds; lard, 41,177,601 pounds; lard compounds, 1,901,[illegible] pounds; tallow, 2,338,722 pounds; tallow, 720,464 pounds; oil, 1,[illegible] pounds. The value of exports from New York ..... $7,734,025.

The Supreme Court ..... decision of the Supreme Court ..... members of the Returning Board. The order ..... prosecution against the ..... Court, however, ordered the discharge of the ..... Anderson, from not ..... State having ..... him at large at ..... application for a release ..... days in which to file an ..... ing.

Celebration of St. Patrick's Day.

AT NEW YORK.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated here by a ..... Hibernian Benevolent Society of Hibernians ..... Irish Antient Order of Hibernians ..... Rifles and Irish Amelioration, Mitchel ..... Guards and the Emmet Rifles. The weather was ..... streets and the streets through which the procession ..... with spectators.

AT ST. LOUIS.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by the local Irish societies with a street parade, participated in by 8,000 men. The procession was headed by the Montgomery Guard and Taylor Guard. Then came the benevolent societies.

AT CHICAGO.

CHICAGO, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated to-day by service in all the Catholic churches and a parade by the various Catholic societies.

AT CINCINNATI.

CINCINNATI, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by a large procession and general religious services. The procession was of unusual length, and was remarkable for the good order maintained throughout the entire line of march.

TORONTO, March 19.—O'Donovan Rossa arrived here this forenoon. Hardly been forewarned that his reception might be unceremoniously warm if he traveled as far as his regular station here, he dropped off the train while in motion at the round house, fell in the mud, and came within a foot of being run over. He was quickly carried away in a cab, and no escaped the Orange crowd which was awaiting his arrival at Yonge Street Station. He keeps close all day.

At seven this evening five companies of the Queen's Own and four of the 19th Royals were mustered quietly in a drill shed a hundred yards from St. Patrick's Hall, where Rossa's lecture was to be delivered. On hearing this crowded the hall. A mob of even thousand blocked the approaches to the Shed and Jarvis street. Police had cleared Market Square. Rossa got safely into the hall without being recognized, and began to speak at 8 o'clock upon "Ireland, Her Trials and Her Triumphs." There were about one hundred and fifty people present, mostly young Irishmen.

The moment the gas was turned on in the hall, the mob outside opened fire with stones, and a perfect shower was rained in the windows until the theater closed, at 9:30. Not a pane of glass was left.

Rossa stopped several times, and one of the audience proposed that they should charge downstairs and out. This unnerved, however, and the audience waited in darkness for the mob to disperse.

At 10:15 Rossa stole quietly out to King street, and passed unobserved into the crowd, and the audience got out in twos and threes after him.

At this hour (midnight) the Young Britons are marching through the streets, but Rossa's whereabouts are kept a profound secret.

Pistols were not used, though there were hundreds of revolvers in the crowd.

A number of persons were arrested for throwing stones.

The hotel windows were riddled, and fire from revolvers was begun from the inside and vigorously returned by the riders.

The police charged the mob with their batons, and a brisk engagement ensued.

Another mob opened a fusillade on Collins' tavern, at the corner of Queen and Esther streets, where Rossa is believed to be harbored, and fight is going on there now.

Ninety policemen are engaged with the two mobs, and the Mayor has gone to the scene. The militia are waiting orders in the drill-shed. Four men are reported shot, and dozens were injured by bullets and stones, but the friends of the wounded ran them off to avoid arrest.

Several policemen were badly hurt.

All is quiet at 2:30, but gangs of Britons are lurking in the back streets. Eighty militiamen are retained on duty, in case of a renewal of the struggle.

Rossa abandoned Collins' Hotel early in the night, and it is said he has been conveyed to Weston, seven miles off.

TORONTO, March 19.—O'Donovan Rossa's lecture last night, as a lecture, was a complete failure. His principal supporters, before he was half through, advised him to cut it short. Rossa was much cut to a painful degree, and several times appeared as if he would break down entirely. He evidently had not recovered from his alarm on getting the city, when, leaving the expected crowd at the railway station, he leaped from the rapidly moving train, fell and rolled in the mud, and narrowly escaped being run over by the cars. After the lecture, Rossa drove hurriedly to Weston, about seven miles away from the city. The excitement being over, the people to-day are beginning to count the cost of Rossa's visit. Nine persons have been reported at the Young Irelanders' Society as shot, one seriously. Ten more of the explosion, four are hurt, not known, but none are believed dangerously wounded. Most of the injuries consist of broken heads and bruises. Five constables are hurt, one seriously.

SPIRIT OF THE PRESS.

Foreign Languages in the Public Schools.

..... and German residents, together with some vote-seeking politicians, held a meeting at Platts Hall, which they sought to represent as being a mass meeting of the citizens of San Francisco, for the purpose of forcing the Legislature to continue the injustice of spending the public money in teaching foreign languages to the children of foreign parentage, to the serious detriment of the efficiency of our primary schools. Our conspicuous contemporary, the Bulletin, in giving very excellent remarks, in which we heartily concur.

A very large number of very respectable Germans held a meeting at Platt's Hall, last week, for the accomplishment of a very questionable result in a very questionable way. The object of this meeting was to dictate to legislators from the passage of a bill declaring what shall be taught in our free public common schools. The aim and universal opinion of American-born and English speaking citizens is that they ought not to be taxed for the education of the children of foreigners in their native tongues. These Americans do not object that the children of Germans be taught German, that the children of Frenchmen be taught French, or that the children of persons of any nationality be taught the language of their fathers, but they claim that these languages should be taught at the expense of the class, and not at the cost of the community. The American declares that he is under no obligation to educate German children in German, and feels that he is robbed and imposed upon when taxed for such a purpose. The German, French, Italian, and Spanish languages are regarded by us as accomplishments, which, if we desire our children to learn, shall be paid for as luxuries, and the common schools of America should teach only the rudimentary branches of an English education.—We regard it as an anomaly that we should be compelled to support foreign teachers, to teach the children of foreigners their foreign language. In fact, we look upon it as an imposition, and resent the attempt to dictate to us in this respect as a piece of cheeky impertinence. We believe we are correct in the assertion that in no free national school in the world is there any other language taught than the language of the country; that neither in England, France, Spain, Italy, Germany, nor any other civilized country in the world, has the proposition ever been entertained to teach, at the cost of the State, languages foreign to the nation. The Germans take the lead in this, and we ask Messrs. Gottig, Holander, Neumann, Rosenbaum, and Reischild, whether this thing is done in Germany? Prussia has taken the lead in free education. Is there a free school in Berlin, Dresden, Munich, or any other German city, where an English or American teacher would be employed to teach English to English or American scholars? If it is right to teach German or French at the public expense, is it not equally desirable and proper to teach Danish, Norwegian, Swedish, Russian, or Irish? If it is right and proper to teach these languages in San Francisco, is it not also right to teach them in every county and in every rural district of the State? The annual cost of the free schools of San Francisco exceeds one million of dollars. And there are twelve thousand poor children supported with primary instruction and school house accommodation by reason of unpaid division of school funds. Will some German be kind enough to inform us upon what principle they justify a demand so expensive, so unusual, and so at variance with the opinions of the people among whom they have sought a residence? We will print a reply to this argument, if it comes from an intelligent, disinterested foreign gentleman. It must not come from an interested foreign teacher, or from a native-born demagogue, or from one who wants bread at the public cost and foreign votes to keep him in office. This will excuse Messrs. Black, Helmdeer, Brickwedel, Drucker, Durant, Maugles, Spilvale, Sherb, Steppacher, as well as Lewis, Parson, Conroy, May, Backus, Murphy, Forsythe, Rogers, Howe, Donovan, Craig, Roach, Heuter, Sullivan, Van Rhein, and J. W. Taylor. Demagogism, charlatanism, humbuggery, and a disgusting subservience to the foreign vote, characterize a great deal of our legislation, and in nothing is it more apparent and offensive than in that which refers to our free common schools. If German should be taught in our schools, why not Dutch? If French, why not Italian? If Spanish, why not Portuguese? And if any of these, why not Cherokee, Choctaw, and Chinese? There are more Chinese in San Francisco who speak no English than of any other nationality; then why not establish a Professorship of Oriental Literature for their instruction? Chinese pay taxes. Only one answer occurs to us. The Chinese can not vote. This is the milk in this cosmopolitan cocoanut.

From the Argonaut.

OUR CEMETERIES.

The proposition to abolish the cemeteries, to remove the dead and inhibit future burials in them, involves a land speculation as audacious as it is disgraceful. We hope some glimmering sense of reason, and some decent regard for honesty, may induce our legislators to spare the dead. At the present rate of stealing, one generation will suffice to send all honest men to the Potter's field. What we demand is a Potter's field to go to. We have purchased and own, in fee simple, the title of a cemetery lot; we have paid our money for it, we have buried our dead in it, we have built a vault of granite and marble, where, when we have laid off our armor and given up the battle, we expect to rest; and now come land speculators, and we have lost it and our dead. Our cemetery is a place of beauty. All the talk about deleterious and unhealthy gases is sheer stuff and nonsense. Ruin may be ascribed how we shall bury, but to say that the dead shall be removed, monuments destroyed, and families divided, is to confiscate property, and to violate all men's sanctification in consecrating their ground to our dead. Thank God for one thing: it cannot be done. The Act now pending is to passing unconstitutional, but the attempt

A Frantic Appeal.

The following is from the last number of an obscure sheet published in this city, called the Commercial Advertiser. We need make no comment; its intolerant bigotry must be so repulsive to every true American citizen as not to ..... our condemnation.

There is in existence in the Eastern States a very large and rapidly increasing Order composed entirely of native-born Americans; men who are loyal to the land of their birth, who are determined to check this foreign interference with our free institutions, and all invidious attempts to lessen the influence of our public schools.

A branch of the Order has been established in this city, and it already numbers its thousands of members, and are long will undoubtedly have within its ranks all true and loyal citizens of American birth who are dwellers here. Its purpose is to combine patriotic and true Americans in the above determination, and to take measures to modify our naturalization laws. They are already so powerful at the East that their presence is being felt and manifested in political circles, and are long they will be a potent power in the land. It is known as the "Patriotic Order Sons of America." Its organ is Philadelphia is the Times News, a bold and independent journal, whose motto is "Our God, Our Country and Our Order."

This is a movement we are glad to witness; it is a stride in the march against all enemies of our Government under whatever guise they may make themselves known. And, founded as it is upon principles of patriotism, it cannot fail of success.

Then after lashing himself into a rage at our assertion that half the white population of this city are Roman Catholics, the writer continues:

It is well that Americans should know the numerical strength of their opponents. It is a dangerous thing to underrate our opponents; we therefore give the following estimate of the number of Catholics in the United States:

THE GROWTH OF CATHOLICISM.—The Albany Argus, the oldest and ablest Democratic organ in the State of New York, says:

It is a singular fact that in the United States, where the Roman Catholic Church has simply had a fair field and no favor, that stupendous religious organization has developed itself with unusual rapidity and success. Eighty-four years ago there were 25,000 Roman Catholics in the United States; there are now 9,000,000. There was one bishopric; there are now fifty-four, besides six vicariates apostolic and four abbeys; there were twenty-one priests; there are now 4,800; there were three or four chapels, there are now 47 cathedrals, 4,250 churches, and 1,754 chapels and stations. There are now also 136 monasteries of men, and 261 convents of women, 1,527 academies and schools, 263 charitable institutions and 112 seminaries and colleges, in which, among other students, 848 young men are studying for the priesthood. Within the last ninety four years the population of the country has increased 14.31 per cent., but the Roman Catholic population during the same period increased 20,000 per cent., and the proportion of Catholics to the rest of the population (9,000,000 to 30,000,000) is almost 1 to 4. It must further be remembered that American Catholics are thoroughly Ultramontanes, "Gallicanism" being unknown among them.

Where is the American "with soul so dead" that it will not thrill with righteous indignation at the perusal of the proofs we have presented in corroboration of our statements? The knowledge that such designs exist, should rouse our dead ancestors from their graves and make them appeal to their sons to swear never to yield their blessed country to such a miscreant horde of blasphemous infallibility assumptionists.

In conclusion we call upon all Americans to ponder well upon the truths here placed before them, and decide whether they will silly stand by while the Jesuitical, crafty crowd shall steal from them the glorious birthright and freedom won by the blood of their fathers and bequeathed to them under the fond hope that all its privileges and blessings should be carefully and faithfully guarded and protected, even with life, if needful; or manfully and valiantly sustain those fond hopes of their noble sires, and save their country in its hour of peril from such and every foe.

With such howling bigotry and rant which would fain pass itself off as the voice of the people of America, it is pleasing to contrast the genuine sentiments of true Americans, faithful to the Constitution, as well as to the genius and spirit of free institutions, and who form, in reality, the great mass of the American people. We take for instance the language of Hon. John Dwinelle on the occasion of the Centennial celebration in this city:

A hundred years ago how feeble was the Catholic Church in the United States! To-day how strong she is—strongest among the strong. A hundred years ago proscribed, her name a reproach! To-day, proud in the consciousness of her strength, her children are free to ask for everything—to receive it. They can be legislators, Governors, Senators and Judges; one of them was Chief Justice of the United States for twenty-five years. And the example of the forty million citizens of the United States has not been lost upon other people! Is it not true that where the English language is now spoken, the Catholic Church is practically free? That, although there may be enactments against her, or the statute books, they are in effect dead, and cannot be enforced?

Where is she stronger at this day than in the United States? Where are her foundations broader, deeper, more solid? Where she has hospitals for servants, her colleges, her churches in a more flourishing condition? And does this not demonstrate that her material strength lies in the law of voluntary contribution and in those free public institutions? Shall we have more means and ampler room, or shall we continue to reject the homeless, and send away, empty, the hungry? Some of the most prominent ladies and gentlemen in the community are active and zealous supporters of this Institution of mercy. Their fostering liberality is gratefully acknowledged. Bakers, butchers, grocers, and other dealers, too numerous here to be mentioned by names, generously responed to our frequent appeals. We tender them, individually, our sincere thanks for favors bestowed. It is obvious, however, that an establishment of such comprehensive scope as the Youths' Directory can no longer rely on fluctuating contributions and alms-giving for its maintenance. When, as in this case, there is no endowment, some steady source of income or a fixed provision is indispensable. The commonwealth of California may justly be invoked to sustain this free Protectory for young people. In common with other benevolent foundations of a like character, it is entitled to substantial aid from the State.

I would therefore ask the liberty to suggest that the time has come to petition the Legislature, now in session at Sacramento, for such an appropriation as will enable the Youths' Directory to carry on and extend its work of charity among the street children of San Francisco.

Respectfully submitted,

AMBROSE P. DIETZ, Superintendent.

PRESIDENT—Most Rev. Joseph S. Alemany, D. S. T., D. D., Archbishop of San Francisco.

BOARD OF MANAGERS—James K. Kelly, President; Gustave Touchard, Treasurer; Mich. Shall, O'Connor; Cornelius D. O'Sullivan; Peter H. Burnett; Henry Barcelloz; Richard Tobin; John Sullivan; Joseph A. Donohoe.

SECRETARY AND SUPERINTENDENT: Ambrose P. Dietz.

CHAPLAIN—Rev. Laurence Brosla.

COLLECTOR—Robert F. Hilke.

MATRON—Mrs. Dora Dietz.

MEDICAL ATTENDANT—Jos. Beckinger, M. D.

MESSENGER—James McManus.

St. Peter's Literary Society.

A literary and musical entertainment was given by this Society on the evening of the 18th inst., in the new Convent Hall, corner of Twenty-fourth and Alabama streets. The hall, which is capable of seating between 300 and 400 people, was crowded, every available foot of standing room being utilized. The society, numbering 16 or 18 members, occupied seats on the platform, where were also seated several of the prominent clergy of the city and vicinity, among whom were Rev. Fathers Gibney, C. O'Connor, J. O'Connor, McNally, Kelly, Brosnan, Horgan, O. P., Cleary, Scanlan, Slattery, Brother Justin, etc.

The excellence of the exercises, and the spirit with which they were rendered, reflect great credit on the Society. The feature of the programme was a humorous lecture by a member of the Society, under the nom de plume of "Belmont Sarsaparilla." He kept the house in roars of laughter for half an hour. The musical part of the programme, under the direction of Miss Mollie Golden, was all that could be desired. Miss A. Block, whose rendition of Moore's Melodies is always so effective, seemed to have excelled herself in "Oh! Blame not the Bard," and deservedly received an enthusiastic encore, when she sang "The Pretty Girl Milking her Cow." Miss Nellie Sullivan also sang "God Bless you, Mollie Dear" very sweetly. The vocal quartette, "Give me my own Native Isle," was rendered with spirit and taste. The entertainment was a great success, and we congratulate St. Peter's parish in having a society which can furnish such a literary feast, combining instruction with pleasure.

The Monitor.

VOL. XXI. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY EVENING, MARCH 21, 1878. NO. 25.

A. WALDTEUFEL,
Cor. First and Fountain Sts.,
SAN JOSE, CAL.
Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Musical Instruments,
Music Books, Sheet Music,
Musical Merchandise in General.
Agent for Pianos made by
STEINWAY & SONS, New York.
KRANICH & BACH, New York.
C. ROENISCH, Dresden.
AND FOR ORGANS FROM
Horace Waters & Sons, and the Burdett Organ Company
My stock is immense. Orders are respectfully solicited, and will be promptly filled. Liberal discounts to Schools and Clergymen.

Youths' Directory.

Third Annual Report of the Superintendent.

SAN FRANCISCO, January 1, 1878.

To the Honorable Board of Managers of the Youths' Directory.

GENTLEMEN—Few words are needed in making this Report.

Your attention is most respectfully invited to the following brief Statement of facts and figures extracted from the records of the Institution.

10,363 boys, aged from 10 to 21, of all races and creeds, have been placed in service, that is to say, 4,150 in town and 6,235 in the country, since November 1, 1874, when you and other citizens of San Francisco organized the YOUTHS' DIRECTORY. During that time, also, 324 men, 166 women, and 731 young girls, have incidentally been supplied with situations; thus making a total of 11,928 persons who have obtained employment, in the last three years, through the agency of this Bureau. From factories, shops, stores, farms, and other places of industry, throughout the State, we often receive letters commendatory of the youthful toilers sent out from this Office.

RETURNS FOR THE YEAR 1877.

INCOME.

Dec. 31.	To regular subscriptions	$1,100 00
Dec. 31.	" donations solicited	319 25
		$1,419 25

EXPENDITURE.

Dec. 31.	By salaries, $80 per month	$960 00
"	" commission, 10 per cent. on $1,419 25 collected	141 90
"	" bills settled (vouchers transmitted to Treasurer)	290 95
"	" cash in hands of Treasurer	26 40
		$1,419 25

Number of beds of all sorts and conditions, provided with work in town	1,850
Number of beds of all sorts and conditions, provided with work in country	2,278
	4,128
Number of Beds furnished	2,485
" Meals served	8,504
" Beneficiaries remaining in the House, Dec. 31, 1877	20
" Applicants for relief, dismissed without the means to assist them	3,995

Many destitute families in the neighborhood are helped with daily food from our humble pantry, while quantities of cast-off clothing and other articles of wearing apparel, kindly presented by friends, are distributed among the ragged walls and stays under our care.

For the information of the public, it may be stated that the Youths' Directory is a temporary Shelter for little wanderers, until suitable openings are found for their services. The benefits of the Refectory, Dormitory, and Intelligence Bureau, are free to all; but we can meet only a little of the urgent demands constantly made on our scanty resources. Day by day we find ourselves overwhelmed by applicants for shelter, for food, or for work, and our stores are far inadequate to the wants of the multitude that implore us for shelter and the necessaries of life. Shall we have more means and ampler room, or shall we continue to reject the homeless, and send away, empty, the hungry? Some of the most prominent ladies and gentlemen in the community are active and zealous supporters of this Institution of mercy. Their fostering liberality is gratefully acknowledged. Bakers, butchers, grocers, and other dealers, too numerous here to be mentioned by names, generously responed to our frequent appeals. We tender them, individually, our sincere thanks for favors bestowed. It is obvious, however, that an establishment of such comprehensive scope as the Youths' Directory can no longer rely on fluctuating contributions and alms-giving for its maintenance. When, as in this case, there is no endowment, some steady source of income or a fixed provision is indispensable. The commonwealth of California may justly be invoked to sustain this free Protectory for young people. In common with other benevolent foundations of a like character, it is entitled to substantial aid from the State.

I would therefore ask the liberty to suggest that the time has come to petition the Legislature, now in session at Sacramento, for such an appropriation as will enable the Youths' Directory to carry on and extend its work of charity among the street children of San Francisco.

Respectfully submitted,

AMBROSE P. DIETZ, Superintendent.

PRESIDENT—Most Rev. Joseph S. Alemany, D. D., Archbishop of San Francisco.

BOARD OF MANAGERS—James K. Kelly, President; Gustave Touchard, Treasurer; Mich. Shall, O'Connor; Cornelius D. O'Sullivan; Peter H. Burnett; Henry Barcelloz; Richard Tobin; John Sullivan; Joseph A. Donohoe.

SECRETARY AND SUPERINTENDENT: Ambrose P. Dietz.

CHAPLAIN—Rev. Laurence Brosla.

COLLECTOR—Robert F. Hilke.

MATRON—Mrs. Dora Dietz.

MEDICAL ATTENDANT—Jos. Beckinger, M. D.

MESSENGER—James McManus.

St. Peter's Literary Society.

A literary and musical entertainment was given by this Society on the evening of the 18th inst., in the new Convent Hall, corner of Twenty-fourth and Alabama streets. The hall, which is capable of seating between 300 and 400 people, was crowded, every available foot of standing room being utilized. The society, numbering 16 or 18 members, occupied seats on the platform, where were also seated several of the prominent clergy of the city and vicinity, among whom were Rev. Fathers Gibney, C. O'Connor, J. O'Connor, McNally, Kelly, Brosnan, Horgan, O. P., Cleary, Scanlan, Slattery, Brother Justin, etc.

The excellence of the exercises, and the spirit with which they were rendered, reflect great credit on the Society. The feature of the programme was a humorous lecture by a member of the Society, under the nom de plume of "Belmont Sarsaparilla." He kept the house in roars of laughter for half an hour. The musical part of the programme, under the direction of Miss Mollie Golden, was all that could be desired. Miss A. Block, whose rendition of Moore's Melodies is always so effective, seemed to have excelled herself in "Oh! Blame not the Bard," and deservedly received an enthusiastic encore, when she sang "The Pretty Girl Milking her Cow." Miss Nellie Sullivan also sang "God Bless you, Mollie Dear" very sweetly. The vocal quartette, "Give me my own Native Isle," was rendered with spirit and taste. The entertainment was a great success, and we congratulate St. Peter's parish in having a society which can furnish such a literary feast, combining instruction with pleasure.

A Distinguished Visitor.

In a few days Bishop Conroy of Ardagh, county Longford, Ireland, Papal Legate to Canada, is expected to arrive in this city. In June last, Bishop Conroy was sent to Canada by the late Pope to adjust certain matters connected with the Church, and to establish a new University to Montreal, and having accomplished his apostolical mission, he is now visiting the leading Catholic institutions in the United States. In company with Bishop O'Connor he has visited St. Louis, Omaha and Salt Lake City, and intends to spend some time in California, where he has many personal friends among the clergy. After he graduated with distinguished honor at the University at Rome, Father Conroy was appointed Professor at All Hallow's Mission College, Dublin, where he remained six years. He afterwards became Secretary to Cardinal Cullen, and was finally ordained as Bishop of Ardagh. He is said to be a man of brilliant intellect and great learning, which made him a favorite of the late Pope, who selected him for important missions. Bishop Conroy's visit to this city is stated to have no official character, so far as is known.—Examiner.

The Splendid and Eloquent Lecture of Father Rooney on St. Patrick.

Ireland and the Inseparable Connection Between Religion and True Patriotism.

Delivered at St. Dominic's Church in this City.

"You are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a holy nation, a purchased people, that you may declare His virtues, who hath called you out of darkness into His admirable light."—1st Epistle St. Peter, chap. 2d, verse 9th.

BEGOTTEN CHRISTIANS?—It is not by baptism to be so presumptuous as to imagine that I can entertain you to-night with praise adequate to Ireland's glorious Apostle's deserts. You need not expect to behold a perfect delineation of the rare virtues and noble exercises of religion practised by him, for not St. Paul himself, who had ravished an audience of the Areopagus, nor St. Chrysostom who received, whilst he was electrifying his people with his golden eloquence, a spontaneous burst of applause, nor St. Basil, the Christian Demosthenes, could do justice to the subject before me to-night. Nay, there is no finite being that can truly paint the grand character of our national saint; it will then be reserved for the infinite alone to pronounce on the great accounting day a perfect eulogium of the life and labors of Ireland's Apostle, for he alone knows the immensity of good he has accomplished, and the intrinsic value of the virtues with which his soul was adorned. It is the common opinion of the learned that he was born in France, of a noble family, about the end of the fourth century. We are entirely ignorant of his career of life until his sixteenth year, when, by the disposition of an all-wise and just Providence, he was led captive, and sold to a petty prince in the county Antrim, Ireland. After being six years in bondage, he is miraculously delivered from his shackles. He feels within himself an ardent desire of serving that country, in which he endured all the pains and torture of temporal slavery, and desired to see her emancipated from the more galling yoke that Satan had put upon her, and that she might be baptized with the unction of faith. In his slumbers he sees the children of Ireland stretching forth their tiny hands toward him and imploring him in piteous tones to come among them, and admonister to them the consoling helps of religion. A soul like his that was on fire with the love of God, and consequently of his neighbor, could not resist such an appeal. He recognized that it was the will of God that he should dedicate himself to His service in the holy ministry, and he at once set about qualifying himself for that noble and more than angelic duty. He said within his body sweat, as God has evidently called me to be an apostle, to be a messenger of His divine word, He wishes that I take the proper means to arrive at such an august end. He is fully aware that there are three things which are essentially necessary to a priest, with which he can do all things and without which he will infallibly expose to perdition his own soul and the souls of those committed to his care—those three things are austerity, learning and zeal. In order to save his own soul he must be holy, and, therefore, he considered the sanctification of his own soul as paramount to every other consideration. Learning was of very great consequence if he had his own soul! He knew that all men are bound to live holy, but especially the ambassadors of Christ, to whom, in a special manner, it was said: "Be ye holy as I the Lord your God am holy." "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in heaven; be ye imitators of me as I am of My Father." Of him the apostle says: "Let them minister having no crime." He is fully impressed that the sacred Scriptures command austerity to priests especially. The second qualification that he knows is necessary for a priest is science, not that science that puffeth up, and tends rather to divert from, that serve to convince to the fulfilment of his duty, but that science that will aid and assist him in carrying out the great designs God had in view in selecting him and in calling him to the dignity, to which he aspired. He knew that it was necessary to be perfectly conversant with the Sacred Scriptures, which unhesitatingly he was to make the guide of his own life and that of others; he felt that he should become thoroughly acquainted with the Fathers of the Church who preceded him, in order that he may make their holy and untarnished conduct the rule of his own. To this knowledge he was bound, and nothing could dissuade him from the pursuit of it. He heard the divine oracle already passing sentence of condemnation on himself if he had become filled with the science without which it would be far better for him not to be enrolled among the clergy. Hearkened the Almighty declaring, in most emphatic language, by the mouth of the prophet Malachy, those truly remarkable passages: "Because you have rejected science, I have rejected you from the ministry of my priesthood." The lips of the priest shall keep knowledge, and they (the people) shall seek the law at his mouth, because he is the angel of the Lord of Hosts. From the prophet Osee he learned that the same Lord commanded the people to "ask the priests" on all points that in any way concerned their salvation, and therefore he will understand that if the priests are to answer the difficulties proposed by the people, they must be deeply versed in science. He stood terrified at the unerring words of Christ, "If the blind lead the blind, they will both fall into the ditch." He shuddered at those still more terrifying words of Holy Writ: "Wo to you blind leaders." Deeply pondering with those solemn maxims, he says within his noble soul, "I will not be ignorant of my duty; I will become a doctor as the apostle requires of me. If Scholasticus Lycurgus labored and traveled so much, in order that they might frame a code of laws for the great their neighbors, why should not I strenuously exert myself not to frame human laws, but to propound the greatest of all laws, verily, that of Jesus Christ." In keeping with this resolution, he undertook a painful journey to foreign parts, to enrich his mind with learning and experience, and spent in the acquiring of these all-out thirty years. Under Marcus of Tours he received a perfect knowledge of church discipline. After the death of this illustrious prelate, his uncle, he betook himself to the famous St. Germain of Auxerre, from whom he imbibed the knowledge of humanities and the inferior science, and by whom he was ordained priest. He also spent some time in Rome among the canons regular, from whom he obtained a thorough knowledge of the Sacred Scriptures. The third qualification, that he is fully aware to be necessary for a priest, is zeal for the spiritual welfare of his neighbor. For, said he, if every man is bound to love his neighbor as himself, the minister of God who dedicates himself in a special manner to His service is bound to undergo every danger, even death itself, for the salvation of souls, for Christ declares: "The good shepherd layeth down his life for his flock." Having the above qualifications required by God and His Church for properly fulfilling his ministry, he places himself in the hands of the Vicar of Christ, Pope Celestine, in order that he may receive from him his commission and credentials to preach. That holy Pontiff received him with open arms, and rejoiced exceedingly to find so noble and competent an instrument for the task in hand. He immediately consecrated him, gave him plenipotentiary power, and dismissed him with his benediction to the ocean island. Despite all opposition, despite every impediment thrown in his way by relations, by curious his thoughts and bends his course to beautiful Erin, determined to convert her. He cares not what dangers, what troubles, what toils he has to encounter, provided he can gain souls to Christ. He is willing, as was his prototype, St. Paul, to become an anathema to gain souls, and plant the Church. He was ready to offer himself as a holocaust, to suffer martyrdom, provided the Church would pullulate by the effusion of his blood. Behold, Children of St. Patrick, that grand old man, nearly sixty years of age, entering the land of our forefathers. At the approach of this Barjhean of the Gospel, darkness, ignorance and error departed from the land; their place was in eager to be found, and the contrary virtues ornamented the souls of those poor creatures who had lain in the shadow of error. A people who had penetrated forcibly into the whole island, strong, numerous, and the chosen of God, to whom eternal God in whose service he was so intently engaged. He proceeded to the Hill of Tara, in order to have a character preach to the chiefs of Ireland, who were then assembled there to celebrate their pagaish rites, fully aware that he would have to contend with the potent princes, and with the almost impressive argumentation of the learned Druids, but he knew, too, that he was more than a match for them, and he was convinced that he would have the current of impunity, and that he would rescue many noble souls from the very jaws of the dragon of error. As a reward of his courage and intrepidity, several were converted on the spot. Having gained a great victory here, and Christ, being encouraged thereat, he next repairs to Dublin and Munster, where he set forth the truths of Christianity with such unction and ardor that thousands enrolled themselves beneath the banner of the Cross. He turns his attention to the ordaining of fit ministers of the Gospel, men who were imbued with the spirit of self-sacrifice, and endowed with the heroism of apostles, men found worthy to be enrolled among the angels of the Church of the Lord of Hosts. He was a most tender father to all; all desired to be his offspring. The people of Ireland placed all their riches at his feet, saying, why should not we give all our earthly goods to the man who has caused the heavens to rain down so plentifully on us all spiritual favors? But no, he would never accept of the least present from them. His noble soul could not bear to be stalled with the base passion of lucre. He would rather give than take, and he showered profusely his alms on the poor. He had the Irish, as the apostles had the first Christians, all of one heart and one soul." His zeal knew no bounds, he was not satisfied with christianizing the people, he established colleges and seminaries of learning throughout the land; he procured them with the best teachers in order that he might cultivate those bright intellects, which the apostle himself assures us the Irish had. He filled the land with monasteries, for he saw, as he himself tells us, that unless the Irish once knew the truth, they would follow it and hold to it, and would carry it to its superlative height, and become apostles to themselves up to the most exalted practices of religion. After having converted all Ireland, he repaired to Rome to render an account of his mission and labors to the Supreme Pontiff to his successor in the chair of Peter. The venerable Vicar of Christ received him with open arms, and with the rapture peculiar to contemplating the spectacle of Ireland, and sent him back armed with the legislative authority. On his return to Ireland he spent some time in repairing and building monasteries and churches, and, in framing laws for the guidance and direction of his clergy. Now, seeing that his end was nigh, and that he had already accomplished his great task of evangelizing Ireland, he entered a monastery. There he lived for twenty years, practicising all virtues, according to the monastic life in all its unabated ardor. Under these circumstances did he render his pure soul into the hands of his Creator. What must now be his reward of that saint! If a simple saint, living in retirement and hunted from the face of the world, will be surrounded with ineffable light in God's Kingdom, what must not be the glory, the brilliant recompense of this Abraham of Ireland, this Melchisedec of the Irish priesthood, this Moses of the Irish legislature, this Saint John of Ireland's Virgins, this Saint Paul of her fiery and invincible apostle, this Saint Peter of the Church—the rock on which this special Church was founded, and which more than anywhere has partaken of the numerous and powerful powers of the Universal Church founded on Peter! He certainly must receive a great reward who made of a land that was filled with thorns and briars the garden that was covered with flowers of the most odoriferous kind, who planted in this garden quinces plants, the holy souls that continually sing the praise of the immaculate lamb, the lilies, the virgins, who, most of all, adorn our holy Church. His labors are summed up in brief, by saying that he converted all Ireland, he built innumerable monasteries, he erected seven hundred churches, consecrated three hundred and sixty-five bishops, and ordained three thousand priests. How sublime all this, and how great must or be the reward for his labors undertaken from a divine motive! I now turn my attention, in order to show still more forcibly how well St. Patrick did his work to the Irish Church herself. The children reflect the father, and the character of the father is deeply ingrained into the nature of the children. It is truly wonderful, after seeing so many tribes to which they have been subjected, to see the Irish Church as deeply rooted in the faith as when Patrick had christianized them. Who can explain how the Irish Church has remained firm and steadfast amidst the storms, unless it be not a Church established by the apostles, except that by, Peter, has come down to us! Where now is the Church of Antioch, Smyrna, Corinth, Jerusalem, Thessalonica, Ephesus, Colosse, and others founded by the first apostles who were certainly qualified directly by God himself? They have vanished from the face of the earth! The Roman See, the centre of unity built by and on Peter, remains. Like the See of Rome, the Irish Church shows supernatural life that never was or could be extinguished. There is, in fact, something very strange in this striking resemblance between Ireland and Rome, and who can explain why it is so? Unquestionably, the inscrutable fact, unswerving, undying, unmingle faith of Rome is in Ireland to this hour, and it can never be rooted out of the noble hearts of the Irish. God seems to have gifted Ireland with the durability of the faith of Rome. Now, why is it that Ireland has been so particularly blessed above all other nations and peoples? Why is it that the faith that is God given, remains in them as a nation, even as it does in the Roman Church—the mother and mistress of Churches, and to which all Churches must conform? I can assign three reasons for this wonderful effect that is as undeniable even to a child. The first is that St. Pat rick himself impressed on the minds of the Irish that they were Christians only in proportion as they were obedient to the Pope of Rome; this truth was so deeply imbedded in their souls, that in all troubles, in all doubts and anxieties, the Irish looked for comfort to Rome. Hear how our noble apostle speaks on this subject in his confessions: "Et ideo Hibernia, in fide Romana." "As you are Christians, so also be true Romans." That sentence, which has rung on the minds of the Irish in every age since its utterance, has been the safeguard of our faith. So long as we treasure up that truth in our souls, and Rome signifying, so long will we have durability of faith. Ireland never lacked to a heretic. Ireland never begat an archheretic, Ireland never lost the lustre of her faith, because St. Patrick taught her to be, above all things, Roman. Irishmen who have sinned, who have been guilty of every crime, who have lapsed into heresy, who have been schismatics, who have been apostates, who have been infidels, who have been Pagans, who have been Druids, who have been Fenians, who have been Orangemen, who have been Protestants, who have been Catholics, who have been priests, who have been bishops, who have been popes, who have been angels, who have been archangels, who have been cherubim and seraphim, who have been thrones and dominions, who have been principalities and powers, who have been virtues and powers, who have been the mighty ones of God, who have been the cherubim of God, who have been the seraphim of God, who have been God himself, who have been the Holy Ghost, who have been the Holy Trinity, who have been the unity of the Godhead, who have been the Blessed Virgin, who have been the Mother of God, who have been the Eternal Father, who have been the Eternal Word, who have been the Eternal Spirit

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY EVENING, MARCH 21

Subscribers will please specially look at the printed label on the margin or wrapper of the paper; the date thereon shows when the subscription expires. They should also know that their taking the paper from the office makes them liable for the subscription price as long as they continue to do so. Persons have no excuse to make for papers being sent after the time their subscription expires. If they wish their paper discontinued, by not taking it from the office the postmaster is bound to notify the publishers of that fact, and to have the paper stopped. We make this explanation for the information of those who think the excuse, when asked for payment, that they paid for it as long as ordered, but still continue to take it from the office.

Our Celebration of St. Patrick's Day.

Having given in our last issue what we considered were good and sufficient reasons why St. Patrick's Day should be celebrated by Irishmen in America, we shall now make a few remarks on the way in which the great festival was honored in San Francisco. The procession was well ordered and commendable in all its details, the body of mounted aids being particularly fine; but we must acknowledge that it was not as large or imposing as most of the previous ones. Without doubt great part of, if not all, the falling off was directly owing to the circumstance that the festival was really past and gone, and that numbers of those who would gladly have joined in the procession could not afford to spare another day to the gratification of their religious and national enthusiasm. However, all classes and callings of the Irish-American population were well represented. A large body of the clergy, Jesuit and Dominican Fathers, as well as seculars, participated, and were everywhere received with demonstrating of respect. A very pleasing feature in the procession was the appearance of the St. Patrick's Cadets, about fifty in number, in full uniform, with small rifles and bayonets. The ages of the lads ranged from ten to sixteen years. There were also the St. Joseph's Cadets, with their spirited brass band of twenty-one pieces, playing appropriate airs with much precision and harmony. During the passage of the procession, the beautiful chime of bells in St. Patrick's Church, the gift of Colonel Peter Donohue, saluted the processionists both going on and returning from their parade, with joyous peals. The literary exercises in the city and throughout the State were beyond the ordinary in excellence, and were highly creditable to those who were engaged in them. We note with much pleasure that most of the orators and poets were young Californians, the children of Irish parents. It was most consoling to see them thus closely identifying themselves with the cause of the country of their forefathers, as well as with the religion which should be the chief pride and glory of all. Plain was it to see that in energy and intellect they will well sustain the honor of their sires, while their education and culture shed lustre upon Santa Clara, Saint Ignatius and Saint Mary's, the Catholic Colleges wherein they were educated. In time to come, in the course of nature, they must be the leading men of our glorious and golden State, and it must be cheering, indeed, to every man of their blood and race to know that they are so thoroughly well fitted to discharge all the duties and responsibilities they may meet with honor, fidelity and efficiency.

Catholic Charity.

We think we shall be freely excused by all our friends for reverting to the topic of Catholic charity. We do not do so without just cause. Some newspapers and certain individuals, ignorant or careless of facts, have spoken of Catholics and their Church as being wanting in charity. Every other imaginable charge or reproach has been at one time or another, brought against Catholicity, save and except this; and that remained to gain publicity in the last session in San Francisco. We might write columns of indignant denunciation and call upon the history of the world to refute the unfounded and unmeaning accusation; but we prefer to state sound facts and quote some figures which are far more eloquent than words of ours could be. Facts are stubborn things, and figures will not lie. The compilation of these has cost us a great deal of time and trouble; but we consider both well spent, inasmuch as the result, we believe, will be to silence for ever the thoughtless assertions of Catholic faith and Catholic charity. Some of the entries from whom we got our statistics were unwilling to furnish them as they preferred doing their good work unnoticed. They sought not the praise of men but, like the Pharisees, they should lose their reward. It was only by showing that the honor of the Catholic community was at stake, that we could prevail upon them to disclose the magnitude of their deeds of benevolence. We shall first give the statistics of the purely charitable associations. The actual cash expended during the last year was as here stated:

St. Patrick's Vincent de Paul Society, Gentlemen	$2,600
St. Patrick's Vincent de Paul Society, Ladies	2,500
St. Mary's Cathedral Society for Relief of Poor	2,316
St. Francis Parish Society for Relief of Poor	1,500
St. Joseph's Parish Society for Relief of Poor	2,100
St. Ignatius Church for Relief of Poor, about	2,500
St. Francis, Mission, Society for Relief of Poor	300
St. Bridget's Society for Relief of Poor	250
Spanish Catholic Church Society for Relief of Poor	3,800

Here we have nearly eighteen thousand dollars distributed during 1877, at a time when distress was not generally complained of at all. We need hardly say that the efforts of the different societies have proportionately increased within the past three months, or since public effort was made to relieve those in need. We could not give to speak of charitable institutions. It is very true that some of these receive some sort of assistance from the city or State. A few bigots and politicians, who do not understand what they talk about, occasionally raise an outcry about "supporting sectarian institutions." We answer that we are not aware that the amount given by the city or State bears but a very small proportion, indeed, to the sums contributed annually by the Catholics themselves. Besides, they lose sight of the very important fact that the institutions which do receive a grant of public money have to remain pretty nearly the whole of it again in the shape of taxes upon their grounds and buildings. The difference between the grants and the taxes is so inconsequential, that practically the aid amounts to very little. Another consideration these bigots and fools never pause to estimate—the amount of additional taxation that it would be necessary to impose upon the people at large, if Catholics were to cease dispensing their charities. Catholic charity is not thrown away upon undeserving objects. There is not one recipient of it when the city or State would not have to assist in some shape or manner, if that charity were withdrawn. Here we give the statistics of these institutions for 1877:

Sisters of Mercy, free and half pay patients cost for this institution there is no appropriation $6,100
House of Mercy for aged females during the year 11,875
Magdalen Asylum, expenses for year for this institution, expended in city $2,500 22,005
Industrial School Female Department, for 1877 13,650
Female Orphan Asylum, South S. F. 32,820
Male Orphan Asylum, 280 inmates 12,570
Male Orphans, 50 in Sonoma 25,121
Vesta's Directory 7,419

Those figures represent the expenses necessarily incurred during the year 1877. Let us add the amounts expended by societies connected with churches and under church control, for the relief of sick members, medicines, medical attendance, burial of the dead, and benefits to widows and orphans. It is noticed that we do not include such organizations as the Ancient Order of Hibernians, Irish-Americans, and others, the members of which are almost exclusively Catholic, for we want to speak only of what the Church is doing. The figures for 1877 are:

Cathedral, St. Joseph's	$13,000
Cathedral, Total Abstinence Society	3,500
St. Francis St. Joseph's Society	3,000
St. Joseph's Temperance Society	2,500
St. Bridget's Temperance Society	500
Our Lady of Guadalupe Spanish Society	1,200
St. Mary's Ladies Benevolent Society	750

This gives a total of $24,246 in one year. Of private benevolence and individual charity, it is not in our power to say much, for those whose good deeds are chief pride and glory of all. Plain was it to see that in energy and intellect they will well sustain the honor of their sires, while their education and culture shed lustre upon Santa Clara, Saint Ignatius and Saint Mary's, the Catholic Colleges wherein they were educated. In time to come, in the course of nature, they must be the leading men of our glorious and golden State, and it must be cheering, indeed, to every man of their blood and race to know that they are so thoroughly well fitted to discharge all the duties and responsibilities they may meet with honor, fidelity and efficiency.

Catholic Charity.

We think we shall be freely excused by all our friends for reverting to the topic of Catholic charity. We do not do so without just cause. Some newspapers and certain individuals, ignorant or careless of facts, have spoken of Catholics and their Church as being wanting in charity. Every other imaginable charge or reproach has been at one time or another, brought against Catholicity, save and except this; and that remained to gain publicity in the last session in San Francisco. We might write columns of indignant denunciation and call upon the history of the world to refute the unfounded and unmeaning accusation; but we prefer to state sound facts and quote some figures which are far more eloquent than words of ours could be. Facts are stubborn things, and figures will not lie. The compilation of these has cost us a great deal of time and trouble; but we consider both well spent, inasmuch as the result, we believe, will be to silence for ever the thoughtless assertions of Catholic faith and Catholic charity. Some of the entries from whom we got our statistics were unwilling to furnish them as they preferred doing their good work unnoticed. They sought not the praise of men but, like the Pharisees, they should lose their reward. It was only by showing that the honor of the Catholic community was at stake, that we could prevail upon them to disclose the magnitude of their deeds of benevolence. We shall first give the statistics of the purely charitable associations. The actual cash expended during the last year was as here stated:

St. Patrick's Vincent de Paul Society, Gentlemen	$2,600
St. Patrick's Vincent de Paul Society, Ladies	2,500
St. Mary's Cathedral Society for Relief of Poor	2,316
St. Francis Parish Society for Relief of Poor	1,500
St. Joseph's Parish Society for Relief of Poor	2,100
St. Ignatius Church for Relief of Poor, about	2,500
St. Francis, Mission, Society for Relief of Poor	300
St. Bridget's Society for Relief of Poor	250
Spanish Catholic Church Society for Relief of Poor	3,800

Here we have nearly eighteen thousand

Let There be Justice as Well as Charity.

During the past few months the charity displayed among our Protestant fellow-citizens has been through the agency of their churches, been engaged in the Christian work of relieving the hungry and the distressed. In that space of time they expended almost eight thousand dollars, making no discrimination, as they state, of either nationality or sect. For this noble conduct they deserve the most sincere thanks of every lover of his fellow-creatures. But they have been compelled to desist from the dispensation of charity in the shape of free meals, and now confine their efforts to assisting deserving families at their own homes. We do not blame them for this, inasmuch as we very well know it would come to that sooner or later. With the larger and more extended experience attached to the Catholic system of charity, we know beforehand that indiscriminate relief would turn out a failure. We commend them for continuing their exertions in a more prudent and efficacious manner. But, while they do this, we would most respectfully ask why do they not do justice at the root of the evil, the first cause of the prevailing distress, by ceasing to employ Chinamen. It is well known that, as a body, Catholics do not employ them in any capacity. There may be individual exceptions, but the rule holds good. Now, how many honest, industrious women would be helping to support their families by washing or mending if the Mongolian laundries were not patronized! How many young girls would be earning a respectable living for themselves by working out if the Chinese were not employed as domestics! How, many boys and girls would be learning remunerative trades if employers were engaged in workshops and factories? The money handed over to the Chinese every year by white employers of all kinds, mounts up into the millions of dollars. If this money was spent as it ought to be, among those of our own blood and race and religion—we do not apply the latter word in a sectarian sense—there would be no distress in San Francisco today. This is a self-evident truth. Now, we say again, that the individuals and companies blameable for the presence of the Chinese here are Protestants almost without exception. The steamship companies and the railroad companies, who first brought them over, are not certainly composed of Catholics. Those Catholics, who from their position could be large employers of labor, did all they could to discourage collision. Col. Peter Donohue, for example, built his railroad entirely by white labor, though he had to compete with those who were employing Chinese. It is true that Chinese are now at work on his road between San Rafael and Petaluma, but he is in no way to blame for that. He purchased that road as it stood with all its liabilities and unfulfilled contracts, and he could not interfere. Now Jews, Protestants and Catholics are all brethren in the sense that they worship the same Supreme Being, and his law, the decalogue, is the basis of their civilization and of all their civil and domestic relations. Hence, they are bound to prefer the interests of their brethren, to that of the heathen, and should not do an injury to them under the pretence of doing charity to Pagans.

The Right of Free Speech.

The right of free speech should be secure and untrammeled in every country that claims to be reckoned among civilized and progressive nations. Where it is denied, there can hardly be any such thing as true liberty, and really democratic institutions must remain unknown. In short, it is the foundation of all the rights and liberties for which good and patriotic men will unanimously, and for the achievement of which they are always willing to lay down their lives. We do not, of course, mean that the freedom of speech should be altogether unrestricted, for that would be simply licentiousness alike for the individual and for the community. There are bounds suggested by common sense, by feelings of decency, by the desire of preserving public tranquility, by respect for religion and morality, and by a hundred other considerations, which all educated and intelligent men can understand. But these are not to be taken as in the least interfering with the use of free speech, since they are the guardian, and preservers of it. If license were permitted, orators would soon degenerate into vituperation, and violence instead of argument would decide every matter of discussion. Then there would be no satisfactory settlement of anything, and confusion and misunderstanding would paralyze the efforts of those seeking to promote the public welfare. The constituted authorities, interpreting and carrying out the laws, are the persons upon whom properly rests the responsibility of according or refusing the right of assembly and free speech to any men or body of men. They may make mistakes, they may be swayed by their political or religious prejudices; they may grant permission to unworthy parties and refuse to reputable religious; but in nearly all cases it is wiser, as well as more beneficial in the end, to yield to them and to seek some other mode of redress. It is only tyrants in any country that the Government or authorities can long deprive the people of any prerogative justly due them, and it is absolutely impossible in this. And now we come to the most important, as also the most practical, portion of our remarks, which, we feel, we cannot too deeply impress upon the minds of our readers. When the authorities of any place have given permission to people to hold a meeting, or when they do not think it necessary to formally refuse them permission to hold a meeting, the right of these people to assemble and to speak just what pleases them, should be held sacred and inviolate. It makes no matter whether they may be a small minority or not; it makes no difference whether their views are popular or the reverse; it is not of concern whether they are regarded as friends of the people or as enemies; they have a perfect right to meet and express their opinions, subject only to the action of the authorities and the supervision of the laws. No orderly and respectable citizen, who claims to have rights of his own, will interfere with them or molest them in any way, however much he may differ from them. In cases where meetings are called for the purpose of favoring or condemning any particular measure or project, only those who agree with the object of the assemblage should properly speak or attend, or if they do attend, they should make no rude manifestations of their presence. Their way of combating obnoxious ideas or principles should never be by the mode of tumult, obstruction or intimidation, which is only to be expected from disorganized mobs—but they should, if they have anything to say, at an opposition meeting elsewhere, and then the public at large could easily judge which idea had the better of the argument, and which was most worthy of support. Where meetings are called to discuss the pros and cons of a question, as very often happens, though it is doubtful whether it is desirable, or whether substantial good follows such a course, the majority should elect the officers, should rule the meeting, taking good care, however, to render fair play to their adversaries, the minority, and so far from depriving them of any of their acknowledged rights, to be rather liberal towards them. Each and every citizen goes into an open meeting with equal rights and privileges, and is free to assume any position awarded him by the voice of his fellow citizens, and all who are not willing to submit to the decision of the meeting in this or other respects should leave quietly or remain transquil. We are led to make these observations by the present state of affairs between the peace and war association in London, and by the recently received account of the breaking up of O'Donovan Rossa's lecture by the Orange rowdies of Ottawa, in Canada. We do not know which occurred a few evenings ago in Platt's Hall in our own good city. It seems to us that if men considered even a little reasonable and fair play, and honest dealing between man and man, such unseemly exhibitions could never take place. We regret the appearance of violence or physical force into an assembly, called together for the purpose of amicable discussion, were only properly estimated, it would be deemed cowardly and punished with marvelous vigor and promptitude. He who, guilty of that conduct makes himself responsible morally if not legally, for everything that happens afterwards, even though it should, which happens in most cases, follow. It is the first step in wrong that puts anyone on the road to ruin. We trust that the citizens of San Francisco will hold fast by the principles of fair play, which are alone worthy of their great country and free institutions, and guard the sacred right of free speech with jealous eyes and armed hands from the attacks of rash and unthinking individuals, no matter to what class of society they belong, or what political party they may choose to act. The laws of discussion, with just as the laws of the State, should be no respecter of persons, but, placing an equal border upon the shoulders of all, should act as the defender and conservator of the liberties of all.

The Complicated Eastern Question.

The fight between the Russians and Turks on the field of battle was hardly less sharp or exciting than that which is now being waged by the pens of the ablest diplomats of Russia, Austria, Prussia, England, France and Turkey. Representatives of some States, too, like Roumania, Servia and Greece, have joined in the literary fray and added to its confusion if not to its fierceness. All are volunteering their forces so as to occupy the best possible position at the projected conference. We say "projected," for although all the Powers pretend to wish for it, and the date has even been settled upon, there appears to be a large probability that it will never take place. Only the most sanguine expect any beneficial result from this conference, even if it should assemble according to agreement, for the different governments enter it with such directly conflicting wants and wishes, that it is impossible for them to be harmonized. Indeed it would hardly be so much to say that some of the great powers would send their diplomatists to the assembly rather in the hope of embittering the controversy, and thus extending the area of the conflict than in the desire of establishing a lasting and satisfactory peace. Nothing, any more than individuals, do not like to bring their money, or lay it out uselessly. Now, for months past England and Austria have been spending millions of dollars upon warpreparations, and they must have done so under the conviction that hostilities were unavoidable. If there were any reasonable hopes that peace could be maintained they would have spared their cash, or, at all events, withheld its expenditure until the emergency seemed more pressing. England is the most anxious for war, but in urging the comparative smallness of her army, is unwilling to strike before she has secured an ally capable of materially assisting her by the blow. Her fleet is, to be sure, the finest in the world, its equal has never been seen upon the ocean; but then the battle is one that must be decided on land and not upon the sea. All she could hope to do with it is to blockade the Russian towns, or else assist her troops in holding certain desirable fortified positions on the Asiatic shore. Unassisted her army dare not, and does not, make from the protection of the guns of the fleet. Austria is not exactly averse to war. She would sooner fight than allow Russia to become powerful on her southern boundary, or obtain control of the mouth of the river Danube. But she is yet of opinion that she can obtain all the guarantees she requires by the peaceable way of diplomacy, and that she naturally would wish will not push her quarrel with Russia until she is in success, but on the contrary she will speak her fair and will appeal to her sense of justice. Andrassy, Premier of the Austro-Hungarian Parliament, has declared that the demands of the Czar are by no means extravagant but rather moderate, and that Austria will be benefitted if they are conceded. Prussia, however, can not conflict with any, though the Kaiser, it confesses that Russia has gone from concession to concession in the course of a year and can see no reason why she should be asked to go any more to avoid all disturbance in the Orient, but, has declared that the demands of the Czar are by no means extravagant but rather moderate, and that Prussia

SPIRIT OF THE CATHOLIC PRESS.

The Future of the Papacy.

The following able article, which we cut from the Baltimore Mirror, possesses great interest for Catholic readers: "Among the many wonders in the marvelous life of the Catholic Church, there are none more suggestive of serious thought than those presented in her present relations with the world. Religions thought is gradually but surely passing into two strong, distinct and antagonistic forms. The one is represented by Catholicism, with its well defined order or religious faith and dogma; the other is atheism, grouping around it the scientific thought of the age, and presenting Protestantism in its final analysis of absolute negation. Practically, Protestantism has abdicated its assumed mission as a teacher of religious truth; and its discordant elements are being steadily fused into combination with the religious skepticism of the age.

In the social and political order, the present condition of the temporal authority of the Popes is awakening an interest and attracting the attention of the most enlightened statesmen of the period. The history of the Papacy is being studied in its past moral and social relations with society; and the deeper these studies penetrate into the depths of historic truth, the stronger grows the conviction that, as modern society owes its growth, development, and prosperity to the direct ministry influences of the Papacy in the past, so in the future these same influences may be utilized and directed to the conservation and perpetuity of that society. Temporal power of the Popes from the time of Stephen II. to that of Pius VII. has participated in the vicissitudes and triumphs of their spiritual administration. They have risen and fallen, not by force, but always together, when attacked by arbitrary kings, princes, and feudal barons. If we weigh impartially the effects upon society of the trials and triumphs of the Papacy, we shall be led irresistibly to the conclusion that its victories redound to its glory, while the trials through which they were achieved have but added to their lustre. For eight centuries anterior to the so-called Reformation, the temporalities of the Papacy were the common property of the United Christendom. By the common testimony of Catholic and Protestant historians, the civil authority of the Popes constituted a bulwark of defense for the protection and security of their spiritual jurisdiction.

From Henry IV. of Germany, to Napoleon I. of France, the assaults of the spiritual supremacy of the Popes have invariably directed their assaults against their temporal authority. The instinct of hatred to a Church whose moral and religious teachings opposed the lawlessness and usurpation of emperors and kings was sufficiently enlightened to ambitious rulers that they could most effectively weaken the spiritual authority by first paralyzing the temporal arm which upheld and sustained it. To this end have conspiracies and treasons been blotted in the provinces of the Popes by the Orsinos, the Palmerinos, the Bismarcks of modern times. These have but re-enacted the perfidies of their exemplars of a past historic period. Those of to-day are apparently more successful, and, humanly speaking, the temporal sovereignty of the Popes like the dynasty of the Stuarts in England, the Capets of France, seems to have passed into the shadows of history. But the historic analogy, by default of the essential resemblances, fails in logical accuracy and conclusive force. The history of the Papacy is unique and without a parallel in the annals of time. Its life has been a providential one, or Christianity has been a myth, never possessed, the prestige of a divine origin. The Catholic Church and Christianity, the Papacy and its temporal sovereignty, are parts of one stupendous whole, conceived in the mind of Deity, planned to an end that binds man and humanity to God and eternity, and pledged, through trials and sufferings, to an earthly mission that must endure till time shall be no more.

This historic life corresponds with their supernatural existence. Both depends on the promises of the Saviour for their vitality and perpetuity. If these promises fail now, their utterance was a snare and a delusion from the beginning. If they still retain the vitality of their inspired utterance, they will contain a truth that will never perish from the world. The present condition of the Papacy, frightful as it is, and hopeless as it may seem to be, cannot be pleaded as conclusive of what is to be in the future. The inductions of history are totally adverse to such conclusion. The Papacy survived its long agony through the tenth century. Its seventy years of Babylonian captivity at Avignon manacled its power and diminished for a time the lustre of its earlier glories. But it again rose out of its exhaustion and spoke to its mission of Christian civilization with the supernatural energy which it inherited from the crib of Bethlehem, and which was consecrated in bloodshed on Calvary. The world even now pays a reluctant tribute to the presence of this vital and superhuman energy. A spiritual unity holds the faithful in stronger bonds of love and affiliation to the Holy See than ever existed before. The longing pass of European nations is fixed, as though by supernatural fascination, to the Roman Vatican and the august prisoner whom it holds. Bowed down by age, harassed in soul by the afflictions that have fallen on the flock committed to his charge, and falling tenderness and the mingled sympathies of his faithful children and the howling blasphemies of atheists and revolutionists, the world turns to him to ponder on the probable results that may follow his death. This is the sublime attitude of the Papacy to-day.

Then and Now.

As illustrating the change that has taken place in public sentiment in Boston upon this subject of Catholicity during the last thirty years, we publish the two following paragraphs:

"A recent lecturer in this country in the course of his lecture stated, that having at one time expressed his surprise to Dr. Brownson that it had taken him so long a time to enter the Catholic Church, Dr. Brownson replied: 'Four years before I became a Catholic, when I was more of an infidel than anything else, I had the thought that the truth might be in that old Church; but I was afraid to touch it, for I would have preferred almost to risk my immortal soul than to become a Papist in Boston at that time.'

'Dr. Brownson, as is well known, did become a "Papist," and suffered no little in this life because of it. He is, we trust, receiving a glorious reward in the eternal world. But times have changed somewhat in Boston since Dr. Brownson received the grace (and corresponded with that grace) to lay himself, with all his learning and rare intellectual gifts, at the feet of Holy Mother Church. Then Catholics were few, and generally poor and despised in Boston. The following from a correspondent of the Providence Journal gives some idea of the change that has since then taken place:

"The religious element which is supposed to underlie all the 'isms' certainly is as forcible here as it can be anywhere while freedom of thought is permitted. Catholicism doubtless shows the strongest foundations, if we are to make a statistical measure of its power. Its cathedrals do not stand like some churches, waiting to be sold for debt. Neither are their temporary tabernacles constructed to hold the enthusiastic followers of revivalists." — Catholic Sentinel.

MISCELLANEOUS.

HAMS.

CHOICE EASTERN SUGAR-CURED HAMS Retailed at 13½ Cents per pound. Choice Butter from 40 to 50 Cents per Roll. Also Pure Coffees, Spices, Teas, etc.

Linsley & Co's Yeast Powder the Best in the World. Try it.

LINSLEY & CO.,
546 and 547 Sansome Street, near Clay.
f-14-3m

Send for Circular for Kunkel's
AMERICAN CITHERN.
The New Musical Stringed Instrument, Combining the Positures of the Harp and Guitar.

Over 100,000 have been sold in six months. Prices $4 to $5, with Instruction Books. Any one can learn to play on the CITHERN in half an hour.

BANCROFT, KNIGHT & CO.,
SOLE AGENTS,
720 Market Street, San Francisco.
f-14-3m

SWEET Chewing NAVY Tobacco

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. JOHN'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
SAN JUAN ..... CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION IS UNDER THE Care of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary. The location is remarkably healthy, the building large, the grounds spacious and well adapted for healthful exercise and recreation.

The scholastic year commences August 16 and terminates June 24.

TERMS
(Payable half-yearly in advance):

Board, tuition, washing and mending .	$200 00
Entrance fee (to be paid but once)	10 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month	6 00
French, per month	2 50

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, plain ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

Boarders are received at any time through the year.

For prospectus and further particulars apply to SISTER CARMEN ARGELAGA, Superiress.
ad16

BELLS, ETC.

MENEELY'S BELLS.
WEST TROY, NEW YORK.
Established in 1826.

CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND other Bells, made of copper and tin, warranted satisfactory. Prices and catalogues apply to MENEELY & COMPANY, West Troy, New York.

NOTICE
SUBSCRIBERS' EDITION OF THE NEW WORK,
"The Irish Race in California,"
Will be ready for delivery in a few days.
m27

SULLIVAN KELLY & CO.,
Northwest cor. Pine and Front Sts
Where they offer for sale the Largest Stock of
PAINTS, OILS, GLASS,
ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST, AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES.
101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,
a28 110 PINE STREET.

THE NEW WORK (ILLUSTRATED),
"The Irish Race in California,"
BY DR. QUIGLEY.
Is now in the Press, and will be ready for delivery in thirty days.
ja24

RUPTURE!
Use no more Metal Trusses While suffering from Rupture or steel springs; SHERMAN'S PATENT MAGNETIC ELASTIC TRUSS is worn with ease and comfort NIGHT AND DAY and will perform a cure in most cases. Sent by mail to all parts of the world.
ad 1m

REMOVAL!
BOOMHOWER & DOWNING,
Fashionable Pattern Cutters,
Have removed from 112 Market street to 24½ Geary street.
m7 1m

$2500 A YEAR. Agents wanted. Business legitimate. Particulars free. Address J. WIDNER & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

New Advertisements.

KASKEL'S
ONE PRICE
HAT STORE.
No. 423 Kearney Street,
BET. PINE AND CALIFORNIA, SAN FRANCISCO.

Reasons why you should buy your Hats at
KASKEL'S.
1.—He imports his entire stock from first hands, and buys for CASH.
2.—He receives his Hats from the manufacturers direct, and therefore keeps up the latest styles.
3. Paying Cash to manufacturers, he is able to sell goods lower than any other Hat Store.
4.—As he positively has only ONE PRICE, you can with safety buy your goods, and be assured that your neighbor will not buy cheaper than yourself.
5.—A child will be as safe to send for his purchase as the closest buyer.
m3 1y

THE CENTAUR LINIMENT. (S are of two kinds, the WHITE is for the human family; the YELLOW is for horses, sheep and other animals. Testimonials of the effects produced by these remarkable Preparations are wrapped around every bottle, and may be procured of any druggist, or by mail from the Office of THE CENTAUR COMPANY, 46 Dey street, New York City.

REMOVAL.
ARMES & DALLAM
HAVE REMOVED THEIR STOCK OF Woodenware, Twines, Brushes, Etc.
FROM 215 and 217 SACRAMENTO STREET TO
113 and 117 Front Street,
BETWEEN CALIFORNIA AND PINE. m27 1m

INFORMATION WANTED OF PETER McCABE, of county Monaghan, Ireland, who left New Orleans about 26 years ago for San Francisco. He lived some time in the State of Illinois before going to California. His wife's mother, who is now 87 years old, and her sisters, Esther Hogan and Elizabeth Claffee, would like to hear from him. If any person could give the required information they will please direct their letter to the address of Thomas Regan, Newcastle, Laurence county, Pennsylvania.

Advertisement has appeared in the New York papers, and at that New York excepted by the Sisters of Charity for the benefit of Deaf Mutes, a Boy about 14 years of age, named Thomas Regan, who left his home in Newcastle, Pennsylvania, about 3 years ago. Any information will be received by the Sisters of Charity, New York City.

Compositors of Chicago in a procession on their way to the office of the Times, during the late strike of printers. Illustrated Sketches of the Strike, Monday, November 11, 1872. Sold by all Newsdealers, or sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of 10 cents. Address, ILLUSTRATED NEWS CO., 41 Park Row, New York.

Cor. Clay and Sansome Sts., San Francisco.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY
MANUFACTURE THOSE CELEBRATED BELLS for Churches, Academies, Public Schools and Fire Alarms. Also, Chime of Bells for Churches. Address HENRY McSHANE & CO., Baltimore, Md.
m15

New Advertisements.

OWEN McCABE,
Importer and dealer in all kinds of
Feathers, Down, Irish and German Linen Tickings.
Feather Warerooms and Pillow Manufactory, 821 Market street, opposite Fifth, San Francisco. All Feathers sold warranted to be well dressed with my famous Cabinet Steam Renovator. Feather Bedding made to order. Old Feathers renovated. Orders promptly attended to.
ad1 1f

HERRMANN
Sells More
HATS
Than any Store in Town.
Be he gives the rest to the Money!
609 Kearny and 609 Market Streets.
ad1 1f

HATS! HATS!
YOU can buy your hats and caps 25 per cent. cheaper than at any other house in the city AT
J. WORE'S,
609 Washington Street,
Opposite Montgomery Ave ad1 1f San Francisco

Wonder Millinery Store,
No. 1016 Market Street,
Opposite Fifth street San Francisco.
The Cheapest Place in the city for Hats, Flowers, Feathers, etc.
ad1 1m

W. M. SEARBY,
DRUGGIST,
869 Market street,
NEAR FIFTH STREET.
"Searby's Drug Store, 869 Market street, is by all odds the most extensive establishment of the kind that we have ever discovered. Journal, February 7th. ad1 1f

JOHN L. BOONE,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
AND
Solicitor of Patents,
HAS WITHDRAWN FROM THE FIRM of Hawes & Co., with whom, as one of the firm, he managed the Mining and Scientific Practice for the past ten years, and has established a Law Office and Patent Agency
At 309 Sansome st., in the Hallock Block, where he transacts all kinds of business connected with Patent Solicitation and Patent Law Practicable, and first-class work. mh14 1m

L. E. PRATT. A. E. SPOFFORD.
PRATT & METCALFE,
Attorneys and Counselors at Law,
Rooms 26, 21 and 22 Real Estate Associates Building, No. 220 Montgomery street, San Francisco. Accessible by Elevator at No. 220 Montgomery street or on Laura Place, next New Stock Exchange. ad14 1m ENCOURAGE HOME INDUSTRY.

The Workmen Must be Employed.
THEREFORE WE ARE SELLING THE following articles at a fraction above cost:
American Watches;
Ladies' and Gents' Gold Chains, California made;
Gold Bracelets, California made;
Gold Lockets, California made;
Gold Rings and Pins;
American Clocks;
American Silver Ware, etc.
Orders filled and sent C. O. D. to any part of the United States.
REPAIRS done by Experienced Workmen.
ROBT. MAYERS & SON,
213 Kearny Street,
SAN FRANCISCO. mh14 1m

BUY ONLY THE NEW AMERICAN
It is the Only Sewing Machine which has a Self-Threading Shuttle,
It has Self-Setting Needle,
Never breaks the Thread;
Makes Strong Stitches;
It is the Lightest Running;
The Simplest, the Most Durable,
And in Every Respect
The "Best Family Sewing Machine!
The "New American" is vastly learned, does not get out of order, and will do more work with less labor than any other machine. Illustrated Circular furnished on application.
AGENTS WANTED.
S. B. KNOX, Manager. Office and Salesroom, 1216 Market street, San Francisco, Cal.
ad1 1f

$25 CARDS, 25 styles, 10 cts., or 20 Chromo Cards, 20c., with name, J. B. HUSTED, Nassau Street, N. Y. f28 13t

$3 GOLD PLATED WATCHES. Warranted 3 yrs. SILVER WATCH, Jewelled, Hunting Case, Warranted 3 yrs. Sent free to any address for $3. Address, COULTER & CO., 174 Chatham Street, New York.

DR. FORREST,
REDWOOD CITY ..... CALIFORNIA
m29

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA INEZ COLLEGE.
SANTA BARBARA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.
CONDUCTED BY THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED on the Santa Inez River, in a beautiful valley of the Santa Ynez, at the foot of the Santa Inez mountains, by a direct line, from the ocean, four miles, by stage from Gaviota Landing, four miles by stage from Buellton, and by stage from the Old Mission Church, in the Santa Ynez Valley. Terms of tuition, board, etc., give to the Superior, Santa Inez, Santa Barbara, or Gaviota, post office.

The dry season, so disagreeable in other parts of the State, but adds an additional charm to the crateful shades of Santa Inez. What is still more appropriate for the education of youth than that in which beauty and sublimity contend for the mastery, where the gently rounded hills and undulating plains seem to gambol at the feet of the ragged mountains; where the happy distillation of the hills hastens to swell the Santa Inez, and the balmy breath of the forest and the flower is stirred by the joyous songs of nature's choir. The good influence of a location so charming exercised in such a place is indeed calculated to cause the mind to "look through nature up to nature's God."

The mildness and suitability of the climate of Santa Barbara are not surpassed in the world for profession. There are few invalids who have for a season visited the balmy air and of the beautiful and varied scenery of this county, who have not returned improved in health of body and mind. In view of these facts Santa Inez College may be safely recommended as a most desirable boarding school.

The regular course of the Most Rev. Archbishop the Brothers have taken up, is adapted to the wants of the age, and adapted to the age of eight and sixteen. The period for participation is from Aug. 15 to June 30.

Stagecoaches make regular trips from San Francisco to Gaviota.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INcorporated according to the Laws of the State of California, to confer academical honors, will commence the ninth scholastic year on Monday, January 7, 1878. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough English education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once	$15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter	62 50
Washing, per quarter	12 50

Physicians' fees, when it may be preferred to pay the lady in case of sickness 5 00

Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, each per month, one lesson extra charge for the French, Spanish or German language, per month 5 00

Fancy Needlework 5 00

Tuition will be charged from the time a pupil enters, and will be made half a session in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of a session. ad1 1f

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE.
SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL Session of this College will open on Monday, August 5, 1878. This College is founded in 1851, and is the oldest Institution of learning in California. It possesses a most complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable Cabinets of Mineralogy and Geology. It has extensive Gardens, Vineyards, Orchards, Flowering Plants, Photography and Instrumental Music for the latter a new building 160x40 has just been completed, fitted up with all the modern improvements.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial.

TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance)

Board, Tuition, Bed and Bedding, per session	$175 00
Washing and Mending of Linen	50 00
Use of Philosophical Apparatus, Chemicals and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session	10 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to Ignatius College, 84 Market street, San Francisco.

REV. A. BRUNNENKES, S. J., President.
ja3

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
BENICIA ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in the healthy and pleasant town of Benicia. The scholastic year commences the second Monday in August, and ends about the middle of June.

TERMS:
(Payable half yearly).

Board and Tuition	$225 00
Entrance fee	10 00
Washing	45 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $20.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

The Expressage on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.

Letters of boys may be addressed to the Brothers of Benicia.

N. B.—The above establishment is also provided with a Boarding School.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to the Superiress. ad26

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE,
344 Jessie St, bet. Fourth & Fifth,
SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS LITERARY INSTITUTION WAS incorporated according to the laws of the State, on the 5th of April, 1859, and empowered to confer academical degrees with "such literary honors as are granted by any University in the United States."

The design of this Institution is to give a thorough Classical, Mercantile and Philosophical education. This, besides the classical, there is also a Commercial course.

The College is intended for day scholars only.

TERMS PER MONTH:
(Payable in advance):

Tuition, in Preparatory Department	$3 00
" in Grammar Department	5 00
" in Higher Department	8 00

EXTRA CHARGES:

For the use of Instruments in Natural Philosophy, Chemistry, per month	$2 00
For the use of Instruments, etc., second year, per month	5 00
For each Academical Degree	10 00

REV. JOHN PINASOU, S. J., President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive and the building is large and convenient.

The Course of Studies embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:
(Invariably half yearly in advance):

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per annum	$200 00
Music, Harp, or Guitar, per month, $6 50	66 25
Guitar, per month, $5	52 50

No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The scholastic year of 10 months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to SISTER CHARITY,
ja26 Santa Barbara, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1868, chartered in 1868 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on Delmas street, opposite the Old Mission Church.

A large addition has recently been erected for the more ample accomodation of boarding pupils.

The course of instruction embraces all the branches necessary to the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

Parents, in entrusting their children to the care of the Sisters, may feel perfectly satisfied that every attention will be given to their intellectual and moral culture, while the system of government combines sufficient firmness, with maternal solicitude, to insure the real progress and advantage of the pupil.

The Twelfth Annual Session will commence Thursday, July 19, 1877.

TERMS:

Per quarter session, (payable in advance.) Board, tuition, washing, and use of bed linen	$65 00
Music, with use of instrument	15 00
Vocal Music	5 00
Drawing and Painting	5 00
Vocation French and Spanish	5 00

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.
Terms per month (in advance.)

Rhetoric Classes	$5 00
Grammar Classes	4 00
Intermediate Classes	3 00
Primary Classes	2 00

Pupils pupils residing at a distance from the College, and desiring a hot luncheon, will be provided therewith at the Refectory of the Sisters, at the rate of 25 cents per week.

For particulars apply to the Superiress.

Stamped envelopes for the reply should be inclosed to the Superiress. ad26

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS incorporated according to the laws of the State of California, and empowered to confer academical honors, will commence the ninth scholastic year on Monday, January 7, 1878. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough English education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once	$15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter	62 50
Washing, per quarter	12 50

Physicians' fees, when it may be preferred to pay the lady in case of sickness 5 00

Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, each per month, one lesson extra charge for the French, Spanish or German language, per month 5 00

Fancy Needlework 5 00

Tuition will be made half a session in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of a session. ad1 1f

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE.
SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL Session of this College will open on Monday, August 5, 1878. This College is founded in 1851, and is the oldest Institution of learning in California. It possesses a most complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable Cabinets of Mineralogy and Geology. It has extensive Gardens, Vineyards, Orchards, Flowering Plants, Photography and Instrumental Music; for the latter a new building 160x40 has just been completed, fitted up with all the modern improvements.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial.

TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance)

Board, Tuition, Bed and Bedding, Washing and Mending of Linen, Use of Philosophical Apparatus, Chemicals and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session	$175 00
Use of Bed and Bedding, per session	15 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to Ignatius College, 84 Market street, San Francisco.

REV. A. BRUNNENKES, S. J., President.

ST. MATHEW'S ACADEMY,
CONDUCTED BY THE
Sisters of St. Dominic,
RENO, NEVADA.
For particulars address
SISTER SUPERIOR.

We have to apologize for the non-appearance of our Irish intelligence this week—our readers are aware, there was a heavy snow blockade in the Union Pacific Railroad quite recently, and the mails were much delayed in consequence. Our Irish exchanges on that account came too late to be wanted of this week.

We give in ben thered the excellent speech on the Income Question delivered in Sacramento last week by Mr. Hogg in the Assembly. It is taken from the Record-Union of March 16th. Fully recognizing the importance of this question to our State, we cheerfully allot the space at our disposal to this statement of opinion from a representative of the people. 'On the

CHINESE QUESTION

Mr. Hogg addressed the House as follows:

Mr. Hogg—Mr. Speaker. There has been no measure before the House this session that I feel as much interest in as the one now under consideration. This is not the mere question of whether you or I, or, shall I be permitted to remove the carcass of a departed relative or friend. But it involves the question, for which I think the bill was introduced, whether or not it will have the effect of checking the immigration of Chinese into our State. It is a well-known fact to all that has given the subject their attention, that they are the most superstitious people upon the face of the earth. Sir, I know from conversing with them, that when they die they think that they are irreverably lost to the Chinese Empire, and that the world to come if they are not taken back to their native soil for burial. I have conversed with Chinamen upon this subject, and I have yet to find one among them that would not consent to be left to rot in a foreign land; and I am well satisfied that if this bill should become a law it would have a beneficial effect in carrying out the intention of the Chinese to our shores. As the highest Courts of our land have stripped us of all the protection thrown around us by the Constitution of the State and the principles of self-government, it behoves us at this session to pass some law that will give to the thousands of unemployed in our noble State a means of relief. Sir, there are at the time we are jointing in upon us by the arrival of almost every steamship from the Celestial Kingdom. Sir, from an experience of twenty-eight years with them, I feel warranted in saying that this bill will be semplish as much, if not more, than any law of a different character, which contemplates the stopping of Chinese immigration by lawful means. Mr. Speaker, the National Government must do something to check this enormous evil, and stop the Chinamen from landing here, and spreading over this and other States of our Union. If the National Government will not act, the State of California must act. And, sir, should it do, through their representatives, fail to give to the people remedies, my word for it, Mr. Speaker, the people will rise in their majesty and strike in their defense. The battle-cry will be the same that our fathers shouted against tyranny and oppression.

Strike for your altars and your fires,
Strike for the green graves of your sires,
God and your native land.

And when that day comes many will be the rapers of the Chinese Empire, who have thought that they failed to do their duty to them. Sir, I am no enemy to the Chinese as women and children in this State.—I employ them, and they are good, quiet people. Sir, I am one of the laboring class. Ever since my arrival in this State, in 1849, I have worked for a living, and I am thankful I am proud to say that I have always been able to get work to do, and I have always, by my daily toil as a miner, to make an honest living. As I said the other day in this hall, I am a Democrat, and I have made one dollar in the State only by hard manual labor, and, sir, it pains my heart to think that the day is not far distant, should I have to live so long, when I, sir, shall have to labor side by side with the Chinese, or mortals, the Chinaman, for a mere pittance—scarce sufficient to furnish the necessaries of life. If this immigration is not stopped, and those already here driven from our land, there will be no peace. The Golden State will be in constant broils until this disastrous evil is removed and the last Chinaman shipped back to his native country. Mr. Speaker, I am in earnest. A residence in California and among the Chinese for nearly twenty years has proved to me beyond a cavil that the Americans and Chinese were never intended to live under the same government. Their habits and customs are so different from ours that it would be impossible for blood the same together. As a people, they can live on one-fourth of what it would take to keep the laboring man of this State. They do not adopt our style of dress, our style of eating, and our habits and customs. They never, sir, intend to be a component part of the land of the free and living God. They worship wooden gods, dress as near heathen as they can, and eat with chop-sticks instead of knives and forks. They are taught from their infancy to do as they are told, and, sir, they are such contemptible cowards, the country would be overrun with them as robbers and highwaymen; for they lack the nerve for rough scenes, and consequently they have to content themselves with poisoning hen roosts and such mean depredations as do not demand personal bravery. And now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to call the attention of this House to a few facts that I have taken from the report of the Senate Committee appointed two years ago to gather all the information they could in relation to the Chinese on this coast. From that report I find that the laboring classes have to contend against one hundred and twenty-five thousand Chinamen. Of that number, three thousand are women, and, sir, it is fortunate that there are no more, for I think they have done more to corrupt the morals of the young men of this State than all other evils combined. Is it to be wondered at, Mr. Speaker, that the streets of your cities are thronged with men and women out of employment? Certainly not. In every branch of industry is carried on by Chinamen, to the exclusion of white men, and why? Because, sir, the capitalist can hire these unemployed mortals for a less price than a white man can possibly live on. To this the capitalist will say that white men won't work! And let me ask why not? Simply because they will not pay any more than they pay to the Chinaman. In looking over the Senate committee report, Mr. Speaker, I find in our State prison 340 persons of foreign birth. Of this number 138 are Chinese; and Mr. Speaker, what is more startling, it costs this State annually $12,000 more to keep these Chinese criminals than the whole amount of the revenue collected by the State from all the property assessed to the Chinese. Here, sir, we have a double injury inflicted upon us. First, they rob the poor man of his labor, and second, we are taxed to support them in the State Prison. I find by further examination of the Senate committee a report that the amount of wealth taken from this State in round numbers, $20,000,000. What picture is behind! How long can this State stand such a drain? Sir, the Chinese leeches are allowed to remain among us, to suck and consume the very life-blood of our people! Sir, they will continue to suck on our people, and satout the vitality of our State, and then crawl into their dens of infamy and laugh at the folly of the American nation for not having backbone enough to stand up in defence of her people against the encroachments of so despicable a foe. If, Mr. Speaker, we had never allowed a Chinaman to come, how different would things be, to-day! In their stead we would have the Indians, the Frenchman, the Englishman, the Welshman, the Russian, and other white races, with their families, and this $20,000,000, instead of being locked up in the vaults of China, would be here, either in circulation, or invested in happy and beautiful homes all over this State. But instead of this we find nearly half the families that are already here, on the verge of starvation, and the cause is justly attributable to the cheap labor of the Chinese on this coast. Mr. Speaker, the people [illegible] Congress [illegible] and so [illegible] race, mother, father, [illegible] had given [illegible] for they [illegible] effects of [illegible] saker, a few [illegible] nuts of the [illegible] Western States

We direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of "The California Electrical Works," which appears in another page. This Company, connected with which are gentlemen of the highest scientific attainments and experience in their particular line, are prepared to supply electrical apparatus, telegraph supplies, scientific instruments of all kinds, and gold, silver, copper and nickel plating at the lowest rates and of the finest character. Indeed, all their work is first-class, and equal to any guarantee. Scientific apparatus of one kind or another now enter into the requirements of daily life, we may say, and are indispensable in a civilized community. The business manager, Mr. John G. Ayres, will be always found at his post at the office, 134 Sutter street.

THE ST. PATRICK'S DAY CELEBRATIONS. During the past few days we have accounts of St. Patrick's celebrations, speeches and poems, enough to fill half a dozen MONITORS. Hence we had to adhere rigorously to the rule announced for the past three weeks—first come, first served—and that such long communications should reach our office before Tuesday evening, so as to be inserted in our supplement. Those who were late, and failed to hand in reports and speeches, etc., omitted on that account, can blame only themselves. We have done our duty to its fullest extent.

☞ Our old and respected friend, Mr. Daniel Gloster, has kindly consented to canvass for subscribers and collect the money due THE MONITOR in the counties of Sierra, Plumas, Lassen and Modoc. We hope he will receive a kind reception from our friends in those counties.

MARRIED.

McARDLE—McDONALD—In this city, March 17, by Rev. Father Nugent, at St. Patrick's Church, Peter McArdle to Mary McDonald.

DIED.

MURPHY—In this city, John Patrick, son of Mary and the late Denis Murphy, of San Miguel, a native of San Francisco, aged 5 years, 8 months and 7 days.

AGNEW—In this city, March 19, John Agnew, a native of County Derry, Ireland, aged 46 years, 11 months and 19 days.

OUTTEN—In this city, March 14, Cornelius Cotter, a native of Ireland, aged 75 years.

DONNELLY—In this city, March 18, Bryan Donnelly, a native of the Parish of St. John's County Roscommon, Ireland, aged 56 years.

BARRY—In this city, March 16, Michael Barry a native of the Parish of Kilnberry, County Cork, Ireland, aged 31 years.

O'HEA—In this city, March 20, Mary, daughter of William and Mary O'Shea, aged 13 years, 1 month and 7 days.

GORMAN—In this city, March 16, John Gorman, a native of Clogher Head, County Louth, Ireland, aged 26 years.

HUSHON—In this city, March 19, John Hushon, a native of County Limerick, Ireland, aged 26 years and 3 months.

REID—In this city, March 17, Catherine, wife of John Reid, a native of County Roscommon, Ireland, aged 36 years.

DONOVAN—In this city, March, 18, Mary Elizabeth, infant daughter of Patrick and Ellen Donovan, aged 1 year, 4 months and 5 days.

SULLIVAN—In this city, March 13, Mary, only and beloved daughter of Patrick and Mary Sullivan, aged 2 years, 3 months and 7 days.

New Advertisements.

NEW MILLINERY GOODS.

I HAVE just imported for the Spring trade, a Large and Elegant Stock of Fine Millinery Goods, which I have on Exhibition combining all the Newest Styles of FRENCH BONNETS, HATS, FLOWERS, FEATHERS, &c.

Which were selected from the most Fashionable Houses in Paris and New York.

Mrs. M. A. Butler,
28 Montgomery Street,
Opposite Lick House.....San Francisco.
21mr 1m

J. W. WINTER W. J. WINTER, D. D. S.

WINTER & WINTER,
DENTISTS,
206 Kearny Street, Cor. of Sutter,
San Francisco, Cal.

Office Hours—From 9 a. m. to 5 p. m. Evening, from 7 to 9. 21mr 1m

IF RUPTURED, CALL or send for Catalogue of the best modern improved Truss in the world. Sold on its merits. No false representations. CALIFORNIA ELASTIC TRUSS COMPANY, No. 615 Sacramento st., San Francisco. 21mr 1m

CHRYSTAL ILLUMINATORS

NO CHIMNEY TO BREAK!

The Only Device Ever Patented.

—TO—

BURN WITHOUT A CHIMNEY.

The Best Light Since the World was Made.

Adapted for all Coal Oil Lamps, Chandeliers, Brackets, etc.; also used on Gas Chandeliers at one-fourth the cost of gas, with equal light.

YATES & CO.,
AGENTS.
RETAIL STORE,
627 KEARNEY-STREET.
WHOLESALE HOUSE:
113 FRONT STREET.
21mr 1f

GOLD! Any worker can make $12 a day at home. Costly outfit free. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Me.

GLOBES.
5, 5, 6, 10, 12, 16 and 30 in. in diam. Send for Catalogue. H. B. NEWS & Co., Troy, N. Y.

$1200 Business College, 24 Post Street, San Francisco, and 564 Broadway, Oakland, Cal. Instructions by mail. Circulars free. Address as above.

New Advertisements.

YOU WILL FIND
THE LARGEST STORE AND STOCK
WATCHES
AND JEWELRY
AT ANDERSON & RANDOLPH'S,
CORNER OF
Sutter & Montgomery Sts.
WATCHES REPAIRED.

HOLMAN'S
Fever and Ague
AND Liver Pad

TRADE MARK.

Special Pads, $3. Body Plasters, 50 cents each. Foot Plasters, per pair, 50 cents.

Cures Without Medicine, simply by Absorption.

The Best Liver Regulator in the World!

☞ Sent by mail on receipt of $2.

Sure cure for RHEUMATISM and DYSPEPSIA. No Medicine required.

☞ Send for copy of Nature's Laws, mailed free.

WATSON & CO., Agents,
218 Battery st., San Francisco.
mh21 1f

JOE POHEIM,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 203 Montgomery St.,
Under the Russ House..... San Francisco.

Business Suits Made to order in Twenty-four Hours.
Pants Made to Order in Twenty-four Hours.
Dress Pants.....from $6 00
Fine Diagonal, Cassimere and Scotch Cheviot Suits to Order.....from $25 to $45
Fine Dress Suits to Order.....from 40 to 50

Perfect Fit Guaranteed by Joe Poheim, the Great Artist and Cutter from New York.

Branch Store, - - 103 Third Street.
mr21

GEO. S. LADD, PRESIDENT. S. C. FIELD, SECRETARY.

CALIFORNIA
ELECTRICAL WORKS,
Electrical Apparatus, Telephones, Telegraph Supplies, Gold, Silver, Copper and Nickle Plating.
SCIENTIFIC and EXPERIMENTAL INSTRUMENTS.
Office and Works 134 Sutter Street, S. F.
JOHN G. AYRES, Business Manager.
DIRECTORS.
Lloyd Tevis, Jas. Gamble,
Geo. S. Ladd, Jno. G. Ayres,
R. J. Wilson.
21mr 1f

HEALD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, 24 Post Street, San Francisco, Cal.
Imparts a thorough and practical Education in all Commercial and English Branches, French, German, Spanish, Drawing and Telegraphy. This school having greater facilities and enjoying a more extensive patronage than any similar institution on the Pacific Coast, continues to lead in the claims for recognition and patronage upon the good sense and enlightened judgment of the public.
LIST OF FACULTY.
F. P. Heald, W. H. Shearer, W. H. H. Valentine, Mrs. C. Woodbury, J. A. Chesnutwood, A. F. Dalbiez, R. J. Sordal, F. C. Woolbury, E. Cupp, T. R. Southern, Mrs. W. J. Hamilton, F. Sergeni, Geo. Johnson, A. Van der Nallen.
The public are earnestly requested to visit our school and witness its practical workings. Students can begin at any time. Each receives separate instruction. Ladies are admitted into all departments of the College. For full particulars call at the College office, 24 Post street, or address E. P. HEALD,
President Business College, S. F.

MONTGOMERY'S HOTEL,
577 & 579 Second Street.
CHARLES MONTGOMERY.....Proprietor.
THIS is the only strictly Temperance Hotel in San Francisco and any person who appreciates Temperance and quietness (and nowbut such are wanted as guests) as well as a good table and strict attention will find all this here. Board and Lodging, 75 cents to $1 per day. Board and Lodging, $4 to $5 per week. Six Meal Tickets for $1. 21mr 1m

B. LAKE,
Wholesale and Retail Grocer,
No. 739 Market Stre.t.
Goods always of the Best, and as cheap as any in the City. 21mr1m

MINERS' RESTAURANT,
531 and 533 Commercial Street,
Between Montgomery and Leidesdorff streets.
THE BERGES
BRANCH RESTAURANT,
737 Market Street, opp. Dupont.
The Choicest Meals and all the Delicacies of the Season at both restaurants.
☞ FAMILY AND LADIES' DEPARTMENT at the Branch, where Oysters and Ice Cream can be obtained in addition to the regular Bill of Fare.
P. S. BERGES & Co., Proprietors.
21mr 1m

D. CANTY & CO.
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
CONFECTIONERS,
No. 107 Montgomery st.,
Sign of SANTA CLAUS.
Fresh, Pure and Wholesome
CANDIES
Of all kinds, manufactured daily, from the best materials, and warranted to keep in all climates.
PRICES LOW, TERMS LIBERAL.
Country orders Promptly and Carefully filled.
21mr 1f

New Advertisements.

H. B. SLAVEN,
CHEMIST AND DRUGGIST,
IMPORTER OF Fine Toilet Articles,
Perfumery, Combs,
Brushes, Etc., Etc.
SOLE AGENT FOR
Percy's Vitalized Phosphates
THE BALDWIN PHARMACY,
BALDWIN'S BUILDING,
Market, Powell and Eddy Sts.
jy9 3m

Standard Goods

Donnolly's Yeast Powder,
Callaghan's Cream Tartar,
Callaghan's Eng. Bi-Carb. Soda,
Callaghan's English Saleratus,
English Bi-Carb. Soda in kegs.

Best Brands in Market.
FOR SALE BY ALL GROCERS.

D. CALLAGHAN & CO.
Manufacturers,
121 Front Street,
SAN FRANCISCO.
mh21 1f

Pictures and Frames,
MIRRORS, ENGRAVINGS, CHROMOS, AND LITHOGRAPHS.
WINDOW CORNICES.
REPAIRING AND RE-GILDING.
No. 926½ Market St., opp. Mason,
SAN FRANCISCO.

T. PENDERGAST.

THE LIGHT RUNNING
"DOMESTIC"
SEWING MACHINES
AND
"DOMESTIC"
PAPER FASHIONS,
J. W. EVANS,
28 Post Street, S. F.
21m

What The
"News Letter" Has to Say.
THERE IS NO MORE TEMPTING meat ever placed on a breakfast table than a good ham, but the trouble in America is, that while families are willing to pay good prices for the luxury, they are frequently deceived by having inferior, badly-cured hams, palmed off on them. The best hams in the market are the celebrated Whitaker Sugar Cured Hams, which are branded with a five-pointed star, as a trademark, on the skin side. They only cost about a cent per pound more than inferior brands, and are without a rival.
21 mr 1m

Pacific Coast Agency.
GENUINE
J. H. CUTTER WHISKIES.
A. P. ROTALING & CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
mr14

M'CARTHY BROS.
BEST OLD GOVERNMENT
JAVA COFFEE,
AND PURE SPICES.
Ask your Grocer for Our Goods, use no others.
N. B.—The supplying of Convents and Schools a Specialty.
417 & 419 Sacramento Street.
21mr

DRY GOODS, ETC.

THE GRAND OPENING
AT THE ARCADE.
PROFOUND ADMIRATION
OF THE
LADIES OF SAN FRANCISCO
AT OUR EXHIBITION OF DRESS GOODS
AND SILKS.
☞ Since our Magnificent Opening on Monday, September 17th, the rush of visitors to our Establishment has been unprecedented, and the expressions of surprise and admiration have been incessant at the magnificent and splendor of the
REBUILT ARCADE.
Our importations this season have been so vast that it is only NOW they are fully prepared for public inspection, and we would respectfully state that our present display immeasurably eclipses any former DRY GOODS EXHIBITION ever witnessed in California.
OUR DRESS GOODS
.....AND.....
SILKS
Are most worthy of public attention, as we have taken special pains to make these departments unapproachable.
Circassian Suitings.
Drap d'Eclair.
Rangbean Suitings. Neigeuse Cloth.
Knicker Costume Cloth.
The above are some of the latest designs in the Dress Department, and are especially designed for the examination of our patrons.
☞ There is a tremendous run on our KNICKER COSTUME CLOTH, which we are offering at 37½ cents.
J. J. O'BRIEN & CO.,
924, 926, 928
MARKET ST.,
AND 25 ELLIS ST.,
SAN FRANCISCO,
NEXT TO "THE BALDWIN."

THE CLEARANCE SALE
OF
D. LANDERS
WILL BE
Continued Until Further
Notice,
And during the week I shall offer still GREATER INDUCEMENTS.
BED SPREADS, Half Price.
BLANKETS, Half Price.
TOWELS AND NAPKINS, Half Price.
SILKS AND DRESS GOODS, Half Price.
I am Selling Cartwright & Warner's English and Merino Underwear at less than Eastern Manufactured Goods. Now is the time to Buy them.
During the continuance of this sale all Goods will be sold strictly for CASH.
All persons indebted to the late firm will please make immediate payment.
D. LANDERS,
STORKEEPER TO
BYRNE, LANDERS & BYRNE,
TRUEBLOW BLOCK, 120 Kearny St.
ja23
DECKER BROS.

NEW HOUSE
AND RETAIL DEPARTMENT
OF
I. M. WENTWORTH & CO.
We would respectfully invite you to call and examine our extensive stock of
BOOTS & SHOES,
AT OUR NEW HOUSE
867 MARKET STREET, OPP. POWELL & EDDY, AND THE BALDWIN.
Where we keep a full line of Ladies' and Gentlemen's ware of all descriptions, of OUR OWN MANUFACTURE and those of the most celebrated Eastern and French makes. Having our own Tannery and Factory, and being Wholesale Importers of all the various kinds of goods, we claim to have better facilities for giving Entire Satisfaction in Quality, Fit and Price,
Than any other house on the Pacific Coast. Manufacturers' prices only will be charged for our own make of CHILDREN'S SHOES.
We have in connection a department for Custom Work, where we make to measure any style of BOOTS, SHOES and SLIPPERS to fit feet of peculiar proportions, and to suit the most fastidious taste.
I. M. SHAW, Manager of the Retail Department.
I. M. WENTWORTH & CO.,
1864 Pioneer Manufacturers of San Francisco. 1877.

PALMER BROS.
726 to 734
MARKET ST.,
IMPORTERS OF MILLINERY
AND FANCY GOODS
AND LADIES'
FINISHED UNDERWEAR,
Notions, Household Goods and Gents' Furnishing Goods.
Manufacturers of Boys' and Misses' Nice Suits of French Beaver, Diagonals, California and Oregon Cassimeres and Scotch Tweeds.
OUR MOTTO:
"LOW PRICES."
SPECIALTIES:
Ladies' Hats and Bonnets, Latest Styles. Hats and Bonnets Trimmed to Order. French Millinery, Flowers and Feathers.
Human Hair Switches, $1 00 and Upwards.
Lace and Veil Stuffs, Veils, Neckties and Fichus.
Skeleton Shawls, Purses, Belts, Fans, Back Combs.
Collars and Cuffs, Aprons, Embroideries, Ruching in Great Variety.
Tarlton, Lace, Worsted, Canvas, Tidies, Card Boards.
2 to 6 Button Kid Gloves, 75c. and $2.
Handkerchiefs, Stockings, Gauntlets, Toilet Articles, Face Powder, Perfumery, Dress Trimmings, Business Braids.
Sewing Articles—Best in Market.
Corsets, French Woven, Thomson's Staiz and Table Fair Corsets.
Parasols, Umbrellas, Buttles, 50c and $2 50.
Infants' Goods of every description. Ladies' and Children's Suits, Wrappers.
Ladies' Cotton Underwear.
Ladies' Merino Underwear of Norfolk and New Brunswick.
Great Purchasing in all the Best Brands.
Infants' Cashmere Cloaks, $1 25 to $10 00.
fe14 6m

FAMILY
DRUG AND PRESCRIPTION
STORE.
JOHN C. MOODY,
Apothecary,
For the last 15 years on Kearny Street,
HAS REMOVED
TO THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF
POLK AND PINE STS.
☞ Prescriptions prepared with care from the best of drugs and chemicals.
CHARGES MODERATE.
n3r17

☞ Societies or individuals requiring Flags, Banners, Scarfs, Regalia, etc., should call on the undersigned before purchasing elsewhere. A large supply of Ancient Order Regalia constantly on hand. Also, Gold and Silver Trimmings, wholesale and retail. Prices moderate.
B. PASQUALE,
644 Washington street, San Francisco.

JUST PUBLISHED.
The Life of
POPE PIUS NINTH.
Drawn from the Most Reliable Authorities
BY
Rev. R. Brennan.
300 Pages, Finely Illustrated.
Sent by Mail, postpaid, on receipt of the Price, Only $2 00.
STANDARD BOOKS for libraries and the general reader sold cheap.
New Books and New Stationery Received Daily.
School Books and School Supplies in Large Variety.
Prices Moderate.
A. ROMAN & CO.,
Stationers and Booksellers,
11 MONTGOMERY ST.
SAN FRANCISCO. fe14 2m

BASTIAN BROS.
13 CENTS PER POUND.
ONLY, OPPOSITE FLOOD'S BOOKSTORE.
922, MARKET STREET,
SAN FRANCISCO.
HAMS!
fe23tf

CONSOLIDATION OF SEWING MACHINE AGENCIES.
Machines of all the Best and Latest Improved Kinds at Greatly Reduced Prices.
SAMUEL HILL,
General Dealer in Sewing Machines and Oil Stoves,
19 New Montgomery Street,
SAN FRANCISCO. fe28 3m

BETHLEHEM IN PALESTINE
TO—
San Francisco, California.
The First Direct Importation from the Holy Land.
MICHAEL FLOOD, CATHOLIC BOOKSELLER, has the pleasure to announce that he has just received a large Invoice of BISCARIES of Holy Wood, and other materials produced in the Holy Land.
CRUCIFIXES of Olive Wood, with Pearl Ornaments, and particles of the Earth Inland.
Natural Flowers preserved on paper, from Gethsemane, Mount Sion, and other sacred places.
The Rosaries and Crucifixes have been blessed by the Holy Sepulchre before shipment.
MICHAEL FLOOD, Bookseller, mh7 631 Market street.

A. WALDTEUFEL,
Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Catholic Books,
PRAYER BOOKS,
Miscellaneous Books,
School-Books,
CHURCH ORNAMENTS,
Catholic Goods,
Staple and Fancy Stationery of every description.
All orders will be promptly filled. Liberal terms to Schools and Priests.
A. WALDTEUFEL,
Corner First and Fountain Streets,
SAN JOSE.

The Monitor.

VOL. XXI. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 9, 1878. NO. 32.

A. WALDTEUFEL,
Cor. First and Fountain Sts.,
SAN JOSE, CAL.
Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Musical Instruments,
Music Books, Sheet Music,
Musical Merchandise in General.
Agent for Pianos made by
STEINWAY & SONS, New York.
KRANICH & BACH, New York.
C. ROZANIUM, London.
AND FOR ORGANS FROM
Horace Waters & Sons, and the Burdett Organ Company.
My stock is immense. Orders are respectfully solicited, and will be promptly filled. Liberal discounts to Schools and Clergymen.

THE MONITOR.

A CATHOLIC FAMILY WEEKLY, CONTAINING THE LATEST AND MOST RELIABLE ECCLESIASTICAL INTELLIGENCE.

Published every THURSDAY for the Proprietors at 622 Clay Street, San Francisco.

All Business Letters should be addressed to P. McSWEENY, Business Manager.

All other Communications, to the Editorial Department.

TERMS (Payable in advance):

Served by carrier, per week	10c.
Mail subscribers, per year	$4 00
Six months	2 50
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces	5 00
Postage in each case prepaid by the publishers.

Advertising Rates.

1 square 1 time	$1 50	1 square 1 mo	$10 50
1 square 2 month	4 00	1 square 5 mo	12 00
1 square 3 months	7 00	1 square 6 mo	15 00
1 square 4 months	9 00	1 square 1 year	25 00

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

☞ Special Notices under the Editorial Chapter for Editorial Notices. Notices of Births, Marriages, etc., will be charged at the same rates as Advertisements.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

[Telegraph.]

Friday, May 3.

☞—The Political Correspondent states that revival of negotiations between Russia and England relative to the Congress is due to initiative of the former. The negotiations will be based upon buyer concession than left. Russia insisted persistently in Constantinople that the Khedive has concluded an offensive alliance with England.

Saturday, May 4.

LONDON.—Though Russia is believed to have assured Austria neutrality, her military situation Turkey is now regarded as exceedingly The attitude of the Turkish soldiery is no more favorable than ever for an alliance with English troops. A month ago Russian sympathies centered on the point of carrying everything before the Czar. Not now. Turks now more detestable than ever, and the Turkish army is so strong that the threats of the Russians have little effect.

The Turks have entrenched their positions, and are scarcely inferior in number to what they were two months ago, so that the best armies of Russia could be resisted until help could come from abroad. Therefore, it is not considered likely that the Turks will accede to the views of the Russians, Turns and Balaban, even if Russia Russia further away from the neighborhood of Constantinople.

Sunday, May 5.

LONDON.—The Times, commenting on the signature of United States waters of the steamer Vanderbilt with Russian officers and men on board, says: There is one good reason why we should not complain of the Russian action in this matter. The chief is that the United States Government, which has always prided itself on fulfilling its neutral duties, has been placed under a disagreeable time for making other arrangements. The Alabama and other Southern States, by accepting that fine, have further pledged themselves to do, on their own part the new rules of the Geneva Tribunal, in an unwonted publicity to the, at the time, but we have the advantage of additional protection now. We may, in fact, be confident that the United States will act honorably up to the obligations in this respect, and the Russians will consequently find it difficult to use the enterprise they appear to have planned.

ST. PETERSBURG.—The Russian Commodatant of the Umbria, now in American waters, is Casimer de Jritprovich, and the mission is to create a flotilla of cruisers.

Monday, May 6.

LONDON.—Peace or war seems still to be trembling in the balance, with little progress except in preparations for war. Meanime, the practical consequences of a possible struggle begin to impress themselves upon the public mind. Meanwhile, Russians are suffering a great deal under authority news of Russia's preparations to simply stand on the defensive where, while striking the first blow, Russia's preparations are, Russia, they see, is comparatively inactive, while, while no amount of brave effort can save British commerce from destruction. Except that England takes little counsel of prudent fears when she reaches the present condition of passionate stubbornness, this newly-recognized danger might be expected to prevent a rash, if still remains to be seen whether the Czar can stand or the Irish interest.

Rumors of a new Turkish loan in Italy, but it will not threaten British roads to India. Meanwhile, Russian Congress will be allowed to put her in bonds. Bismarck really seems to have retired from his meditating efforts, but his hand and continues to restrain Austria, so England shall have no ally if she persist in a war strength to cripple Russia's power to write upon India. While war logically ought not to come out of this situation, it will be wise to reckon its harbingers when considering the future of your crops and the profits of British exports.

Tuesday, May 7.

CONSTANTINOPLE.—Salik Pasha has declared that Turkey will observe neutrality in the event of war between England and Russia, and cause her to territory to be respected.

PARIS.—The Union published a retraction of Fabre Cure, in which he declares he entirely adheres to all the teachings of Ed Ubrich, respecting the temporal power of the Pope.

LONDON.—A special from Alexandria reports that preparations are making to disembark the Indian troops at Suez, Said and Suez.

NEW YORK. The Tribune has this: The British naval force in the Pacific is exceedingly weak. With the Pall Mall Gazette question whether Russia, by breaking through the Declaration of the Paris Treaty, can do Englishmen more much harm in the Pacific Ocean, it concedes that unfortunately the Government seems even yet scarcely alive to the exigencies of the occasion. The Pacific, though an inner circle, is a poor substitute for the Black, and other vessels are being sent to the Pacific stations. It is claimed that apart from the value of Vancouver's Island, its harbors and coal, the British ground ness in the Pacific are far too weak for the interests they have to protect. Any heavy loss there, though it could not of course have much effect on the main issue of the war, would be singularly damaging to British prestige in those seas.

Wednesday, May 8.

NEW YORK.—A dispatch from London says a basis of arrangement, which the Powers desire to submit to the Czar, has been agreed upon. The arrangement is in five divisions. The first division proposes that the two regions of Bulgaria north of the Balkans shall be conceded to Russia, and the southern portion shall remain to a great extent under the authority of the Sultan.

The second division relates solely to the Asiatic conquests, which it is proposed shall be restored to a minimum.

The third division relates to the Straits question, and will be arranged hereafter. The fourth division contains a defensive alliance against domainity. Under the fifth division it is proposed that Thessaly and Epirus shall be accorded the right of self-government, thus securing for them the rights of Europe and national independence.

LONDON.—It is stated that a National Convention will be called in London to protest against war, should the Government take further means likely to lead to war.

Thursday, May 9.

PARIS.—The Estafette reports for the past few days that numerous detachments of Russian cavalry have been passing through France, and subsistence, at Havre, and even Liverpool for America, to man vessels purchased there by the Russians.

BERLIN.—Russia has decided to refuse to liberate Turkish prisoners of war, numbering about 60,000, in consequence of the uncertainty that the Porte will maintain neutrality in the event of war between England and Russia.

EASTERN.

The Anti-Chinese Immigration Bill.

WASHINGTON.—The House Committee on Education and Labor, by a vote which lacked one of being unanimous, decided to recommend the passage by the House of the bill heretofore agreed upon by the sub-committee, to restrict Chinese immigration by direct legislative enactment. Hongkong, of New York, cast the negative vote, but disclaims any intention of opposing the action of the Committee when the bill comes before the House. The Committee is not likely to be reached in regular order of calls for report before the last of next week. The bill as finally adopted by the Committee provides that it shall not be misdemeanor for the master of any vessel to bring more than three Chinese passengers within the limits of the United States on any voyage, or to take a greater number on board at any foreign port within South America. A violation of this prohibition is subject, his to a fine of $100 for each passenger exceeding 3, and also to imprisonment for a term of months in default of payment, the vessel to be liable and be then immediately enforced by the United States Courts. The masters of vessels are any from any Chinese passengers to the Collector of Customs a separate, sworn list of Chinese passengers, and the Collector is to report the same jurisdiction which are provided by existing laws for failure or neglect to report and deliver a manifest of cargoes. It is further provided that no Chinese shall be imported, and the Act of repeal or modify any law forbidding the importation of coolies, or of females for immoral purposes, into the United States except in one respect, namely that Chinese shall be not hereafter grant certificates for more than 15 one Chinese passengers by any one vessel. It is finally provided that the bill shall take effect from and after the first day of next January. This extension of the date originally proposed by Senator Sargent, is made in consequence of the delay in reporting the bill as a means of giving ample notice to masters and owners of sailing vessels, as well as to allow reasonable time for making other arrangements with England and China, in case a treaty shall be negotiated providing for such regulations should be passed before this bill is reached for action.

Arrival of the Pacific Coast Mineral Exhibit at New York.

NEW YORK.—Sixty-nine barrels of mineral specimens from California to the Paris Exposition, consigned to W. T. Coleman & Co., of this city, will go forward on the steamer City of Berlin, sailing on the instant. Professor Hanks, State Commissioner to the Exposition, has arrived in this city.

PORTLAND (Me.).—There is a rumor afloat that the Umbria will not be allowed to take Russian passengers by rail to San Francisco.

Movements of Russian Steamships.

NEW YORK.—The Herald's Washington special says: The British Legation here were fully apprised of the intended departure of three more of Russian steamships, with officers and sailors, which sailed recently from Revel. Before those vessels get out of the Baltic their number and destination were known. One of them is expected for service in the North Atlantic, and will put in at some northern United States port, while the other two will proceed to Japan, and where the men will be disembarked and transported to Russia, where they will be ready for a steamer already sent to meet them, to San Francisco for other steamships for Asiatic Russia. The Russian Government has taken precautions to keep itself thoroughly informed of every hostile move that can be made in this country, and a score of British agents are constantly at work gathering information and transmitting it to the British Legation.

Sir Edward Thornton is said to have a list of every Russian agent and of every representative of the Irish element who is working in the Russian interest.

A Fenian attack or feint on Canada is said to be on the cards, if Russia and England pile war. A Fenian commander is now near Buffalo, where he is said to be in hiding.

The Border Troubles.

WASHINGTON.—The Cabinet seriously considered the Mexican border trouble. There is abundant evidence that Lerdo's friends on the American side are making a strong movement to crowd the Government into a war with Mexico. The Secretary of War, after the Cabinet adjourned, ordered General Pitz to be particularly vigilant to prevent an invasion from the Rio Grande. Serious trouble along the Mexican border is anticipated by the Administration, in Lerdo followers are doubtless instigating Indian raids into American territory that American troops may chase them across the border and provoke additional complications. Some members of Congress think Lerdo's should be arrested in Texas for violating the neutrality laws. This information is reliable and official. The State and Interior Departments are in receipt of a report to the effect that Sheridan's

Grasshopper Depots for a Procession.

MONTEREY.—County and District Masters of the Orange Order in this city replied in the secretive to the Protestant clergy's address, asking Orangemen not to parade on the 12th of July, that the Orange delegates were, 267 for the procession and 6 against.

Rumored Fenian Raid on Canada.

TORONTO.—Vague rumors of a raid on Canada by the Irish, in case of a war between Russia and England, are afloat. It is stated that three companies of Irish patriots are armed and equipped here ready for service, and a thousand Western Irishmen have been notified so that they can be here in twenty-four hours, while there are three thousand more in the vicinity that will render even for a raid within three days after orders are issued; but nothing authentic can be obtained to substantiate these rumors.

WASHINGTON, May 5.—The Government has received no information whatever concerning report of a prospective Fenian invasion of Canada.

A Great Disaster.

MINNEAPOLIS, May 2.—At seven o'clock this evening the city was shaken as by an earthquake by a terrific explosion, which was promptly traced to groups of flouring mills in what is known as the Platform, just above St. Anthony's Falls, where the entire flouring district of the city is concentrated.

THE EXPLOSION.

The explosion came from the Great Washburne Mill, from which a column of flame was seen to shoot up several hundred feet, followed by a crash which crushed the immense structure like an egg shell. Secondary explosions instantly destroyed the Thompson & Hoyt and Humboldt Mills, and flames immediately burst out, commencing to the Galaxy Mills. Those of Pettit, Robinson & Co., Cahill, Ankeny & Co., Day & Sons, Hay & Rollins, Bell, Newton & Co., Gaylord & Co., the Waterpower Co., Ankeny Mills, and lesser structures down the banks of the river nearly to the Minneapolis and St. Louis Railroad shops. The destruction from the shock of the explosion extended much further, plunging wrecked for several squares, and buildings shaken throughout the city.

The most probable theory of the explosion is that it took place in gas generated in the patent milling purifier process.

LOSS OF LIFE.

The loss of life is unfortunately great, but full details are lacking in the confusion that surrounds the scene. The first rumors made the dead as 70 to 80, but this is not borne out by facts. The explosion took place at the hour of changing the day for night hands, and many of both were undoubtedly in the building. Twenty-two men who were in the Washburne Mill at 6:30, have not whom been heard from up to 8:30. Many others in the day force would have been in the building up to 9 o'clock.

The Chinese Immigration Question.

WASHINGTON.—Another step toward action on the part of the Federal Government for restriction of Chinese immigration was taken in Congress to-day, by unanimous agreement of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, to recommend the adoption of the following concurrent resolution:

Resolved by the Senate, the House of Representatives concurring, That the provisions of the existing treaty between the Empire of China and the United States, allowing unrestricted emigration to this country from China, might and be modified so as to subserve the best interests of both Governments, and the attention of the Executive is respectfully invited to the subject.

This resolution was subsequently reported and placed on the calendar, to await action in regular order.

DEATH OF W. S. O'BRIEN.

William Stoney O'Brien died at San Rafael on the 24 of May, in the 53d year of his age. His health had been in a precarious condition since January last. He was seized in the first instance with symptoms of Bright's disease, and consequently a complication of alternate prostration and partial recovery followed. The last attack was advised by his physicians, Drs. Hammond and Hubbard, and on Tuesday, April 23d, he was removed to San Rafael—his wife and Stephen was he on reaching his destination that he had to be carried on pillows to his room. He did not benefit by the change. He had been gradually sinking for the past two days. At six o'clock on Wednesday morning he began failing rapidly, and at 2 40 P. M. Thursday, he passed away surrounded by his family, retaining his faculties to the last. J. C. Flood and other friends and relatives were in attendance at his death.

Mr. O'Brien was a native of Ireland, having been born at Abbeylett, Queen's County, in 1826. He sailed for the United States at an early age, coming to New York, where he was naturalized in 1847. When the news was heard of the discovery of gold in California, he joined the throng of adventurous spirits who came to seek their fortune in the Golden Pacific. He made the voyage around the Horn in the ship Tarolina, and arrived in San Francisco on the 6th of July, 1849. Nothing of note marks his early career in the State or singled him out from the thousands who were unceremoniously clearing the way for the march of civilization and laying the foundation of a great State on the shores of the Pacific. Mr. O'Brien's first business connection was with Col. William C. Hoff, with whom he remained in partnership about two years. He then went into the ship-chandlery business with W. J. Bomer, and for a time the firm of Bomer & O'Brien, ship chandlers, was established, and the Auction Lunch Rooms were opened under the partnership on Sansome street, near Sansome. The firm for after years became a favorite resort for mining men and stock dealers, and in quite way the two partners obtained information from their patrons which was of great benefit to them. Mr. O'Brien was also connected with the Volunteer Fire Department in early days, and at one time was foreman of California Engine Company No. 1. He was generally loved by his comrades for his genial manner and the sprightliness that characterized all his dealings in the company. He usually kept out of politics, and only once did he take an active part in a campaign. That was in 1852, when he was a candidate for election to the Assembly, and was defeated, much to his own gratification, as he expressed himself at the time and subsequently. The firm of Flood & O'Brien speculated in stocks on a modest way for many years, and succeeded as well that in 1867 they went in on a larger scale, and cleared up considerable money by an operation in Kentuck. This laid the foundation for still more extensive operations, and a successful deal in Hale & Norcross a few years later brought the firm prominently before the public as stock speculators. The action on Washington street was sold out in 1873, and after that the firm was engaged only in the brokerage business. In the year 1875 Flood & O'Brien entered into a mining partnership with J. W. Mackay and J. L. Fair. Prosperity attended the new firm from the outset. The most productive stock claims were obtained at an expenditure of about $60,000, and it soon became evident that a magnificent prize had been won. During the great excitement in Comstock stocks in January, 1875, the members of the firm made their colossal fortunes, and came to be first in the most successful operators in the world, obtaining complete control of the bonanza mines, which they have ever since retained. On the 4th of October, 1875, the Nevada Bank was opened in the building on the corner of Pine and Montgomery streets, erected at an expense of $1,200,000, with a paid-up capital of $5,000,000, and Messrs. Flood & O'Brien, John W. Mackay, James G. Fair and Louis McLane as Directors and sole stockholders. The success of the new bank was marked and rapid, and about a year ago the capital stock was increased to $10,000,000. Mr. O'Brien took an active part in this, as a guarantee of the institution. His wealth has been estimated at from $10,000,000 to $20,000,000. Accumulating riches had no effect on the simplicity and simplicity of the man. There was nothing of pride in him. The friends he knew in his humbler days were never forgotten by him, and rich as he was himself, the measure he took of other men was altogether regardless of their wealth. In a quiet way he did much good to persons in need of his advice or assistance, and his genial and frank manner, his kindly word and oft-repeated inquiry, endeared the man to the most careless acquaintance as no less than to his dear friends. He was more generous with his money than the outside world knew. Careful to avoid display or notoriety, scarcely any one was the recipient of his bounty without impressions that publicity should not be given to the deed. The business relationship he had with Mr. Flood was beautiful in its fidelity. The partnership that death has severed was formally formed a quarter of a century ago. About eighteen months ago the property of the firm was divided up among the members, with the exception of the mining stock in common, and remained in common, Mr. Flood managing Mr. O'Brien's interest therein.

Mr. O'Brien was married. His home, named by will, executed recently, are his two sisters, Misses Robinson and three others. He was a life member of the Society of California Pioneers and of the Exempt Fire Company.

Funeral of W. S. O'Brien.

The funeral of W. S. O'Brien took place on Sunday. The remains lay in state in the morning in the main drawing-room of the mansion on Sutter street that was owned by the deceased, and were removed to St. Mary's Cathedral about eleven o'clock. A great crowd desired admission to the church, but no spectators were allowed inside until the obsequies were over. The order which Mr O'Brien was a member were seated. The members of the San Francisco Board of Brokers were the first to arrive, and were assigned seats on the left of the east aisle. Following them came the members of the Pacific Board, who were placed on the right of the west aisle. About one hundred members of the Pioneer Society, with badges draped with black crape, occupied seats on the left of the main aisle, and behind them were seated the members of the Exempt

The Vagaries of Communism.

We have seen the United States in former years described by no mean authority, as the "Elysium of the workingman." It was an observation founded on the conquest of this country as the home of labor, with the other countries of the world, and it was in that way that the introduction of the word "Elysium" was justified. It certainly was never understood that the United States was free from the doom pronounced for the children of Adam, that they were "to earn their bread by the sweat of their brows," but it was meant, and it was the fact, that the reward for labor was in this country higher than in any other country in the world. It was, too, the fact, that the institutions of this country, and its land laws far, not the acquisition by the workingman of portions of the soil, tracts of land, farms, beyond those of any other country at any time, ancient or modern, of which we have any record. It admits not of dispute, too, that under the operation of those institutions and those land laws, multitudes of men beyond all precedent, coming from foreign parts have in some cases with the small means brought with them, and in other cases by the surplus beyond their needs of the wages of their labor, established themselves as proprietors of the soil, and owners of their roofs-trees.

What was the consequence of all this? Why, that the United States became strong, mighty, and rich, surpassing all expectation. Why, any one class or section of the community that throve? No, all improved and prospered or had abundant opportunities to do so, upon their former condition. Nothing was planner than that the policy that favored a high rate of remuneration for labor, and brought men hither from the other side of the Atlantic in tens of thousands, in order to have the benefit of the very highest rate of remuneration for their labor, was the very best and most profitable policy for the country and for all classes that could be devised.

Yet within the last twenty years a considerable change upon this state of facts has taken place. First came the civil war with its immense expenditure of blood and treasure, And then came also a change in the currency. The gold and silver that had been previously in circulation disappeared and were replaced by greenbacks. So far the change was most profitable; a cheap currency was exchanged for one that cost little but the paper and printing. But it did not stop there, the issues of greenbacks were doubled and trebled, and inflation of prices and disturbance of values followed. This change was undoubtedly to the disadvantage of creditors. The latter lent money to the farmer at fair purchasing power and was repaid in money nominally to the same amount but really of much inferior value. Large issues upon greenbacks, no doubt, stimulated trade in many directions, and numbers of large fortunes were realized in the remarkable times that followed. But the great vault was injurious to the workingman. Commissioner Wells, famous as a statistician, investigated the matter at the time of the peace, and published his conclusions to the world. These conclusions, and we have never heard of them being contradicted, were, that the pay of the workingman, the pay in substantial value, was during the war twenty per cent. less than before the war. The substantial value in money was considerably increased, but not so increased as to cover their depreciation in value. In other words, however, wages were advanced, the prices of articles needed by the workingmen and their families were still more advanced.

Well, peace came, and then in another fity. The Sheridans, the McCullochs, and others that assumed to be great financiers, were suddenly seized with an uncontrollable passion for "hard money," as some called it, and "honest money," as some of them fastidiously called a resumption of specie payments would amount to, namely, widespread bankruptcy, pauperism and ruin throughout the country.

This purpose, those professed financiers have for several years been most persistently pursuing in imitation of the course adopted more than half a century since by the Tory statesmen and capitalists of England, with full historical warning of the fearful calamities thus brought upon the English people.

We have presented this brief view of the reckless financiering that has been going on since the commencement of the war, becoming still more reckless and ruthless since the close and more especially since the panic in 1873; and all this recklessness keeping even pace with the rapidly deteriorating condition of the industrial classes of the people, and more especially with that of the workingmen. In order that every reader may understandingly what has been the cause of the mischief that has now been so long going on, and with increasing severity. We want our readers, and especially the workingmen, the workingmen of all nationalities, Germans, Swedes, and others, to see distinctly that to any one that chooses to take a review of the course of events in this country for the last score of years, it must be plain as the sun at noon-day, that the most intimate relation exists, namely, that of cause and effect between the present suffering of the people and the nefarious dealings that have been going on for the last dozen years with the currency of the country. The value of the people's minds being thus instructed, manifestly is, that the people's demands shall be promptly and officially carried out by the speedy repeal of the villainous Resumption act, and that a stop shall be forthwith put to the suffering wickedly inflicted by traitorous officials on the people.

It being thus plain, what the course of action of the people, and of the workingmen of the United States should be, in order to obtain speedy relief, it is a matter of wonder indeed that a body of pursemeaning themselves the "Workingmen's Party of the United States" should be found with extensive ramifications through the country, that either overlook or ignore the patent cause of the present mischief, and the obvious means of speedy relief, and can think only of certain far fetched plans, and wild aspirations, that if at all realized would amount to a reconstruction of society, and a revolution in the government. We have before us "Platform and Principles of the Workingmen's Party, U. S.," and after a careful examination of its various planks we can find but few sound ones amongst them, and we feel obliged to pronounce the platform in its main features to be a mass of impracticable absurdity, and only an impediment and obstruction to the cause of the honest workingman, anxious to better his condition and to make provision for himself and his family. The whole document seems to be the emanation of some dreamy minds that with little regard to surrounding circumstances or to hard facts, and more especially in ignorance of disregard of the constitution or Constitution of the United States, give loose to their imaginations. Throughout this platform there not the slightest indication that its framers ever thought of, or heard of, those most important matters, most important to the workingman, and to all men of the United State on which we have been dwelling.

We cannot find time to go into minutiæ the propositions of this platform, but we shall deal with a few that we think will suffice for the purpose of showing how may be described as weakness, extravagance, illegality and injustice.

The first plank in the platform is that: "The emancipation of the working classes must be achieved by the working classes themselves, independent of all the propertied classes." Nowhere in this platform do we find any definite or intelligible explanation of what is meant here by the word, "emancipation." We know what the emancipation of the "Negro" meant, exemption from the obligation to labor for some person claiming to be his owner, merely for his clothing and food, and without pay. But no man is now obliged to work, unless he pot content, and the great question is not whether he is to get wages, but how much. During the great strike last year, when the pinch of the sufferings of the workingman was more fully exhibited than it had ever been before, the only question raised, was as to the amount of wages to be got by the workingman. Still it would seem, from another part of the platform in which the communistic idea is more fully developed that the wages "system" is to be abolished, and that that object is to be compassed in emancipation. In this view the exclusion of the propertied class from all and to the "emancipation" of the workingmen may be understood. The opposition of the "proper" would come from all quarters, that the emancipation project, as it is to be carried out mainly at their expense. The propertied class, according to the theory of emancipation, are to be deprived of their property and death with presumed, by the loss of their institute. The consequence of such flights of fancy are purely mischievous. They are calculated to excite, not the working class, and to deprive the workingman of the sympathy and assistance he might fairly expect from the industrial classes. It is the manifest interest of the people of the United States, and especially of the industrial classes, that the workingman should be contented and well to do. At the time of the strike the world came from all quarters, that the people of all classes wished the strikers to succeed. Good reason had they for so wishing, because they knew that any blow aimed at the workingman should directly or indirectly reach themselves. Among the millions of those would-be guides of the workingman, that they would, by their vain and silly projects, turn against him the sympathies of influential patriots, whose interest it is and who would be well disposed to give him all the assistance in their power.

We pass now to the great communistic plank in this platform, which certainly is entitled to credit for plain speaking. It is "we demand that all means of labor (lands, machinery, railroads, telegraphs, canals, etc.), become the common property of the whole people, for the purpose of abolishing the wages system, and substituting co-operation with a just distribution of the wealth."

We shall content ourselves with presenting to our readers the very remarkable platform, for their consideration, and we shall at the same time, point out to the governors of the above, for their mature consideration, a few words of the Constitution of the United States, as, carrying out their grand project of dispossessing at pleasure of other people's property. It is Section Article 5, of the Amendments to the Constitution following the provision that no man shall be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, and is in the words following: "Nor shall private property be taken for public use without just compensation." We commend those few words to the attention of the large-minded and generous man that framed the platform, and to their adherents, in the belief think they were never dreamed of in their philosophy. Leaving them to their deliberations, we leave the subject for the present.—Western Watchman.

An Exhibit of Communism.

Catholic workingmen will learn the true spirit of the Communists, by reading the description of their horrible banquet in New York on Good Friday, which we publish elsewhere. The scene at that festive mockery of the memory of Our Lord's death are perfectly in accord with the teachings of European Communism. That banquet exhibition social and political logic in its true light. It reveals the terrible anti-Christian plague which is spreading in every quarter of this country—the blasphemous devil raging in their darkness, trying in secrecy to draw to itsembrace of death the the honest working classes of this country. They can read for themselves its open secrets in the scenes of this banquet, where ruffians stained with the blood of the innocent, murdered by the Commune of Paris, were honored guests. In this revelry of blaspheming infidels, they can hear the dirtiest of Communism, which was circulated in its European lodges and almost in the self-same words. These doctrines are thus summed up in the circular of one of the leaders of the Commune:

"We must conquer or die. To that end we must boldly deny God, family and country. We must withdraw our children from the stupefying influence of priests, of kings, and of nationality. To deny God let us proclaim man the sole and veritable ruler of his own destiny; it is to slay the priest and abolish religion. You know the exact echo of these last words in your own city a few weeks ago from the lips of a man who is aspiring to the political leadership of the working class. But there is more of this platform of social equality. 'In the denial of the Divinity man only asserts his own strength and independence.' 'As to the family, we reject it with our utmost might. In the name of the independence of the human race To the idea of the family it is that we owe the bastardizement of women and the abandonment of children. The child belongs not to his parents, but to the State. To deny God is to confirm the independence of man from his cradle, to snatch woman from the thraldom in which she has been cast by a pretrid civilization."

These raving socialists dare to tell the workingman of this country that they are organized to expel God from the family, from education, from public law. The voice of their political code is; "Down with God!" the program which they advocate is, "Down with the Cross." The profligate emissaries of European Communism no longer since their words are cloak their purposes.

This vile social fanaticism, trusting in its growing strength, does not hesitate, when occasion offers, to throw off all disguise. After all it is better that Catholic workingmen should scan the features of this social devil, before it attains mature growth. Forewarned is forearmed. They can not learn too soon to shun all contact with this impious organization.—Catholic Telegraph.

Communistic Blasphemy in New York.

A MIDNIGHT ORGIE ON GOOD FRIDAY, AND THE SUPPER OF CHRIST MADE THE MOCKERY WHICH HE CONFLIGHT AT ARCHBISHOP ALEMANY.

The annual Good Friday banquet of the Society of the Refugees of the Commune, held for the purpose of insulting the attempt of that body for the religious observances of the Christian Church, took place last evening at the restaurant of Citizen Clonet, 156 Bleecker street. The hour appointed for the beginning of the feast was 7:30, and at that time a goodly dozen French Communists were gathered in the front room, drinking vermouth, absinthe and other liquors, smoking cigarettes and discussing the affairs of the day. Prominent among them was Edmund Megy, one of the Communists who, in 1871, assisted at the assassination of Archbishop Darboy and the hostages, at Paris; Olivier, one of the chief writers of Le Cri du Peuple, the Communist organ of the city; Leblanc, a well-known Communist; Cornu, a Haytian negro Communist; Mathiolet, a veteran French agitationist, and Renaud, the Secretary of the Communist Society.

The banquet hall was decorated with hangings of very red bunting and the flags of the Commune. One here the inscription: "Vive la Commune," another bore the inscription; "Pas de devoirs, pas de droits." "Pas de droits, pas de devoirs," and "Société des Réfugiés de la Commune." The table was spread with red napkins; most of the guests were red in some form or the other, and the Chairman, Citizen Mathiolet, wore a red shirt. All the guests were in their shirt sleeves, and at sixteen in all sat down to the table, and for nearly two hours were engaged in eating and drinking.

Each guest ate heartily, drank as much vin ordinaire and cognac as he could hold. The effect of the wine was seen when the cloth was removed, when Citizen Mathiolet rose and delivered the opening address of the evening. He was greeted with loud applause, and, pulling up the collar of his red shirt, and taking from his mouth the clay pipe which he held there, he said:

"I do not rise in the character of President, for we have no President, and no chairman. We are all equal. I arise to tell you why we are here; we are here to attest our hatred of the prejudices which make of this a fast day for the poor, while the priests and the rich feast and grow fat. What are these priests? They are the assassins of the people; the enemies of humanity; the cowards who always side with the oppressors against the oppressed, with the persecutor against his victims. [Applause.] The priest has been the enemy of liberty—not only the Catholic priest, but the Jewish and Protestant priest as well. In 1848, when the coup d'etat came in France, the Archbishop Guibert offered the revolutionists the use of the Church of Notre Dame as a place of barriage from the troops, just as soon as the coup d'etat had succeeded, he opened an ode to sing a Te Deum to Napoleon, and thus allowed his victims to fall into the hands of the assassins. So, too, in 1857, when the men were marching to the City Hall crying for bread, it was the priest Henry Ward Beecher, the putative husband of Mrs. Tilton, advised them to submit to the military, although the Board of Aldermen were forced to vote $2,000,000 for work in Central Park to relieve the distress. [Applause.] This same Beecher, too, was a coward, and declared that a workingman can live on one dollar a day, (price of twenty five cents.") Ah, those priests! I remember when I had a daughter; instead of having her baptized by a priest, I gave her a name and baptized her with wine. A priest afterwards came to me and said he could come and baptize her. I said, "If you come as a man I will welcome you; but if you come as a priest I will throw you out of the window." [Loud applause.] Citizens, we do not want these priest. If we get married we will be married by the Mayor. If we must baptize our children, let us do it ourselves and in wine, and not let a priest throw his dirty water over its head." [Loud Applause] Those who do not feel and act thus may be over-influenced by their wives or mothers-in-law. Let them, then, free themselves from this influence. Let us feast when those priests fast, fast when they feast—for the Church and its priests are always on the side of property; but sometimes they suffer too, as in the case of M. Darboy. [Loud applause, during which Megy picked his teeth with his fork and smiled triumphantly.]

The next speaker was citizen Golard, an old man with little hair and a long beard. He said:

"Citizens, we are here, as Citizen Mathiot has said, to express our contempt for the priests. This is right. Take the case of the Archbishop Darboy, who participated in the Workingmen's party to enter the church in San Francisco. Ah, if I could have that Archbishop by the hair. [Loud applause and wild yells.] It is time that we, the advance guard of the people, should come out boldly and express our feelings towards these priests, these assassins of our rights, these robbers of our money. A priest, be he Catholic, Protestant or Jew, is an enemy of the people. The Church is an enemy, and the Bishops are the leaders of the people's enemies. [Loud applause.]

After this address, Citizen Megy was called upon for a toast, and said:

Citizens, I propose to you—"The annihilation of the priests and all other parasites and the destruction of the Church."—Drink!

This was drunk with due honors amid great enthusiasm, all the guests gazing at Megy with great admiration, and he in turn gazing at the World reporter with a look as if he would like to annihilate him, too.

The colored Communist, Citizen Cornu, next sang a song, which was loudly applauded, and the Citizen Leblanc sang an ode to spring, of a lively character, prefacing the third verse with an apology for its religious character; it contained the line:

J'aime ma mere et mon Dieu—

"Oh, we are indulgent," exclaimed Megy; "go on."

"Yes," exclaimed Citizen Mathiolet, "go on; we are not so serious as we look."

Citizen Mathiolet then sang a revolutionary ditty, of which the refrain was—

Pon, Pon, Pon,
Courage! gamins,
Pon, Pon, Pon,
Beaudisons, demolissons!

This excited a degree of enthusiasm equaled only by that created by a song sung by Megy, and entitled "Ana Barricades," a verse of which the World recently published, and of which the refrain was

Car, il faut que tout prix nous en soyons valeureux.

Citizen Caniare followed with a song of equivocal character, which was received with great favor. By this time the claret and cognac, the red flag and the speeches had done their work, and a citizen, whose name was withheld, sang a ditty of such a character that Madame Clonet, who was waiting at the table, left the room in a hurry, and the audience so lifted its vulgar words and more vulgar refrain in yells of drunken laughter.—N. Y. World.

THE Cincinnati Commercial denounces the late orgies of the New York Communists on Good Friday, and calls them very men whom it has constantly praised for their war against religion and order in France. A clever view of the foul, impious heroes of Communism has silenced its tones of admiration. It finds that Communism assassination of bishops and priests is only a preparatory step to the murder and plunder of all who possess a little money. A close view of Communism will not be problematic.—Catholic Telegraph.

Revelations of a Detective.

The Secret Organization which may Develop into a Commune.

Mr. Lonergan, of Lonergan & Thiel's National Secret Service Agency, believes that he has discovered the existence of a secret order styling itself the Knights of Labor, which, springing up since the strikes, greatly were in that country, and which, on Sixteen in all sat down to the table, and for nearly two hours were engaged in eating and drinking.

Each guest ate heartily, drank as much vin ordinaire and cognac as he could hold. The effect of the wine was seen when the cloth was removed, when Citizen Mathiolet rose and delivered the opening address of the evening. He was greeted with loud applause, and, pulling up the collar of his red shirt, and taking from his mouth the clay pipe which he held there, he said:

"I do not rise in the character of President, for we have no President, and no chairman. We are all equal. I arise to tell you why we are here; we are here to attest our hatred of the prejudices which make of this a fast day for the poor, while the priests and the rich feast and grow fat. What are these priests? They are the assassins of the people; the enemies of humanity; the cowards who always side with the oppressors against the oppressed, with the persecutor against his victims. [Applause.] The priest has been the enemy of liberty—not only the Catholic priest, but the Jewish and Protestant priest as well. In 1848, when the coup d'etat came in France, the Archbishop Guibert offered the revolutionists the use of the Church of Notre Dame as a place of barriage from the troops, just as soon as the coup d'etat had succeeded, he opened an ode to sing a Te Deum to Napoleon, and thus allowed his victims to fall into the hands of the assassins. So, too, in 1857, when the men were marching to the City Hall crying for bread, it was the priest Henry Ward Beecher, the putative husband of Mrs. Tilton, advised them to submit to the military, although the Board of Aldermen were forced to vote $2,000,000 for work in Central Park to relieve the distress. [Applause.] This same Beecher, too, was a coward, and declared that a workingman can live on one dollar a day, (price of twenty five cents." Ah, those priests! I remember when I had a daughter; instead of having her baptized by a priest, I gave her a name and baptized her with wine. A priest afterwards came to me and said he could come and baptize her. I said, "If you come as a man I will welcome you; but if you come as a priest I will throw you out of the window." [Loud applause.] Citizens, we do not want these priest. If we get married we will be married by the Mayer. If we must baptize our children, let us do it ourselves and in wine, and not let a priest throw his dirty water over its head." [Loud Applause] Those who do not feel and act thus may be over-influenced by their wives or mothers-in-law. Let them, then, free themselves from this influence. Let us feast when those priests fast, fast when they feast—for the Church and its priests are always on the side of property; but sometimes they suffer too, as in the case of M. Darboy. [Loud applause, during which Megy picked his teeth with his fork and smiled triumphantly.]

The next speaker was citizen Golard, an old man with little hair and a long beard. He said:

"Citizens, we are here, as Citizen Mathiot has said, to express our contempt for the priests. This is right. Take the case of the Archbishop Darboy, who participated in the Workingmen's party to enter the church in San Francisco. Ah, if I could have that Archbishop by the hair. [Loud applause and wild yells.] It is time that we, the advance guard of the people, should come out boldly and express our feelings towards these priests, these assassins of our rights, these robbers of our money. A priest, be he Catholic, Protestant or Jew, is an enemy of the people. The Church is an enemy, and the Bishops are the leaders of the people's enemies. [Loud applause.]

After this address, Citizen Megy was called upon for a toast, and said:

Citizens, I propose to you—"The annihilation of the priests and all other parasites and the destruction of the Church."—Drink!

This was drunk with due honors amid great enthusiasm, all the guests gazing at Megy with great admiration, and he in turn gazing at the World reporter with a look as if he would like to annihilate him, too.

The colored Communist, Citizen Cornu, next sang a song, which was loudly applauded, and the Citizen Leblanc sang an ode to spring, of a lively character, prefacing the third verse with an apology for its religious character; it contained the line:

J'aime ma mere et mon Dieu—

"Oh, we are indulgent," exclaimed Megy; "go on."

"Yes," exclaimed Citizen Mathiolet, "go on; we are not so serious as we look."

Citizen Mathiolet then sang a revolutionary ditty, of which the refrain was—

Pon, Pon, Pon,
Courage! gamins,
Pon, Pon, Pon,
Beaudisons, demolissons!

This excited a degree of enthusiasm equaled only by that created by a song sung by Megy, and entitled "Ana Barricades," a verse of which the World recently published, and of which the refrain was

Car, il faut que tout prix nous en soyons valeureux.

Citizen Caniare followed with a song of equivocal character, which was received with great favor. By this time the claret

Labor Strikes.

The relations between Labor and Capital and capital is one of the most difficult problems the present generation has to deal with. The general organization of Labor through Trades-unionism has forced some of these problems into greater prominence, but has rather complicated than simplified them. Perhaps the most difficult question involved is that of the adjustment of the standard of wages, and time and persistence appear to bring the world no nearer a satisfactory solution of it. Some years ago it was thought that arbitration might be successfully employed in disputes of this kind, but arbitration has proved a failure, and the sending to arbitration has waned in increasing everywhere. At present there are no hopeful indications, nor does there appear to be any common ground of agreement between the contending parties. The capitalists naturally maintain that they must be the best judges of the price they can afford to pay, and that they alone can determine whether it will pay to continue manufacturing at a certain rate of wages, or whether the conditions of trade necessitate a reduction in the cost of production. The employes refuse to admit that the manufacturer can be trusted to do them justice, and being organized, they are always under temptation to employ moral, if not physical pressure. They demand that the books of the employers shall be submitted to their examination; that they shall be allowed to practically control the business in which they are subordinate; and that the standard of wages shall be adjusted in accordance with their views, and not in accordance with the employer's views. It is manifest that there is here no prospect of agreement, and as a result we have for the time being no arbitration. Labor and Capital are both paralyzed, and suffering is forced upon both of them, but they were undoubtedly serious. The alleged occasion was, according to present reports, the arrival of Hewes and Pinkerton, from the university of Kieff, going into a Turkish bath, and shaving themselves and crying out, "These man suffer for the truth." The official account cautiously says, "Facts of a sufficiently grave character have been reported to us, that students were conveyed to prison pending their dispatch to Siberia and tranquillity was restored." So whatever the facts may be, that in Berlin the report was current that a few days ago, a student, and, if the Berlin Post, commenting on the news, said:

"Russia is threatened with serious dangers, and the Czar is in the greatest danger, as has been mentioned above; affairs will be fatal, if the Czar dies."

Russian despotism must unbend its rigors. The old motto of the bridge, "I'll break, but I'll not bend," is no longer a motto that can not afford to adopt, especially in those days, when, in some lands, freedom, civil and religious, is the law of the land, and allyous and hearts to it.—Catholic Telegraph.

Liberal Catholics.

We are glad to find the Catholic press of America exposing the fallacies of what is called Liberal Catholicism. The Catholic Visitor of Richmond, Va., remarks: Now-a-days, we hear much about Liberal Catholicism, even from members of the Catholic Church, and it has been a surprise to us to fully understand the word. From a Protestant standpoint, we can see the meaning of the word, Liberal Catholicism, as a man who accommodates his belief and opinions to whatever company he may be in, or to circumstances in which he may find himself. Knowing the principles of the Catholic Church, it means neither more nor less than one who accepts such doctrines and practices, and especially such as do not suit their pleasure. Hence, we hear those calling themselves Catholics arrogantly taking to themselves the privilege of drawing a line to which they assert the Church may come in for consideration, but no farther. Very emphatically we say it is none of her business to stop. Our Liberal Catholics will tell us the Church has no business to dictate to what house of worship you shall not attend, what school you shall not send your children, in what kind of dancing you shall not indulge, into what species of society you shall not enter, and the like. Our liberal Catholics will tell you those are temporal affairs, over which you are to control entire way, and it is an attempt to make Catholics subservient to the tyranny of the Church, if the Church interferes.

Let us examine and see what truth is in their assertion and what rights, if any, the Church has in the premises. First, we hesitate not to say that neither the Catholic Church nor any true member of it can be liberal, as defined and understood by the world. Why? Because it is impossible for truth to be liberal or even to be regarded by how slight the difference existing between truth and error, still there is an irreconcilable difference between them. The Catholic Church is, in every Catholic's opinion, the very groundwork, the foundation and keystone of truth, and therefore cannot be liberal to any doctrines contrary, even in the most remote variance, with hers. She may be and is liberal towards the persons themselves, and may be and is lenient toward human frailties, but it is not possible for her to be liberal in regard to doctrinal or essential points, matters of faith in which the salvation of our souls is concerned.

Now, what is the Catholic Church? It is an institution founded and commissioned by Jesus Christ. For what purpose? To teach men His doctrines and to inculcate in them such practices as will be necessary for their salvation, and in order that she should do this properly, Christ promises that the Spirit of Truth shall abide with her (the Church) and teach her all truth, so that her teachings should be free from error, and her practices sanctified. Is this a new doctrine? Why, it is about the first lesson we are taught in our childhood, and it is a useful incident to seven other denominations, who ceaselessly say, "We believe in the Holy Catholic Church," and yet are ranged in hostility to her. If the Church be commissioned by Christ himself; if Christ keep the promise that He would ever abide with her; if she has been placed on earth to carry on the work of salvation, the salvation and death of Christ, and if she is to be the only avenue whereby men may enter Heaven, is it a new doctrine, is it anything else than right to tell us what is dangerous to our soul's salvation; what we must avoid and what we must absolutely refuse to do? The Church desires not, nor does she attempt to rule herself with our so-called temporal affairs, unless they have a direct bearing upon our spiritual condition. She does not enter our domestic circle unless it be to shape our lives and our conduct, so that heaven may be gained. Men lose sight of one great fact, that, as the Church, they must believe they are on earth for but one end, and, as the Church, they are not forgotten. The men and women sacrificed are, in the eyes of the Russian people, martyrs to a holy cause, and their blood and memory are treasured up. Neither are they alone. They have, also, not a bold or rash act, but, perhaps, but just as earnest in the cause for which these sacrifice their lives as Catholics are, and yet in themselves. It is the Church's peculiar business to see that they are good and proper. Let us hear no more about "liberal Catholics," no such exist, and those who delude themselves with the idea that they can court truth and error together, are unerably mistaken, and had better undeceive themselves.—Catholic Herald.

New Advertisements.

MAURICE DORE & CO.,
REAL ESTATE, STOCK AND GENERAL AUCTIONEERS

Office and Salesroom, No. 410 Pine Street.

Desirable Property
—IN THE—
TOWN OF BERKELEY
AT AUCTION.

THURSDAY.

THURSDAY - - - - - - MAY 16th, 1878
At 12 o'clock M., at Salesroom,
No. 410 PINE STREET,
Between Montgomery and Kearny Streets,
SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA.
We will offer for Sale,

150
CHOICE LOTS
—IN THE—
TOWN OF BERKELEY IN TRACT KNOWN AS THE Leonard Tract
ADJOINING THE UNIVERSITY GROUNDS.

TERMS LIBERAL.—One-quarter cash; balance in one, two and three years; interest at 10 per cent. payment in Kind or Coin.

Size of Lots---44x137-6 feet and 50x134-6 feet.

N. B. This beautiful and picturesque tract of land is within three blocks of the University of California, and can be reached in 10 minutes from San Francisco; 30 minutes by sail from Broadway Wharf, or by the Oakland Ferry, and 5 minutes' walk from the Berkeley Ferry. Monthly commutation tickets, good for 1,000 passages, or lots cost of at Freight way stations. The property of the late estate of the large improvements in Oakland and to the City of San Francisco, is rapidly becoming the most healthy location, renders it desirable for residence, and offers unexcelled facilities to those who desire the walks of Oakland and San Francisco.

For further particulars, see Circulars, Maps, pamphlets, and on the spot, 410 Pine street.

MAURICE DORE & CO.,
Real Estate Agents and Auctioneers.
10 3 t

NEW YORK
Photograph Gallery.
25 Third Street,
East side, between Market and Mission Streets.
SAN FRANCISCO.
Any kind of a Photograph, Tintype, from the Smallest Locket to Life Size, executed in a very superior manner.
PRICES VERY LOW.
REMEMBER THE PLACE,
New York Gallery - - - 25 Third street.
J. H. PETERS, Proprietor.
May 5th

ORIENTAL DETERSIVE SOAP!
ORIENTAL DETERSIVE SOAP!
ORIENTAL DETERSIVE SOAP!
A perfect laundry soap, made upon new chemical principles, and combining twice the cleansing power, and wash better than any soap in existence.
Ask your grocer for it, and take no other.
Manufactured only by Charles McKeone, Son & Co.,
PHILADELPHIA.

---Maize Flour Toilet Soap!---
---Maize Flour Toilet Soap!---
---Maize Flour Toilet Soap!---

A New Star compound that soothes, refines, and whitens the skin, has very STRONG WASHING POWER, and is sold for bath, nursery, and general toilet use. It is delightfully perfumed, and cost everywhere, Dispatched by Federal Express, 1876, by the manufacturers.
Chas. McKeone, Son & Co., Philadelphia.
May 5th

A FARM AND HOME
Now is the time to secure it. Only FIVE DOLLARS for an Acre of the BEST Lands in America.
2,000,000 ACRES
OF THE NORTHERN PACIFIC RAILROAD GRANT, LYING ALONG THE LINE OF THE NEW ROAD, IN MINNESOTA, DAKOTA, AND MONTANA.
TEN YEARS' CREDIT GIVEN WITH INTEREST AT SIX PER CENT. PAYABLE ANNUALLY.
Over 10,000 Miles of Railroad Now Completed and Operated in the Best Portions of the Country.
INFORMATION WANTED ON PATRICK and BERNARD RICE, who left New York about Six years ago, Bernard left New Orleans about Twelve or Fourteen years ago, and when last heard from was in San Francisco. Any information of them would be thankfully received by Jas. Cassidy, New Hamburgh, Dutchess County, New York. may7

THE
CATHOLIC PARENTS' FRIEND.
A New Catholic Monthly Magazine.
IT IS INTENDED TO BE A WELCOME assistant to Catholic Parents in the art of bringing up good children, so very difficult to them in this country.
One copy, postpaid, one year, $1. Special discount to agents.
A specimen copy sent free to any address on application.
Send communications and orders to the editor, REV. M. WALRATH, Cohoes, Cal., or to the General Agents, J. R. O'CONNOR & CO., 148 Sixth street, corner of Mission, San Francisco. may5

MISCELLANEOUS.

SAN FRANCISCO AND NORTH PACIFIC R. R.

Commencing Sunday, April 7, 1878, and until further notice, Trains and Boats will leave San Francisco.

(Ticket Office, Washington Street Wharf.)

3.00 P. M. Daily (Sundays excepted) Steamer "James M. Donahue," (Washington-street Wharf), connections with Mail and Express train at Donahue for Petaluma, Santa Rosa, Healdsburg, Cloverdale and way stations, making stage connections at Lakeville for Sonoma, at Geyserville for Skaggs' Springs, at Cloverdale for Ukiah, Lakeport, Mendocino City and Geysers.

8* Connection made at Fulton on following morning with Fulton and Healdsburg R. R. for Kidwell's, Guerneville and the Redwoods.

(Arrive at San Francisco 10.30 A. M.)

8.00 A. M. Sundays only, Excursion Steamer "James M. Donahue," leaving at Donahue with trains for Cloverdale and way stations.

(Arrive at San Francisco 6.55 P. M.)

Freight Received daily from 7 A. M. to 2.30 P. M. except Sundays.

A. HUGHES, General Manager.
A. A. BRAY, Superintendent.
F. E. BOURGERET, Gen. Pass. Agt.

"Our Catholic Friends."

SHEA'S,
No. 825 Market Street,
SAN FRANCISCO.

WE'S CATHOLIC BOOKS, an assortment not to be found elsewhere.

Full of nice Lace Stories that cannot be beat.

ALL CATHOLIC NEWSPAPERS at SHEA'S are unfurled.

Irish American, Catholic World, Monitor, and Irish World.

The Shamrock, Pilot, Boston Pilot, Irish Democrat, at SHEA'S you can see.

Photographs of POPE LEO, Thirteenth of his name.

And, every one says, looks just the same;

ROSARIES AND SCAPULARS, and five CENTS, too, as much buried in them as when you first came in.

Patronize him, good Catholics, when passing his way.

825 Market street is the store of M. Shea, near St. Ignatius Church. When you go to the Mass.

By the store of M. Shea you will quite often pass.

MICHAEL SHEA,
825 MARKET STREET. mh7

SWEET Chewing NAVY Tobacco
Awarded highest prize at Centennial Exposition for superior quality and excellence of flavor. Ask your dealer for it and accept no other. The best tobacco made. Manufactured only by the Proprietors, Lorillard & Co., Jersey City, N. J.

Veuve Zavier Jouvin Kid Gloves.
Bush and Sansome Sts., San Francisco.
ap12

M. J. EAGAN,
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER IN HAY, GRAIN, WOOD & COAL,
Junction Hayes and Market Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO.
Goods delivered free of charge in any part of the city. Terms strictly cash.
J. E. CONSIDINE, Agent. jy6

JOHN STACK. GEO. LACOMBE.
STACK & LACOMBE, PRACTICAL HATTERS
639 Market Street,
Under Palace Hotel . . . . . SAN FRANCISCO.
jy29

PACIFIC GLASS STAINING, CUTTING, EMBOSSING and DESIGNING WORKS.
S. MALLON, Proprietor.
No. 10 FREMONT STREET, Near Market.
Bending of Glass a specialty.

A. WASON. P. J. MORAN.
WASON & MORRIS,
Plain, Decorative, House, Sign & Fresco
PAINTERS.
Gilding and Glazing, Imitations of Wood and Marble.
IMPORTERS AND DEALERS IN . . . .
Paints, Oils, Turpentine, Varnishes, Brushes, Glass, Etc.,
No. 34 California Street,
Below Davis. . . . . SAN FRANCISCO.
my7

THOMAS M'GINNIS,
No. 77½ Market St.,
Bet. Third and Fourth . . . . . SAN FRANCISCO.
MANUFACTURER AND IMPORTER OF SADDLES, HARNESS,
WHIPS, COLLARS, BRIDLES & HORSE CLOTHING.
Horse Boots a Specialty.
Repairing carefully done at moderate rates. Some but first class material used. n10

BUSINESS CARDS.

JOHN A. LENNON,
Importer of the following well-known brands of TEAS,
Brands Choice
Japan and English Breakfast Tea.
No. 313 Clay Street.
Bet. Front and Battery . . . . . San Francisco.
my5

MURPHY, GRANT & CO.,
IMPORTERS OF DRY GOODS,
And Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast
OF THE . . . .
Veuve Zavier Jouvin Kid Gloves.
Bush and Sansome Sts., San Francisco.
ap12

T. J. BRODERICK,
112 Third Street,
Bet. Mission & Mission, San Francisco.
8* A full assortment of
The United Wokingmen's
BEST CUSTOM-MADE BOOTS AND SHOES.
8* The best CHILDREN'S SCHOOL SHOES a specialty. Boots and Shoes made to order. ap16

MISCELLANEOUS.

A WORLD'S TRIUMPH,
THE CURRENT OF TRADE REVERSED.
TO EUROPE.
STEINWAY & SONS
ORDERS FROM EUROPE
have increased to an extent, necessitating the establishment of Warerooms in London, England, and connected with it a Concert Hall, the whole constituted making the most important house in Europe, and stands there as a monument of American enterprise and skill.
It is impossible to mention in the limited space of an advertisement the numerous improvements of this great firm. Their Grand Square Piano, the Upright Piano, building in America, and in that respect, so much imitated by their brethren in the Fatherland, is a Movement of all their competitors, as shown in their models at Paris, and in their catalogues. Their pianos are however so completely protected, that no imitation can possibly be attempted with success, the method of crying such inventions down are resorted to by their competitors.
The Steinway Grand and Square Pianos are strong and long Piano systems. The application of the Agraffe Arrangement to Square and Upright Pianos. The Patent Duplex Scale creating the most beautiful treble tones, (the Duplex Scale is a French invention and only to be found in Pianos sold by Steinway). The improved Repeater Action. The Sticker establishing Agraffe overstringing in the Upright Piano, the Patent Metal Flange Sounding Board, including a short yet vertical pin, firmly fixed in the stick, etc. The wood work and varnish, equally good as Steinway's, but the instrument is of large capital and experience alone permits.
This name of Steinway has become a "household word" in American homes, and the satisfactory record of 18 years is all that is needed to ensure the purchaser that the investment is one of the most profitable character.
The difficulties of importing Pianos from Europe have been fully met by Steinway & Sons, and they are prepared to offer the Celebrated Steinway Pianos, etc., absolutely free of duty, and consequently at the same rate as the best Pianos exhibited. The free frames in the Steinway Pianos, which have been imitated, while other firms have to pay a heavy duty on every foundry, the Steinways maintain their own foundry, and manufacture their frames, a thing which adds greatly to the resonant qualities of the instrument in general.
It frequently occurs that the attempt is made to place the character of Pianos representing the same merit principles to the rack that the Steinway maintains, and it is a matter of congratulation that it is only confined to a few instances, and that the willingness of the dealer to place such inferior pianos for sale or exchange for Steinways, is not entertained in any first-class business. In selling a Steinway Piano, the purchaser is sure of getting a piano, protecting the purchaser for 5 years, and stationed to place the Steinway Piano on an equal footing with rate of prices in gold, and where desired a liberal allowance for the purchaser's instrument, which can be taken in exchange, or the choice of simple interest on deferred payments. Illustrated Catalogues and Price lists to

N. GRAY, General Agent,
103 Kearny Street, S. F.

GIANT CEMENT!

A MOST EXTRAORDINARY AND UNIVERSAL CEMENT. Mechanics, Farmers, Crockery, Glassware Marble, Meerschaum Pipes, Furniture, etc., also for repairing Leather Belting and patching boots and shoes. The current pressure extraordinary itself, and is in every way a first-class article. Every can is the equivalent to one lb. of the best Spanish RUBBER CEMENT, for mending Rubber Boots, Shoes, Belting, Coats and

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY EVENING MAY 9

Remittances will please specially look at the printed label on the margin or wrapper of the paper (the date thereon shows the time the subscription expires. They should also know that their taking the paper from the postoffice renders them liable for the subscription price as long as they continue to do so. Persons have no excuse to make for papers being sent after the time their subscription expires. If they wish their paper discontinued, by not taking it from the office the postmaster is bound to notify the publishers of that fact, and to have the paper stopped. We make this explanation for the information of those who make the excuse, when asked for payment, that they paid for it as long as ordered, but still continue to take it from the office.

Mr. John P. Cassin, our Traveling Agent, is now in Santa Clara County, on his annual canvassing tour. We hope our friends in that county will extend to him a cordial welcome.

The Church the Protectress of Society.

One of the most remarkable, and at the same time ominous, phenomena observable at the present day in the social and political world is most unquestionably the spread of Communism. There is no civilized country free from its presence and no country can claim to be safe from danger from its workings. The despotism of Russia cannot check it; the bureaucracy of Germany is unable to stop it; the conservatism of England, cannot keep it out; the liberalism of France is unequal to opposing it; of course revolutionary Italy barely struggles against it; even free and truly republican America—we feels alarmed at it, because the rights of property are endangered. Hia then, everywhere, and in a form or manner to the established order of things all over the world. Is this serious and widespread pestilence? By no means, but we hear more about it now than formerly. Many years ago the Supreme head of the Catholic Church marked the viciousness of Communism and denounced it; yet he received no support from the governments of the time, and his motives were aspersed by the sectarian and infidel press. Then, Communism was veiled beneath the specious title of "human liberty," and the Pope was denounced as an enemy of "human liberty" because he placed the weight of his censures upon it. Afterwards we had the spurious "rights of peoples," which in reality meant the right to disregard all obligations both human and divine, and the Vicar of Christ smote that with his anathema, wherefore he was assailed as a sympathizer with tyranny. Next, we were treated to the novel and plausible doctrine of the "inviolability of accomplished facts," a phrase, which, stripped of its clothing of blue words, meant nothing more or less than that a wicked deed when one performed successfully should receive the sanction of mankind as thought were a virtuous action, and when the Sovereign Pontiff reprobated such ideas he was assailed as an enemy of progress." Now, we find the doctrines of materialism taking away the last shadow of responsibility from man, and abolishing distinction between right and wrong, and when the Head of the Church condemns them he is accused of being hostile to enlightenment. So, no matter what he does or says, he is attacked by all the enemies of religion, and their name is legion. But, in which as he speaks only the words of truth, the irrefutable logic of eternal truth, cannot fail to make a deep impression on every man of reflection, and of what evil does it point? The life of man on earth is a hard lot; the majority live to suffer. It is not that they have to work by the sweat of their brow, for that is the normal condition of life, but that their work in too many instances to be merely exceptional, does not suffice to keep body and soul decently together. The late Bishop Ketteler of Mayence, than whom no writer in our day was more profoundly versed in the labor question, and in the social problems connected with it, and which now perplex the minds of many, and lead many more to their ruin, recognized in his writings the primeval right of man to live by his labor. Man, indeed, should be condemned to live by the labor of his hands, but he was not condemned to starve or to live in a degrading struggle between life and death. The laborer has as much right to live as the owner of the soil which he tills or as willing till. Life is as sacred a right to the poor man as to the rich.

Two questions arise—first, are the arrangements of society in our day of such an order as to afford the laborer of his right to live, or unduly tend to increase the hope or chance of existence, as if so, are such arrangements prejudiced by the action of the State directly, or indirectly by its neglect to protect equally the just rights of all? We do not pretend to answer the question categorically; it suffices for the present purpose to raise them, for they must be considered, if we desire to prevent, or at least, of the causes which underlie the Communistic movement in Europe. As an instance of the direct action of the State in relieving labor in its struggle for the means of livelihood, we may instance the case of the Corn Laws in England. Are there laws regulating the relations between capital and labor now in force in England, or elsewhere in Europe, similar, not in character, but in effect, to the Corn Laws, which were repealed, we must most of us, as Conservatives, remember with regret and shame, not without a fierce struggle, and loud denunciations of Sir Robert Peel and of Mr. Bright and Cobden as Communists in disguise? In our day, when in our experience of past misgiving, we must be careful to remember, that not all those who recognize some justice in the protest of Communism against the excesses or abuses of Capital must be accounted in our heat or judicial blindness as Communists.

Before examining how far, or in what way, the rights of labor are, or are not, prejudiced, it is as well to touch upon the question whether Communism do not, for the most part, to the injury of those whose cause they profess or pretend to advocate, include in the rights of labor the right if not to live idly, at least to live luxuriously. The Communist agitators, instead of being intent on remedying social abuses, have set up a gospel of their own, a gospel of equality. They incite their disciples or dupes by inspiring them with the hope of dividing equally the riches of the earth. The laborer is to become the capitalist, and to live sumptuously every day. The old ways, which have so long existed, are to be destroyed root and branch, and a new order of things is to be set up in which there is to be no poverty, no social inequalities, no crime, because no virtue and no God, and in which enjoyment is to be the highest aim of existence, and a utilitarian selfishness the only law.

That such masses of the peoples of Europe have fallen victims to so monstrous and abominable teaching of Communism is in great part due to the growing impatience of poverty. The Christian faith alone enabled men to sustain the burden; resignation to the will of God and to the hard lot of a life of poverty was the teaching of Christian religion is the teaching of Communism. In the eyes of the Christian, Dives was to be pitied, not Lazarus. Lazarus is held accused by the Communist, and Dives, wherever his place may be, is promulged. In such antagonistic principles there is no common ground, but in regard to facts the state in which masses of people live in fault of their own, or by no sufficient fault they are compelled to live, there can be no question that the Christian, on the principles, reprobates as evil the social state called ironic paupers as it brooks the State can only to secure an outward show of honesty and public decency, how long can it rely upon them? Assuming that the State can fear them as weapons which can be employed against it, it can, if it chooses to side, not to back them down, but to seize them and use them as tools for their own ends, which have become identical with the State itself, in the chaos which must ensue!

It is only a question of time when this catastrophe will come to pass in Prussia and the rest of Protestant Germany. We have in our country a class of Communists or socialists which the prevailing political tendency has not yet had time to implant. We have in continental Europe what must be the state of an atheistical people as time progresses. A stimulated public order can only be secured by force. The interests of the individual being adverse to this force it must be bought down if only the individuals are strong enough to overbear it. The time must, this at length come to pass in Prussia, because the exercise of the public force itself is in the hands of those very citizens who are interested that it shall not be used against themselves. The confusion is aggravated by the spread of Socialism, and the menacing attitude it has taken up. In truth, there is nothing in the principle spread in this; it is only the infiltration of fidelity into the heavy-eared strata, and the peculiar consequences which must result from such a transmutation of principle. Prussia, is founded and sustained by revolt against God, just exactly as is the Revolution, Protestantism and social progress of the bourgeoisie. These latter pretensions it to be dangerous to the State, that is to themselves, and they are beginning to announcing it, because in an equal decay of Christian principle, and in the same degree to restrain its disturbing action, and because the ruin it is likely to precipitate will assuredly overwhelm the State, and with it the millions of the proletariat in 1793 swept over France, a century before it, just as the revolution wrought in Prussia in three years previously overturned the noble, and the Revolution is more a thing, the misery was more sweeping and engulfing. But the principle which gave birth to the Revolution, and which, under virtue of morality as the basis of order, the corrupt and selfish Revolution, must, under self alone the guiding principle of conduct, the lowest class citizen, who has much to lose by disorder, and who, in the struggle with the bounds by that very principle, which, although it may be, because it is not equally in or connivance at that awful spectacle. Something of this sense of right is on all over Protestant Germany now. But with a difference. The pilegnatic German in taking to infidelity is pretty sure to carry it more thoroughly, more remorselessly, with less chance of recovery, than the Frenchman in the preceding years ago. If the millions who make up the middle classes will boldly resist Socialism, and are becoming daily more and more immoral in material and sensuality, how can the stability of the State and the external course of public order, be maintained, except by force? Let when the citizen has ceased to think of God, there is nothing to keep him in the straight path of civic decorum but the policeman's baton. Only it is no longer a symbol appealing to his conscience. He has no conscience; it is now a grim and naked reality. And if in the last analysis of reasons and motives, the policeman's baton and the soldier's musket are the sole agents to which the State can rely to secure an outward show of honesty and public decency, how long can it rely upon them? Assuming that the State can fear them as weapons which can be employed against it, it can, if it chooses to side, not to back them down, but to seize them and use them as tools for their own ends, which have become identical with the State itself, in the chaos which must ensue!

It is only a question of time when this catastrophe will come to pass in Prussia and the rest of Protestant Germany. We have in our country a class of Communists or socialists which the prevailing political tendency has not yet had time to implant. We have in continental Europe what must be the state of an atheistical people as time progresses. A stimulated public order can only be secured by force. The interests of the individual being adverse to this force it must be bought down if only the individuals are strong enough to overbear it. The time must, this at length come to pass in Prussia, because the exercise of the public force itself is in the hands of those very citizens who are interested that it shall not be used against themselves. The confusion is aggravated by the spread of Socialism, and the menacing attitude it has taken up. In truth, there is nothing in the principle spread in this; it is only the infiltration of fidelity into the heavy-eared strata, and the peculiar consequences which must result from such a transmutation of principle. Prussia, is founded and sustained by revolt against God, just exactly as is the Revolution, Protestantism and social progress of the bourgeoisie. These latter pretensions it to be dangerous to the State, that is to themselves, and they are beginning to announcing it, because in an equal decay of Christian principle, and in the same degree to restrain its disturbing action, and because the ruin it is likely to precipitate will assuredly overwhelm the State, and with it the millions of the proletariat in 1793 swept over France a century before it, just as the revolution wrought in Prussia in three years previously overturned the noble, and the Revolution is more a thing, the misery was more sweeping and engulfing. But the principle which gave birth to the Revolution, and which, under virtue of morality as the basis of order, the corrupt and selfish Revolution, must, under self alone the guiding principle of conduct, the lowest class citizen, who has much to lose by disorder, and who, in the struggle with the bounds by that very principle, which, although it may be, because it is not equally in or connivance at that awful spectacle. Something of this sense of right is on all over Protestant Germany now. But with a difference. The pilegnatic German in taking to infidelity is pretty sure to carry it more thoroughly, more remorselessly, with less chance of recovery, than the Frenchman in the preceding years ago. If the millions who make up the middle classes will boldly resist Socialism, and are becoming daily more and more immoral in material and sensuality, how can the stability of the State and the external course of public order, be maintained, except by force? Let when the citizen has ceased to think of God, there is nothing to keep him in the straight path of civic decorum but the policeman's baton. Only it is no longer a symbol appealing to his conscience. He has no conscience; it is now a grim and naked reality. And if in the last analysis of reasons and motives, the policeman's baton and the soldier's musket are the sole agents to which the State can rely to secure an outward show of honesty and public decency, how long can it rely upon them?

Nihilism in Germany.

Germany, especially its Protestant portion—the birth-place, cradle, and home of the Reformation—the scene of Luther's translation of the Bible and of his self-sacrifying labors to convince the world that the Bible alone in each man's hand was for him the sole and sufficient warrant of his faith—this Protestant Germany is receiving rough and over-abundant proof that "unless the Lord keep the city he watcheth in vain that keepeth it." They have set up an imperial edifice of united Germany which at first was a light and slender structure, but has year by year been becoming firmer and more substantial, with all its parts more closely knit together, so that all danger of rent or ruin seems thoroughly removed. But there are dangers other than outside and visible ones; the existence of a confederate empire may be undermined, even though the cohesiveness of its component parts may not be impaired. The all but universal indifferentism, disbelief, or Nihilism, of the large majority of the middle classes, is rapidly depriving the political and social order of all religious support and foundation. This a sin evil which an honest statesman must admit to be of the first magnitude. But even this is dwarfed by the more formidable danger involved in the spread of Socialist opinions and doctrines, and in the efforts to give them a practical fulcrum in their influence on public affairs.

This double danger is in truth only one Europe has seen it before now, and has had plenty of opportunity of studying it in detail, watching its progress, observing its transformation as it descended the social ladder, from the fine gentlemen and ladies to the sans-culottes. It was an amusing, joyous, nay, useful occupation for the upper classes in France one hundred and ten years ago to laugh at religion, to neglect its practice, to take no heed of its solemn precepts, to despise the rubbish contained in the Bible as too ridiculous for sensible people to accept. The business became a little less gay and more serious when the middle classes began to follow suit, and, having discarded God, set about clearing away all distinctions and privileges. But all the fun and frolic of the social collapse was extinguished when the mob had hold of the ground, and that there was no moral law, and they were free to do all that they pleased able. We know what followed. Brute force regained mastery of the world, and had the maintenance of material order. For a quarter of a century Europe was scourged as it had not been for ages, because of its complicity in or connivance at that awful spectacle. Something of this sense of right is on all over Protestant Germany now. But with a difference. The pilegnatic German in taking to infidelity is pretty sure to carry it more thoroughly, more remorselessly, with less chance of recovery, than the Frenchman in the preceding years ago. If the millions who make up the middle classes will boldly resist Socialism, and are becoming daily more and more immoral in material and sensuality, how can the stability of the State and the external course of public order, be maintained, except by force? Let when the citizen has ceased to think of God, there is nothing to keep him in the straight path of civic decorum but the policeman's baton. Only it is no longer a symbol appealing to his conscience. He has no conscience; it is now a grim and naked reality. And if in the last analysis of reasons and motives, the policeman's baton and the soldier's musket are the sole agents to which the State can rely to secure an outward show of honesty and public decency, how long can it rely upon them? Assuming that the State can fear them as weapons which can be employed against it, it can, if it chooses to side, not to back them down, but to seize them and use them as tools for their own ends, which have become identical with the State itself, in the chaos which must ensue!

It is only a question of time when this catastrophe will come to pass in Prussia and the rest of Protestant Germany. We have in our country a class of Communists or socialists which the prevailing political tendency has not yet had time to implant. We have in continental Europe what must be the state of an atheistical people as time progresses. A stimulated public order can only be secured by force. The interests of the individual being adverse to this force it must be bought down if only the individuals are strong enough to overbear it. The time must, this at length come to pass in Prussia, because the exercise of the public force itself is in the hands of those very citizens who are interested that it shall not be used against themselves. The confusion is aggravated by the spread of Socialism, and the menacing attitude it has taken up. In truth, there is nothing in the principle spread in this; it is only the infiltration of fidelity into the heavy-eared strata, and the peculiar consequences which must result from such a transmutation of principle. Prussia, is founded and sustained by revolt against God, just exactly as is the Revolution, Protestantism and social progress of the bourgeoisie. These latter pretensions it to be dangerous to the State, that is to themselves, and they are beginning to announcing it, because in an equal decay of Christian principle, and in the same degree to restrain its disturbing action, and because the ruin it is likely to precipitate will assuredly overwhelm the State, and with it the millions of the proletariat in 1793 swept over France a century before it, just as the revolution wrought in Prussia in three years previously overturned the noble, and the Revolution is more a thing, the misery was more sweeping and engulfing. But the principle which gave birth to the Revolution, and which, under virtue of morality as the basis of order, the corrupt and selfish Revolution, must, under self alone the guiding principle of conduct, the lowest class citizen, who has much to lose by disorder, and who, in the struggle with the bounds by that very principle, which, although it may be, because it is not equally Political Catholics.

"LIBERAL" CATHOLICS—SEMINARIES OF SECRET ASSOCIATIONS—SENDERADES, ETC.

The greatest enemies o. the Church are political Catholics, who make religion subservient to party prejudices, and in order to please the know-nothing element, rend asunder the seamless garb of the truth preached by Jesus Christ. These are the men who trade in Catholicity, and help its enemies to outrage the Catholic conscience and do violence to the feelings of the Catholic poor. The political Catholics of New York are generally renegades in faith or members of the Masonic society.

The renegade Catholic is a character whom we would gladly treat with the silence of contempt did not his assumption of religion mislead many estimable and worthy people. He is generally a politician, whose whole stock in trade is an assumption of liberalism in religion, or he is a Freemason.

If the political Catholic is a liberal, he pities the superstition of the Irish Catholic, and acts a very tooly tooly to the proselytizing societies which would rob the poor of their only treasure, the true faith, and draft homeless children to the West to be brought up in ignorance of the religion of their parents.

If he is a Freemason, he refuses to "hear the Church," and she treats him as a rebel. It is not very long ago since the Pope said that a "Liberal Catholic" is even a more pernicious kind of an animal than an infidel.

The "Liberal Catholic" interprets in a manner that will not displease his Protestant friends political allegories, the text: "Thou art Peter (the rock), and on this rock I will build my Church;" and that other text, in which Christ said to Peter, and through him to his successors: "Feed my sheep, feed my lambs."

The renegade Catholic who is a "Liberal" has been justly called "the great triumph of Satan." He prophesies by his acts that God has ceased to reign over His Church, and that the Pope of infallible in a sense different from that of the Vatican Council. He looks on the priests of the Church as good, holy, innocent men, who should attend solely to their purely spiritual duties, and not interfere in such matters as education or kindred subjects.

Years ago Dr. Brownson said liberalism had enabled the enemies of God and society to disorganize the government of some Catholic nations, the imprisonment of the Pope, and the present and state of Italy and France are the work of liberal Catholics, without whom Protestants and infidels would be powerless.

The American Catholic who affects liberalism may be known by his friends and associates, who are generally men whose only religion is hatred of Catholicity, and whose code of morals is confined to the criminal laws of the State. No description of the Liberal Catholic is needed. He bears on his brow the marks of reprobation, and when for political purposes he attends church, he may be recognized by the thin veil of hypocrisy which fails to conceal the workings of a depraved soul. In every parish in this city are men professing the Catholic faith, who are afraid to appear bigoted, and in their efforts to appear liberal, they aid the worst enemies of the Church. These poor miserable wretches shall attain position and even wealth—they forget the saying: "What shall it profit a man if he gain the whole world if he lose his own soul?" They barter their faith for worldly honors and riches, and they do not repent they will assuredly hear the just Judge saying to them in the last day: "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, which was prepared for the devil and his angels."

The political Catholic is often a Freemason, and as such he defies the authority of the Church, and publicly tramples on her precepts. The whole legislation of the Church on the subject of Freemasonry is the fruit of the ripest wisdom of centuries illuminated by the light of the Spirit of God. At the great Plenary Council of the American Bishops, held in Baltimore in 1866, the Fathers called to the mind of the faithful the decrees of the Popes on Freemasonry. The Constitutions of Clement XII., In eminente, 1738; of Benedict XIV., Praecedo, 1751; of Pius VI., Sodalitia a Sancta Christa, 1821; of Leo XII., Quo primo, 1825, all condemn in the strongest terms the Freemason, Order, and our late Holy Father, Pius IX., has time and again confirmed the Constitutions of his predecessors.

The condemnation of Freemasonry by the Church is founded on the very best basis. Its secrecy is abhorrent to the broad light of the Gospel preached by Christ, and the obligation of an oath is repugnant to the teaching of Him who forbids frivolous and unnecessary swearing. Again, the Masonic association destroys human freedom, as it removes all individual responsibility. The Mason of one grade knows not the projects of the officers of a higher grade, nor the lodges of one country the schemes, the principles or the workings of those of another.

In the Masonic society the individual is the blind, passive instrument of an order whose ultimate aims are wrapped up in secrecy. Where the ends of an institution are kept secret, and the means only are at evil judgment is at fault, and the individuality cannot estimate the extent of the responsibility he incurs for the error of his order.

But the political Catholic thinks nothing of all this. He looks on Masonry as a powerful aid to political advancement and power.

Freemasonry is, in truth, a sort of religion, and because it can make man better and happier than Christ or his Church has made or can make them. It has its ceremonial, and claims the possession of moral truths unknown to the Christian religion. A great French writer remarks: "Past when we consider that Freemasonry was born with irreligion; that it grew up with it; that it has kept pace with its progress; that it has never pleased but men either impious or indifferent about religion, and that it has always been regarded with disfavor by zealous Catholics, we can only regard it as an institution bad in itself, or at least dangerous in its effects."

Much is said of Freemasonry as a charitable association. Its very charity is opposed to the spirit of Christianity, which, though it assigns the first claim to those of the "household of the faith," embraces all mankind within the range of its beneficence.

In an Encyclical, dated September 25th, 1865, Pope Pius IX. urges the faithful to join Catholic societies in which the works of charity are practised according to the teaching of the Gospel; but the political Catholic disregards the advice of the Vicar of Christ, and follow that of "the enemy of man." If we add to the crime of the political Catholic the evil caused by his bad example, we will have a monster far worse than an infidel or heretic. It is high time that the Catholic voters of this city and Brooklyn should show their abhorrence of political Catholics, and refuse to be misrepresented by them.—Sunday Democrat.

Increase of Crime.

The social, moral and religious civilization of a given period may be traced, with reasonable certainty, through the public and private life of the people who make its history. Before the discovery of the art of printing, such an influence as public opinion was scarcely known. History sought the test of civilization in the laws, jurisprudence, the social and intellectual culture of a nation. In this test the habits and characteristics of the masses were disregarded, or supposed to be only a cipher in the sum of its value. We now learn to measure the character of a civilization by the virtues which ennoble, or the vices which degrade a social order that embraces all the gradations of human existence. The printing press, chiefly through the medium of the newspaper, has come to be the mirror which reflects the passions that agitate and the crimes which debase society. We are not now considering either the blessings or the evils of the press; we only refer to its labors as presenting a chronicle of events wherein we may learn the facts by which we are to estimate the character of an existing order of civilization.

It is in surveying this dreary chronicle that the veriest optimist, or the most visionary theorist of the ultimate perfectibility of the human race, must find sufficient cause to doubt the correctness of his conclusions. The daily record of crime, in its multiplied horrors, is fearful to contemplate. Murders are so frequent that the moral sense of the community fails to be shocked at their repetition and enormity. Robberies are planned with such skill, and consummated with so much audacity and impunity, that the suspicion of official complicity derives the force of unfaltering conviction. The sanctity of marriage is so outraged by the facility of obtaining divorce, and the guilty methods resorted to in order to utilize this facility, that this element of social purity and conservation has lost much of its influence for good, and has become the target for the shafts of the voluptuary; a fertile source of ribald jest for the humorist, and a never-failing mine of indelicate innuendo to the dramatist. The obligations of the conjugal relation have come to be regarded as unnatural restraints upon the liberty of lustful passions. Corporations, endowed by law with exceptional privileges, and entrusted by a confiding people with public and private funds, abuse these privileges and waste these funds in wild speculations of the stock-board or criminal risks of a gambling saloon. Violations of faith, by men in their dealings with their fellow-men, are so common that honesty is at a discount, and honor a lost virtue. So blunted has grown the moral sense of the public that peculation and official corruption are no longer regarded as social crimes whose punishment would impose social ostracism on the guilty object. The swindler on a large scale, who, by betraying his trusts to the poor, robs them of their hard-earned accumulations of years, and leaves them in penury and destitution, easily escapes the penalty of the law, and sports a life of ostentatious and vulgar luxury out of the wealth he was won by his villany.

The murder of unborn beings has passed into a fashionable pastime. Its victims are by the thousands, and finds both respectability and impunity in the aspect which it receives from vulgar wealth and a soulless fashion. Society seems to be affected with a moral pangrene that is gradually, but surely, corrupting all the pure sources of healthy action. In the individual subject, such symptoms herald decay and dissolution. As society is only the aggregation of individuals, what health can remain in it, if the individuals who compose it are tainted with a moral leprosy which no medicine can assuage, or which it eradicate.

Is this picture too sharply outlined—too deeply colored? We fear not.

For vices so radical and diffuse, there must be some primary and efficient cause. It is not enough to say that the superstition of large masses of people in cities necessarily leads, not only to vicious habits, but to their publicity also. But these vices are not confined to large cities. They are to be found to exist in rurality, with a ratio of numbers and anonymity very little, if any, below that of populous cities. "Educate the masses, says the philosopher, and humanity will rise to the level of its destined perfection." Were the masses ever, morally, better educated than now? It is the boast of the age that education, such as it is, is more diffused now than at any former period. But the system by which this diffusion is accomplished is so defective that the fruition it yields is rotten to the core. It seeks to instruct the intellect, but leaves the heart untrained for the reception and practice of moral and religious truths. It thus renders the social evil cous and indifferent to the voice of conscience. The difference between good and evil, of virtue and vice, is made to turn upon the narrow principle of selfish and bastard advantage, which is the germ of rationalism in religion, and of communism in social life. The idea of personal accountability in time and eternity is thus smothered in the discord of questions which grow out of the social inequalities of life, and the repressive measures enacted by competent authority, to protect society from the outbursts of popular passions.

And just here we may seek the causes of that overwhelming tide of crime which is sweeping over the land. Men recognize no authority but their own wills and passions. All the teaching of the day, outside the Catholic Church, whether of social, moral or religious faith, tends to vindicate the right of individual reason to measure the motives, and determine the direction of individual action. In harmony with this teaching comes the wide-spread conviction that the individual or collective reason is superior to that which each man has within himself for his guide, preceptor and arbiter. This is the practical teaching of Protestantism. It admits that, as a religious body, it has no authority to teach that which deserves to be obeyed. "Religion," says Mr. Froude, "speaks with command; but 'for some cause,' he adds, 'they (Protestant preachers) dare not speak, they dare not think like their fathers.' For this reason, Protestantism has no hold on the masses of the people. It has given birth to dissentions which have shorted religious faith and paised' religious piety. It has taken from human society the consciousness of individual responsibility here and hereafter. It leaves man to the unrestrained license of his passions. Society is the prey of these passions, and crime and disorder are the natural sequence of their fatal aberrations. Catholic Mirror.

THE LANGUAGE OF THE CHURCH. The Church of God alone has a universal language. Go where the Catholic may, he is at home in the grandest cathedral or the poorest chapel.

PRAYER.—Christ has conferred on prayer all power for good—to renovate the weak, the heal the sick, to free from the power of evil spirits, to loosen the bonds of the innocent. It repels temptations, extinguishes persecutions—soothes the fable-minded, delights the magnanimous, guides travelers, stills the waves, nourishes the poor, controls the rich, raises the fallen, props the falling, and preserves the standing. Prayer is the bulwark of faith; our arms and weapons against the adversary who waylays us on every side. Therefore, never let us go without our armed.—Tertullian.

A SINGLE word may disquiet an entire family for a whole day. A single day glares casts a gloom over the household, while a smile, like a gleam of sunshine, may light up the darkest and wariest hours.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DEASY BRO'S,
MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS IN
BOOTS & SHOES

LADIES AND GENTS' BOOTS AND SHOES made to order. A full assortment of Ready Workmanship Boots and Shoes constantly on hand. Repairing neatly done.
Third Street, between Mission and Howard Street.

KAST'S
Fashionable Shoe Store
HAS REMOVED TO
Corner Market and Dupont Sts
BOOTS AND SHOES

JOHN SULLIVAN, NORTHEAST CORNER of Battery and Jackson streets, offers to make to order the best French Calf Leather BOOTS at from $8 to $9; California Leather Boots, $6; French Calf Oxford Ties, $4; Calf Shoes, $3 50.
Boys' and Childrens' Boots and Shoes made to order.
Persons in the country ordering Boots or Shoes to the amount of twelve dollars or more will be allowed a reduction of four per cent, so as to make the expense charge light. I sell Boots and Shoes of MY OWN MANUFACTURE ONLY. Boots and Shoes sent C. O. D. Positively one price.
jy30

Men's Working Shoes $1 50
Boots from $5 00 to $10 00
Soleing and Heeling, $1 00
AT E. MAINS,
388 Folsom street, two doors east Fremont.
j27

MISCELLANEOUS.

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.
JOHN WIELAND ..... PROPRIETOR.
SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM, SAN FRANCISCO.
Amount of Beer sold in 1877, 41,601 barrels.
mr26

J. CALLAGHAN
Real Estate and Insurance Agent
AND
Notary Public for Alameda Co.
Houses Rented, Rents Collected, Loans Negotiated. Investments made for Parties at a Distance on reasonable terms.
OFFICE 474 NINTH ST.,
Oakland, Alameda Co., Cal.
mr26

D. CANTY & CO.
WHOLESALE AND RETAIL
CONFECTIONERS,
No. 107 Montgomery st.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Fresh, Pure and Wholesome
CANDIES
Of all kinds, manufactured daily, from the best materials, and warranted to represent exactly prices LOW, TERMS LIBERAL.
Country orders Promptly and Carefully filled.
7mar 7

Pictures and Frames,
MIRRORS, ENGRAVINGS, CHROMOS, AND LITHOGRAPHS.
WINDOW CORNICES.
REPAIRING AND RE-GILDING.
No. 925½ Market St., opp. Mason,
SAN FRANCISCO.
T. PENDERGAST.

The Celebrated and World-Renowned Jacques Lecoultre Razors.

In introducing the above-named and universal brand of Razors to our customers and the general public, permit us to call your attention to this Celebrated Razor, now so favorably known in this Country and the whole of Europe. The Jacques Lecoultre Razors are for superior and are now manufactured as to quality of steel and other essential points which make them a luxury in the necessary art of shaving, with one of these famous Razors, every man can enjoy the comfort of a good CLEAN SHAVE. These razors so well known, and of which the quality of each and every one is warranted, possess this great advantage that they may be used twenty years before they require grinding.
WILL & FINK, Leading Cutlers,
Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast,
769 MARKET STREET, San Francisco.
N. B.—Razors and Shears Ground and put in the best order by the Most Experienced Workmen. English, French, German and American Cutlery of every description always on hand.
feb14 3m

BLYMYER MFG. CO.
BELLS
Church, Academy, Factories, Fire-alarm, Locomotive, Farms, Plantations, Steamboats, Steamers, Steamships, Tools, Chimes, Etc. Warranted Sent Free. Catalogue Sent Free.
Blymyer Manufacturing Co., Cincinnati, O.

HATS, CAPS, ETC.

KASKEL'S
ONE PRICE
HAT STORE.
No. 423 Kearney Street,
BET. PINE AND CALIFORNIA, SAN FRANCISCO.
Reasons why you should buy your Hats of
KASKEL'S.
1.—He imports his entire stock from first hands, and buys for CASH.
2.—He receives his Hats from the manufacturers direct, and therefore keeps only the latest styles.
3.—Paying Cash to manufacturers, he is able to sell goods lower than any other Hat Store.
4.—As he positively has only ONE PRICE, you can with safety buy your goods, and be assured that your neighbor will not buy at cheaper than yourself.
5.—A child will be able to send for his purchase as the closest buyer. mh17

HERRMANN
Sells More
HATS
Than any Store in Town.
BECAUSE
He gives the BEST for the Money!
402 KEARNY
AND 910 MARKET STREET.
mh14 2m

HOLMAN'S
Fever and Ague
AND
Liver Pad
Cures Without Medicine, simply by Absorption.
The Best Liver Regulator in the World.
Beware of Counterfeits. Genuine Pad Stamped "Holman's Fever and Ague Pad."
TRADE-MARK.
Sent free by mail on receipt of $2.
Special Pads, $3. Body Plasters, 50 cents each. Foot Plasters, per pair, 50 cents.
Sent free on receipt of price.
Beware of Counterfeits.
Address HOLMAN PAD CO. 7 Dey St. New York.
Beware of Imitations.
Beware of Counterfeits.
Beware of Imitations.
Beware of Counterfeits.
Beware of Imitations.
Beware of Counterfeits

AGRICULTURAL.

Cheese Factories.

Butter is so cheap that it becomes a matter of interest to many dairymen who have heretofore made only butter, whether there is not more money in cheese. And as many of these dairies are not large enough, or have not cows enough, to go into the cheese business alone, the second consideration is whether a number had not better unite together for the organization and conduct of a cheese factory. The first of those questions has been answered in the affirmative by general experience. The second one must be answered by the dairymen in each neighborhood where the factory is talked of. We will give the general mode of organization and the plans that have been adopted for conducting the business. To run a cheese factory with the best results as to quality of cheese made and profits on the capital invested, there should be worked up the milk from three hundred to four hundred cows. When it is to start a cheese factory several dairymen who are in the same neighborhood get together and talk the matter over. If enough are found willing to turn in their cows so as to make a factor, a committee is usually appointed to look further into the matter, to visit factories already in operation, if there be any within a reasonable distance, and obtain necessary practical information. If the committee report favorably, at an adjourned meeting an organization may be effected and directors elected and some general rules or a constitution adopted for the guidance of the association. The next step will be the location of the factory and the erection or appropriation of suitable buildings for the factory. The plan found to work best in the Atlantic States is for one of the dairymen to put up the buildings on his own account, and manufacture and care for the cheese at a fixed price per pound, the others contracting to furnish at the factory, or at their own houses for the factory, the milk of a certain number of cows for so many years. It has been found at the East that it requires the milk of about four hundred cows to warrant a man in putting up buildings and going into cheese-making as an exclusive business. A less number will pay if the manufacturer furnishes a portion of the cows himself, and receives a dividend in cheese. The factory plan should be fixed upon with reference to centrality, or the distance the milk will have to be brought to the factory, and with reference to securing for use good pure cool water. In the Atlantic States a never-failing spring of cool water is considered one of the essentials of the location. Cool water is needed for cooling the milk and for use in heating the pailing and utensils clean and sweet. If possible a good stream of cool water should pass directly under the manufactory, so as to carry off the drippings of whey and refuse slop, so that there be no accumulation of filth or acidity about the premises. A gravelly spot chosen where is a filthy smelling place. Good clean water is the highest virtue, and it should be handy in sufficient quantities. When natural springs cannot be found artesian wells are a good substitute. In the absence of these, large common wells, with conveniences for raising, should be supplied. One plan—and we believe that was the one originally practiced—was to purchase the milk, paying for it a price estimated by the amount of curd it produced when pressed. This plan did not give entire satisfaction, because it left the dairyman no choice but to accept a price the manufacturer felt perfectly had a right to offer, and the dairyman should have some share in the prospective price of the cheese, and the dairyman should find an interest in this. The other plan and the one that has gradually worked into general favor, for the manufacturer to charge one dollar per hundred weight of cheese made, for making, curing, marketing and dividing the money pro rata among the patrons, the dairymen paying all other expenses, such as boxes, salt, rennet, etc. Those who desire to organize cheese factories in this State can incorporate under our general incorporation law and vary the plan of conducting the business as circumstances may suggest.—Record Union.

The Wheat Crop.

PROBABLE REPORT OF A WAR IN EUROPE OVER THE MARKET—ESTIMATED REPORT OF THE YIELD—AMERICAN SHIPS LIKELY TO PROFIT IN CASE OF WAR—FUTURE PRICES.

A Chronicle reporter on Thursday interviewed several of the leading grain merchants in order to learn how, in their opinion, the wheat market would be affected in the event of a war between Russia and Great Britain. I. Friedlander said that such a war would prove beneficial to American ships and injurious to British ships. At present there were only some half dozen of the latter loading with wheat in this port, but one hundred more were on the way and will arrive here between now and the 1st of August. The crop this season, from the present indications, will prove fully equal to that of 1874. Mr. Friedlander did not think it likely that a war would arise, but if it did, the merchants here and elsewhere could not be materially affected by it. Neither would it make any difference in the departure of vessels from this port. Business now is good, but the purchases are in doubt as to what the future price of wheat may be.

Starr & Co. thought that war would make the tonnage higher on American ships, but the prices now being paid for old wheat are unusually high, and would not advance. The wheat crops this year are larger all over the world than ever before, and war in Europe would not advance the market prices in California. War rates are now being paid in Liverpool, where wheat is bringing from $1 60 to $1 70 for the new crop, and in the event of peace these rates will decrease from $1 35 to $1 50.

Charles Clayton remarked that in the event of war the supplies of Russia would be cut off, to the obvious advantage of a neutral power like the United States. The tonnage of our merchant shipping is now largely English, and war would add to the rates of freights on British vessels and take from the prices of wheat. If war were declared the price of wheat, both on old and new crop, would immediately go up in the English market, and American vessels would get the lion's share of the freights, as they do not have to pay high rates of insurance for war risks. It is estimated that the surplusage of wheat this year will amount to 1,000,000 tons, the largest ever known. It is not likely that peace will reduce the price of wheat will fall here as well as in the English market. If Congress would remove the restrictions of the navigation laws and allow Americans to buy their ships in the markets of the world, it would secure to the United States the carrying trade and the profits arising therefrom.

Wet Feet for Barley.

Last season a dry year—was a good year for barley on the river borders, and a large crop was produced in those localities. This season the soil has been too full of water for barley. Barley is a plant that cannot stand wet feet. We have seen barley sown on the river border lands in February and March, and have seen it come up finely and grow vigorously, wearing a green green color and promising an exceedingly crop, till by the melting of the mountain snows the rivers have been swollen and the waters have stood above the natural banks for weeks. Then we have seen this same barley grow a pale green and then a deadly yellow the leaves of the stalks withering and drying, and the stalks themselves seeming to diminish in bulk and hight. The cause was seepage water coming from the rivers and rising up through the soil till it wet the feet or roots of the barley with cold ice water while the sun was pouring its vertical rays down upon its heads or stalks. This condition of things is sure death to the barley plant. The present season there was a considerable breadth of land sown to barley on the rivers early in the winter, say in November and December, and it was very promising up to the time of the high waters. Much of it was then destroyed by water when the levees gave way, and what was not so destroyed has been greatly injured by the cold seepage water upon its feet or roots. It will be so late before the river lands can be plowed and cultivated that there will probably be but little of the ground sown to barley, and our opinion is that what may be sown will be killed out by the water from the melting snows in May or June. It has been the custom on the river to sow barley with alfalfa seed, but this will not pay this year. Better sow the clover seed alone. The seepage water will rather help than hurt the young clover. Its roots will not probably grow so rapidly while the cold water is on them, but when this begins to recede they will follow it down until to get the last possible moisture. It is in view of Alfalfa may be sown at any time during the summer if the soil is damp and in good condition.

We have known two good crops to be cut from alfalfa sown in May the season before. Sow as the water goes off. Where the surface is even sow directly on the surface without plowing, running a drag over to cover the seed.

When the surface is covered with sediment even dragging may be dispensed with if the seed be sown in the water or as soon as it has left the surface. But there is no use in sowing barley with it where it is probable there will be seepage water to destroy it.—Record Union.

The Art of Raising.

This rule should be observed in planting trees, shrubs and vines: Place no manure in contact with the roots. Many persons think they are doing a nice thing for their trees to sprinkle manure among their roots in the process of planting, but instead they do harm. If you put the manure above the roots when the holes are nearly filled, so that when the dirt is replaced it will be fairly covered, good will result from the application. Cow manure or a well-rotted stable manure is used with success. To prevent injury from severe frost, and also to benefit the trees by enriching the ground, coarse manure containing considerable straw may be spread over the ground, rather thick, around the stems or trunks, as far as the roots extend.—Rural World.

WHAT BOARDS TO HAVE.—Prof. Johnson, of the Board of Agriculture, J. A. Wallace says is his opinion that the most profitable horse for us to breed at the present time, in this country, is what he calls park horses, or gentleman's driving horses. They should be at least sixteen hands high, of good spirit, and possess all the good, but blunk heads, and possess all the good, but blunk heads, of the hole of the funnel. The milk deposits hairs, skins, clots, or gelatinous substances on the leaves. It has imparted to it a most agreeable odor, and does not readily turn sour. A fresh spring should be used each time.

A CORRESPONDENT of the American Poultry Yard, of Hartford, Conn., says he has been experimenting with the laying qualities of many kinds of chickens, considers Brown Leghorns the most constant layers in winter. Chicken raisers differ greatly in their opinions on this subject, and it is doubtful whether one breed of fowls possesses important advantages over another in this regard.

GERMANY takes the third place in Europe as a producer of wool, ranking after Great Britain and Ireland, which produces about 1,360,000 cwts., annually, and Russia, the yield of which is 1,178,000 cwts. The production of France about equals that of Germany, being 618,000 cwts. Spain stands on about the same level, her crop being 570,000 cwts.

Market Reports

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 9, 1878.

A decline in Wheat in Liverpool, and the near approach of a very abundant harvest of cereals upon the Pacific Slope, and the absence of English orders for breadstuffs, combine to make business slack at the moment, causing as it does holders of old stocks of Wheat to rush the same to market to be sold for whatever it will bring. The present outside price of best Wheat is $2 15, while purchases of same for shipment to Liverpool are reported at $1 75 @ $1. The export demand for Flour is continued to China and Central America, causing a firm feeling in view of light stocks and restricted supplies. Barley is without movement, ordinary Feed being forced upon the market at exceedingly low rates, while holders of choice Brewing held on with a good degree of firmness. Corn arrives quite freely from the southern coast, causing a temporary weakness. Oats are without change. Beans continue to rule high by reason of a light stock, and a fair export trade to Mexico. Potatoes continue to rule high; some of the new crop receipts are wormy, and show indications of the rot. Hay arrives very freely, causing a downward tendency. The crop promises to be immense. Dairy supplies are liberal, causing low prices to prevail. Butter are now arriving quite freely, and prices have dropped so that canners are now enabled to handle strawberries to advantage. Oranges are very scarce at the moment, pending the arrival of two cargoes now fully due from Tahiti.

Crop reports from nearly all portions of the State continue to be of the most cheering character, particularly in the San Joaquin and other large grain growing valleys where last year nothing was produced. Like cheering intelligence comes to us from the extreme southern counties of the State, where unusually large crops of Wheat, Corn, and Barley will be harvested this summer.

WHEAT—We quote Milling at $2 @ $2 15 and Shipping at $2 00@ $2 15 per ctl.

FLOUR—We quote superfine at $4 @ $4 25; Extra Superfine at $5@ $5 25; Extra Superfine, $5; Extra family and Bakers Extra, $6 @ $6 75.

BARLEY—We quote Feed at $1 25@ $1 40 per ctl, and Brewing at $1 50@ $1 62½ per ctl—according to the buyer and credit allowed.

OATS—We quote Feed at $1 30@1 35, and Milling at $1 50@1 70 p ctl.

CORN—We quote Large Yellow at $96@ 98 c per ctl; Small Round, $2 00@2 15; and White, $2 10@2 20 per ctl.

RYE—The demand is light; prices nominal, $1 80@1 90 p ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Stock light, and the season over; prices nominal.

MIDDLINGS—We quote Fine at $16@18 per ton; Coarse, $15@16 p ton; latter, $22 50.

CORNMEAL—We quote Fresh ground Cali-

MISCELLANEOUS.

GRAND SPRING OPENING OF MILLENERY AND FANCY GOODS AND LADIES' FINISHED UNDERWEAR, Notions, Household Goods and Gents' Furnishing Goods.

Manufacturers of Boys' and Men's Nice Fitting Suits of French Beaver, Diagonals, California and Oregon Cashmere and Scotch Tweeds.

PALMER BROS. 726, 728, 730, 732, 734 MARKET ST.

M'CARTHY BROS. BEST OLD GOVERNMENT JAVA COFFEE, AND PURE SPICES

CHRYSTAL ILLUMINATORS

NO CHIMNEY TO BREAK!

The Only Device Ever Patented.

TO BURN WITHOUT A CHIMNEY.

The Best Light Since the World was Made.

Adapted for all Coal Oil Lamps, Chandeliers, Brackets, etc.; also used on Gas Chandeliers at one-fourth the cost of gas, with equal light.

USE ROSELANE OIL! Best in the Market.

YATES & CO., AGENTS. RETAIL STORE, 627 KEARNY STREET. WHOLESALE HOUSE: 113 FRONT STREET. 31ae1f

FINEST MEATS AND LOWEST PRICES! CALL AT THE NEW CASH MARKET, JUST OPENED AT 532 and 534 MARKET STREET, OPPOSITE SECOND.

AND PROVE FOR YOURSELF THE fact that you can SAVE TEN TO TWENTY PER CENT by purchasing three FAMILY BOILED MEATS and every description of Meat Tickets.

There is true economy in a GOOD ARTICLE AT THE LOWEST PRICE. 31ae1f

FAMILY DRUG AND PRESCRIPTION STORE.

JOHN C. MOODY, Apothecary, For the last 15 years on Kearny Street, HAS REMOVED TO THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF POLK AND PINE STS.

Prescriptions prepared with care from the best of drugs and chemicals.

ORDERS MODERATE. 8ae1f

CARD OF THANKS.

GEORGE T. HANLY & CO., 508 MARKET STREET,

IN RETIRING FROM THE RETAIL, to engage in the Wholesale business of Teas, Coffees and Spices, feel desirous of thanking the numerous patronage during the years they have been in business, and take the opportunity of introducing their successor,

FRED H. LORING,

a gentleman well acquainted with the business, and who will retain the reputation of the house as a first-class TEA, COFFEE and SPICE establishment, as well as select Groceries.

In retiring from the business, we feel sure that it, will fall in good hands, and we can recommend our successor to our friends and patrons. 28ae1f

HARPS, $4.00.

DAVIDS HARP IS A NEW MUSICAL instrument which bids fair to exceed in popularity anything yet manufactured. They are sweet toned, artistic, and can be mastered with half an hour's practice.

BANCROFT, KNIGHT & CO., 776 Market St., San Francisco, 28ae1m General Agents.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

THE GRAND OPENING AT THE ARCADE PROFOUND ADMIRATION OF THE LADIES OF SAN FRANCISCO AT OUR EXHIBITION OF DRESS GOODS AND SILKS

Since our Magnificent Opening on Monday, September 17th, the rush of visitors to our Establishment has been unprecedented, and the expressions of surprise and admiration have been incessant at the magnitude and splendor of the

REBUILT ARCADE.

Our importations this season have been such that it is only NOW they are fully prepared for public inspection, and we would respectfully invite a visit to our present display immediately, sellipes any former DRY GOODS EXHIBITION ever witnessed in California.

OUR DRESS GOODS AND SILKS

Are most worthy of public attention, as we have taken special pains to make these department unapproachable.

Circassian Suitings, Drap d'Eclair, Seigeuse Cloth, Ragdusa Suitings, Knicker Costume Cloth.

The above are some of the latest designs in the Dress Department, and are especially deserving the examination of our patrons.

There is a tremendous run on our KNICKER COSTUME CLOTH, which we are offering at $7½ cents.

J. J. O'BRIEN & CO. 924, 926, 928 MARKET ST. AND 25 ELLIS ST., SAN FRANCISCO. NEXT TO "THE BALDWIN"

THE CLEARANCE SALE OF D. LANDERS WILL BE Continued Until Further Notice, And during the week I shall offer still GREATER INDUCEMENTS. BED SPREADS, Half Price. BLANKETS, Half Price. TOWELS AND NAPKINS, Half Price. SILKS AND DRESS GOODS, Half Price.

I am Selling Cartwright & Warner's English and Merino Underwear at less than Eastern Manufactured Goods. Now is the time to Buy them.

During the continuance of this sale all Goods will be sold strictly for CASH.

All persons indebted to the late firm will please make immediate payment.

D. LANDERS, SUCCESSOR TO BYRNE, LANDERS & BYRNE, THURLOW BLOCK, 126 Kearny St. 1ja84

The Monitor.

Miss M A Fitzgerald

VOL. XXI. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 16, 1878. NO. 33.

A. WALDTEUFEL, Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Catholic Books, PRAYER BOOKS, Miscellaneous Books, School Books, CHURCH ORNAMENTS, Catholic Goods, Staple and Fancy Stationery of every description. All orders will be promptly filled. Liberal terms to Schools and Private. A. WALDTEUFEL, Corner First and Fountain Streets, SAN JOSE.

THE MONITOR.

A CATHOLIC FAMILY WEEKLY, CONTAINING THE LATEST AND MOST RELIABLE INTELLIGENCE.

Issued every THURSDAY for the Proprietors at 622 Clay Street, San Francisco.

All Business Letters should be addressed to D. LYONS, Business Manager.

All other Communications to the Editorial Department.

TERMS (Payable in advance):

Monthly issues, per week..... 10c.
Monthly issues, per copy..... $1 00
Monthly issues, per annum..... 12 00
Weekly issues, per copy..... 2 50
Weekly issues, per annum..... 10 00
Postage in each case prepaid by the publishers.

Advertising Rates.

Square 1 time, $1 00 | 1 square 4 mos $10 50
Square 1 month, 7 00 | 1 square 5 mos. 12 00
Square 2 months, 8 00 | 1 square 6 mos 13 50
Square 3 months 9 00 | 1 square 1 year 25 00

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

Yearly advertisements payable by quarters.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

FOREIGN.

[Telegraphic.]

Friday, May 10.

LONDON—A Vienna correspondent, commenting on the hopes of peace revived by Count Schouvaloff's expected arrival at St. Petersburg, and the general belief that Russia is exhausted, says: Notwithstanding the way out of the difficulties at least to have been found, agrees in the opinion that Russia is not exhausted, and is ready for war. It is, after all—nothing more less than solving the most vital question that is doing in a great measure the work as Congress itself. Certain movements there exists, it being instinctively felt that the next may possibly be the last effort to arrive at pacific solution.

LONDON—The Standard understands that the new Ambassador at Rome will be Lord Odo Russell.

The Standard understands that the Cabinet Council have decided to evacuate all their forces on Gallipoli, Sinnala Sten, then Varna, and lastly, Bulanon. The decision was taken rather suddenly, upon the report of Osman Pasha, that the Turkish army is not in a condition to resist a Russian attack. Strong entrenchments are being made at Constantinople.

The Times correspondent at Constantinople says, the Sultan's Palace was unsafe with foreign, and was only to remain there till the troops would go away from Constantinople. Gen. Ignatieff is expected to arrive at Constantinople, but without effect to fall back if the fortresses were surrendered. The fort was swallowed, and the Russians have promised, so my informant assures me, to relinquish Adrianople and Bodragatch, and quit Erzeroum as soon as the three fortresses are evacuated. The evacuation will begin at once. The Russian possessions on the Danube, and all will be settled by virtual agreement.

Russia's Intention.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Standard asserts that Russia has informed the Powers of her intention to acquaint them immediately of definite conditions of peace, after negotiations with England, and that Russia would not accept any mediation.

The Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs is of opinion that the Porte will be in a position to accept a definite settlement.

Berlin bankers have, it is said, made Russia an offer of fifty per cent. The secret of the Berlin bankers have, it is said, made Russia an offer of fifty per cent. The secret of the

The Home Rule members of Parliament have resolved to leave Butt to retain the leadership of the party on his own terms.

Wednesday, May 15.

Russian Moving Nearer Constantinople.

LONDON—A special from San Stefano says: All the troops that will move within a few days into camp on rising ground, two miles and a half from Constantinople.

England Threatening the Russians in the Caucasus.

LONDON—A special from St. Petersburg says: A rumor is spreading that England is sending 30,000 men from India to Lake Van to threaten the Russians in the Caucasus.

Rioting at Blackburn—Troops Called Out.

LONDON—Serious rioting began at Blackburn yesterday evening. Thousands of the lowest class of operatives, including women, paraded the streets, and made demonstrations of the presence of Colonel Jackson, Chairman of the Blackburn Conservative Association. The mob then attempted to burn Jackson's effigy. The presence of Alderman Horby was specially resented, and he was fired upon. Two shots were fired, and the mob dispersed. A strong force of infantry from Preston has arrived, and a troop of cavalry is coming.

Earthquake.

HAVANA, May 14.—An earthquake at Cienfuegos, Wednesday, lasted 60 seconds. Heavy shocks were felt at Caracas.

Thursday, May 16.

ROME—The Senate, Monday, unanimously passed a bill to the Chambers asking for a supplementary vote of 10,000,000 lires for war estimates.

Russians are throwing up entrenchments near San Stefano and are arming them with Krupp guns.

LONDON—There was more rioting at Burnley, and one warehouse was burned. The military prevented further disorders.

EASTERN.

Russia's Naval Designs.

BOSTON—Captain Tscheltschoff, of the Russian Navy, just arrived here, frankly avows what he professes to be his Government's naval policy. He says the steamer Chubrin is under his command, and that an expedition is to be organized on the Coast. He has agents in various quarters and intends to purchase a large number of vessels. He added that his Government was preparing, if need be, to attack England on the seas. A squadron would soon leave the Baltic for these waters, but no letters of marque would be issued, and no privateering carried on except under strict naval rules. The Russian Government, he thought, would revert to the home Government. It was generally supposed that the cession of some lines of peace he would not violate any principle of the Russian Government.

Arrest of Suspected Members of a Secret Society.

Nearly one hundred and fifty persons have been arrested at Warsaw on a conspiracy of the Nihilist Secret National Russian Government, which was recently discovered.

The Turkish Fortresses to be Evacuated, Because of a Peremptory Demand from General Tedtleben.

A special Constantinople telegram states: In consequence of a peremptory demand of General Tedleben, for the immediate evacuation of Lovtcha, passed by a threat to occupy Constantinople, the Cabinet Council have decided to evacuate all their fortresses. Sinnala Sten, then Varna, and lastly, Bulanon. The decision was taken rather suddenly, upon the report of Osman Pasha, that the Turkish army is not in a condition to resist a Russian attack. Strong entrenchments are being made at Constantinople.

The Times correspondent at Constantinople says, the Sultan's Palace was unsafe with foreign, and was only to remain there till the troops would go away from Constantinople. Gen. Ignatieff is expected to arrive at Constantinople, but without effect to fall back if the fortresses were surrendered. The fort was swallowed, and the Russians have promised, so my informant assures me, to relinquish Adrianople and Bodragatch, and quit Erzeroum as soon as the three fortresses are evacuated. The evacuation will begin at once. The Russian possessions on the Danube, and all will be settled by virtual agreement.

Russia's Intention.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Standard asserts that Russia has informed the Powers of her intention to acquaint them immediately of definite conditions of peace, after negotiations with England, and that Russia would not accept any mediation.

The Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs is of opinion that the Porte will be in a position to accept a definite settlement.

Berlin bankers have, it is said, made Russia an offer of fifty per cent. The secret of the

The Home Rule members of Parliament have resolved to leave Butt to retain the leadership of the party on his own terms.

Thursday, May 16.

Russians Moving Nearer Constantinople.

LONDON—A special from San Stefano says: All the troops that will move within a few days into camp on rising ground, two miles and a half from Constantinople.

England Threatening the Russians in the Caucasus.

LONDON—A special from St. Petersburg says: A rumor is spreading that England is sending 30,000 men from India to Lake Van to threaten the Russians in the Caucasus.

Rioting at Blackburn—Troops Called Out.

LONDON—Serious rioting began at Blackburn yesterday evening. Thousands of the lowest class of operatives, including women, paraded the streets, and made demonstrations of the presence of Colonel Jackson, Chairman of the Blackburn Conservative Association. The mob then attempted to burn Jackson's effigy. The presence of Alderman Horby was specially resented, and he was fired upon. Two shots were fired, and the mob dispersed. A strong force of infantry from Preston has arrived, and a troop of cavalry is coming.

Earthquake.

HAVANA, May 14.—An earthquake at Cienfuegos, Wednesday, lasted 60 seconds. Heavy shocks were felt at Caracas.

Thursday, May 16.

ROME—The Senate, Monday, unanimously passed a bill to the Chambers asking for a supplementary vote of 10,000,000 lires for war estimates.

Russians are throwing up entrenchments near San Stefano and are arming them with Krupp guns.

LONDON—There was more rioting at Burnley, and one warehouse was burned. The military prevented further disorders.

EASTERN.

Russia's Naval Designs.

BOSTON—Captain Tscheltschoff, of the Russian Navy, just arrived here, frankly avows what he professes to be his Government's naval policy. He says the steamer Chubrin is under his command, and that an expedition is to be organized on the Coast. He has agents in various quarters and intends to purchase a large number of vessels. He added that his Government was preparing, if need be, to attack England on the seas. A squadron would soon leave the Baltic for these waters, but no letters of marque would be issued, and no privateering carried on except under strict naval rules. The Russian Government, he thought, would revert to the home Government. It was generally supposed that the cession of some lines of peace he would not violate any principle of the Russian Government.

Arrest of Suspected Members of a Secret Society.

Nearly one hundred and fifty persons have been arrested at Warsaw on a conspiracy of the Nihilist Secret National Russian Government, which was recently discovered.

The Turkish Fortresses to be Evacuated, Because of a Peremptory Demand from General Tedtleben.

A special Constantinople telegram states: In consequence of a peremptory demand of General Tedleben, for the immediate evacuation of Lovtcha, passed by a threat to occupy Constantinople, the Cabinet Council have decided to evacuate all their fortresses. Sinnala Sten, then Varna, and lastly, Bulanon. The decision was taken rather suddenly, upon the report of Osman Pasha, that the Turkish army is not in a condition to resist a Russian attack. Strong entrenchments are being made at Constantinople.

The Times correspondent at Constantinople says, the Sultan's Palace was unsafe with foreign, and was only to remain there till the troops would go away from Constantinople. Gen. Ignatieff is expected to arrive at Constantinople, but without effect to fall back if the fortresses were surrendered. The fort was swallowed, and the Russians have promised, so my informant assures me, to relinquish Adrianople and Bodragatch, and quit Erzeroum as soon as the three fortresses are evacuated. The evacuation will begin at once. The Russian possessions on the Danube, and all will be settled by virtual agreement.

Russia's Intention.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Standard asserts that Russia has informed the Powers of her intention to acquaint them immediately of definite conditions of peace, after negotiations with England, and that Russia would not accept any mediation.

The Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs is of opinion that the Porte will be in a position to accept a definite settlement.

Berlin bankers have, it is said, made Russia an offer of fifty per cent. The secret of the

The Home Rule members of Parliament have resolved to leave Butt to retain the leadership of the party on his own terms.

Wednesday, May 15.

Russians Moving Nearer Constantinople.

LONDON—A special from San Stefano says: All the troops that will move within a few days into camp on rising ground, two miles and a half from Constantinople.

England Threatening the Russians in the Caucasus.

LONDON—A special from St. Petersburg says: A rumor is spreading that England is sending 30,000 men from India to Lake Van to threaten the Russians in the Caucasus.

Rioting at Blackburn—Troops Called Out.

LONDON—Serious rioting began at Blackburn yesterday evening. Thousands of the lowest class of operatives, including women, paraded the streets, and made demonstrations of the presence of Colonel Jackson, Chairman of the Blackburn Conservative Association. The mob then attempted to burn Jackson's effigy. The presence of Alderman Horby was specially resented, and he was fired upon. Two shots were fired, and the mob dispersed. A strong force of infantry from Preston has arrived, and a troop of cavalry is coming.

Earthquake.

HAVANA, May 14.—An earthquake at Cienfuegos, Wednesday, lasted 60 seconds. Heavy shocks were felt at Caracas.

Thursday, May 16.

ROME—The Senate, Monday, unanimously passed a bill to the Chambers asking for a supplementary vote of 10,000,000 lires for war estimates.

Russians are throwing up entrenchments near San Stefano and are arming them with Krupp guns.

LONDON—There was more rioting at Burnley, and one warehouse was burned. The military prevented further disorders.

EASTERN.

Russia's Naval Designs.

BOSTON—Captain Tscheltschoff, of the Russian Navy, just arrived here, frankly avows what he professes to be his Government's naval policy. He says the steamer Chubrin is under his command, and that an expedition is to be organized on the Coast. He has agents in various quarters and intends to purchase a large number of vessels. He added that his Government was preparing, if need be, to attack England on the seas. A squadron would soon leave the Baltic for these waters, but no letters of marque would be issued, and no privateering carried on except under strict naval rules. The Russian Government, he thought, would revert to the home Government. It was generally supposed that the cession of some lines of peace he would not violate any principle of the Russian Government.

Arrest of Suspected Members of a Secret Society.

Nearly one hundred and fifty persons have been arrested at Warsaw on a conspiracy of the Nihilist Secret National Russian Government, which was recently discovered.

The Turkish Fortresses to be Evacuated, Because of a Peremptory Demand from General Tedtleben.

A special Constantinople telegram states: In consequence of a peremptory demand of General Tedleben, for the immediate evacuation of Lovtcha, passed by a threat to occupy Constantinople, the Cabinet Council have decided to evacuate all their fortresses. Sinnala Sten, then Varna, and lastly, Bulanon. The decision was taken rather suddenly, upon the report of Osman Pasha, that the Turkish army is not in a condition to resist a Russian attack. Strong entrenchments are being made at Constantinople.

The Times correspondent at Constantinople says, the Sultan's Palace was unsafe with foreign, and was only to remain there till the troops would go away from Constantinople. Gen. Ignatieff is expected to arrive at Constantinople, but without effect to fall back if the fortresses were surrendered. The fort was swallowed, and the Russians have promised, so my informant assures me, to relinquish Adrianople and Bodragatch, and quit Erzeroum as soon as the three fortresses are evacuated. The evacuation will begin at once. The Russian possessions on the Danube, and all will be settled by virtual agreement.

Russia's Intention.

The Vienna correspondent of the London Standard asserts that Russia has informed the Powers of her intention to acquaint them immediately of definite conditions of peace, after negotiations with England, and that Russia would not accept any mediation.

The Russian Ministry of Foreign Affairs is of opinion that the Porte will be in a position to accept a definite settlement.

Berlin bankers have, it is said, made Russia an offer of fifty per cent. The secret of the

The Home Rule members of Parliament have resolved to leave Butt to retain the leadership of the party on his own terms.

Thursday, May 16

AGRICULTURAL.

Cheese Factories.

Butter is so cheap that it becomes a matter of interest to many dairymen who have hitherto made only butter, whether there is not more money in cheese. And as many of these dairies are not large enough, or have not cows enough, to go into the cheese business alone, the second consideration is whether a number had not better unite together for the organization and conduct of a cheese factory. The first of these questions has been answered in the affirmative by general experience. The second one must be answered by the dairymen in each neighborhood where the factory is talked of. We will give the general mode of organization and the plans that have been adopted for conducting the business. To run a cheese factory with the best results as to quality of cheese made and profit on the capital invested, there should be worked up the milk from three hundred to four hundred cows. When it is to start a cheese factory several dairymen who are in the same neighborhood get together and talk the matter over. If enough are found willing to turn in their cows so as to make a fair start, a committee is generally appointed to look further into the matter, to visit factories already in operation, if there be any within a reasonable distance, and obtain necessary practical information. If the committee report favorable, at an adjourned meeting an organization may be effected and directors elected and some general rules or a constitution adopted for the guidance of the association. The next step will be the location of the factory and the erection or appropriation of suitable buildings for the factory. The plan found to work best in the Atlantic States is for one of the dairymen to put up the buildings on his own account, and manufacture and care for the cheese at a fixed price per pound, the others contracting to furnish at the factory, and take their own home for the factory, the milk of a certain number of cows for so many years. It has been found at the East that it requires the milk of about four hundred cows to warrant a man in putting up buildings and going into cheese-making as an entire business. A less number will pay if the manufacturer furnishes a portion of the cows himself, and receives a dividend in cheese. The factory site should be fixed upon with reference to economy of the distance the milk will have to be brought to the factory, and with reference to securing for use good pure cool water. In the Atlantic States a never-failing spring of cool water is considered one of the essentials of the location. Cool water is needed for cooling the milk and for use in keeping the building and utensils clean and sweet. If possible a good stream of cool water should pass directly under the manufacturing room, to carry off the drippings of whey and refuse slop, so that there be no accumulation of filth or acidity about the premises. A slovenly kept cheese factory is filthy smelling place. Good clean water is the best purifier, and it should be handy and sufficient in quantities. When natural springs cannot be found artesian wells are good substitutes. In the absence of these, tubular or common wells, with convenient pumping, should be supplied. One plan—if we believe this was the one originally adopted—was to purchase the milk, paying for it a price estimated by the amount of fat in it, as ascertained by the Babcock test. This we did not give entire satisfaction, because it led the dairymen no choice but to accept price the manufacturer felt perfectly able to pay, and because there was always a difference of opinion as to the prospective value of the cheese, and the dairymen naturally felt an interest in this. The other plan and the one that has gradually worked into general favor, is for the manufacturer to charge one dollar per hundred weight of milk, for making, curing, marketing and dividing the money pro rata among the patrons, the dairymen paying all other expenses, such as boxes, salt, rennet, etc. Those who desire to organize cheese factories in this State can incorporate under our general incorporation law and vary the plan in conducting the business as circumstances may suggest.—Prairie Farmer.

The Wheat Crop.

PROBABLE EFFECT OF A WAR IN EUROPE UPON THE MARKET—ESTIMATED EXTENT OF THE YIELD—AMERICAN SHIPS LIKELY TO PROFIT IN CASE OF WAR—FUTURE PRICES.

A Chronicle reporter on Thursday interviewed several of the leading grain merchants in order to learn how, in their opinion, the wheat market would be affected in the event of a war between Russia and Great Britain. I. Friedlander said that such a war would prove beneficial to American ships and injurious to British ships. At present there were only some half dozen of the latter loading with wheat in this port, but one hundred more were on the way and will arrive here between now and the 1st of August. The crop this season, from the present indications, will prove as good as that of 1877. Mr. Friedlander did not think it likely that a war would arise, but if it did", the merchants here and elsewhere could not be materially affected by it. Neither would it make any difference in the departure of vessels from this port. Business now is good, but the merchants are in doubt as to what the future price of wheat may be.

Starr & Co. thought that war would make the tonnage higher on American ships, but the prices now being paid for old wheat are unusually high, and would not advance. The wheat crops this year are larger all over the world than ever before, and war in Europe would not advance the market prices in California. War rates are now being paid in Liverpool, where wheat is bringing from $1 65 to $1 70 for the new crop, and in the event of peace these rates will decrease from $1 35 to $1 50.

Charles Clayton remarked that in the event of war the supplies of Russia would be cut off, to the obvious advantage of a neutral power like the United States. The tonnage of our merchant shipping is now largely English, and war would add to the rates of freights on British vessels and take from the price of wheat. If war were declared the price of wheat, both on old and new crop, would immediately go up in the English market, and American vessels would get the lion's share of the freights, as they do not have to pay high rates of insurance for war risks. It is estimated that the surplusage of wheat this year will amount to 1,000,000 tons, the largest ever known. In the event of peace the price of wheat will fall here as well as in the English market. If Congress would remove the restrictions of the navigation laws and allow Americans to buy their ships in the markets of the world, it would secure to the United States the carrying trade and the profits arising therefrom.

Two Poor Years Barley.

Last season—a dry year—was a good year for barley on the river borders, and a large crop was produced in those localities. This season the soil has been too full of water for barley. Barley is a plant that cannot stand wet feet. We have seen barley sown on the river border lands in February and March, and have seen it come up finely and grow vigorously, wearing a deep green color and promising an excellent crop, till by the melting of the mountain snows the rivers have been swollen and the waters have stood about the natural banks for weeks. Then we have seen this same barley grow a pale green and then a deadly yellow the leaves of the stalks withering and drying, and the stalks themselves seeming to diminish in bulk and light. The cause was so page water coming from the rivers and rising up through the soil till it wet the feet or roots of the barley with cold pure water while the sun was pouring its vertical rays down upon its heads or stalks. This condition of things was sure death to the barley plant. The present season there was a considerable breadth of land sown to barley on the rivers early in the winter, say in November and December, and it was very promising up to the time of the high waters. Much of it was then destroyed by water when the leaves gave way, and what was not so destroyed has been greatly injured by the cold seepage water upon its feet or roots. It will be so late before the river lands can be plowed and cultivated that there will probably be but little of the ground sown to barley, and our opinion is that what may be sown will be killed out by the water from the melting snows in May or June. It has been the custom on the river to sow barley with alfalfa seed, but this will not pay this year. Better sow the clover seed alone. The seepage water will rather help than hurt the young clover. Its roots will not probably grow so rapidly while the cold water is on them, but when this begins to recede they will follow it down as if to get the last possible drink of it as it is departing. Alfalfa may do well at any time during the summer if the soil is damp and in good condition.

We have known two good crops to be cut from alfalfa sown in May the same season. Sow as the water goes off. Where the surface is even sow directly on the surface without plowing, running a drag over to cover the seed.

Where the surface is covered with sediment even dragging may be dispensed with. If the seed be sown in the water or as soon as it has left the surface. But there is no use in sowing barley with it when it is probable there will be seepage water to destroy it.—Record-Union.

The Art of Manuring.

This rule should be observed in planting trees, shrubs and vines: Place no manure in contact with the roots. Many persons think they are doing a nice thing for their trees to sprinkle manure among their roots in the process of planting, but instead they do harm. If you put the manure above the roots when the holes are nearly filled, so that when the dirt is replaced it will be fairly covered, good will result from the application. Cow manure or well-rotted stable manure is used with success. To prevent injury from severe frost, and also to benefit the trees by enriching the ground, coarse manure containing considerable straw may be spread over the ground, rather thick, around the stem or trunk, as far as the roots extend.—Rural World.

WHAT HORSES TO BREED.—Irish address on horses before the New Hampshire State Board of Agriculture, J. A. Walker says as his opinion that the most profitable horse for us to breed at the present time, in this country, is what he calls park horses, or gentleman's driving horses. They should be at least sixteen hands high, of good spirit, and possessed of speed, and "bank heads." Such horses may be raised on farms when young, will haul the plow, do hay work, and be the family carriage, and at five years old will sell for $500 to the city trade. Farmers should join together and breed a dozen or more in a county, and select for breeders animals that will produce such colts. It will be a step toward the establishing of an American breed of horses of real value. It will take time, and is a slow way, but a sure way. At the close of the lecture many questions were asked relating to the subject of breeding, some of which he was unable to answer, as the relative influence of the sire and dam, the effect of imagination, first impression, and similar questions. Too little is known absolutely upon these points to give unerring precise answers. If, as claimed, a human child has been marked in his outward appearance by the picture of a man hanging on the wall of the sitting room, surely a colt or a calf may be marked by the presence of companions of the mother animal, but of these mental effects there is something we do not fully understand.

FEED FOR GOOD BUTTER.—A friend of ours, who makes butter for the Boston market, where it is delivered weekly for about fifty cents a pound, was recommended to feed his Jersey cows on shorts instead of corn meal, as it is cheaper. He did so, and complaint came back that his butter was not as good as that of 1877. Mr. Friedlander did not think it likely that a war would arise, but if it d", the merchants here and elsewhere could not be materially affected by it. Neither would it make any difference in the departure of vessels from this port. Business now is good, but the merchants are in doubt as to what the future price of wheat may be.

Starr & Co. thought that war would make the tonnage higher on American ships, but the prices now being paid for old wheat are unusually high, and would not advance. The wheat crops this year are larger all over the world than ever before, and war in Europe would not advance the market prices in California. War rates are now being paid in Liverpool, where wheat is bringing from $1 65 to $1 70 for the new crop, and in the event of peace these rates will decrease from $1 35 to $1 50.

Charles Clayton remarked that in the event of war the supplies of Russia would be cut off, to the obvious advantage of a neutral power like the United States. The tonnage of our merchant shipping is now largely English, and war would add to the rates of freights on British vessels and take from the price of wheat. If war were declared the price of wheat, both on old and new crop, would immediately go up in the English market, and American vessels would get the lion's share of the freights, as they do not have to pay high rates of insurance for war risks. It is estimated that the surplusage of wheat this year will amount to 1,000,000 tons, the largest ever known. In the event of peace the price of wheat will fall here as well as in the English market. If Congress would remove the restrictions of the navigation laws and allow Americans to buy their ships in the markets of the world, it would secure to the United States the carrying trade and the profits arising therefrom.

Wet Poor Year Barley.

Last season—a dry year—was a good year for barley on the river borders, and a large crop was produced in those localities. This season the soil has been too full of water for barley. Barley is a plant that cannot stand

Once more at the Helm.

It is probably a safe statement that there is not a resident on the Pacific slope who has travelled up and down the coast many years but has stopped within at least heard of John Kelly, Jr., the prince of landlords. Those who have been in the habit of patronizing that old and favorably known caravansery, the Brooklyn, will be pleased to learn that its distinctive are once more in the hands of Mr. Kelly, which is the only needed announcement to insure a continually-crowded house. Under Mr. Kelly's supervision the Brooklyn will be completely repainted and partially refurnished. Many modern conveniences will be added for the comfort and enjoyment of its patrons, and everyone will be spared to keep the hotel in that condition which has heretofore made it so deservedly popular. Mr. Kelly has been away from the Brooklyn for the past two years, and his return to his former position will be greeted with pleasure by the hosts of friends who have in the past enjoyed life in a hotel over his management.

MAURICE DOBB & Co. will sell, next Thursday, at 410 Pine street, one hundred and fifty choice building lots in the town of Berkely, Alameda. The terms are very easy, only quarter of the money being required to be paid down, the remainder being taken in installments. The situation of the lots is very very fine, and as the climate is all that could be wished, they are very desirable locations for suburban residences. Berkeley is one of the most rapidly improving towns in the State, and an investment there is sure to turn out a profitable one.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GRAND SPRING OPENING OF MILLENERY AND FANCY GOODS AND LADIES' FINISHED UNDERWEAR, Notions, Household Goods and Gents' Furnishing Goods.

Manufacturers of Boys' and Men's Nice Fitting Suits of French Beaver, Diagonals, California and Oregon Cashmers and Scotch Tweeds.

PALMER BROS. 726, 728, 730, 732, 734 MARKET ST. apr13

M'CARTHY BROS. BEST OLD GOVERNMENT JAVA COFFEE, AND PURE SPICES. Ask your Grocer for Our Goods, use no others.

N. B.—The supplying of Convents and Schools a Specialty.

CHRYSTAL ILLUMINATORS NO CHIMNEY TO BREAK! The Only Device Ever Patented. TO BURN WITHOUT A CHIMNEY. The Best Light Since the World was Made. Adapted for all Coal Oil Lamps, Chandeliers, Brackets, etc.; also used on Gas Chandeliers, at one-fourth the cost of gas, with equal light. USE ROSELANE OIL! Best in the Market. YATES & CO., AGENTS. RETAIL STORE, 627 KEARNY STREET. WHOLESALE HOUSE: 113 FRONT STREET. 21mar tf

FINEST MEATS AND LOWEST PRICES! CALL AT THE NEW CASH MARKET, JUST OPENED AT 532 and 534 MARKET STREET, OPPOSITE SECOND. AND PROVE FOR YOURSELF THE fact that you can save ten to twenty per cent by purchasing there FRESH AND SALTED MEATS and every description of Meat Products. There is true economy in a GOOD ARTICLE AT THE LOWEST PRICE. 13apr tf

FAMILY DRUG AND PRESCRIPTION STORE. JOHN C. MOODY, Apothecary, For the last 18 years on Kearny Street, HAS REMOVED TO THE NORTHWEST CORNER OF POLK AND PINE STS. Prescriptions prepared with care from the best of drugs and chemicals. CHARGES MODERATE. 8ov17

CARD OF THANKS. GEORGE T. HANLY & CO., 202 MARKET STREET. IN RETIRING FROM THE RETAIL, TO engage in the Wholesale business of Teas, Coffees, feel desirous of thanking the public for their patronage during the years they have been in business, and take this opportunity of introducing their successor, FRED H. LORING, A gentleman well acquainted with the business, and who will sustain the reputation of the house as a first-class TEA, COFFEE and SPICE establishment, as well as select liquors. P.S. I. will press the same course as we have done—that is, sell for cash at reasonable prices. 25ap 1m HARPS, $4.00. DAVIDS HARP IS A NEW MUSICAL instrument which little fair to exceed in popularity anything yet manufactured. They are sweet-toned, artistic, and can be mastered with half an hour's practice. BANCROFT, KNIGHT & CO., 752 Market St., San Francisco. Stop-1m General Agents.

DRY GOODS, ETC.

THE GRAND OPENING AT THE ARCADE. PROFOUND ADMIRATION OF THE LADIES OF SAN FRANCISCO AT OUR EXHIBITION OF DRESS GOODS AND SILKS. OUR DRESS GOODS AND SILKS Are most worthy of public attention, as we have taken special pains to make these department unapproachable. Circassian Suitings, Drap d'Eclair, Ragdusa Suitings, Neigeuse Cloth, Knicker Costume Cloth. The above are some of the latest designs in the Dress Department, and are especially adapted to the wants of San Francisco. Wonderful bargains in Sateens, Linen Lawns, Linen Cambrics, Linen Sheetings, Linen Damasks, Linen Towels and Napkins, Linen Table Cloths, Linen Sheets, Linen Pillow Cases, Linen Bosoms, Linen Gents' Dress Shirts, Linen Gents' Linen Collars and Cuffs, Linen Gents' Linen Handkerchiefs, Linen Gents' Linen Pocket Handkerchiefs, Linen Gents' Linen Drawers, Linen Gents' Linen Undershirts, Linen Gents' Linen Hosiery, Linen Gents' Linen Gloves, Linen Gents' Linen Suspenders, Linen Gents' Linen Ties, Linen Gents' Linen Scarfs, Linen Gents' Linen Dressing Gowns, Linen Gents' Linen Bosoms

The Duty of the Hour.

An Address to our Catholic Young Men.

BY L. H. BANDINI

We feel that it would be presumptuous in us to enter directly into the discussion of a question so vital to the interests of religion, the good of society, and the happiness, prosperity and advancement of the Catholic people of this and every other land, without justifying our position, as best we can, not by resorting to smooth-toned apologies, but by clear explanations based upon existing proofs.

It is a fact, beyond contradiction, that the majority of the Catholic young men of this age are degenerating in practical piety, virtuousness and loyalty to their faith. Mediating on the causes which produce such unhappy results, detrimental alike to religion, morality, peace, progress and government—what would at a casual glance seem superior, ones are distinctly visible and easily defined. The slanderers of our creed fling without hesitating lies (which they entitle literature), wherein self-interested definitions are given teaching out the history of the Catholic Church, her designs, prerogatives and policy, and, branding her with the blame of ignorance, superstition, conspiracy, vice, treason and bloodshed. These highly-coloured libels, too many to be true, and unbelieved by one out of every thousand of their professed exponents—are nevertheless popular and have many able and ingenious defenders, among whom we may rank political cormorants, scheming editors, sensational preachers, in short, every class who would drop conscience to grasp fame. Surrounded by these varying but always vitiating influences, compelled by necessity to mingle in companionship with the disciples of a corrupt school embracing in its catechism a blasphemous science, polluted philosophy, and a so-called theology adapted to human convenience, rather than the Divine Will, from which springs so many accommodating beliefs, it is not surprising that the tainted atmosphere should be inhaled by our Catholic youth, or that they should imbibe the ruling spirit of this times, to some extent at least. In the marts of trade, in the walks of political life, in society, or wherever mankind congregate in interest or necessity as members of the human family, the prevailing sentiments of the day are visibly present. If not openly spoken they are plainly betrayed on conduct and character. Free to face with adversaries and enticements, so limitless in their liberality, so various in their invitations to youth, and withal so certain leadership, strong minds, courageous hearts and consistent characters are the only shields of defense.

The time is fast approaching when the storm foretold by frowning clouds will burst upon us, when from the farthest ends of the earth there will be borne to our ears the noise of conflict and the sounding notes of war. The struggle in which we are so soon to take part will assume a different form and find its issue on a new battlefield from that which we have been accustomed to see. Mind will meet mind; creed clash with creed; instead of a physical invasion an intellectual one. The sanctuary and altars of religious controversy are only day and night being fanned into flame, and soon its lurid glare will illume the whole face of the globe. These are not speculative conjectures, but the evidenced history and the manifestations of our every-day life already in all minds are capable of comprehending. Not only are we to experience a renewal of former disputes, but other and more stubborn forces will be brought into the field. The influx of immigration from heathen and barbarian lands is annually bringing to our shores thousands of idolatrous pagans who are wedded to rites and traditions that date back into the misty ages of antiquity. Among these we may mention Buddhism, Brahminism, Mohammedanism, together with many more not less degrading forms of idolatry and atheism. Blended with their various creeds the Asiatic nations will bring with them a literature of subtlety and power. Indeed their literature will exert a greater force towards estranging men's minds from the principles of Christianity than will their religion.

The Catholic Church will not suffer from direct contact with these barbarian strangers, a fact easily deduced from a comparison with the success of Catholic missionaries among the barbarians and pagan nations of the East on their native soil. Were the issue directly between Catholicity and Paganism, no one who follows the history of the Church could place the triumph of Catholicity in a doubtful issue in the future. But this will not be the direct issue. It is a fact not denied by Protestantism itself that it has never, no doubt—but a simple belief in its Deity, which it compels its followers to accept or believe, or that it teaches to be essential to the attainment of eternal life. The religion of Protestantism is at its best made up of strong opinions merely; the right of individual judgment is the basis of its strength; its conquests are nothing more than proselytisms; its vacillating character has been the theme of rigorous and scathing criticism from some of its most eminent and devoted champions. Formed of innumerable sects, widely separated in forms and faith, it tends to anarchy. As it is opposed to Catholicity. To untutored minds its fascinating welcome which Protestantism extends to new followers is a strong incentive to complacency in its faith. It will not be supposed that the running cant (Cuiapennese) which has been so deftly employed in the past will be discarded by the rising elements in the Protestant Church of the future. And with those facts in view we may with certainty look to the near future to witness the fusion of Protestantism and infidelity into one form, for comprehension they will. They may remain distinct in external ceremonies, but the undercurrent of opinion, the spirit, the purposes and the character will be identical. The union thus effected among the enemies of Catholicity will be well organized and will have its shrewd and astute leaders. It may seem preposterous to suppose that Protestantism, clarifying and preaching Christianity, would join hands with infidelity; nor will Protestantism ever acknowledge the friendship. But if their relations are so amicable in the society of today, are we not justified in believing their continuance or, are we to think Infidelity will change its character to please the taste of the Mongolian metal of the Caucasian?

You may say we have overdrawn the picture, but we have not. The great revolution which the future predicts will not be any greater than that which the world has already witnessed. Contrast the rigid discipline and severe practices of the Protestantism which first rivited these shores with the doubting, speculative Protestantism of to-day, and note the wide difference. As students of history we recognize the fact that it is not depurting from the sphere of historical criticism to reason from past events to future.

We look to those whose hands have supported and whose tongues have declaimed the glorious truths and denounced the wrongs done our religion? whose true steps we have followed through the paths of love, truth, sobriety, and moral rectitude; who have schooled our young minds in the precepts of peace and obedience, the love of that, the furrowed brow, the mirror and uncertain step, the sinking frame, but still but really that their race is run, that time has conquered and our fathers are passing away. The hand of human destiny will soon place upon our shoulders the mantle of their responsibilities, and instead of students we shall become instructors. With a knowledge of what is the state of public opinion as depicted toward religion and government we must have a close consciousness of the immensity of the task we assume, as well as of the value of the sacred trust confided to our care and keeping. And the possession of such knowledge also implies a close estimation of what qualifications are necessary to the proper exercise of the functions of our position. Here we come directly to the question, what is the Duty of the Hour with our Catholic young men?

We have seen in our brief analysis of the public mind of our day, how effectively the forces of our aggressors are equipped and marshaled, how many and how dangerous the obstacles to be met with in our passage through life if we would stand faithfully by the traditions of our fathers and keep hands at the Catholic altar.

(1) We must familiarize ourselves with the spiritual doctrine and as it relates to people and governments. The one great calumny which is flung in the face of the Catholic world of this age is that the Church is a shrieking tyrant seeking to fetter human liberty and walk to power over the wrecks of crumbled dynasties and ruined nations.

The evidence of all history, civil and ecclesiastical, furnishes ten thousand contradictions which are within the reach of all, and which, when placed beside the wild theories of our modern innovators, will silence their grandest appeals. If through ignorance of our faith, its tenets and the arguments upon which rests its unassailable foundation, we must hang our heads and let be the most unchallenged, we place in the hands of our accusers their most effective weapon—we give them the belief that in us they have found the verification of their accusations.

(2.) We should bear in mind that as free and independent citizens, fulfilling all obligations and contributing our portion to the nation's wealth and greatness—the sweat of our hands and brains and the proceeds of our labor—we are entitled to every recompense due to loyalty and industry, and under no consideration or at no person or party's solicitation or demand should we ever surrender our right to our share of political representation and favor. The laws of the land, which have been most respect and observe, which protect society and individual alike from injustice and violence, which, if they have a preference in all classes of whatever creed, cause or nationality, perfect equality and fair play, were framed for all. We think it proper to remark here that we should endeavor to improve on the good and noble characters of our ancestors (Cuiapennese) National Congress. Scarce is there one, in the hallowed sentiments of ten million Catholics who do not become incensed at it may at any hour. The same comparison may apply to our State Assemblies, and is readily seen in our State Legislature, and in our municipal bodies, or wherever there exists the least political power or benefit. Why is this? The answer given is, because Catholics, as a class, are wanting in that affection for the country, which is the first element in the character of good citizenship, hence devoid of interest in her welfare and prosperity and in the second impunified to the task of legislating. This is not true. The Catholic people of this country have never fail to manifest the most exalted sentiments of devotion to the nation, either in peace or war. The monuments which attest the gallantry of America's brave children are adorned with the names of thousands of Catholic heroes, who poured out their blood on the altar of liberty and sealed, at the cost of life, the prosperity of the National Union. When Columbus, leaded to the dust by the chains of British thralldom, gave to vindicate his rights by the sword, And turned her weeping eyes to the nations of Europe, who answered her appeal? Catholic Ireland and Catholic France! Nor have Catholics failed to appear when duty spoke in the council halls of the land. But these were times when the exigencies of the hour would not admit of sectional jealousy or treachery, and all united for a common cause—the liberty of the people and the welfare of the Union. Those days are past and will never return. For many years the opponents of Catholicity have secretly and cunningly labored to secure political ascendancy, and they have succeeded. Once aware of our humiliating disadvantage, let us direct our every effort to undo their work. Not only does our duty as citizens demand an active participation in politics, but it is our duty to religion as well. We should strive to the decimation of no party or class, but secure for ourselves the privileges to which we are entitled, and use them to our own good. Let us be loyal to our God, our religion and our country.

(3) The injustice under which we have so long suffered respecting taxation for educational purposes, should engage our strenuous attention. Eloquently and ably have our Catholic press and pulpit vindicated the claims of the Catholic minority on this question, but before our demands are accorded to our justice demands to be acquainted for a long time to come. The laity have been too slow in endorsing the utterances of our clergy on such matters of importance, and in that they have seriously marred our success. The measures set forth are just beyond all dispute, but until they are taken in hand by the entire Catholic population, it is not possible that they will ever receive that thoroughness of impartial hearing which is all that is necessary to their success. The perfection to which we can bring the education of our youth will have the greatest weight in counteracting the machinations of our enemies.

(4.) Our relations with society should receive careful study. Different dispositions, opposing beliefs, and conflicting interests are here encountered and exercise the greatest power in the formation of habits and characters. Too much care can not be taken in the selection of company, since society is a human necessity and its obligations no one can escape. It is a trite saying, but a true one, that "a man will be known by the company he keeps."

(5.) We must unite. The formation of societies of Catholic young men, where they may meet and exchange opinions to their mutual improvement and information, exquests to revision at the hands of the British Government.

The subjects of the Czar have been raised to a terrible pitch of indignation by the insolent pretensions of England, and it is extremely doubtful if the Russian Government could allay the popular passion so as to avoid an outbreak of hostilities. Hundreds of millions of money have been wasted and trampled on with impunity, and these scores every probability that the gauntlet will be thrown down, not by England, but by Russia.

In the critical state of affairs it may not be out of place to glance at the respective forces which can be arrayed on either side. The Russian armies in the field amount to a total of about twelve hundred thousand men, and this number can, in case of need, be increased to five millions. Of these forces about five hundred thousand are veterans, inured to campaigning, and led by brave and skillful officers. Against this enormous host, England, according to the statement of the Secretary of War, can put seventy thousand men in the field, and as conscription does not prevail in Great Britain, she would represent the total fighting strength. Of course militia regiments might be sent to garrison Malta and Gibraltar, and thus set free some twenty or thirty thousand regular troops. This would give a maximum of 100,000 men, who would be called upon to perform the impossible task of conquering Bulgaria and Armenia from fifty times their number, in a year or two.

It will be seen that in striking the British forces we have not taken into account the English troops stationed in India. If we were to do so, the Anglo-Russian war would be nearly all gone, and the ordinary expenses if the government have been so lavishly bestowed that a deficit in the budget can scarcely be avoided. But there will be no difficulty about getting the money that may be needed, for the people are now fairly aroused, and although there is no great excitement anywhere, yet everywhere there is a strong and deep feeling that Russia will have to be met, and met very soon. But for the confidence which is felt in the government this feeling would find a expression in a much more decided form. Meetings in Exeter Hall meetings or Hyde Park sights. People, however, believe that the Ministry will interpose in time to prevent irremediable mischief. The main features of the complication change from day to day, but the result which is before us can not well be altered unless Russia moderates her pretensions. What chance is there of her doing this? Apparently a very small one. She has reached her goal, and now to be turned back from it, after it has taken her over a hundred years of warfare and plotting and contriving to arrive there, is a very disagreeable proceeding to contemplate. Will she ever be so near her final triumph again if she recedes now? If the victim must be fought over, why not fight today? Turkey herself will defend the Sultan. England and Austria could give great trouble, but it is not certain that they would succeed in their attempt and. This is the view taken in Russia, and there is much to support it. As a well-informed correspondent at St. Petersburg remarks "threatened with the complete extinction of his power in Europe, the Sultan will recognize that Russia is his best friend and surest ally, and that the conditions of the peace just signed, however hard they may be, are much more moderate than the demands of England and Austria." Russia and Turkey in alliance could not look at the settlement of the peace treaty quite decidedly in favor of finishing the business. But of hand. War with England would be the sentiment of the Russian people, and would be

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY EVENING MAY 16

SUBSCRIBERS will please specially look at the printed label on the upper corner of the paper; the date thereon shows when the subscription expires. They should also know that their taking the paper from the post-office renders them liable for the subscription price as long as they continue to do so. Persons have no excuse to make for paying long after the time their subscription expires. If they wish their paper discontinued, by not taking it from the office the postmaster is bound to notify the publisher of that fact, and to have the paper stopped. We make this explanation for the information of those who make the excuse, when asked for payment, that they paid for it as long as ordered, but still continue to take it from the office.

A Serious Cause of Complaint.

Our readers may be able to call to mind the fierce controversy that was carried on a couple of years ago with cards, letters and advertisements in the newspapers, as well as with gratuitously circulated pamphlets, about the respective merits of Appleton's and Johnson's Cyclopedias.

Appleton professed to publish a Cyclopedia that would endeavor to be perfectly fair and impartial on all matters relating to theology, religion, history, etc., and to accomplish this end got the articles upon such subjects prepared by clergymen of the particular denomination interested. By this plan no one had the opportunity of misrepresenting the belief of those who differed from him, and all had reason to be satisfied. But shortly after its appearance an outcry was raised against Appleton's Cyclopedia on the ground that it was too favorable to Catholicity! Bigots and sectarians could not endure the thought that the bias, fallacies and slanders upon the doctrines and practices of the Catholic Church, with which they were so long accustomed to dupe and blind the American people, should be dissipated and swept away by a calm statement of the truth. So, Appleton's Cyclopedia was assailed as "sustaining Romanism," and as having been written under the "influence of Jesuits."

Johnson's Cyclopedia was then issued to "remedy the defects" of Appleton's, and remove all cause of complaint from bigot- and anti-Catholic sectaries. This Cyclopedia was set to "favor Papacy" by any means, and "Jesuit influence" were to have no share in its compilation. It was to be a good, sound Protestant Cyclopedia, and no mistake about it. Well, after long and careful examination of its volumes, and reading most of the articles referring to Catholic dogma, Catholic practice and Catholic history, we are forced to declare that a more untruthful, prejudiced, or bitterly calumnious book we have never seen. It is altogether unfit to be placed in the hands of American youths who wish to possess honest and liberal minds, while the Catholic reader who would place it within reach of his children would be guilty of a grievous dereliction of duty, and incur a terrible responsibility before God and his holy Church.

All subjects connected with Catholicism have been treated not only not by Catholics, nor by Protestants of honorable and impartial minds, but by sectarian controversialists, professed "No-Popertize," of the most incorrigible and virulent type. The idea of the Catholic Church getting fair play, or a good word being said for any representative Catholic, in such a publication, is, of course, preposterous. But it is very cunningly written, and well calculated to deceive the unreflecting, or those who have but a slender stock of knowledge already. In many cases the simple definition of a subject, such as "absolution," "indulgence," "infallibility," is given with something approaching accuracy, and it requires scrutiny to discover the misrepresentation or fallacy, where one exists; but the editor, spirit, or explanatory remarks, are in all instances nothing but tissues of abominable falsehoods thinly veiled generally by an affectation of candor.

That this thing was done designedly, and solely for the purpose of vilifying the Catholic Church, is demonstrated to an absolute certainty by the fact that no other denomination has been treated in a similar manner. The ablest among the ministers of the various Protestant sects were selected to furnish sketches of their own churches, and to place their respective creeds in the most favorable light possible before the public. There was plenty of freedom and fair play for them, let none whatever for the priests of the universal and imperishable faith of the Catholic Church.

Now, Jesuits warning our readers against patronizing, or having anything to do with, Johnson's Cyclopedia, we have another object in view in writing these lines. Not very long ago a great effort was made to introduce it into the public schools of this city as a work of reference for the benefit of the teachers and advanced pupils, but happily it was defeated. Nothing daunted, its advocates went before the State Board of Education and finally got them to adopt it. The announcement that it was put upon the list of books to be recommended was quietly made last week, and no comments passed by the press upon it. It looked so innocent, perhaps! But it could not escape the editor of THE MONITOR. We now, with all the force and emphasis at our command, denounce the action of the State Board of Education. We know Mr. Ayer to be a worthy gentleman composing it recommended spending the money of Catholic tax-payers for the purpose of purchasing books deliberately hostile to Catholic Faith. We want to know how they feel justified in poisoning the founts of knowledge from which Catholic youth are expected to drink! We want to know are the opinions and statements of Johnson's Cyclopedia to be communicated, as correct, by the teachers to their pupils! Lastly, we want to know if this is the "non-sectarian" upon which the public school system is supposed to be based!

Why, it will at once occur to the mind of every intelligent Catholic father that he might just as well send his children to an avowedly Protestant proselyting institution. The only difference would be that the "purely secular" public school would be the more insidious, and consequently the more dangerous of the two. It would be worth while trying, we imagine, whether Johnson's Cyclopedia is the only anti Catholic work to be provided for the schools at the expense of Catholic taxpayers. And it would, also, be worth inquiring as to the character of the literature represented on the shelves of our various school libraries, not only in this city but throughout the State, for the filling of which Catholics have to pay their full share. We not only venture to say, but positively assert, that many of the books in these school libraries will, on examination, be found to be thoroughly anti-Catholic, and artfully designed by the writers to misrepresent everything connected with the Catholic Church. We would suggest the formation of committees, composed of a few Catholic gentlemen, who would make it their business to examine the books in the various school libraries throughout the State, and let the public know the result. We are sure it would result in banishing the kind of books we allude to, and many some degree of care to be exercised in the selection of school libraries. We do not believe the people of this State will tolerate anything but fair play and justice in this matter, and that the liberty of conscience guaranteed by the Constitution of the United States can not be infringed upon with impunity, even by the State Board of Education.

Legal Communism!

While there is so much talk about the Communists among the working classes, be they few or many, interfering with the "rights of property!" perhaps it would be well to call attention to the fact that the law-makers of the State have already set them the example, and interfered most unwarrantably with those same rights. By section 1313 of the Civil Code it is distinctly provided that no bequest to a charitable object shall hold good unless thirty days shall have elapsed between the date of the will and the death of the testator. What is this but interfering with the planest rights of property? Provided that the testator be of sound disposing mind, and that the object of his benevolent intention be a lawful one, why should any law be passed compelling him to make his will thirty days, or one day, before his death under pain of invalidation thereof! And this unjust law altogether done away with the proprietary rights of property owners, who were have the misfortune of being smitten with a sudden and fatal disease. It will not matter how anxiously he may desire to leave his money so as to do good for his followers, perhaps so as to atone for the remissness of a life unhallowed by religion, he cannot carry out his desires unless he had the forethought to make a will long before death confronted him or he had any thought of being called to leave this world. The injustice of this enactment is shown every day. On account of it the German Benevolent Society have just lost the benefit of fifty thousand dollars bequeathed to them by one George Schendel. There is no question either as to the perfect sanity of the man, nor as to his intentions of so bestowing his property; but because only eleven days elapsed between the date of his making the will and his death, the bequest became null and void. If the late W. S. O'Brien had not, fortunately, made his will a few months before his decease, the Orphan Asylum would now be deprived of his munificent donation. We maintain that this law is in itself unjust, and that it interferes with the most sacred rights of property. Therefore it sets a very bad example to the poorer classes, who are expected to respect those rights. It was passed, we feel certain, as a concession to bigots and anti-Catholics, because it was well known that Catholicity would lose much more than any other church by its operation; and some selfish politicians, who went begging to Catholic voters to send them to the Legislature, on account of their being nominal Catholics, acted on this and many other occasions, when Catholic interests were assailed, like dumb dogs, not venturing even to utter a word by way of protest. We would suggest to our German friends that they take this matter to the Supreme Court. We think the eminent jurists who compose that tribunal will declare such a law unjust and unconstitutional.

A Free Advertisement.

Complimentary to the Press of the Pacific Coast.

There are so many calls upon the advertising space at the command of THE MONITOR, that we are sometimes afraid we shall have to raise the tariff in order to lessen the competition. This being so, it can easily be imagined that it must be very great inducement, indeed, which could prevail upon us to give an advertisement for nothing, more especially an advertisement coming from the editorial pen. Yet we cheerfully give one in order to rescue a contemporary from the oblivion and obscurity to which its own dullness and bigotry would forever consign it. There is, then, let us say, a paper published in this city called the Commercial Advocate. In an appeal for more advertising patronage recently printed it put forward as its special claims upon the public that it was the only paper west of the Rocky Mountains that defend the Chinese, as also the only one opposed to the Catholic Church. Now, we have not the smallest objections that all those who love the Mongolians, and all who hate religious liberty, should subscribe to the Commercial Advocate, and we invite them to do so. We only fear that if the supporters of our contemporary are limited to these two classes, it can never be a very flourishing concern. But, as it chooses to take up these two specialties, we wish the Commercial Advocate all possible joy of them. There are many citizens who will think it highly creditable to the newspapers of the Pacific Coast that only one out of the whole number can be found advocating the rights of Coolie labor, and displaying bigotry towards the Catholic Church; but, then, such editorials are not Know Nothings and are not members of the "American Protestant Association." The Commercial Advocate and its patrons are, in every sense, worthy of each other.

An Amiable Freethinker.

The name of the infamous Rufin Barros, who drove the monks and nuns from Guatemala, in the name of religious freedom, may not have escaped our readers' memory. The following anecdote, which we recommend to the apostles of that humanitarianism, will shed new light upon his character:

"—Having—in order to celebrate his birthday, invited several of the ladies of the capital to dinner, they unanimously refused. One of them, offended, probably, at the invitation addressed to her, answered that she would sooner dine with his horse than with him. The man, giving a sample of the mildness of his republican manners, gave orders that the lady should be bound with ropes in the stable and compelled to keep company with his horse during dinner time. The other ladies who had refused were shut up in a room and flogged."

This is one of the liberal regenerators of the South American republics—one of the opponents of the "tyranny of Rome".

Encyclical Letter of His Holiness Pope Leo XIII.

[We leave out other matter to give insertion to the following synopsis of the long expected Encyclical of his Holiness Pope Leo XIII., taken from the Westminster Gazette; which reached us this morning.]

His Holiness, in his first Encyclical, distinctly endorses the policy and acts of his predecessor. He insists on the necessity for the restoration of the Temporal Power, condemns civil marriages, deplores the rejection of the authority of the Church, and proclaims that to be the cause of all existing evils, but in language of commanding calmness and dignity. The Encyclical contains no attack whatever upon the civil government of Italy, even not even an indirect, of the House of Savoy.

His Holiness deplores the accumulation of evils with which, from the first day of his Pontificate, he beheld mankind afflicted. The chief cause of so much evil lies, he is convinced, in the denial of the holy and august authority of the Church, and the contempt in which it is held. No sooner was this fact recognized by the enemies of publicorder than they received their best means to carry on a continued warfare against the Church and overthrow of the supreme power of the Roman Pontiff. Hence, those laws subversive of the Constitution of the Catholic Church, the disappointed religious orders, the confiscation of Church property and the like. He did not refer to this accumulation of evil to add to the sorrow of his venerable brethren, but to indicate the serious condition to which those things had come which were the objects of his ministry, and what pains it would be necessary for him to take to defend the Church of Christ. The dignity of the Roman Pontiff as especially assailed in these calamitous times by unworthy calumnies. It was itself civilization wanted a solid basis if it founded on the eternal principles of truth, rectitude and justice. No one could doubt that the Church had carried this highest truth among barbarous and superstitious nations, spread the flag of redemption among civilized and protected Science and art, and founded or took under its protection charitable institutions.

Drawing a comparison between the present age, which he describes as one filled with division and ruin, and those fortunate times when the Church was venerated as a mother, his Holiness continues that insolent troops of all legitimate power in the name of progress; that it is not liberty which is desirable, but that it is monstrous liberty by the uncontrolled diffusion of surely the reckless amassing of wealth, impunity of crime, and the oppressed of worthier citizens. What, he asks, is the more iniquitous than the denial even of well the Roman Pontiffs have manifested all classes of civil society! Certain his predecessors, to insure the good of the people, had not hesitated to undertake struggles of all kinds, to sustain of fatigues, to confront the thorny difficulties, with eyes fixed on Heaven, had never veiled their heads before the threats of tyrannies. It was his Apostolic See which first cast together and cemented the ties of ancient, disrupted civilization, whilst the light of Christianity poured from that place, which was the anchor of safety in the fiercest tempests that beat on human family, which was the sacred pil of concord drawing together distant jarring Pontifices maximi from all have constantly opposed a bulwark Human society might not fall again into ancient barbarism and barbarism. If dictatory authority had not been rejected, civil power would not have lost that sole and sacred character which religion impressed upon it, nor would so many nations wars have broken out, nor Roma once flourishing have fallen.

The Italian nation had been spiritedated to the Apostolic See for from glory and greatness. The auth and protection of the Roman Pontiffs had many times shielded her against the attacks of her enemies, and asked her so that the Catholic faith might be maintained inscribed in the hearts of Italians. His Holiness recalled especially the memory of the great, Alexander III., Innocent III., Pius V., Leo X., and others who had preserved Italy from ruin threatened by barbarians, saved her hereditary faith, preserved the light of science and the splendor of art. His Holiness appeals to our mother, Rome, which had felt the special advantages of unity of having the rock of the faith, but the asylum of the fine arts, the home of wisdom, the wonder and envy of the world. "If, then," he continues, "the hopes of Italy and the world rest on the beneficent influence of the Holy See and on the intimate union of all the faithful with the Roman Pontiff, it stands to reason that we should with all diligence, all in our power to preserve intact the dignity of the Roman Catholicity. In order, therefore, before all things, to guard the rights and liberty of the Holy See, we shall never cease to insist that our authority be respected, that our ministry and our power be left fully free and independent, and that the position be restored to us in which Divine wisdom long ago placed us. It is no vain desire of dominion which moves us to demand the re-establishment of our civil power; we demand it because our duties and our solemn oaths exact it, and because it is not only necessary to conserve the full liberty of the spiritual power, but also because it is evident that when it is a question of the temporal dominion of the Apostolic See it involves the well-being and safety of the whole human family." The Pope distinctly indorses the policy and acts of his predecessor, condemns civil marriages and deplores rejection of the authority of the Church, proclaiming that to be the cause of all existing evils, but in language of calmness and dignity, devoid throughout of any tone of offense or violence.

When the full text of the Pope's letter reaches us we are convinced that it will be as full of charity and learning, and as infallibly as any of the encyclicals of Pius the Great. Meanwhile let every Catholic pray for the intention of the Holy Father. — N. Y. Sunday Democrat.

Wonderful Cure Wrought Through the Intercession of Pope Pius IX.

Rev. Pietro Politi, Lenten Orator in the Commonwealth of Calabria Ultra Secunda, in a letter to the editor of the Unità Cattolica gives the following information:

"During this Lent I had the happiness of witnessing an almost instantaneous miracle through the intercession of the immortal Pope Pius IX., in behalf of the Baroness Saveria Scoppa.

"Giovanni Passaf. had the report of the attending physician, Mr. Ferdinando Cosentino, who, though very honest and skillful, is by no means a Pietist."

THE PHYSICIAN'S REPORT.

"The noble Baroness Saveria Scoppa, rather of good health, though over eighty years old, was attacked, by cause now counted for, with an inflammation on the back of her right thumb, which, through medical treatment, in a few days seemed perfectly cured. But on the 18th of March it broke out again with greater violence, and produced a large ulcer, causing pain, disappropriate to the locality of the disease, and accompanied by violent fever and headache. Taking into consideration the dangerous nature of the disease, and its violent pains in an old person, the physician suspected that a mortification might possibly supervene. In fact, in spite of all that medical art could suggest, on Saturday, March 23, alarming symptoms manifested themselves, such as numbness of swelling in the thumb, its getting cold, its assuming a black colour and being, a little later, followed by the stopping of the pulsation of the digital artery, and by the appearance of several blisters. These symptoms of incipient gangrene developed themselves more evidently on the following morning, so that it was deemed necessary to have a surgeon, whose effect was dreaded for fear of Sapping; not with the hope that he could cure the fatal disease, for it does not spare the life of those whom it attacks, especially old people, but only to leave his assistance. Meanwhile, the infirm Baroness' daughter, Maria Eugenia Scoppa, being in possession of some hairs of Pius IX., put some of them on the thumb affected by the fever, and begged Pius IX. to obtain her cure. The miracle was wrought almost instantaneously, for, on being visited by the physician at 2 o'clock, P. M., of the same day, the affected thumb was found greatly improved, to his great surprise; the blackish color had disappeared, the circulation and the natural heat were restored, and the ulcer was very much factory, so much so, that another dispatch was immediately sent to the surgeon to stay his journey.

"Science is inadequate to explain this wonderful fact, for senile gangrene cannot cure but kill, and, when it begins, it progresses can be stayed, this is always effected by amputating the infirm member. Hence, I, as a physician, in this special case gangrene was arrested in its course, and a perfect cicatrice formed in the affected thumb! We must surely cry out, to miracle, and have resource to the supernatural in order to explain the cure of the Baroness. The more better than Pius IX. could have wrought a miracle! And who more worthy to obtain a miracle than one whose life spent in piety and in beneficence, give her, I may say, a right to it?

"We testify to this fact without comments and without explanations, which would be useless and out of season, we accept reverently and gratefully the decrees of Divine Providence, which, as history of all time reaches us, does much more to confounder fallacies to point out its elects to mankind.

Translated from the Unità Cattolica of April 9, 1878.

BEATIFICATION OF PIUS IX.

The Unità Cattolica, of April 11, has the following dispatch from Rome:

ROME, April 10.

"The caused of the beatification of Pius IX. will be finished. The petition are already forthcoming from Italy and from abroad. Cause really wonderful are realized."

The Osservatore Romano has the following. A petition bearing the signatures of large number of the clergy, aristocracy and traders of Rome had been presented to his Eminence the Cardinal Vicar, to obtain the necessary authorizations, in order that one or more persons to be named may proceed together, in the name of Italy, to the many now existing important documents relating to the remarkable occurrences connected with the life of Pius IX. and his virtues, and that adopting the most available method, should be drawn up a formal process for the beatification of all the rights of an ordinary process in the case, which, it is to open that the process should be continued at a future time.

During the last ten years $106,000,000 have been paid into the Italian treasury, being the price of property stolen from the Church. And yet, or maybe because of this sacrilegious robbery, the Italian treasury is bankrupt, and the Government is continually imposing new taxes.

Prussian Protestantism.

While the Protestants of London have been talking themselves delirious over the conversion of the arch-heretic Wolffle, their brethren in Berlin have set forth a manifesto against Protestantism. The mass meeting held in the Prussian Capital, and attended by thousands, was rather a startling proof of what heresy has come to in the birthplace of modern error.

A "formula of reconciliation" of the Established Evangelical Church in Germany is receiving the signatures of the whole Lutheran world. And why should it not be so? Forty years ago Protestantism had been perfectly what we in England call pure infidelity, and there is no earthly reason why whole sections of reasonable beings should exercise the disinterested love of speculating to be followers of the hereditarch of Wittemberg, when he really had no more to offer than nothing but their own whim and fancy.

Hence, Protestantism in England is dead, in Germany it has ceased to exist even as a name, and there is only one way in which it can be revived, and in the Prussian empire this has already been attained. Tablet.

Poland.

Poland is at this moment one of the chief cares of the Holy Father. In that part of Poland which belongs to Russian condition of the Catholics is at this moment considerably worse than that of Christians under the Turks. Every day for the outbreak of the war. In Prussian Poland the Catholics are subject to harsher persecution than they are in other parts of the Prussian dominions. At a Catholic meeting recently held at Posen, the sufferings of Polish Catholics were represented in an address forwarded to his Holiness, and Prince Roman Czartoryski, who presided at the meeting, has received a reply from Cardinal Leadochowski, the exiled Primate of Poland, who submitted the address to the Holy Father. In this reply the Pontiff expresses the sole hope for the expressions of filial affection to the Holy See, the document concludes with the following words:

"The Holy Father feels confident that the Poles will ever distinguish themselves by their irreproachable fidelity to Catholic principles, and by their unshaken devotion to the Church which has their weal at heart.

There is no Catholic nation, save perhaps Ireland, that has remained faithful to the Church under greater difficulties than the noble sons of Sobieski.

The Greek Church.

An American paper, says the London Weekly Register, thus succinctly sets forth the difference between the Catholic Church and the Greek Church:

"The Greek Church believes in the Divine Trinity in the Unitarian. It denies the authority of the Pope, and maintains that the Roman Catholic Church is not the only true Catholic Church. It acknowledges no Vicar of Christ upon earth like the Pope; disclaims infallibility in the case of ecclesiastical councils; denies. It repudiate Purgatory, but admits of prayers for the dead, and forbids all kinds of carved images, but permits paintings. It denies the doctrine of the Immaculate Conception, and practices confession attended by absolution, and sanctimony penance. It admits the Seven Sacraments, but Baptism is performed by the immersion of the only three times in water, and the Communion of both kinds is practiced with leavened bread, and the wine is mixed with water. The anointing of the body is allowed to each person as a means of restoring them to health, and purifying them from their sins. The secular clergy are permitted to marry once, and only a virgin; bishops are allowed to marry only three times. The Greek, like the Catholic Church, accepts tradition as well as the Bible, but differs from the Latin Church in maintaining that the Holy Ghost proceeds only from the Father, and not also from the Son. The clergy are divided into classes the higher and the lower. The former comprises Patriarchs, Metropolitans, Archbishops and Bishops, all of whom are chosen from among the monks, and must live in celibacy. The other class of the clergy are the Priests and Deacons, who may be drawn from the other of their sires and marry, or, if widowed, live celibate. The lower secular clergy are the Archpriests, Priests, Deacons and Deaconesses, who, as well as the monks, follow the rule of S. Basil. The total number of persons belonging to the Greek Church is estimated at about 96,000,000, of whom 49,000,000 are in Russia, 12,000,000 in Turkey, 3,500,000 in Austria, 3,000,000 in Greece, 180,000 in the Ionian Islands, 125,000 in Montenegro, and about 3,000 in Prussia. The Greek number of Catholics in the world is estimated at rather more than 200,000,000."

Chinese Martyrs.

No steps have been taken by the government of Pekin to punish the murders of the Christians of the district of Lincheng-hsien, Western Shantung, China, during the persecution to which they were subjected during the Mohammedan rebellion, in 1862-3. During the continuance thirty nine Catholics were massacred at twenty-one stations, composed of three hundred families, the dwellings were burned and destroyed, which had Lincheng-hsien was reduced to the ground, four oratories in the country were demolished, and a pharmacy belonging to the Holy Childhood was pillaged. The Mandarins, who made no opposition to the vandalism of the rebels, have suffered every imaginable obstacle in he way of reparation.

Mgr. Benito Lancy Perez, Bishop of Orleda, which is held by Carlist state of all bishoprics at Cerdagna, the cradle of the Spanish monarchy. It will be built by national contributions, and will be dedicated to the Blessed Virgin, the patroness of Spanish Catholicity, and to the Blessed Virgin, under the title of the Immaculate Conception, and will be dedicated German Socialism.

Where there is misery among the masses a spirit of revolt against the powers that be is sure to prevail. This spirit of revolt is the essence of what goes by the name of Socialism. If this misery grows darker day by day; if natural and supernatural faith is being destroyed in the minds and hearts of the people; and if over all is a harsh and despotic power, without strongholds and sparks accordingly. Such is the position of Socialism in Germany.

We called attention to vast crowds that attended the funeral of a Socialist agitator in Berlin recently, the capital of modern Caesarism. There were women in the crowd, and when Socialism begins to lay hold of the women it is a very bad sign. In February last about 1,200 women, the wives and daughters of artisans, met in a dancing saloon in Berlin, to discuss the principles of religion and property. They discussed those important principles in a manner worthy of Socialist women. Frau Hahn, quite a distinguished Socialist agitatress, was elected chairman, or chairwoman rather. A few men had sneaked in timidly, among them Herr Most, member of parliament, journeyman book-binder, editor, a man described as of "unquestionable talent," and a decidedly handsome man to boot. And handsome men have still an influence over even Socialist women, to which ugly men can not aspire. Herr Most is, moreover, a leader in the Socialist ranks. His speech was argumentative and theoretical at first, but naturally that went nowhere with the women. Observing how coldly his argument was received by his fair audience, with the instinct of a natural orator, he at once changed his tack. He had been imprisoned for his Socialistic views. His appeals to the ladies whose hearts he had a devil deserving condign punishment. The ladies looked at the handsome speaker and cried "shame" on the government. He paid them back in their own coin, and diluted on the importance of women in human society. He ridiculed the theory of the creation of woman out of Adam's rib and the women agreed with him and cried "Sir" at so bold a pedigree. He with equal ease disposed of other "Biblical Fables," pitched into the clergy and the "Church" generally, and drawing an eloquent contrast between the social lots of the lady baroness and the bricklayer's wife, took his audience by storm.

The applause at the close of Herr Most's speech was so great and the excitement so intense that a lady member proposed an adjournment for hour. The motion was negatived without a division; or rather an amendment was carried to the effect that the hour must be handed round, which was accordingly done.

Frau Hahn gave the story of her leaving "the Church"—a Protestant Church—and becoming a Socialist. It was, in brief, hunger and misery. "I am an honest woman and can look everybody in the face, and find it easy to do without Bible and parson. "As to my sister, I told her that if her two girls were baptized, they had not the last of my coin." In this matter of baptism, the government, against which she and her husband suffer so strongly enough, are in accord with Frau Hahn. Other ladies followed the same speaker in a similar strain.

Herr. Dr. Wagemann, chief of the Berlin African Mission, managed to obtain a hearing, so far as to show the civilizing influence of Christianity on Negro and barbarous nations. But he stood in chance against Herr Most, who told him "it was high time to leave a religion which talked of charity but did not practice it, and Frau Hahn answered her audience in the course of a furious harangue that she hated all parsons, in whom pious sentiments she would fain see.

The male Socialists held a meeting in another part of the city. There were about 8,000 present, and the 8,000 also fall foul of religion and parsons. Herr Most again shone, and pelled the Bible to pieces, in his way. "The more parsons, the more lies," proclaimed Herr Most. He declared that he has lived like an a Roman Catholic, and when a boy was beaten by a priest for not going to confession, from which fact, if true, the obvious comment is, that Most must have had exceptional cause for confession. However, he declared that he had never since been in a church. "It was satisfactory," to Herr Most, "to see that in all the larger German towns, church-goers had dwindled down to a small minority, and that the whole thing was evidently dying out."

The sort of thing excites more than laughter. It presents a very grave problem to the Christian as well as to the legislator. An infidel government has itself to thank for the devil which it raised to destroy the Catholics, and which it is powerless now to lay. "Who made us love our country?" asked a Socialist paper boldly in Berlin the other day, and proceeded to give very cogent reasons, drawn from present circumstances, to show why Germans should not love their country. The reasons were cogent enough, at least to poor and aggrieved men, possessing as they do a very solid substratum of truth. "This modern patriotism," said the writer of the article, "is nothing but a means, cunningly reserved to be ruling classes to hound race against race, and bleed the dangerous mob from time to time."

Up to 1869 it is alleged by those who examined the matter, that Socialism, in its present aspect at least, hardly existed in Germany. Dr. Lassalle, an enthusiastic and gifted young Frenchman, carried it from Paris to Berlin. He found ready subjects, and was aided by the German politicians, who seem to know no such thing as principle, and who, at the time, were anxious for political ends to set the workingmen against the middle classes. Just as in later conflicts the Government used Socialism against the Catholics. After failing twice, the Socialists in 1871 collected 120,000 votes and returned two members to the German Parliament. The Government saw the coming danger and bribed them, Bismarck himself being the most emphatic and solemn in his warnings. In 1874 they had 500,000 votes and nine members; in 1877 they registered 497,000 votes and sent twelve members of Parliament. In 1877 the number of enfranchised electors in Germany was 8,943,000. At their present rate of progress where are Socialists likely to stop?

The Socialistic societies, that is, the organized body, are only 100,000; but they are assisted pecuniarily and otherwise by many hundreds of thousands. The money spent in agitation of their propaganda is believed to amount to over $75,000 annually. In 1869 they had six journals, they now have fifty, and flood the country with pamphlets, tracts, etc. The wisest are blind who have not the eye of faith. Prince Bismarck began his reign by throwing the Catholic Church, calling in the thief at his side to assist him. The thief has grown in strength and threatens now to throttle Bismarck. The next fight will be between these two, if Prince Bismarck lives long enough to see it out.

Freemasonry.

The condemnation by the Church of secret societies derives its sanction from the divine wisdom which inspires the Spouse of Christ, and all true Catholics bow in humble submission to the teachings of the Sovereign Pontiffs on this momentous question. Freemasonry, like its patron, Lucifer, stands at the head of those anti-christ societies which wage war on the Church of God by secret plottings and open violence. It is the leader of the rebels, and all the other condemned associations are founded on its principles and governed by its code of morals.

Freemasonry is the same all over the world, and everywhere it bears the same brand of condemnation. The Freemasonry of France is not different from that of the United States. Both are under the special patronage of the Prince of Darkness; they are equally dangerous, equally condemned and equally proscribed by the Church of God, which is "the pillar and the ground of truth."

In France the Freemasons are preparing to celebrate the centenary of the infamous Voltaire. He is their high priest and hero.

The members of the Masonic order in this country may say that they have nothing in common with their brethren in Paris, and their apologists may assert that they, at least, Freemasonry is purely a beneficent association. We answer that they are united by the bond of hostility to the Church of God, and no one who values the love of religion can have anything to do with them.

When Catholics say that they can see no harm in Freemasonry they forget that God established His Church for the purpose of dispensing His graces and saving souls by Divine agency, which annulates the Spouse of Christ, speaking by "the mouths" of the Popes, tells Christians that Freemasonry is dangerous and unlawful, and that is enough for all who hear the Church and recognize the voice of its infallible head.

There are, we regret to say, a class of men who, while professing the Catholic faith, lean towards the new heresy of Liberalism and say that the authorities at Rome cannot correctly judge of the state of society in the United States, and are therefore incompetent to legislate for it. This is a lamentable error, and is fraught with untold danger.

In this matter, Liberal Catholics confound general with local laws, and in the confusion tear the seamless mantle of truth in which Christ clothed His spouse. These are the victims of intellectual pride have not even the excuse of the Deicide Jews; for the Catechism teaches them that he who will not hear the Church is as a heathen. They are self, in truth, Catholics. They have no right to that glorious title; and their place is among the sects which sprung from the Reformation.

The condemnation of Freemasonry is founded on its immoral and infidel tendencies. Its protestants are impious and absurd. As Frederick Schlegel remarks: "Any secret spiritual association, diffused at once among Christians and Mohammedans, cannot be of a very Christian nature. Any continuance so. Nay, the very idea of an esoteric society for the propagation of any secret doctrines is not compatible with the very principle of Christianity itself, for Christianity is a divine revelation, which, according to the intention of its Divine Founder, lies open to all, and is daily exposed to all."

History tells us that Freemasonry was born with irreligion, and keeps pace with its progress. Freemasonry is, in truth, the the devil's substitute for the religion of Jesus, and pretends to be the possessor of a better means of securing human happiness than that established by our Saviour. In an article on "Secret Societies in the United States," in the American Catholic Quarterly Review, Bishop Becker quotes the following words of the late Archbishop Spalding of Baltimore, who answered a Mason's letter asking why the Catholic Church condemned the Order, by saying: "This is done for many solid reasons, chief among which is the fact that Masonry is the very best human and natural counterfeit aiming to supersede our divinely-revealed and supernatural religion."

It is frequently said that Freemasonry is entitled to credit for its works of charity. We must bear in mind that its charity is restricted to the brethren of the Order—a restriction utterly repugnant to the spirit of Christianity and its founder, who wished all men to be saved and come to the knowledge of the truth.

The only true way to judge of Freemasonry in the United States is to look at its effects on Catholics who join it. It is unfortunately true that some members of the Church belong to the Order; but if investigations were made, it would be found that in every case they have become Freemasons to benefit their business or advance their political interests. Whatever may be their motive, they should sever all connection with the condemned society and become obedient children of the Church.

No one will deny that the Popes have never been remarkable for rash legislation, and on this subject of secret societies we have, as Dr. Murray, of Maynooth College, remarks, the Constitution of Clement XII., In eminente, 1738; of Benedict XIV., Providas, 1751; of Pius VII., Bonisacra a Jesu Christo; of Leo XII., Quo Graviora.

Among the grounds of condemnation in the Constitution of 1821 and 1825 were the furious and satanic hatred which the Freemasons entertained for the Vicar of Christ, their secret league of murder, their avowed atheism, their conspiracy against all the legitimate authority in the State as well as in the Church. The Sovereign Pontiff affirms that these hideous and hellish developments were made known to him under the most authentic sources of information. But the Catholic Freemason will say, "I know better; there is no danger, and on the Masonic order in America." Possibly not; but there remains the danger, and on the respectable supposition of that danger religion would make Freemasonry unlawful. — Catholic Herald.

A curious candle used in Alaska is a fish eight inches long, almost transparent, and very fat, the fat being pure white and very sweet. The Indians dry this fish, then light it at the tail, and it burns with a clear sparkling flame, which the wind will not extinguish.

To be able to bear provocation is an argument of great wisdom; and to forgive it, of a great mind.

HATS, CAPS, ETC.

KASKEL'S

ONE PRICE HAT STORE.

No. 423 Kearney Street,

BET. PIST AND CALIFORNIA. SAN FRANCISCO.

Reasons why we should buy our Hats of

KASKEL'S.

1.—He imports his entire stock from first hands, and buys for CASH.
2.—He receives his Hats from the manufacturers direct, and therefore keeps only the latest styles.
3.—Paying Cash to manufacturers, he is able to sell goods less by than 20 per cent. Hence,
4.—He positively has only ONE PRICE, and can with safety buy your goods, and be assured that your neighbor will not buy cheaper than yourself.
5.—A child will be as safe to send for his purchase as the closest buyer. mh7tf

HERRMANN

Sells More

HATS

Than any Store in Town.

BECAUSE

He gives the best for the Money.

402 KEARNY

AND 910 MARKET STREET.

mh4 2m

MISCELLANEOUS.

D. CANTY & CO.

WHOLESALE AND RETAIL

CONFECTIONERS,

No. 107 Montgomery st.,

San Francisco.

Fresh, Pure and Wholesome

CANDIES

Of all kinds, manufactured daily, from the best materials, and warranted to be free from all diseases

PRICES LOW, TERMS LIBERAL.

Country orders Promptly and Carefully filled. 2mar tf

THE LIGHT RUNNING "DOMESTIC" SEWING MACHINE,

The Only Light Running Lock Stitch Sewing Machine

IN THE MARKET.

"DOMESTIC" PAPER FASHIONS,

Elegant, Stylish and Reliable.

CATALOGUES FREE.

J. W. EVANS,

29 Post Street, S. F.

Mechanics' Institute Building.

21mar2m

CARPETS.

NEWEST AND LATEST STYLES

—IN—

Axminster, Body and Tapestry,

JUST ARRIVED.

JOS. FREDERICKS & CO.

(Formerly of Hardie & Fredericks,)

649 and 651 Market Street,

OPPOSITE KEARNY.

15apr tf

J. CALLAGHAN

Real Estate and Insurance Agent

AND

Notary Public for Alameda Co.

Houses Rented, Rents Collected, Loans Negotiated. Investments made for Parties at a Distance on reasonable terms.

OFFICE 424 NINTH ST.,

Oakland-Alameda Co., Cal.

mr23

JOE POHEIM,

MERCHANT TAILOR,

No. 203 Montgomery St.

Under the Rossi House ..... San Francisco.

Business Suits Made to order in Twenty-four Hours ..... from $20 00
Pants Made to Order in Twenty-four Hours ..... from $5 00
Fine Diagonal, Cassimere and Scotch Cheviot Suits to Order ..... from $25 to $45
Fine Dress Suits to Order ..... from 40 to 50

Perfect Fit Guaranteed by Joe Poheim, the Great Artist and Cutter from New York.

Branch Store, - 103 Third Street.

mr23

Mc MILLS CREAM YEAST POWDER

POUNDS 40 OZS. PRICE 25 CTS.

GLOBES.

5, 3, 6, 10, 12, 16 and 30 in. in diam. Send for Catalogue. H. R. Nye & Co., Troy, N. Y.

1y30

BOOTS AND SHOES.

T. J. BRODERICK,

112 Third Street,

Bet. Mission & Minna, San Francisco.

A full assortment of

Ready-Made and Made-to-Order

BEST CUSTOM-MADE BOOTS AND SHOES.

The best CHILDREN'S SCHOOL SHOES a specialty. Boots and Shoes made to order. mr16

DEASY BRO'S,

MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS IN

BOOTS & SHOES

LADIES AND GENTS' BOOTS AND SHOES made to order. A full assortment of United Workingmen Boots and Shoes constantly on hand. Repairing neatly done.

121 Third Street, between Mission and Howard Street. 15ap-6m

KAST'S

Fashionable Shoe Store

HAS REMOVED TO

Corner Market and Dupont Sts

BOOTS AND SHOES

JOHN SULLIVAN, NORTHEAST COR. of Battery and Jackson streets, offers made to order the best French Calf Leather BOOTS at from $8 to $9; California Leather Boots, $6; French Calf Oxford Ties, $4; Oxfords, $3 50.

Boys' and Childrens' Boots and Shoes made order.

Persons in the country ordering Boots or Shoes to the amount of twelve dollars or more will be allowed a reduction of four per cent, so as to make the express charge light. Boots and Shoes of MY OWN MANUFACTURE ONLY. Boots and Shoes sent C. O. D. Positively one price. my1

C. L. STREET, MANUFACTURER OF

BOOT AND SHOE

STORE,

2508 MISSION STREET,

Near Twenty-first Street ..... San Francisco.

Ladies' and Gents' Boots and Shoes made to order. Repairing neatly done.

N. B.—Positively no business transacted on the Sabbath.

Men's Working Shoes, $50
Boots from $5 00 to $8 00
Soleing and Heeling, 90

AT R. MAI,

1000 Folsom street, two doors east. Fred. ja27

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA INEZ COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED ON the eastern slope of the San Rafael mountains, two miles in a direct line, from the ocean, and twelve miles by stage from Gaviota Landing. There is no more healthy spot in the world. The climate is like that of the Italian Valleys. Fogs of low rank, stagnant and heavy, give to the plains and valleys of Southern Europe the name of malaria. The air is warm, invigorating while in other parts of the Sister State, it adds an additional charm to the grateful shades of Santa Inez. What healthy city opponents for the abatement of health? Thus that in which healthy and sublimely endowed for the maturity, since the gently rounded hills and undulating plateaus are gladded at the feet of the rugged mountains, where the liberal distribution of the hills hasten to swell the Santa Ana, and the hollows found the fertile and the flower is strewed to the joyous songs of nature's lyre. The quiet influence of Christian spirit, which is breathed in such a place is indeed calculated to cause the mind to "look through nature up to nature's God."

The usefulness and salubrity of the climate of Santa Barbara has ever attracted to the medical profession. There are few invalids who have for a season visited the beautiful City by the Sea, but tified and varied scenery of this county, who have not returned improved in health and with a new mind. In view of these facts Santa Inez College may be safely recommended as a most desirable boarding school.

Of recent date Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop the Brothers have just taken charge of the College, and intend opening it to boys over the age of eight and sixteen will be received for parentage. Trains leave San Francisco. Steamers make regular trips from San Pedro close to Gaviota. 1872

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State, of which San Jose is the centre of business, will commence the second term for the scholastic year on the 3rd of January, 1878. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS.

Entrance, fee to be paid but once $15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter 60 00
Washing, per quarter 12 50
Physician's fee, unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness 2 50
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but there is no extra charge for French, Spanish or German languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.

Payments are required to be made half a week in advance. Pupils will find it to their advantage to be present at the opening of the term.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE.

SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL SESSION will commence Tuesday, August 7th. This venerable institution, founded in 1851, and in 1852 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies its large buildings, with extensive shady play-grounds, covered gymnasiums, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Photography and Commercial Business. The Museum of Natural History, 1864-69 has just been finished, that leaves nothing to be desired.

Diplomas are given in two departments: the Literary Diploma and Certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually in advance.)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once $ 15 00
Board, Tuition, Washing, Bed and Bedding, Lights, Medical Attendance, Use of Linen, School Stationery, medical attendance and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session of five months 350 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, Santa Clara College, 841 Market street, San Francisco.

REV. A. BRUNNEGG, S. J.,

President.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

BENICIA ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in the healthy and agreeable town of Benicia.

The scholastic year comprises ten months, opens on the 16th of August, and ends about the middle of June.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly).

Board and Tuition $225 00
Entrance Fee 10 00
Washing 45 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $30.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

The Expressage on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the Lady Superior. SISTER ST. PETER'S.

1y19

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE,

344 Jessie St., bet. Fourth & Fifth,

SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS LITERARY INSTITUTION WAS incorporated, according to the laws of the State, on March 26th of April, 1855, and empowered to confer academical degrees with "such literary honors as are granted by any University in the United States."

The design of the Institution is to give a thorough Classical, Mathematical and Philosophical education. This, besides the classical, there is also, a Commercial Course.

The College is intended for day-scholars only.

TERMS PER MONTH

(Payable in advance).

Tuition, in Preparatory Department $3 00
" in Grammar Department 5 00
" in Higher Department 8 00

EXTRA CHARGES:

For the use of Instruments, on Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, first year, per month $3 00
For the use of Instruments, etc., second year, per month 5 00
For each Accidental Decree 10 00

REV. JOHN PINASCO, S. J.,

President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are spacious, and the building is large and convenient.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education, Spanish and Latin.

TERMS:

(Invariably half yearly in advance)

Board, tuition, bed and bedding, washing, etc., per annum $200 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month, $6 50 ..... 66 25
Guitar, per month, $5 ..... 52 50

No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the 1st Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to

SISTERS OF CHARITY,

Santa Barbara, Cal.

1y30

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

OF SAN FRANCISCO,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1866, chartered in 1868 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and incorporated under the Collegiate Act, is situated on Dolores street, opposite the Old Mission Church.

A large addition has recently been erected for the more ample accomodation of boarding pupils.

The course of instruction embraces all the studies necessary to the acquisition of a solid and finished education.

Parents in sending their children to the care of the Sisters, may feel perfectly satisfied that every attention will be given—to their intellectual and moral culture, while the system of government combines sufficient firmness, with maternal solicitude, to insure the real progress and advantage of the pupils.

The Twelfth Annual Session will commence Thursday, July 19, 1877.

TERMS:

Per quarter session, (payable in advance)

Board, tuition, washing, and use of bed and bedding $65 00
Music, with use of instrument 15 00
Vocal Music 5 00
Drawing and Painting 5 00
Vacation spent at the Academy 25 00

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (in advance)

Elementary Classes $5 00
Grammar Classes 4 00
Preparatory Classes 3 00
Primary Classes 2 00

Those pupils residing at a distance from the College, and boarding with the Sisters, will be provided therewith at a trifling expense. For this and other particulars apply to the Lady Superior.

N. B.—No extra charge for French and all kinds of Fancy Work. Needle-work. 1a5

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,

OAKLAND ..... CALIFORNIA

Conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary

THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY situated between Webster street and Lake Merritt, commanding an extensive frontage on the lake. The building, recently erected, is supplied with all the modern improvements; no expense having been spared to provide for the comfort of the inmates.

The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.

TERMS:

(payable half yearly in advance).

Board and tuition (French and Spanish included) $250 00
Washing 50 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the institution) 10 00
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.

For further particulars apply to

MOTHER SUPERIOR.

1y36

ACADEMY OF ST. AGNES,

STOCKTON, CAL.

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

Directed by the Dominican Sisters

TERMS.

Entrance fee (to be paid but once) ..... $ 10 00
Board, tuition, washing, bed and bedding, scholastic year 225 00
Music 50 00
Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.

Parents are required to be made half-yearly in advance.

For further information apply to

M. RAYMONDA, Sister Superiorss.

CONVENT OF

The Immaculate Heart of Mary,

FOR THE

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per annum $200
Entrance fee, to be paid but once 10
Music on Piano, per annum 25
French 25

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

Primary, per month $2 00
Elementary and Senior, per month 3 00
Tuition on Piano, " 6 00
French, " 3 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

N. B.—The above establishment is also the novitiate of the Order.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to the Superiorss. ap24

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

Conducted by the Christian Bros.

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.

Great care paid to insure good morals taught in the College, our own language receive special attention. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the class room.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR:

(Payable half yearly in advance).

Board, Tuition and Washing $250 00
Entrance Fee 10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines 10 00
Vacation at College 50 00
Day Students 50 00

Music and Drawing form extra charges.

For further particulars apply to

BROTHER JUSTIN, President.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE.

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

CHARTERED IN 1869, AND CONTINUED by the private care of the Congregation of the Mission. Terms for scholastic year, $280.

For further particulars apply to

REV. E. HUBLY, C. M., President.

MT. ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,

CONDUCTED BY THE

SISTERS OF St. Dominic,

RENO, NEVADA.

For particulars address

MOTHER SUPERIOR.

LATE IRISH NEWS.

The Great Educational Meeting.

We need not remind our readers that today in the Round Room of the Rotunda—the largest space of the San Rafael mountains, two miles in a direct line, from the ocean, and twelve miles by stage from Gaviota Landing. There is no more healthy spot in the world. The climate is like that of the Italian Valleys. Fogs of low rank, stagnant and heavy, give to the plains and valleys of Southern Europe the name of malaria. The air is warm, invigorating while in other parts of the Sister State, it adds an additional charm to the grateful shades of Santa Inez. What healthy city opponents for the abatement of health? Thus that in which healthy and sublimely endowed for the maturity, since the gently rounded hills and undulating plateaus are gladded at the feet of the rugged mountains, where the liberal distribution of the hills hasten to swell the Santa Ana, and the hollows found the fertile and the flower is strewed to the joyous songs of nature's lyre. The quiet influence of Christian spirit, which is breathed in such a place is indeed calculated to cause the mind to "look through nature up to nature's God."

The usefulness and salubrity of the climate of Santa Barbara has ever attracted to the medical profession. There are few invalids who have for a season visited the beautiful City by the Sea, but tified and varied scenery of this county, who have not returned improved in health and with a new mind. In view of these facts Santa Inez College may be safely recommended as a most desirable boarding school.

Of recent date Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop the Brothers have just taken charge of the College, and intend opening it to boys over the age of eight and sixteen will be received for parentage. Trains leave San Francisco. Steamers make regular trips from San Pedro close to Gaviota. 1872

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME.

SAN—SOE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State, of which San Jose is the centre of business, will commence the second term for the scholastic year on the 3rd of January, 1878. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS

Entrance, fee to be paid but once $15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter 60 00
Washing, per quarter 12 50
Physician's fee, unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness 2 50
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but there is no extra charge for French, Spanish or German languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.

Payments are required to be made half a week in advance. Pupils will find it to their advantage to be present at the opening of the term.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE.

SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL SESSION will commence Tuesday, August 7th. This venerable institution, founded in 1851, and in 1852 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies its large buildings, with extensive shady play-grounds, covered gymnasiums, swimming pool, etc. It possesses a complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, practical schools of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Photography and Commercial Business. The Museum of Natural History, 1864-69 has just been finished, that leaves nothing to be desired.

Diplomas are given in two departments: the Literary Diploma and Certificates in the Commercial course.

TERMS:

(Payable semi-annually in advance)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once $ 15 00
Board, Tuition, Washing, Bed and Bedding, Lights, Medical Attendance, Use of Linen, School Stationery, medical attendance and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session of five months 350 00

For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, Santa Clara College, 841 Market street, San Francisco.

REV. A. BRUNNEGG, S. J.,

President.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

BENICIA ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and is situated in the healthy and agreeable town of Benicia.

The scholastic year comprises ten months, opens on the 16th of August, and ends about the middle of June.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly).

Board and Tuition $225 00
Entrance Fee 10 00
Washing 45 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $30.

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

The Expressage on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the Lady Superior. SISTER ST. PETER'S.

1y19

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE,

344 Jessie St., bet. Fourth & Fifth,

SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS LITERARY INSTITUTION WAS incorporated, according to the laws of the State, on March 26th of April, 1855, and empowered to confer academical degrees with "such literary honors as are granted by any University in the United States."

The design of the Institution is to give a thorough Classical, Mathematical and Philosophical education. This, besides the classical, there is also, a Commercial Course.

The College is intended for day-scholars only.

TERMS PER MONTH

(Payable in advance).

Tuition, in Preparatory Department $3 00
" in Grammar Department 5 00
" in Higher Department 8 00

EXTRA CHARGES:

For the use of Instruments, on Natural Philosophy and Chemistry, first year, per month $3 00
For the use of Instruments, etc., second year, per month 5 00
For each Accidental Decree 10 00

REV. JOHN PINASCO, S. J.,

President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are spacious, and the building is large and convenient.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education, Spanish and Latin.

TERMS:

(Invariably half yearly in advance)

Board, tuition, bed and bedding, washing, etc., per annum $200 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month, $6 50 ..... 66 25
Guitar, per month, $5 ..... 52 50

No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the 1st Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to

SISTERS OF CHARITY,

Santa Barbara, Cal.

1y30

The Late Lord Leitrim.

"Truthful Tommy" tells the following story in Truth about the late Lord Leitrim, which, he says, a gentleman told him: "One of his tenants, a Scotchman, spent a deal of time and money draining and hedging his holding. His landlord happened to pass by one day and immediately turned on the land when he saw the improvements. 'How you my others for doing that! 'No, my lord.' 'Very well, this is Saturday. 'If you have not got those drains filled out and those hedges pulled down on Monday out you go.' Not a very long life and very pithy conversation. The man was in despair and went for advice to the priest. 'All right, my boy,' said his reverence. 'I'll make it right for you. I'll go down to his lordship's house to-morrow and see what I'll do for you.' A very short sojourn was the result, and when the priest left the room he was the Scotchman's holding, followed by the whole congregation, armed with picks, spades, and shovels, and by Monday morning not a vestige remained of the improvements. When Lord Leitrim arrived he was utterly amazed, but not more amazed than delighted. His whim was an expensive one, for he paid out of his own pocket the cost of the single tiling remains which had by his orders been demolished." Nation.

THE MILITIA RESERVE.—The men enlisted in the reserve of the local militia regiments reported themselves on Saturday in pretty full numbers at the different headquarters. It is yet too soon to know how many men of the reserve are actual defaulters. The reserve men of the North Cork Militia assembled at Buttevant, those of the South Cork at Fermoy, of the City of Cork Artillery Militia at Elizabeth Fort, Cork, and of the West Cork Artillery at Kinsale. A scene of great excitement was witnessed at the Cork terminus of the Great Southern and Western Railway on Saturday evening as a large number of men came to a station to report themselves. The platform was crowded by the relations and friends of the men, who, for a quarter of an hour before the train started, kept up a continuous lamentation. The excitement, confusion, and disorder were all most beyond description. Many of the poor fellows have large families, and it was a painful sight to witness their tears and hear As the train was about to start, the porters, after undergoing a rather severe exploding of pulling about, managed to shut the carriage doors, but immediately it was found that several of the Reserve men were on the platform. A general rush was made for the windows, and those who were not yet "on board" were forced in at the imminent risk of breaking their necks, and situating other injuries. It was ten times worse than the departure of the Dublin and Kingstown train when the train left. Our Kinsale correspondent writes—For the past week the Reserves of the 3rd Cork Militia Artillery have been filling up the ranks of that corps on the Barrack Square at Kinsale, and now assume a new rig. A finer or more soldier-like body of men could not be desired.

RICHARD POLITICAL PRISONERS' TESTIMONIAL FUND.—Irishmen in Toronto.—The Executive Committee met recently at the Home Rule Hall, 68 Shaw Street, and formed. It was announced that Mr. Parnell might probably have to go to America for a short time. Mr. Power had few cases," we read, "have absentees reached the proportion of five per cent. and the excuses on account of sickness have been remarkably few." When, however, it is remembered that the whole force the majority of the men are not equal to a single division of a Russian army, the importance of these announcements is considerably diminished.

If war should come between Russia and England, the latter power will not have it all her own way on the high seas. Steps have been taken under the most influential auspices to fit out privateers to prey on Englishmen's commerce. A meeting in Moscow recently, over which the Governor General of the province presided, and which was attended by the Mayor and other high officers, it was unanimously resolved that each province of the empire should equip a privateer to prey on the commerce of the British fleet. The captain, for instance, proposes for a million to build a fleet of small cruisers, and, if the money be found, the water, will be propelled by a force hitherto unknown, and will in no months have shown every English vessel afloat into the air or the sea. This man may not be able to perform his undertaking, but the mere fact that such a proposal is published in influential organs of Russian opinion is surely very significant. Cork Examiner.

On Lord Leitrim.

The Irish peasant has a passionate attachment for the home in which he was born. They who have seen his home, the humble cabin of his birth to go in quest of fortune in other lands, know how he has very heart, and how he lingers farewell to the spot which has been consecrated by his joys. This weakness of his character was not unknown to his hands, the effectual instrument of his oppression. The Irish peasant loves his home, but his children are still closer to his affections. Lord Leitrim was not content to deprive his tenants of their rights, he condemned a further sacrifice, and that was one which struck at the purity and virtue of their homes. We should be sorry to tell the story of the life of this dissolute man, but many a mother's heart has been broken, and her gray hairs brought to the grave in sorrow, lamenting the disgrace and ruin of the flower of her household—fallen, a victim to the wiles of the cruel profligate. Not long ago he destined the daughter of a tenant to a position in his harem; but the advance were unfavorable, and he was forced to yield. On the elevation of the Rev. Dominick Murphy to the position of Dean of Cloyne, and his transfer from Bandon to this city, Father O'Brien was appointed to Bandon.—Cork Correspondent of Freeman.

Cardinal Manning at a Great Temperance Meeting.

LONDON, TUESDAY NIGHT, April 23.—The annual meeting of the Catholic Temperance League of the Cross which is usually held on St. Patrick's Day, but was this year postponed on account of the absence of Cardinal Manning from London, took place tonight in Exeter Hall. The meeting was well filled long before the hour named for taking the chair, and the various temperance societies were represented by their bands and banners. The Cardinal, who was accompanied to the platform by Mr. A. M. Sullivan, M.P., Chevalier O'Clery, M. P., Mr. W. J. Redmond, M. P., and about 20 clergymen of the archdiocese, hended a large number of influential laymen, was received with great applause on appearing.

The Rev. Dr. Johnson having read a congratulatory address from the clerical and lay members of the League of the Cross,

Cardinal Manning expressed his thanks for the affectionate terms of the address. He said that he little thought that when he left them in the autumn of last year such a long time would pass before he saw his flock again. Still it was the intention had been fulfilled, he would have lost that which was one of his greatest consolations—the happiness of sitting in the confessional of our beloved father Pius IX. of being with him to his last moment, when he gave up his noble and saintly soul into the hands of his maker. That was a moment solemn and sweet, one which never could happen save only when a Pontiff went to his rest; and never had any Pontiff received so large a personality, or so lovingly over the hearts of the whole world as our Holy Father, the saintly Pius the Ninth. That was the first occas

AGRICULTURAL.

Condition of the State.

The farmers of California, induced by the hopes of future profits, are planting the black-walnut trees very extensively. The demand for that kind of lumber is very great, and the supply is giving out.

All the varieties of raspberry and blackberry are being introduced by our farmers. At this rate they will soon be independant of the towns so far as food is concerned, though many of them still send to the cities for their vegetables.

The cultus is again being talked about. The cost of cultivating and preparing the leaf for market is so great that our people see no possible profit in that branch of industry. This fact discourages the industry. Should a tea gin, some machine corresponding to the cotton gin, be invented, tea culture would become a practical subject for discussion. And it is believed that California would then become a great tea-producing State. We are waiting for the inventor.

Farmers from all parts of the State are rejoicing in the vigorous growth of wheat and barley, though a few, as usual, growl and predict a dangerous overgrowth of stalk.

Exchanges claim that the fruit crop this year will be more than ordinary large and abundant, it is rather late for heavy and dangerous frosts, and the orchardists feel safe. Grape vines are progressing rapidly and vineyardists are joyous.

Gardening time is at hand. People are now preparing to plant new seed and give their flower beds a general overhauling, trimming and ornamenting.

The Kern County Courier says that in that county new-born alfalfa has already the appearance of a new crop, and it will require cutting next month. The frequent warm showers have advanced its growth so fast that it will be ready for harvest before anything ever before known in that county.

The interior press is discussing the subject of small farms, taking as a text an editorial of the Bee. It is admitted that the large farms are neither profitable to the owners nor to the State. California will yet be a country noted for its small farms, and then California will realize the calculations of the statistician and support a population of 10,000,000. Death, disaster and good laws will bring this about.

A widespread effort is now being made to plant dry and desert lands with alfalfa. It stands the drouth well, better indeed than Scotch, and experiments already made give hops of great success. Industry and patience will utilize every inch of California soil.

The Angora goat interest is flourishing in the foot hills, and is found to be regularly profitable. The El Dorado Republican says, as soon as people understand the value of this interest "California will be in a fair way to supplant Asia in this line of traffic.

Sheep shearing has begun, though in many instances the sheep owners have lowered the shearers' wages, and they are holding off for old prices.—Sacramento Bee.

Hints About a Garden for the Farmer.—

W. M. K. writes out a few hints in the Farm and Fireside, relative to the arrangement of a garden for the farmer:

There ought to be a good garden on every farm. Not a little space fenced in with or without pickets, so small that all the cultivation except the plowing must be done by hand. There should not be less than half an acre. It should be long and narrow so that almost all the cultivation can be done with a horse. Set apart one rectangular piece of the land nearest the house for small fruit. Then a strip four paces wide; also one at the farthest end of the garden which to turn when cultivating with the hoeing. Keep the strips in grass or plant with perennials. Leave a path six feet in width from the house to the main garden. Plant no fruit trees within the enclosure.

The asparagus beds which need no after cultivation should be the first ones as you enter the garden. A single row planted eighteen inches apart in the centre of a bed four feet in width will yield abundantly. Give them each fall with four inches of well rotted manure and one bushel of salt. Plant one row of Linnæus or Victoria rhubarb five feet from the row of asparagus and three feet apart in the row. Top-dress annually with manure and. Over four feet from the rhubarb, plant four rows of strawberries. Let the rows be three and a half feet apart and the plants eighteen inches apart in the row. Set only the strong growth varieties, such as Charles Downing, Downer's Prolific, Monarch of the West, Springdale, Triumph of Cumberland, Colonel Cheney, Kentucky or the Captain Jack, a seedling of the Wilson Albany, and a remarkably vigorous growth of. Five feet from the last row, plant half a row of gooseberries and half a row of white currants, three feet apart in the row. Four feet, five feet distant, a row of red currants the same distance apart in the row. Next set four rows of raspberries in rows of six feet, the plants being three feet apart in the row. Let one row be Doolittle's Improved Black Cap, one of the Mammoth Cluster or Miami, one of the Philadelphia red, and another of the Turner red raspberry. Eight feet distant set a row of the Kittatinny blackberry plants, placing them three feet apart in the row. Set four rows of this variety eight feet apart.

The small fruits will thus occupy a space between the house and the open garden of about one hundred feet. Such a plan would give to every family of twelve persons an abundant supply of vegetables and small fruits, and enough to can and dry for winter use. Poor inches annually of well rotted manure on the open garden would not be any too much. The small fruits should be kept very well cultivated and mulched each fall with a good coating of partly decayed leaves, weeds and other trash. Care should be taken to cover the crowns of the strawberry plants very lightly.

Should one prefer to plant the small fruits so as to make continuous rows the entire length of the garden, then one six tenth part of the garden beginning at one end could be planted, allowing a proper proportion of the different fruits as already indicated. That is as the rows in the open garden would be two and a half feet apart the currants, gooseberries and raspberry plants should be set in rows five feet apart and the blackberry plants seven and a half feet.

After fitting the ground for seeds ard laying off the rows perfectly straight two and a half feet apart, begin at one end and plant all the seeds of one kind you wish, and continue with other kinds until the work is done. Planted in this way the cultivator will enable one to do nearly all the hoeing required. One hour's time each week will be sufficient during summer. There is nothing to hinder any farmer from having lettuce, asparagus, radishes and rhubarb by the last of March or the first of April, followed by gooseberries, currants, strawberries, raspberries, blackberries and early peas and other vegetables. If desired, the expense of a four wire picket fence is inconsiderable when compared with what would be due to be paid out for medicine during the year where a large family attempts to live on a too limited supply of fruits and vegetables.

Raising Ducks.

Ducks, clever as they are at taking care of themselves, are somewhat difficult to manage, as far as "good luck" with eggs is concerned. The wild duck being monogamous, shows that only a few ducks should be allotted to one drake—say five, or at most six; four would be all the better. The birds must always have free access to their favorite element. As they are of very early habits, you must either provide a tub of water in their house, or else let them out very early in the morning. Certainly there are few districts where it is safe to have ducks out in a yard or wandering "morning" about the pastures all night. Ducks are wonderfully fastidious about their meats. In frosty weather you must take away the eggs; and as the ducks will lay thirty or forty eggs, you can hatch them under hens which, indeed, make by far the better nurses. March is early—April is a better month for ducklings to come off, as they like warmth no less than water. The duck, or she will sit off and on all her young. She must be apart from any other ducks, to prevent the little ones from going to the wrong coop, and being seized by the wrong mother-duck; and she must be away from pond or stream, lest the ducklings should get their legs cramped with the cold. But the duck have a natural tendency to drink from, and let the ducklings paddle in a shallow pan placed near or in the coop, in order to prevent accidental slopping or soaking the tender little birds. In very dry, warm weather this discipline need not last more than a few days; then move the ducks and coop to the margin of a pond (still apart from other ducks, as they and drakes, too, are very vicious, and apt to kill off a whole brood in a very few minutes), and when the ducklings are a fortnight old they may be separated from their mother, driven to the water in the morning and shut up in the house at night. Beware of having deep pans or buckets of water where ducklings and chickens can have access to them, keep none but very shallow drinking vessels for your poultry; empty your stable buckets when not in use, and fling a handful of bran in your horse and cattle watering places. The first food for ducklings is bread soaked in milk, or paste made of barley meal and new milk; malt flour is also used, as more fattening. You may give also boiled rice and potatoes, and small wheat soaked, with frequent treats in the way of fresh. But with muddy ponds to dabble in they will need little else than on especially delicate or their crops with meal paste.—J. A. C.

FORCING ASPARAGUS.—Asparagus may be obtained a month earlier than in the open doors, as follows: About the middle of February place some movable wooden frames over a permanent bed of it, and with a few barrow-loads of warm manure and leaves, make up a lining all around the bed, and cover its surface with dry hay. Then put on the lights, and keep them closed for three weeks, when the heads will begin to appear. The hay should then be cleared off, and a little more added, to keep up the heat and moisture. Under this treatment asparagus has been cut on March 20th, and after that a good supply can be kept up until the outdoor crop is ready. By this plan the bed, which does not experience any disturbance, will last a great number of years, provided its produce is not cut too late. Cutting should cease, and the glass be removed as soon as the out-door crop is ready.

Market Reports

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 16, 1878.

Business under this head is now at a very low ebb, particularly in the grain trade, and must so continue until the incoming crop. Wheat seems to be in less urgent demand, both for export and milling, causing prices to shade of somewhat. Barley has been in better demand of late, but at very low prices. Corn continues to rule high. Hay is plentiful and cheap. Potatoes and Onions are holding up remarkably well. Beans are scarce and high. Mustard Seed is scarce and wanted, but the old crop is exhausted; the growing crop now promises a large yield. Alfalfa is in good demand, with a light stock. Hops are plentiful and cheap. Dairy supplies are very plentiful, causing low prices to prevail for choice Butter. New Cheese of prime quality is scarce and wanted. Eggs are in light supply, selling at good prices. Hides and Tallow are in good request, with a light stock. Wool arrives in increased quantities; choice clips, long staple, are in demand; but other kinds are in ample and out of condition. Southern hurry, dirty, and inferior Wools accumulate, buyers not taking kindly to stock of these kind of Wools. Strawberries and Cherries are now plentiful, and prices come down within reach of all consumers.

The city of the fruit is Indeed. New Apricots, Peaches, Nectarines, etc., will be in good supply, while Asparagus, Green Peas, Rhubarb, Spinach, etc., are all obtainable at fair prices. Asparagus has already become quite a drug in the market at a cent per pound.

FLOUR—We quote current prices as follows: Superfine at $3@3 25; Extra Superfine, $3 50@3 75; Extra family and Bakers Extra, $4 25@4 75. WHEAT—We quote Milling at $2@2 10 per ctl—the latter an extreme figure; and Shipping at $1 90@1 95 ctl.

BARLEY—We quote Feed at 85c@$1 02½ ctl, and Brewing at $1 10@1 20 ctl, according to the buyer and credit allowed.

OATS—We quote Feed at $1 30@1 85, and Milling at $1 50@1 60 ctl.

CORN—We quote Large Yellow at $1 87½@1 92½ ctl; Small Round, $1 95@2; and White, $2 05@2 12½ ctl.

BEANS—The market is very firm; stocks are very light. We quote Bayos, $3; Small Butter, $4 50; Limas, $4 50; White, small, $4 50; do Pea, $4 50; Red, $4 62½; Pink, $5 25@6; Navy White, $4 50.

RYE—The demand is light; prices nominal, say $2 40@2 50 ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Stock light, and the demand very active, quotable at $3 50@4 ctl.

BRAN AND MIDDLINGS—The mill price is jobbing lots, $16@16 50 ctl; lots less, $17 ctl.

COCKMEAL—We quote Fresh ground California at $4 50@4 50 ⅌ bbl in sack.

OIL CAKE MEAL—The mill price is $36 ⅌ ton, less the usual discount to the trade.

GROUND BARLEY—The mill price, in jobbing lots, $26@24 ⅌ ton.

HOPS—Present quotations, 50@8c for good to choice, the latter a jobbing rate.

SEEDS—Stocks are light and business very dull. We quote: Flax, 3c@3½c; Mustard, 4½@5c; Mustard, brown, 2@2½c; Canary, 6@8c; Hemp, 5@6c; Rape, 4@4½c; Alfalfa, 9@10c.

HAY—The receipts are free. The market is dull. We quote carge lots as follows: Wheat, $9@10 ⅌ ton; Barley, $9@12; Wild Oat, $9@12; Alfalfa, $9@12; Stock, $9@12.

HONEY—New strained has been sold within the week at 10c ⅌ lb.

BEEWAX—The present rate is 27@28c for good to choice.

HIDES—The market is steady for both dry and wet salted. Dry are rather dullish quotable at 14@16c ⅌ lb, according to quality. Wet are in demand; rates firm for cash, gold coin. We quote Dry at 14c; Dry Kip, 14c; Dry Calf, 16c; wet salted Steers, 8c; light salted Steers and Cows, 8c; Salted Kip, 8@9c; Salted Calf, 7@10c.

TALLOW—The article is quiet scarce and the demand good. High prices rule with a ready market for all offered. We quote: Prime, 6½c; choice grade is quotable at 7½@8c, and Refined at 9@9½c ⅌ lb, in shipping order, for lots over 22,000 lbs within the range.

UNIONS—There are very few choice in market. The best command $2 50 ⅌ 100 lbs; inferior lower prices, as to condition.

WOOL—24 to 38 cents ⅌ lb.

POULTRY AND GAME—Receipts are moderate; demand very lightly; prices ruling high. We quote present rates as follows: Hens, $5 50@6 50; Roosters, old, $6@7; young, $6@6 50; Broilers in good demand at $4@5; tame Ducks, $7@8 ⅌ doz; tame Geese, $1 50@1 75 ⅌ pair; Turkeys, live, 19@21c ⅌ lb.

CATTLE—Our markets are abundantly supplied with every variety of choice meats, prices ruling very low. Slaughtering cattle are as follows: Beef, per quarter, first quality, 5@7c ⅌ lb; second quality, 4@5c; Mutton, 5@6c ⅌ lb; choice, Calves, 8@8c; Spring Lambs, 8@6c. But receipts are very light, but quite sufficient for quality; very little doing, however, owing to the high prices ruling for Eastern cattle. We quote rates on foot for all descriptions at 6@6½c; dressed, 10@—the latter an extreme rate for choice hard Hogs.

DAIRY PRODUCTS—Receipts of fresh roll Butter for the week have been very large—so much in excess of the market demand as to force prices down materially and cause our merchants to pack largely in order to save the surplus from loss. The market is by this means unencumbered to some extent, and regular quotations difficult to obtain. We quote the State Fresh Roll at 25@26c by the single box; good to choice, 22@23c; low grade to good, 18@20c. New Pickled Roll moves slowly at 23@2 c. New Keg, fine sales at 20@22c; the stock of old Pickled Roll and Firkin begins light, and is now offering to close at 12@16½c as to quality. Eastern keg is in light stock and limited demand at very low figures. California Cheese is coming in quite freely, and prices accordingly ruling low; prices now low for six, now quotable at 10@12½c for good to choice grades. Gilroy factory, in boxes, Imperial style, 16@16c. Fresh California Eggs are in fair supply and demand, and the market ruled quite firm, rates declining steadily. We quote fresh California, 27@28c; Oregon, 26@28c; Utah, 26@27c. Eastern in order, 22@23c.

FRUIT—The market is now supplied with Oranges from Tahiti, the schooner California having arrived down our last with 200,000. Strawberries are now quite plentiful and cheap, the best selling at 8@10c ⅌ box. The first Raspberries of the season arrived on the 15th inst., and sold at 60c ⅌ lb. Cherries are now coming forward quite freely, and prices are steadily falling. Apricots is very plentiful and cheap, getting to be almost a drug in the market. Green Peas are quite plentiful and cheap, and so also of all other marketable vegetables, excepting new Potatoes which are scarce and high. We are indebted to Howe & Hall, Commission Merchants, for the following quotations: Cherries, 10@30c ⅌ lb; Strawberries $8@8 ⅌ chest; Gooseberries, 6@8c; Oranges—Tahiti, $3@3 25 ⅌ M; California $2@2 ⅌ M; Lemons—Sicily, $5@5 ⅌ box; Los Angeles, $2@3 ⅌ box. Limes—Mexican, 6@6 ⅌ box; Bananas, $3@4 ⅌ bunch. Green Peas, $4@6 ⅌ 100. Dried Fruit—Apples, 5@7c; Peaches, 5@6c; Apricots, 6@7c; Nectarines, 10 @7c; do pitted, 14@16c; Prunes, 14 @16c; Figs—White, 60@8c; Black, 8@7c; Calif. raisins, $1@2 50 ⅌ box.

VEGETABLES—Cabbage, 75c ⅌ 100 lbs; Cucumbers, 50 @75c ⅌ doz; Asparagus, 30@40c ⅌ box; Tomatoes, 12½; Summer Squash, 5c ⅌ Shallots, 20c ⅌ lb; Green Peas, 16@2; Stg Beans, 12@13c; Chili Peppers (dry), 12½; do fle, 16@20; Okra (dry), 16@20c.

I had rather have newspapers without government, than a government without newspapers.—Jefferson.

New Advertisements.

Plain Talk.

Half Horse and half Man. Card from the Centaur Men. Strong Statements, backed by indisputable testimony. Sellers, Mythology and living witnesses testating harmony.

To the Editor of "The Monitor." We would, just incidentally touching the ridiculous story of a live Centaur, an animal half horse and half man, said to have been captured in the Indian Territory, the Greek publications simply recited the mythological legend, of the ancients who believed in these Hybrid creatures. We talked about the deification of Centaurs from Iulus and Jumo down to their reported home on Mt. Olympus and exploits upon the Mazzaras plains. We stated that as the alleged founders of the Healing art, Esculapius, a Centaurean God, is to this day the insigna of the medical profession. Astronomers recognized their prowess by giving to the grandest constellation in the heavens the name of Centaurus. The Queen of plants, blossoming only once in hundred years, was dignified by botanists as Century plant. We reasserted these interesting facts and stated why the wonderful remedies of which we wrote in the Monitor, were called Centaur Liniments. As the Centaurs, half horse and half man, were worshipped for their medicinal skill, remedies which absolutely cure the animals of man and animals, are very appropriately, in our estimation, called after the Centaurs. We distinctly stated that for the last twelve or fifteen years, we have been differently compounded. It is not a pleasant thing for a cleanly house wife to be extremely bothered with the Colic. The Family Liniment is a beautiful White and odorless preparation. The Animal Liniment is dangerous and is Yellow. We thought we cover the range of our critics was their knowledge that the Centaur preparations were effecting more marvellous cures and were more sought than all other Liniments, Ointments, Extracts, Pain-Killers and Panaceas combined. They are not advertised as curealls, but as specific remedies; skulls, but are warranted to alleviate pain and effect cures, where cures are possibilities. We publish a list of the ingredients, so that a very farfetc man, though a fool, may understand. Every physician and every old woman knows the virtues of Wiggle-Hazel, Catholic, Arnica, Black Cohosh, Ammonia, Wormwood, Horse Ax, &c.; each a healing, soothing, astringent and pain extractant agents. Every one of the testimonials we have published, and in wrappers around the bottles were written by the physicians and persons whose names they bear. Any of them can be easily verified. Some of the testimonials we have published, three preparations, that we will give them to any man doubting the representations made. We will present any person a hundred dollars, who having used either the Liniments according to directions, will prove to us, he or she has not been benefited or cured. The Horse White Liniment will heal Burns and Scalds without a scar. It cures by a single application Sore Throat and always relieves inflammation, lumbar still pains and strained cords. Nothing can ever have discovered likeit for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Swellings, Frosted Feet, Chilblains, Sore Nipples, Broken Breasts, &c. It is the best external remedy for sore throat, Bronchitis, Quinsy, Croup, Diphtheria, and Sore Throat. It will remove disgusting Blotches and Freckels from the face and hands, and is very soothing to the skin. The Horse Yellow Centaur Liniment can always be relied upon for Spavin, Galls, Sweeny, Scratches, Strains, Sprains, &c., on horses, mules and cattle. It is in fact the only antidote yet discovered, which will kill Screw-Worms in Sheep without killing the animal. It is worth its weight in gold to farmers, planters, stockmen, and all owners of valuable animals. Such testimonials as these of which we have published a few, are not to be bought, purchased and traded. Any writer of any other Liniments can publish testimonials, if he will, as good as ours.

Neuralgia and Rheumatism.—I suffered a period in 1849, from which Neuralgia, Rheumatism and Erysipelas set in. A part of the time I was on my back, and the balance hobbling not death. Dr. Pomlee attended me for quite Dry at Dry. Dr. Pomlee tried his best and many remedies. . . . . The CENTAUR LINIMENT relieved me from pain, and I was nearly nearly cured me. MAJ. LAWRENCE KIRKLAND, Cincinnati, O.

Sciatica.—I have suffered with Sciatica for years. Nothing relieved me, but kept out of my house. To say that I doctored and spent money freely, is the mildest way. I never received benefit until I used the CENTAUR LINIMENT. It improved me from first, so I laid aside my crutches with the third bottle. I am now well. JOSIAH WHEELER, Maryville, O.

Suppurated Leg Saved From Amputation.—Mr. Jacob Snyder, of Mt. Storm, was reported to the Medical Journal:

"OFFICE OF ASCRON LEAF TOBACCO CO.,
NEW YORK, Sept. 11, 1877.

Gentlemen—Three years ago I was a terrible sufferer from a MALIGNANT ULCERATED LEG. It settled in my right leg and foot. For several weeks I was in a suffering state. Pieces of bone were taken out, gold coin. We quote Dry at 18c; Dry Kip, 14c; Dry Calf, 16c; wet salted Steers, 8c; light salted Steers and Cows, 8c; Salted Kip, 8@9c; Salted Calf, 7@10c.

TALLOW—The article is quiet scarce and the demand good. High prices rule with a ready market for all offered. We quote: Prime, 6½c; choice grade is quotable at 7½@8c, and Refined at 9@9½c ⅌ lb, in shipping order, for lots over 22,000 lbs within the range.

UNIONS—There are very few choice in market. The best command $2 50 ⅌ 100 lbs; inferior lower prices, as to condition.

WOOL—24 to 38 cents ⅌ lb.

POULTRY AND GAME—Receipts are moderate; demand very lightly; prices ruling high. We quote present rates as follows: Hens, $5 50@6 50; Roosters, old, $6@7; young, $6@6 50; Broilers in good demand at $4@5; tame Ducks, $7@8 ⅌ doz; tame Geese, $1 50@1 75 ⅌ pair; Turkeys, live, 19@21c ⅌ lb.

CATTLE—Our markets are abundantly supplied with every variety of choice meats, prices ruling very low. Slaughtering cattle are as follows: Beef, per quarter, first quality, 5@7c ⅌ lb; second quality, 4@5c; Mutton, 5@6c ⅌ lb; choice, Calves, 8@8c; Spring Lambs, 8@6c. But receipts are very light, but quite sufficient for quality; very little doing, however, owing to the high prices ruling for Eastern cattle. We quote rates on foot for all descriptions at 6@6½c; dressed, 10@—the latter an extreme rate for choice hard Hogs.

DAIRY PRODUCTS—Receipts of fresh roll Butter for the week have been very large—so much in excess of the market demand as to force prices down materially and cause our merchants to pack largely in order to save the surplus from loss. The market is by this means unencumbered to some extent, and regular quotations difficult to obtain. We quote the State Fresh Roll at 25@26c by the single box; good to choice, 22@23c; low grade to good, 18@20c. New Pickled Roll moves slowly at 23@2 c. New Keg, fine sales at 20@22c; the stock of old Pickled Roll and Firkin begins light, and is now offering to close at 12@16½c as to quality. Eastern keg is in light stock and limited demand at very low figures. California Cheese is coming in quite freely, and prices accordingly ruling low; prices now low for six, now quotable at 10@12½c for good to choice grades. Gilroy factory, in boxes, Imperial style, 16@16c. Fresh California Eggs are in fair supply and demand, and the market ruled quite firm, rates declining steadily. We quote fresh California, 27@28c; Oregon, 26@28c; Utah, 26@27c. Eastern in order, 22@23c.

FRUIT—The market is now supplied with Oranges from Tahiti, the schooner California having arrived down our last with 200,000. Strawberries are now quite plentiful and cheap, the best selling at 8@10c ⅌ box. The first Raspberries of the season arrived on the 15th inst., and sold at 60c ⅌ lb. Cherries are now coming forward quite freely, and prices are steadily falling. Apricots is very plentiful and cheap, getting to be almost a drug in the market. Green Peas are quite plentiful and cheap, and so also of all other marketable vegetables, excepting new Potatoes which are scarce and high. We are indebted to Howe & Hall, Commission Merchants, for the following quotations: Cherries, 10@30c ⅌ lb; Strawberries $8@8 ⅌ chest; Gooseberries, 6@8c; Oranges—Tahiti, $3@3 25 ⅌ M; California $2@2 ⅌ M. Lemons—Sicily, $5@5 ⅌ box; Los Angeles, $2@3 ⅌ 100. Limes—Mexican, 6@6 ⅌ box. Bananas, $3@4 ⅌ bunch. Green Peas, $4@6 ⅌ 100. Dried Fruit—Apples, 5@7c; Peaches, 5@6c; Apricots, 6@7c; Nectarines, 10 @7c; do pitted, 14@16c; Prunes, 14 @16c; Figs—White, 60@8c; Black, 8@7c; Calif. raisins, $1@2 50 ⅌ box.

VEGETABLES—Cabbage, 75c ⅌ 100 lbs; Cucumbers, 50 @75c ⅌ doz; Asparagus, 30@40c ⅌ box; Tomatoes, 12½; Summer Squash, 5c ⅌ Shallots, 20c ⅌ lb; Green Peas, 16@2; Stg Beans, 12@13c; Chili Peppers (dry), 12½; do fle, 16@20; Okra (dry), 16@20c.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GRAND SPRING OPENING OF MILLENERY AND FANCY GOODS AND LADIES' FINISHED UNDERWEAR, Notions, Household Goods and Gents' Furnishing Goods.

Manufacturers of Boys' and Men's Nice Fitting Suits of French Beaver, Diagonals, California and Oregon Cashmere and Scotch Tweeds.

PALMER BROS. 726, 728, 730, 732, 734 MARKET ST. apr13

M'CARTHY BROS. BEST OLD GOVERNMENT JAVA COFFEE, —AND— PURE SPICES. Ask your Grocer for Our Goods, take no other.

N. B.—The supplying of Convents and Schools a Specialty.

417 & 419 Sacramento Street.

CHRYSTAL ILLUMINATORS NO CHIMNEY TO BREAK! The Only Device Ever Patented. TO BURN WITHOUT A CHIMNEY. The Best Light Since the World was Made. Adapted for all Coal Oil Lamps, Chandeliers, Brackets, etc.; also used on Gas Chandeliers at one-fourth the cost of gas, with equal light. USE ROSELANE OIL! Best in the Market. WILL BE YATES & CO., AGENTS. RETAIL STORE, 657 READY ST. WHOLESALE HOUSE: 113 FRONT STREET. 21mr 6

DRY GOODS, ETC.

THE GRAND OPENING AT THE ARCADE. PROFOUND ADMIRATION OF THE LADIES OF SAN FRANCISCO AT OUR EXHIBITION OF DRESS GOODS AND SILKS. Since our Magnificent Opening on Monday, September 17th, the rush of visitors to our Establishment has both unprecedented, and the expressions of surprise and admiration have been incessant at the magnitude and splendor of the REBUILT ARCADE. (Our importations this season have been so vast that it is only NOW they are fully prepared for public inspection, and we would respectfully state that our present display immeasurably eclipses any former DRY GOODS EXHIBITION ever witnessed in California. OUR DRESS GOODS AND SILKS Are most worthy of public attention, as we have taken special pains to make these department unappreachable. Circassian Suitings. Drap d'Eclair. Neigeuse Cloth. Ragdusa Suitings. Knicker Costume Cloth. The above are some of the latest designs in the Dress Department, and are especially designed for the serving the examination of our patrons. There is a tremendous run on our KNICKER COSTUME CLOTH, which we are offering at 37½ cents. J. J. O'BRIEN & CO., 924, 926, 928 MARKET ST., and 25 ELLIS ST., SAN FRANCISCO, NEXT TO "THE BALDWIN" 21mr

Wonder Millinery Store, No. 1016 Market Street, Opposite Fifth street. San Francisco. The Cheapest Place in the city for Hats, Flowers, Feathers, etc. m14 3m

HARPS, $4.00. DAVIES' HARP IS A NEW MUSICAL instrument which bids fair to exceed in popularity anything yet manufactured. They are sweet-toned, portable, and can be matched with half an hour's practice. BANCROFT, KNICHT & CO., 735 Market St., San Francisco. Sole agents for the Pacific Coast. 24mr

THE CLEARANCE SALE OF D. LANDERS Continued Until Further Notice, And during the week I shall offer still GREATER INDUCEMENTS. BED SPREADS, Half Price. BLANKETS, Half Price. TOWELS AND NAPKINS, Half Price. SILKS AND DRESS GOODS, Half Price. I am Selling Cartwright & Warner's English and Merino Underwear at less than Eastern Manufactured Goods. Now is the time to Buy them. During the continuance of this sale all Goods will be sold strictly for CASH. All persons indebted to the late firm will please make immediate payment. D. LANDERS, SUCCESSOR TO BYRNE, LANDERS & BYRNE, THURLOW BLOCK, 126 Kearny St. ja24

SENT FREE on application—BRIGGS & BIRD'S Flower and Vegetable Catalogue. Our large crops enable us to SELL SEEDS LOW. ROCHESTER, N.Y. or CHICAGO, ILL.

A. WALDTEUFEL, Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Catholic Books, PRAYER BOOKS, Miscellaneous Books, School Books, CHURCH ORNAMENTS, Catholic Goods, Staple and Fancy Stationery of every description. All orders will be promptly filled. Liberal terms to Schools and Trade. A. WALDTEUFEL, Corner First and S streets, SAN JOSE.

The Monitor.

VOL. XXI. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY EVENING, MAY 30, 1878. NO. 35.

A. WALDTEUFEL, Cor. First and Fountain Sts., SAN JOSE, CAL. Importer, Wholesale and Retail Dealer in Musical Instruments, Music Books, Sheet Music, Musical Merchandise in General. Agent for Pianos made by STEINWAY & SONS, New York. KRANICH & BACH, New York. C. ROENISCH, Dresden. AND FOR ORGANS FROM Horace Waters & Sons, and the Burdett Organ Company. By stock is immense. Orders are respectfully solicited, and will be promptly filled. Liberal discounts to Schools and Clergy. 1ms

THE MONITOR.

A CATHOLIC FAMILY WEEKLY, CONTAINING THE LATEST AND MOST RELIABLE INTELLIGENCE.

Published every THURSDAY for the Proprietors at 522 Clay Street, San Francisco.

☞ All Business Letters should be addressed to D. I. LYONS, Business Mgr. ☞ All other Communications, to the Editorial Department.

TERMS (Payable in advance):

Annual by mail or carrier	$6
Half subscribers, per year	$4 00
Six months	$2 25
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces	$ 10
Postage in each case prepaid by the publishers.

Advertising Rates.

1 square 1 time	$1 50	1 square 4 mos	$10 50
1 square 1 month	4 00	1 square 6 mos	15 00
1 square 2 months	6 00	1 square 9 mos	18 00
1 square 3 months	8 00	1 square 1 year	25 00

The above rates will be strictly adhered to.

☞ Special Contracts for Commercial Notices, Notices of Deaths, Marriages, etc., will be charged for at the same rates as Advertisements.

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

The Situation.

The prospects of peace are generally accepted as favorable. Nevertheless nothing definite is known as to the basis of such peace presented to Count Schouvaloff, relative to which to be Russian and Turkish Plenipotentiaries met in conference. Yesterday the Russian Minister presented a revised version of the Treaty of San Stefano, which it was stated, that the Russian force is composed of three-fifths Greeks, and fully adhere to the conditions of the Treaty, by the wording of the invitations to contain a guarantee for the free discussion of the whole treaty. It is stated that Turkey has agreed to give up the guarantee instead of Russia. Europe's interests have been about the date of the Congress, which Germany, Austria and France have already allotted to this scheme.

It is stated that the Russians will come to an agreement on the chief points, and leave the settlement of the details to the Congress. It is also said that Russia's demands, the principals noticing seem fairly.

The report of the invitations is, that the Congress will meet at Berlin to discuss the treaty of San Stefano. Germany, by the fact of being the invitation, has some guarantee that the whole treaty will be submitted for discussion.

The Houses of Commons Sustains the Government on the Military Question.

London, May 24.—In the House of Commons last night, the debate on raising troops was resumed and continued until a late hour. Mr. Cross and Sir Stafford Northcote, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, the former spoke in a hopeful tone, but dwelt upon the necessity of secrecy at the present critical moment. Mr. Gladstone, in a speech attacked the opposition so fiercely, that Mr. Holmes, Mr. Fawcett and Lord Hartington replied, declaring upon the constitutional action of the Government. Lord Hartington's speech was the most fierce he raised or kept by the Crown in time of peace, were within limits, and the sanction of Parliament, was rejected by 340 to 226.

Mr. Fawcett and Sir Michael Hicks Beach was subject without of violence, as follows "This house begs to express its regret at the premature commencement of Parliament over the raising and employment of the military force by the Crown is fully secured by provisions of law, and by the undoubted power of the Crown to grant or refuse supplies, it considers it unnecessary and inexpedient to affirm the resolution to refuse to vote the supplies of her Majesty's Government to the support of foreign affairs.

Rioting at Barcelona.

PERPIGNAN, May 22. It is reported that there was great popular rejoicing at Barcelona on Wednesday. The military and popular rejoicing shots.

Anti-Socialist Bill Defeat of Government in Parliament.

BERLIN, May 24.—Yesterday's debate in the German Parliament on the Anti-Socialistic bill, Herr Bennigsen charged the Federal Council with introducing the bill, and the Government with introducing the bill, and the Government with introducing the bill, in order to have power for the dissolution of Parliament, and said the Prussian Ministry had before the Federal council condition of German society requires the extreme measures of repression.

Herr Lehmann, Socialist, leader, said his party would be in favor of the bill if it could be on the assumption that Socialists encourage murder.

Herr Bennigsen, for the advanced Liberals, and Herr Jaeger, for the conservatives, declared that the Government had wished at Socialism in order to discredit the political influence of the middle classes. Under this species of fostering the evil has attained formidable proportions and would only cured by industrial and educational progress.

The first clause of the Anti-Socialist bill was defeated in Parliament to-day by a vote of 251 to 57. Herr Hofman then, on behalf of the Government, withdrew the bill. The session of Parliament will close to-night.

In Memory of Voltaire.

PARIS, May 28.—The Government refuses to sanction any out-door memorials on the occasion of the hundredth anniversary of the death of Voltaire. The celebration will take place in the Hall of Theatre, next Thursday, at a meeting will be held, over which Victor Hugo will preside.

Death of Lord John Russell.

This great English Statesman died May 28th, in the eighty-sixth year of his age. A review of his life would be a review of English history for our half a century. Lord John Russell was the third son of the sixth Duke of Bedford. He was born August 18, 1792, and entered Parliament in 1813, when but twenty-one years of age. He commenced as a Whig, when that party was in a hopeless minority, and, while still a young man, gained some reputation as a reformer. He supported Catholic emancipation, which measure was passed in 1829. He was identified with the Ministry of Earl Grey, formed in 1830, and more prominently with the Melbourne Ministry, formed in 1834. The second Peel Ministry succeeded Melbourne in 1841, and Russell became leader of the opposition. This position he held five years, when he was called to form a Ministry in 1846. He was Premier when the Crimean war was after and Secretary for Foreign Affairs with the Aberdeen Ministry, Secretary of the Colonies in the same Ministry, and Colonial Secretary in the Palmerston Ministry. In 1861 he attempted the Reform Bill, which, though not so radical as the Russian one, but his conduct of the Conference had not met Parliament's approval, and he resigned. In 1861 he was elected to the House of Peers with the title of Earl Russell, and succeeded Palmerston as Premier in 1865. He has been two married, and leaves children by each.

It may be considered certain that the Congress will meet at an early date, but it is by no means certain that the Congress will succeed in settling the interests thereby, and it is feared much will be left to be settled by war, or by provoking the war party in Constantinople.

EASTERN.

An English Admiral Hurrying Home.

HAVANA, May 26. Admiral Sir Ashby Cooper from Key West, left on the train last evening to take the English mail steamer at Rimbola, for Europe. Admiral Cooper commands, it is said, at the Bahia Best.

The Cimbria Russian Officers Leaving the Ship.

PHILADELPHIA, May 24. Small parties of Russian officers have been leaving the Cimbria with all their baggage, which they pass formally through the Custom House. A few leave by express trains, West, two or three at a time. Yesterday it was stated the report that the Russian force is composed of three-ships crews, carefully selected. The report is denied by the Russians saying that they have come to America to hear and see, and that they have no connection with the Russian crowers. He thinks two have a right to be here for a time, and the Philadelphia Sun officers so have left the Cimbria and will not return. It is in fact that only officers have been sent on, he assumed that sailors will be sent on, and that the Cimbria will be unloaded, and will sail for Russian ports.

The Russian officers represent themselves as the sons of the Czar's friends. The officers conversed with a reporter of the Sun, and seemed educated, and apparently confident in his statements.

Russians Purchasing Torpedoes.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Torpedoes are freely invested in war properties is stopping in this city, and has been in consultation and negotiation with the Russian Government for the purchase of most new lines. The negotiations closed today by which the Russian Government is to be supplied with torpedoes, and the Russians declare the most recently invented submarine torpedoes, which have been tried in the Hudson River, and have proved to be the most destructive of all the Russian Government, and the Russian Government with authorized agents of the Russian Government now here. The negotiations have been carried on with the greatest secrecy, and it is to be positively supplied with over $1,000,000 worth of the most approved torpedoes and torpedo boats. The first shipment is to be prior to June 20th, and the balance will be shipped as rapidly as known. The chief agent of the Russian Government is Colonel Boutakoff, who is now arranging between $5,000,000 and $6,000,000 in Europe for the purchase of torpedoes. He is in California, the Columbus and other ships have been purchased, and they are now on board the steamer Cimbria. Agents of the English Government have been here for some time watching the movements of the Russian here, but unknown to the Russians. The Russian agents have all conducted by Russian agents here so only a true to the Russian.

Work on the Vessels Recently Purchased by the Russians.

PHILADELPHIA, May 27.—Work on the Colfingia and Columbus, the steamers recently purchased by the Russian Government is rapidly. The character of the work is well as to indicate that they are to be used as cruisers. The Colfingia has been tested.

A Great Strike in Opposition to Chinese Labor.

WASHINGTON, May 25. In the Senate

HISTORY OF THE LIFE AND PONTIFICATE OF POPE PIUS IX.

[From the London Tablet.]

I.

Inconsiderably the grandest figure in the history of the nineteenth century is that of Pius IX. With virtues so genial to his nature, his character stands out clearly and unmistakably as that of one whom misfortunes could not overwhelm, and whom prosperity could not spoil. His disasters were not of his own creation. They came to him from without. His successes and triumphs were spiritual rather than temporal. They came to him from God and were received with a humble heart. They belonged to him not so much in his individual capacity as in that of his official position as Head of the Church on earth, and were shared by members of the Church throughout Christendom. When thrones fell around him, and when almost all the chief dynasties in Europe were brought to humiliation or overthrow, Pius IX. preserved, even when his own temporal sovereignty was in its turn assailed, an unbroken serenity and cheerfulness of heart, and an unfailing trust in that Divine Providence, which sooner or later establishes the triumph of God's Church and rewards the children of the Faith.

The family of Mastai can be traced back to the thirteenth century, and was ennobled towards the end of the seventeenth century, by the Duke of Parma and Piacenza, who rewarded the distinguished services of a member of the Mastai family with the title of Count. The name of Ferretti was about the same time, in consequence of a matrimonial alliance, added to that of Mastai. Senigallia, on the coast of the Adriatic, was the dwelling place of the Counts Mastai-Ferretti. In olden time a member of their house was usually chosen Municipal Governor of Sinigallia, and during the invasion of Italy by the French, the chief magistrate of that city was Count Girolamo Mastai Ferretti, father of Pius IX. Andrea Mastai, uncle of Pius IX., was Bishop of Pesaro, and was also up in Mantua on obsequiem for his fidelity to the cause of Pius VII. The mother of Pius IX., Caterina Solazzi, a native of Sinigallia, was a lady of singular piety and virtue. She bore to her husband several children, but when he who was to be the future Pius IX. was born, upon the 13th of May, 1792, she placed him under the protection of the Blessed Virgin, and gave him the baptismal name of Giovanni-Maria.

In the year 1825, the young Count Giovanni-Maria Mastai-Ferretti, then eleven years old, was sent to the College of Saint Michele, at Volterra, where he remained under the careful instruction of the Padri Scolopi for a term of six years. The name of Giovanni Lapini, one of the best mathematicians of his day in Italy, is honorably associated with this College of Volterra as professor. A manuscript book, purporting to contain some mathematical exercises of Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti, who was a Prelate of the Papal Court, Canon of the Vatican, and Sub-Secretary of Memorials. The young Mastai-Ferretti must have been vividly impressed with the surrounding events of the year 1809. Napoleon, in the May of that year, from his palace at Vienna, decreed the annexation of the Papal States to the French Empire. This annexation was proclaimed in Rome on the 10th of June by the guns of St. Angelo, the French flag on that day replacing the Papal on the summit of that fortress. Then followed the excommunication, but not by name, of Napoleon, and the arrest of Pius VII. was resolved on. General Radet, on the night of the 5th of July, broke into the Quirinal Palace, and forced his way into the private apartments of the Pontiff. The Swiss Guards, obeying their master's order, made no resistance, and Pius VII. was made a prisoner. Pudino Mastai-Ferretti was in the Quirinal upon that eventful night, encouraging and consoling his august master, in company with Doria, the Maestro di Camera, and other prelates. Pius VII. was then carried captive, first to Savona, and afterwards to Fontainbleau. Young Mastai-Ferretti retired in 1810 to his parents' house in Sinigallia, and waited for happier times.

It has been often asserted by various authors that Pius IX., when a youth, was intended for the army, and even served some time as an officer in the Pontifical Guard. This statement originated in a Catholic newspaper in Milan, and was copied by succeeding writers without doubt or examination. It has been contradicted by two historians, Cappelletti and Torrigiani, who relate that Pius IX. himself was applied to for information on the subject, and pronounced the assertion to be entirely false. Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti never wore a uniform. He was included, it is true, in the conscription of 1812, but was exempted owing to his suffering from epilepsy. Nor was such evidence required of his inability to serve, for the French Sub-Prefect, who resided in the house of the Mastai, in Sinigallia, was frequently witness to the severe convulsions to which at that time Giovanni Maria was subject. He was first attacked by that disorder in 1807, when a pupil at Volterra.

When Pius VII. returned to his throne after the fall of Napoleon, and passed through Sinigaglia, Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti was presented to him, and going again to Rome, witnessed, in 1814, the enthusiastic reception given to the Pontiff by the Romans in the Piazza del Popolo. The Academy of Ecclesiastics being now reopened, Giovanni Maria attended the schools, but in layman's dress, his malady forbidding him to think of speedy admission to sacred orders. In a little while, his prayers for relief being partly granted, he assumed, in 1816, the clerical garb, and studied theology under Professor Giuseppe Crescini, and, finally, his epileptic attacks becoming less severe, although not altogether ceasing, he was admitted to the minor orders. In 1818 a mission was organised for Sinigaglia, under the direction of Monsignor (Gioachin)—afterwards Cardinal and subsequently Jesuit—and Monsignor Strambi, then Bishop of Macerata. His object, like that of other missions sent at that period to various parts of the Papal States, was to revive the spirit of religion, and repair, if possible, the evils occasioned by the revolutionary disorders which had so long prevailed. The Abate Mastai-Ferretti was appointed to accompany this mission, and, although occupying a subordinate position, distinguished himself by his zeal and ability. Returning to Rome he found his health so much improved, that he solicited and obtained a dispensation, and was ordained deacon on the 18th of December, 1818. Another dispensation was soon after granted for the ordination of priest, but with a clause that he could only celebrate Mass in private, and with the assistance of another priest. Don Giovanni Mastai was now in his twenty-seventh year, and his constitution was becoming stronger. He sought a special audience of Pius VII., and implored him to remove the prevous which impeded his full exercise of sacerdotal functions. The Pontiff granted his request, and expressed a belief that the young priest's malady would never again assail him, a belief which was fulfilled, as he was scarcely ever afterwards troubled by a recurrence of that disorder. The cure of the Abate Mastai from epilepsy has been also attributed to the intercession of a holy woman, Elizabetta Canon Mora. "Very marvelous," such are the words of her biographer, "who was, in 1826, and took her account from official documents, "was her cure of the epileptic convulsions which often assailed Canon Mastai, vice-rector of the Hospice of Tata Giovanni. Being asked by the sister of Agostino Bartolini to intercede for Mastai, she said to her, 'Let us beseech the Dean Nazzarene,' and then giving a phial of the holy water she was in the habit of keeping by her, she told her: 'Give this to Agostino, and make him take it three times, and desire him to say, not a Mass, or a Rosary, or a Novena, but only Masses, and he will be cured.' He did so, and was cured that night and afterwards."

Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti, as a young man, was handsome and of winning manners. His features were an index to the sweetness of his disposition. His voice was of great compass, very clear and penetrating. He was popular with all classes, and often accompanied his superiors to their friends. He had special sympathy for the sick, the aged, and for little children. He was of a very generous nature, and his sympathies, instead of evaporating in good wishes, became forcemasters of good deeds. In the very utmost of his social career, he devoted himself to the care of a Hospice, called after its founder by the name of Tata Giovanni, or Daddy John, where young orphans were housed and instructed in various useful trades. In this Hospice, Don Giovanni-Maria dwelt, teaching the inmates their catechism and religious duties, and exercising upon them liberally the funds sent him by his parents. The Church of St. Anne dei Falegnami attached to this institution was selected by the Abate Mastai for his first Mass, which he celebrated on the feast of Saint Raphael, one of the best mathematicians of his day in Italy, is honorably associated with this College of Volterra as professor. A manuscript book, purporting to contain some mathematical exercises of Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti, who was a Prelate of the Papal Court, Canon of the Vatican, and Sub-Secretary of Memorials. The young Mastai-Ferretti must have been vividly impressed with the surrounding events of the year 1809. Napoleon, in the May of that year, from his palace at Vienna, decreed the annexation of the Papal States to the French Empire. This annexation was proclaimed in Rome on the 10th of June by the guns of St. Angelo, the French flag on that day replacing the Papal on the summit of that fortress. Then followed the excommunication, but not by name, of Napoleon, and the arrest of Pius VII. was resolved on. General Radet, on the night of the 5th of July, broke into the Quirinal Palace, and forced his way into the private apartments of the Pontiff. The Swiss Guards, obeying their master's order, made no resistance, and Pius VII. was made a prisoner. Pudino Mastai-Ferretti was in the Quirinal upon that eventful night, encouraging and consoling his august master, in company with Doria, the Maestro di Camera, and other prelates. Pius VII. was then carried captive, first to Savona, and afterwards to Fontainbleau. Young Mastai-Ferretti retired in 1810 to his parents' house in Sinigaglia, and waited for happier times.

It has been often asserted by various authors that Pius IX., when a youth, was intended for the army, and even served some time as an officer in the Pontifical Guard. This statement originated in a Catholic newspaper in Milan, and was copied by succeeding writers without doubt or examination. It has been contradicted by two historians, Cappelletti and Torrigiani, who relate that Pius IX. himself was applied to for information on the subject, and pronounced the assertion to be entirely false. Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti never wore a uniform. He was included, it is true, in the conscription of 1812, but was exempted owing to his suffering from epilepsy. Nor was such evidence required of his inability to serve, for the French Sub-Prefect, who resided in the house of the Mastai, in Sinigaglia, was frequently witness to the severe convulsions to which at that time Giovanni Maria was subject. He was first attacked by that disorder in 1807, when a pupil at Volterra.

When Pius VII. returned to his throne after the fall of Napoleon, and passed through Sinigaglia, Giovanni Maria Mastai-Ferretti was presented to him, and going again to Rome, witnessed, in 1814, the enthusiastic reception given to the Pontiff by the Romans in the Piazza del Popolo. The Academy of Ecclesiastics being now reopened, Giovanni Maria attended the schools, but in layman's dress, his malady forbidding him to think of speedy admission to sacred orders. In a little while, his prayers for relief being partly granted, he assumed, in 1816, the clerical garb, and studied theology under Professor Giuseppe Crescini, and, finally, his epileptic attacks becoming less severe, although not altogether ceasing, he was admitted to the minor orders. In 1818 a mission was organised for Sinigaglia, under the direction of Monsignor (Gioachin)—afterwards Cardinal and subsequently Jesuit—and Monsignor Strambi, then Bishop of Macerata. Its object, like that of other missions sent at that period to various parts of the Papal

II.

In 1823, an application was made to Pius VII. to send a representative of the Holy See to those parts of South America which had thrown off the yoke of Spain and constituted themselves into republics. The Pontiff granted the petition, and selected Mgr. Muzzi to be Vicar-Apostolic of Chili. Mgr. Muzzi at first accepted the mission, but subsequently, at the instance of his brother and near relations, declined it. The appointment was then conferred upon Mgr. Giovanni Muzi, who was at the time in Vienna, as auditor of the Nuncatiure, but who immediately returned to Rome, where he was consecrated Archbishop of Philippi in partibus, and Vicar-Apostolic of Chili, with faculties extending to Peru, Mexico, Columbia, and all the Western States of Spanish America. To Muzzi was given as companion "Don Giovanni-Maria dei Conti Mastai", and a secretary was appointed in the person of Giuseppe Sallusti, who wrote a history of the expedition. But the Countess Mastai-Ferretti, infeeble health, by the fears which caused the resignation of Odini, wrote to the Cardinal Secretary of State to implore that her son might be spared this mission, which was on good grounds regarded as hazardous. The voyage to Chili was long and perilous. The condition of the newly formed republics was precarious, and the Spanish authorities disliked the establishment of direct relations between Rome and the revolted provinces. Canon Mastai, instead of his mother's remonstrance, presented himself in audience to Pius VII., who then informed him of the unwillingness of the Countess, and said: "You see her has written to the Secretary of State to prevent your journey, but we have written to her in answer, that you will surely return safe from this mission." The Pope's prediction was happily fulfilled. The members of the Legation left Rome on the 3d of July, 1823, for Genoa, from whence they were to take ship for Buenos Ayres. While waiting at Genoa, they heard of the death, of Pius VII. on the 29th of August, and subsequently of the election to the Pontifical Chair of Cardinal Della Genga as Leo XII. They also received tidings of the confirmation of their mission by the new Pontiff. They experienced much delay at Genoa. Their ship, the Elvira, a unmasted brigantine built in France, which was promised to sail in August, did not finally leave Genoa until the 20th of September. A violent storm arose in the Mediterranean on the 1st of October, and drove the Elvira back into port. She sailed again from Genoa on the 4th of October, and experienced a succession of storms along the Spanish coast. The captain, afraid of the Spaniards, was unwilling to put into any harbor. On the 14th of October, the weather became so bad that they were forced to anchor in Palma, a harbor of Majorca. Here they were at first suspected of the plague and threatened with twenty days of quarantine. Next their passports and papers were demanded. The Vicar-Apostolic and his suite were events, and were compelled by menaces to disembark, and on sending Mgr. Muzi and Canon Mastai were so, cared and imprisoned in the Castle of Bellver. After repeated fumigations, examinations, and appeals to the Bishop of the place and to the Captain-General of Majorca, Consuls for assistance, they were acquitted and set free on the 20th of October. They were incarcerated in the Castle of forty-one ecclesiastics, whose only crime was that of being members of Religious Orders. Leaving Majorca they went to Gibraltar and thence set sail for Buenos Ayres. On the 5th of November they were hailed by an armed cruiser of Columbia, styled by Sallusti a corsair, and were boarded, but after an inspection of the ship's papers, the Elvyra was suffered to proceed on her route, and reached Buenos Ayres on the 3rd of January, 1824. Canon Mastai suffered very much from sea sickness on this unpleasant voyage. The Legation was at first well received at Buenos Ayres, but after wards the authorities became alarmed by the crowds which attended the religious ministrations of Mgr. Muzi and Canon Mastai, prohibited the further administration of the Sacrament of Confirmation, and finally requested the Vicar-Apostolic and his companions to take their departure. This they did on the 18th of January, when they set out for Santiago. They remained at Santiago from the 4th of March to the 19th of October. They then went to Valparaiso and stopped there ten days. By sea they proceeded to Lima and Callao, and resided there for more than two months. At Montevideo, as at other cities, the Legation of Mgr. Muzi and Mastai, were received incessantly in preaching, hearing confessions, and dispensing the Sacrament, that of Confirmation being administered to 12,000 persons in one place alone. But although the people in Central America well disposed towards the mission, and enthusiastic in their welcome, the Governments of the American republics were jealous of their new authority and apprehensive of disturbance. Signs were apparent of fresh revolutionary proceedings, and it was judged better to withdraw than, by remaining, to compromise the safety of the mission. Accordingly, the Legation set sail from Montevideo on the way back to Europe, on the 8th of February. Canon Mastai on this return voyage was in serious danger. In a violent storm he was washed from the deck of the vessel, and was carried down by the waves, but recovered himself in his berth and mounted to his place, and his mouth appeared paralyzed. His companions feared for his life. He could obtain, of course, but little medical care on board the ship. But by degrees the more dangerous symptoms abated, and the patient slowly was restored to health. It was evening when the Legation left Rio. May they reached Gibraltar, and, after a fortnight's stay, having procured the consent of a corvette to protect them against pirates, they proceeded by the Mediterranean, and on the 5th of June, Here they passed fourteen days of quarantine, and on the 7th of July, 1825, they were in Rome.

III.

Canon Mastai-Ferretti now betook him self anew to the service of the poor, the sick, and the orphans, and he was placed in the great hospital of Santo Spirito. In a short time he was chosen director of the hospice dell'Assunta, and afterwards he made President of the Hospice of St. Michele Rapa, a vast institution on the Trastevere, where children were taught and orphans found an asylum, and vice met with salutary repression. In this asylum and on prison, Mastai displayed considerable talents for administration. In 1827, on the 21st of May, he was nominated by Leo XII. to the Archbishopric of Spoleto, and was consecrated on Whitsunday, the 3d of June, by Cardinal Castiglioni, afterwards Pius VIII. For the space of five years Mgr. Mastai governed the See of Spoleto with such care, activity, and zeal, as to conciliate the confidence and affection of the people of that diocese, who were filled with admiration of his capacity, intelligence and virtue. In 1831 he was provisionally entrusted with the civil duties of the Delegate of Spoleto, and returning from Loreness, where he had been engaged in his episcopal functions, to Spoleto, he found that city in great alarm in consequence of the presence of about 5,000 rebels under the command of General Sercognani. But on the 31 of March, these misguided men, pursued by the Pontifical Militia, and learning that the advance guard of the Austrians was at Tolentino, were induced to surrender their arms into the custody of the Archbishop. The Delegate, the men of the Romagna and the Marches, likewise gave up their arms, which were at once forwarded to Rome. The good prelate then endeavored to effect the pacification of those disloyal subjects of the Holy See, and went to Rome to procure their pardon from the Pope. On his return to Spoleto, the young men drew his carriage in triumph to his house. On another occasion, a spy offered to the Archbishop a list of suspected persons, which he immediately burned, observing at the same time that a wolf which means to harm the flock must not begin by warning the shepherd. Pope Gregory XVI., on the 12th of December, 1832, translated Mgr. Mastai to the Bishopric of Imola, and held by a Cardinal, and thus vacant by resignation of Cardinal Giustiniani. In Imola Mgr. Mastai exhibited the same qualities as in Spoleto. He occupied himself in the details of the administration of his episcopal and charitable institutions in his diocese, introducing judicious reforms. He founded and endowed a house of refuge for the clergy, and a Bible academy for monthly discussion of sacred themes. He restored several churches and invited the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul to take the care of a female orphan house. He established an orphanage for boys, modelled on the Tata Giovanni plan, for teaching trades to the children and giving them food and clothing. He likewise founded a penitentiary, or refuge for fallen women, placing it under the care of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, whom he was thus the first to introduce into Italy. When Bishop of Imola, he received the purple, being reserved in petto by Gregory XVI. on the 23d of December, 1839, and proclaimed on the 14th of December, 1840, with the title of SS. Marcellinus and Peter. Cardinal Mastai was a constant resident within his diocese and to his zealous exertions, his clergy, and his people, showed itself in his work and mounted to his face, and his mouth appeared paralyzed. His companions feared for his life. He could obtain, of course, but little medical care on board the ship. But by degrees the more dangerous symptoms abated, and the patient slowly was restored to health. It was evening when the Legation left Rio. May they reached Gibraltar, and, after a fortnight's stay, having procured the consent of a corvette to protect them against pirates, they proceeded by the Mediterranean, and on the 5th of June. Here they passed fourteen days of quarantine, and on the 7th of July, 1825, they were in Rome.

III.

Canon Mastai-Ferretti now betook him self anew to the service of the poor, the sick, and the orphans, and he was placed in the great hospital of Santo Spirito. In a short time he was chosen director of the hospice dell'Assunta, and afterwards he made President of the Hospice of St. Michele Rapa, a vast institution on the Trastevere, where children were taught and orphans found an asylum, and vice met with salutary repression. In this asylum and on prison, Mastai displayed considerable talents for administration. In 1827, on the 21st of May, he was nominated by Leo XII. to the Archbishopric of Spoleto, and was consecrated on Whitsunday, the 3d of June, by Cardinal Castiglioni, afterwards Pius VIII. For the space of five years Mgr. Mastai governed the See of Spoleto with such care, activity, and zeal, as to conciliate the confidence and affection of the people of that diocese, who were filled with admiration of his capacity, intelligence and virtue. In 1831 he was provisionally entrusted with the civil duties of the Delegate of Spoleto, and returning from Loreness, where he had been engaged in his episcopal functions, to Spoleto, he found that city in great alarm in consequence of the presence of about 5,000 rebels under the command of General Sercognani. But on the 31 of March, these misguided men, pursued by the Pontifical Militia, and learning that the advance guard of the Austrians was at Tolentino, were induced to surrender their arms into the custody of the Archbishop. The Delegate, the men of the Romagna and the Marches, likewise gave up their arms, which were at once forwarded to Rome. The good prelate then endeavored to effect the pacification of those disloyal subjects of the Holy See, and went to Rome to procure their pardon from the Pope. On his return to Spoleto, the young men drew his carriage in triumph to his house. On another occasion, a spy offered to the Archbishop a list of suspected persons, which he immediately burned, observing at the same time that a wolf which means to harm the flock must not begin by warning the shepherd. Pope Gregory XVI., on the 12th of December, 1832, translated Mgr. Mastai to the Bishopric of Imola, held by a Cardinal, and thus vacant by resignation of Cardinal Giustiniani. In Imola Mgr. Mastai exhibited the same qualities as in Spoleto. He occupied himself in the details of the administration of his episcopal and charitable institutions in his diocese, introducing judicious reforms. He founded and endowed a house of refuge for the clergy, and a Bible academy for monthly discussion of sacred themes. He restored several churches and invited the Sisters of St. Vincent de Paul to take the care of a female orphan house. He established an orphanage for boys, modelled on the Tata Giovanni plan, for teaching trades to the children and giving them food and clothing. He likewise founded a penitentiary, or refuge for fallen women, placing it under the care of the Sisters of the Good Shepherd, whom he was thus the first to introduce into Italy. When Bishop of Imola, he received the purple, being reserved in petto by Gregory XVI. on the 23d of December, 1839, and proclaimed on the 14th of December, 1840, with the title of SS. Marcellinus and Peter. Cardinal Mastai was a constant resident within his diocese and to his zealous exertions, his clergy, and his people showed itself in his work and mounted to his face, and his mouth appeared paralyzed. His companions feared for his life. He could obtain, of course, but little medical care on board the ship. But by degrees the more dangerous symptoms abated, and the patient slowly was restored to health. It was evening when the Legation left Rio. May they reached Gibraltar, and, after a fortnight's stay, having procured the consent of a corvette to protect them against pirates, they proceeded by the Mediterranean, and on the 5th of June. Here they passed fourteen days of quarantine, and on the 7th of July, 1825, they were in Rome.

IV.

In the same year, 1846, in the beginning of the month of June, the Cardinals Archbishop-Bishop of Imola was in a spiritual retreat, together with a goodly number of his clergy. News was brought of the death of Gregory XVI. upon the 1st of June, at the age of 81 years. Cardinal Mastai at once returned to his episcopal palace, celebrated the rites for the deceased Pontiff, and then set out for Rome and arrived there on the evening of the 12th of June. On the 14th the Cardinals entered into Conclave. They were sixty-three in number. Five nominations reserved in petto in two consistories of 1845, and two vacancies made by the total of seventy, the complete number prescribed by the statutes of the Sacred College. Two days only, and consequently only four scrutinies sufficed to give to the Church which were made in 1871, in regard to the principles of education, and in regard to the expulsion of the Jesuits, were organized by hunting of the Church, but not by the Church's fidelity. The legislation which made Catholic universities to be dependent for their validity on State laws, including, as it did, all ecclesiastical appointments, as well as the hearing of confessions was an invention of purely secular antagonism to long-established Catholic rules. He saw the pushed of Papal nuncio to new rules, but a new repugnancy to rules which were old. The creation of a Ministry of Worship, the Pope's fear, and to depose them from their seats without appeal, the including priests to say Masses, accept alms, or even organ adjournation from fasting, were not new enactments introduced by the Church against the Pope, but new aggressions on a peaceable Church. We challenge the German statesmen to produce one single decree of Papal nuncio committed by the Church against pulsion of Protestant Germany. It was not till the new acts were passed, which found bishops and priests loud and free, that Pius IX. Nath made his encyclica protest. And when he made it, what he said was simply this, that the consciences of priests, by State law, and that no Catholic can be forced into obedience to such enactments as are "opposed to the Divine Law of the Church."

Yet it seems good to Prince Hohenlohe to speak of the Catholic Church as the aggressor on the liberties of the State. Both he and his confederates are perfectly well aware that such a statement is the exact opposite of the truth. And they are the more annoyed because their enemy has not yielded to their aggressions, but has been condemned by honest principle. Prince Hohenlohe, in his speech, said: "It was worse than a crime; it was a mistake." The indictable offence was certain states to which the Prince has since proclaimed his entire adhesion, and which, in the Prince's opinion, "ought to be treated in the conscience." Hence, the Church, in the exercise of her ordinary attack from the supply list of the Board and its further use in any department of school system of religious, and that principles as diplomatists treat promises—words which bind till convenience leads them. Now we are sure that Leo the Thirteenth will be admitted in his principles with all the Pontiffs who have sat in the Papal Chair. Should he approve any modus vivendi, it will be one of endurance, not of compromise.—Catholic Mirror.

The Just Limits of Gratuitous Education.

THE BEST OF COMMON SCHOOLS, BUT NO COLLEGES AT THE EXPENSE OF THE TAXPAYERS.

The statement in New York to get back to the original programme of popular education and curtail the expensive features of high schools and colleges, which graduate a very small percentage of the pupils of the common schools, is having an influence throughout the country. It is found that in almost all the large cities and towns the accommodations for the common school children are entirely insufficient, while costly buildings are used for the higher branches of science, language and art, which are attended by only a few pupils. In Chicago there are 110,184 children of school age, yet there are accommodations for scarcely half of them. The private schools have 28,000 pupils, the common schools, 43,000, leaving 39,000 provided for by the high school accommodations. These latter institutions, however, contain only about 1,500 pupils, leaving 37,500 children of pupil age, unprovided for, and, according to the Chicago Times, making allowance for those who have been sent to stores and factories to work, there remain about 12,000 children who are excluded from school privileges, because there are no accommodations, or rather, no accommodations to which they have access. As the situation in Chicago is the same, which obtains pretty generally throughout the country, we quote from the Times

Why are the common school accommodations insufficient? One of the principle reasons appears in the fact that the money contributed by taxpayers in common for the support of the common school system has been largely misappropriated to the establishment and support of select schools, from which pupils in common are excluded. The school statistics for 1875 are not yet published. But the school report for 1876 shows that the total average number of pupils in the public schools was 68,081. The total number in the high schools was.

Central High School	380
North Division High School	52
South Division High School	182
West Division High School	273
National Department	91
Total in high schools	1009

From which it appears that the number of pupils in the high schools was only 2½ per cent. of the whole number in the public schools.

The total amount voted the school fund for the year was $2,016,628. The total current cost of the public schools was $2,247,000. From which it will be seen that, though the high schools school only 2½ per cent. of all the pupils, they consumed 40 per cent. of the school money.

The school fund is exhibited in another way. The expense per pupil of supporting the common schools in 1876 appears from the school report to be $20.77, the expense of the high schools from $222.81 to $250.77, the expense being the highest in those schools where Latin and Greek are taught, and the lowest where only a few pupils. The average expense per pupil in the common schools, is, in the select or high schools the expense per pupil was as follows:

	No. pupils	Ex. per pupil.
Central High	380	$66.76
North Division High	182	41.68
South Division High	273	31.60
West Division High	182	31.60
National Department	91	61.12.
Total pupils	1009	Av. $50.61

From which the reader will see that the average expense per pupil, for the 2½ per cent. of the pupils in the high schools, was nearly three times the average expense per pupil of the 97½ per cent. of the pupils served by the common schools.

Can any rational person pretend that schools which serve only 2½ per cent. of all the pupils that participate in the benefits of the school fund are more entitled to 40 per cent. of the school money than the 97½ per cent. of the pupils are excluded schools which consume 2 per cent. of the school money for the special benefit of the pupils who share in the public school system, and who are the children of no amendment a fraction of the pupils at the high schools, and the number of which appears in the common schools can say person that the common school system is not a good one? Such special schools for the few at the cost of a system which is open equally to all, are unusual schools? It perfectly absurd to call them common schools, and yet such schools are called by common school and for all, and from which none is excluded by any test of education, of social status, or of anything else.

The public school system is intended to be a system of common schools, a system of schools common to all persons without the school age. The Times and Tribune of Chicago, Times and Journal, and Republican, and Herald, a thorough and efficient system of schools for the benefit of the children of the State may receive a good common school system.

In New York State the school tax last year was over $11,000,000, and very little percentage of that amount was used for the purpose of which common schools were the rule. In Brooklyn the school tax was very large percentage of that amount

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.,

THURSDAY EVENING, ... MAY 30

Subscribers will please specially look at the printed label on the margin or wrapper of the paper; the date there on shows when the subscription expires. They should also know that their taking the paper from the postoffice renders them liable for the subscription price as long as they continue to do so. Persons have an excuse to make for papers being sent after the time their subscription expires. If they wish their paper discontinued, by not taking it from the office the postmaster is bound to notify the publishers of that fact, and to have the paper stopped. We make this explanation for the information of those who make the excuse, when asked for payment, that they paid for it as long as ordered, but still continue to take it from the office.

MR. JOHN P. CROSS, our Traveling Agent, is now in Petaluma. He will visit different localities in Sonoma and Marin Counties during this his annual canvassing tour. We hope all Catholics in these, the most prosperous counties of the State, will extend to him a cordial welcome.

The Encyclical Letter of Leo XIII., and His Pastoral Letter, Whom Cardinal Pecci, as the Temporal Power of the Pope.

With the present issue of THE MONITOR we give, in the form of a supplement to our readers, two documents, the value and importance of which, it is hardly possible to overestimate. We are certain they will be carefully received, carefully perused, and deeply taken to heart by all who are Christians. We, certain they will be carefully perused, and deeply taken to heart by all who are Christians. We, certain they will be carefully received, Card to the Public.

From Father Rooney, O. P., Relative to the late Discussion Between the "Commercial Advocate," of this City, and Himself.

I owe an apology to the public for not having drawn to a triumphal close, in about four lines, the controversy referred to, as I could at any time have done since it was commenced. I saw, from the start, the manner of man I had to deal with. I had heard repeatedly of his vile bigotry, and when I saw how he charged me, without the least foundation, with having procured treason, and with having urged my audience to wilful perjury, on St. Patrick's Day, I was determined to have some fun with him. I wished to draw him out, to make him show his bigotry, his hatred of the Irish people and of the Roman Church. I succeeded admirably, whilst, at the same time, I never lost sight of presenting to him proofs that he was a slanderer, in his having preferred, so wantonly, the above charges against me. But he would not be convinced that he did me a wrong! We all know the old maxim: "A man convinced against his will is of the same opinion still."

I now proceed, out of respect for the public, and for a full vindication of myself, as all I have said of my opponent, and that all may clearly see that I am innocent of the foul charges alleged against me, to a direct logical proof of the falsity of my opponent's charges. In my oration I said: "As you are Christians, so also be true Romans." That sentence, which has rung on the minds of the Irish in every age since its utterance, has been the safeguard of our faith. So long as we treasure up that truth in our souls, and follow its meaning, so long will we have durability of faith. Anybody who hear me, swear to be, above all things, Roman, and never listen to a bishop, priest or layman who dares to contradict the voice of Rome. In your societies, gatherings, conventions, never allow any man who opposes Rome to have influence amongst you. "You must be obedient to Rome to be true Christians," said you will be the admiration of the world, but above all, of your mother, Rome, for your undying faith. (Oration in Pamphlet; pp. 7 and 8).

I also said the Pope, in "the Irish mind, as in the mind and heart of the Church, means the being that stands next to God, in regard to us; and hence the Irish remained, as St. Patrick wished, real, genuine Romans." May God grant that they will ever remain so, and their faith shall never our Stygian lake, but the remains consumption upon the surface of the pool and settled, to the end that society may not be incommoded disturbed by it. How shall it be done is a question that concerns that multitude of poor rate-payers, who have no constitutional Convention, and it is almost certain that the instrument to be framed by that body will restrict, if it does not prohibit altogether, the power of municipal corporations to borrow debts for any purpose. The question, therefore, is to be considered at this time is, shall an exception be made in favor of the purchase of water works by this city? San Francisco is supposed to contain about fifty thousand (50,000) souls, and of this number seventeen thousand (17,000) households pay for all the water delivered by the Spring Valley Company. There are 17,000 households, and one of the poorer classes, generally themselves, who, under the law, are compelled to go water for fifty per at a reasonable rates. The rich property owners pay nothing, or comparatively nothing, for water.

The assessed value of all the property, real and personal, in this city is about two hundred and fifty millions (250,000,000) dollars. Of this property $200,000,000 pay nothing for water, whilst the other fifty millions pay for all that is used, including that furnished the city for flushing sewers, sprinkling the streets, and supplying and watering the parks. Though water for these purposes is assessed free, it is really paid for by the householders, and these conditions, taxes are paid at the rate of one dollar and one half of a dollar for every one of the water company's assessed from the 17,000 water rate payers. All the most valuable property in the city being exempt from charge for water, the entire burden necessarily falls on the rate payers. Take for example the Palace, Occidental, Lick, Grand and Commercial Hotels, the most costly and valuable properties in the city—they pay comparatively nothing for the maintenance of water works, because each of them has an artesian well or well-rim, which is drawn the water used by their occupants. Again, look at the property owned by such absentees as A. B. Mc'Cray, A. C. Whitcomb, and others on Market and Fremont Sts. They have this property for a mere song, and though the city is expending $500,000 in front of it, free exclusively in value enormously, it contributes not one cent toward paying for the water used in sprinkling the street upon which it fronts. The cost of this is deducted out of the rate payers also. The property of all the railway, banking, gas and other corporations is exempt likewise. The millions of dollars worth of property in stores and warehouses in this city contribute nothing for it a sou, for the honest ownership of this very property would have to pay large sums annually for insurance in addition to what they now pay. The Park is maintained chiefly at the recreation of the rich. It is unnecessary to the poor because of its remoteness from them; yet the poor householder has to pay for the water used in keeping it sightly. Free water for city purposes is a delusion and a snare—it is all charged to the 17,000 rate-payers. The bulk of our population reside outside of a line drawn through Jones, Market, Seventh and Mission streets to the bay, and yet fifty-two thirds of all the money collected by the Spring Valley Company for water. In other words, the owners of less than one third in value of the city pay two-thirds of the cost of its water supply. The owners of the property inside this line pay—described—the Horses, Lounings, Parrots, Phrenologists, and all the rich men are supposed to purchase of water in city for thrifty, knowing that they would be taxed for their maintenance, but why the small householders should oppose a measure is something not finding out. It must be that the rich men influence the newspapers, and the newspapers in turn frighten the people and create a panic, during the existence of which it is impossible to do anything rational. There were three propositions before the late Legislature relating to the water question:

First—The Swift bill to regulate rates.

Second—The Dean bill to raise by a general tax—and that a tax on the property, thus relieving the rate payer to that extent.

Third—The Perdue bill, (now in a popular language as "the fifteen million steal.

The Swift bill, as it passed the Assembly, provided (1) A Commission of Seven to be appointed, five by the Mayor and two by the Water Company, to regulate rates; (2) That the rates established by this Commission should not exceed ten per cent. on the capital stock of the Company, together with the cost of operating and maintaining the works; (3) That the rates so fixed should not exceed eighty-five per cent. of the then existing rates. But as no rates have ever been legally established therefore, the act does not really mean nothing, as it is the cost of maintaining the works, and they in the hands of the corporation, was to be added to the net income of ten per cent. upon its capital stock of $7,000,000, which would be, by the bill, it can really be seen how very little relief, if any, that measure would have brought to the water rate payer. This bill, as amended by the Senate, gave the city four of the seven Commissioners the majority governing in all things, and so theorized them to fix such rates as would yield eight per cent. per annum upon the actual cost of the works. The difference between the two Houses was as to the rate of interest the Senate having raised it from eight per cent. which was the actual cost of the company's works to govern the income instead of an arbitrary limitation of its capital by statute. But as the "water question" was thought to be too good a thing to remove from politics just yet, this adjustment of it was not accepted. A ticket headed "Cheap water for the people" will be a good one for the ensuing year, and, after that, hereafter. We shall see.

The second Dean bill provided a purchase of the water works by the city financing that the Supervisors should issue bonds to the value of a sum sufficient to pay one-half the cost of water supplied by the company, thus making a portion of this burden on the property of the rich, who are much benefited by it and are well able to secure it. The absentee, put in itself, as a character, and the Bulletin as "the people's steed of all," and evidently it made the people think so too, because it was called a "popular measure" by some of the Legislature. Not applicable is the language of Lord Chesterfield, Lick, Grand and Commercial Hotels—the most costly and valuable properties in the city—they pay comparatively nothing for the maintenance of water works, because each of them has an artesian well or well-rim, which is drawn the water used by their occupants. Again, look at the property owned by such absentees as A. B. McCray, A. C. Whitcomb, and others on Market and Fremont Sts. They have this property for a mere song, and though the city is expending $500,000 in front of it, free exclusively in value enormously, it contributes not one cent toward paying for the water used in sprinkling the street upon which it fronts. The cost of this is deducted out of the rate payers also. The property of all the railway, banking, gas and other corporations is exempt likewise. The millions of dollars worth of property in stores and warehouses in this city contribute nothing for it a sou, for the honest ownership of this very property would have to pay large sums annually for insurance in addition to what they now pay. The Park is maintained chiefly at the recreation of the rich. It is unnecessary to the poor because of its remoteness from them; yet the poor householder has to pay for the water used in keeping it sightly. Free water for city purposes is a delusion and a snare—it is all charged to the 17,000 rate-payers. The bulk of our population reside outside of a line drawn through Jones, Market, Seventh and Mission streets to the bay, and yet fifty-two thirds of all the money collected by the Spring Valley Company for water. In other words, the owners of less than one third in value of the city pay two-thirds of the cost of its water supply. The owners of the property inside this line pay—described—the Horses, Lounings, Parrots, Phrenologists, all the rich men are supposed to purchase of water in city for thrifty, knowing that they would be taxed for their maintenance, but why the small householders should oppose a measure is something not finding out. It must be that the rich men influence the newspapers, and the newspapers in turn frighten the people and create a panic, during the existence of which it is impossible to do anything rational. There were three propositions before the late Legislature relating to the water question:

First—The Swift bill to regulate rates.

Second—The Dean bill to raise by a general tax—and that a tax on the property, thus relieving the rate payer to that extent.

Third—The Perdue bill, (now in a popular language as "the fifteen million steal.

The Swift bill, as it passed the Assembly, provided (1) A Commission of Seven to be appointed, five by the Mayor and two by the Water Company, to regulate rates; (2) That the rates established by this Commission should not exceed ten per cent. on the capital stock of the Company, together with the cost of operating and maintaining the works; (3) That the rates so fixed should not exceed eighty-five per cent. of the then existing rates. But as no rates have ever been legally established therefore, the act does really mean nothing, as it is the cost of maintaining the works, and they in the hands of the corporation, was to be added to the net income of ten per cent. upon its capital stock of $7,000,000, which would be, by the bill, it can really be seen how very little relief, if any, that measure would have brought to the water rate payer. This bill, as amended by the Senate, gave the city four of the seven Commissioners the majority governing in all things, and so theorized them to fix such rates as would yield eight per cent. per annum upon the actual cost of the works. The difference between the two Houses was as to the rate of interest the Senate having raised it from eight per cent. which was the actual cost of the

BOOTS AND SHOES.

BOOTS and SHOES!
BOOTS and SHOES!
BOOTS and SHOES!

HAVING ENLARGED OUR STORE to twice its former size, gives us ample room to accommodate the rush to our bottom. We have absolutely cut loose of credit, so that our prices can be promptly waited on. We now make a SWEEPING REDUCTION.

IN PRICES OF

FIRST-CLASS GOODS.

Ladies' Fine French Kid Button Boots to order, with Tassels, the latest style, $5.00

✱✱ We have such a demand for this style of French Kid Button Boots, that we have made a large stock of

French Kid Button Boots for - $4.00
(Same style which other houses sell for $5.)
French Kid Fox Button Boots 5 different widths, for - - $3.00
Ladies' Kid Foxed Balmorals, $1.50 to - - - - - - $2.50

GENT'S WARE.

Gents' French Ties from $2 to $4.
Gents' French Ties to order - - $5.
Gents' Buckle Alexis, $2 and upwards.
Gents' Calf Boots from $2.50 upwards.
Gents' Canvas Shoes Reduced to $1.75.

✱✱ We have the Largest Store and carry the Largest Stock of any Shoe House in the world. In proof of same, call at

NOLAN BROS., 738 & 740
MARKET ST.
SAN FRANCISCO.

myl6-tf

DEASY BRO'S,
MANUFACTURERS AND DEALERS IN
BOOTS & SHOES

C. L. STREET, PL
BOOT AND SHOE STORE,
2508 MISSION STREET,
New Twenty first Street San Francisco.

Ladies' and Gents' Boots and Shoes made to order. Repairing neatly done.

N. B.—Positively no business transacted on the Sabbath. 2aug

Men's Working Shoes, $2 50
Boots from $5 00 to $10 00
Soleing and Heeling, $1 00
AL E. MAINS,
200 Fifteen street, two doors east Fremont. 1627

GOLD any worker can make 4 a day at home. Costly outfit free. Address TRUE & CO., Augusta, Me.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Me.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA INEZ COLLEGE,
SANTA BARBARA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.
CONDUCTED BY THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED ON the Santa Inez river, in a beautiful valley on the eastern slope of the San Rafael mountains, four miles, in a direct line, from the ocean, and two miles from the Mission of Santa Inez. These places were delightful spots in the Spanish time, the former being called "Valley of live oak, strawberry and laurel, give to the plains and valleys the name of Paradise, in the early days. The dry season, so disagreeable in other parts of California, is here relieved by the cool breezes of the coast, which blow from Santa Inez. What beauty more appropriate for the education of youth than that in which beauty and sublimity contend for the mastery; where the gently rounded hills and undulating plains seem to be ranged at the feet of the rugged mountains; where the tempered distribution of the balm breezes, with the warm Inez, and the balmy breath of the forests and the flowers contend for the mastery with the cooler. The gentle influence of Christian teachers, tempered with the mildness of nature, tend to cause the mind to "look through nature up to nature's God."

The health and salubrity of the climate of Santa Barbara are proverbial, and attract the professions. There are few invalids who leave for Santa Barbara in search of health, but have to find and varied scenery of this country, who have not returned to their homes in perfect health and vigor. In view of these facts Santa Inez College may be safely recommended as a most desirable boarding school.

By request, I hereby recommend Mr. Rev. Arch. Bishop San Rafael, to have just taken charge of the College. A limited number of boarders under the age of eight years will be received. For particulars, address St. Mary's College, Santa Barbara, or regular trips from San Francisco to Santa Barbara.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State and authorized to confer academic honors, will commence the second term for the scholastic year, on Monday, the 16th of January, 1878. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once	$15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter	$60 00
Washing, per quarter	12 50

Physicians' fees, fuel and lights may be paid for at the rate of $5 per quarter.

Music, per quarter $15 00
Piano, Violin, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but these branches, with the use of the Piano, are optional. Languages, for Plain Sewing and Fancy Work, free.

Paymasters are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils will be received at any time, and be entitled to the benefit of the whole session from the time of their admission.

For further particulars apply to the Lady Superior.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA, CALIFORNIA

THE TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL session will commence Tuesday, August 7th. This institution was founded in 1851, and in 1852 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies six large buildings, with extensive playgrounds, and is supplied with all the comforts, including pure water, which is considered the best in the State. The grounds are extensive and the healthy location is well chosen.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:

(Invariably half yearly in advance)

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per session	$150 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month,	$6 50.
Guitar, per month,	$2 50

No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the 31st of June.

For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Clara, Cal.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1851, chartered in 1855 by act of the Legislature of the State of California, and situated on the Corner of Mission and Fifteenth streets, offers unsurpassed advantages to young ladies.

A large addition has recently been erected to the main house to accommodate the lady boarders.

The course of instruction embraces all the branches necessary to the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

Parents, in confiding their children to the care of the Sisters of Notre Dame, may be assured that every attention will be given to their intellectual and moral culture, while the system of government combines sufficient firmness with maternal solicitude to insure the real progress and advantage of the pupil.

The Twelfth Annual Session will commence Thursday, July 19, 1877.

TERMS:

Per quarter session, (payable in advance)
Board, tuition, washing, and use of bed-linen,	$60 00
Music, with use of instrument	15 00
Vocal Music	10 00
Drawing and Painting,	10 00
Vocation spent at the Academy	20 00
Use of Piano,	10 00
Terms per month (in advance)
Historic Classes	$7 00
Elocution	5 00
Preparatory Classes	4 00
Drawing	5 00

These pupils residing at a distance from the College, and desirous of leaving the City, are provided therewith at a trifling expense. For such other particulars apply to the Lady Superior.

Extra charge for French and Spanish, Kinds of Plain and Fancy Needle-work. 50

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND CALIFORNIA

Conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary

THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY situated between Webster street and Brush street, commanding an extensive view of the lake. The building, recently erected, is supplied with all the modern improvements, and has been adapted to people for the comfort of the inmates.

The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.

TERMS:

(payable half yearly in advance)

Board and tuition (French and Spanish included), $200
Washing, 20
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution), 20
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing, Painting form extra charges.

For further particulars apply to
REV. A. BRUNEGGI, S. J.,
President.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
BENICIA CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of Mercy, and is situated in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia.

The scholastic year comprises ten months, opens on the 16th of August, and ends about the middle of June.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly)

Board and Tuition,	$225 00
Entrance Fee,	10 00
Washing,	45 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $20.

Music, Drawing and Music form extra charges.

The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE
344 Jessie St., bet. Fourth & Fifth,
SAN FRANCISCO.

THIS LITERARY INSTITUTION WAS incorporated, according to the laws of the State, on the 30th of April, 1855, and empowered to confer academic honors. The literary honors so are granted by any University in the United States.

The design of the Institution is to give a thorough Classical, Mathematical and Philosophical education. But, besides the classical, there is also a Commercial Course.

The College is attended for day-scholars only.

TERMS PER MONTH
(Payable in advance)

Tuition, in Preparatory Department,	$3 00
" in Grammar Department,	5 00
" in Higher Department,	8 00

EXTRA CHARGES.

For the use of Instruments in Natural Philosophy and Chemicals, first year, $3 00
For the use of Instruments, etc., second year, 5 00
For each Academical Decree, 10 00

REV. JOHN PINASCO, S. J.,
President.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a delightful place for health, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive and the building large and convenient.

The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:

(Invariably half yearly in advance)

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per annum,	$200 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month,	$6 50.
Guitar, per month,	$2 50

No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the 31st of June.

For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.

CHARTERED IN 1869, AND CONducted by the priests of the Congregation of the Mission, offers unsurpassed advantages to young men.

For further particulars apply to
REV. E. BERLAM, President.

MT. ST. MARY'S ACADEMY,
CONDUCTED BY THE
Sisters of St. Dominic,
RENO, NEVADA.

For particulars address
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

LATE IRISH NEWS.

A Challenge by the Dublin Irishman.

We here challenge the Government to produce a single treasonable report, referring to Irish Letters conduct and the management of Ireland, which have been forwarded from time to time from Dublin Castle to Dublin Castle. These reports, we allege, contain certain particulars and details which will go to corroborate the Irish Letters and Irish Leaders, and to only relate the facts known to the public, but supplement them, by showing, generally, the press has by this time confessed that the accused parties are not only as good as they claimed, but a salutary scandal. Some generals, which, at first, totally disregarded, have sunk into a sudden and unconscious silence, tacitly acknowledging that the accusations against them were true as true as they are terrible.

The Irish Letters, only venture to profess to doubt the correctness of the charges preferred against him. As these have so great confidence that their faint-toned denial was baseless, so we invite them to join with us in challenging the Government to produce and publish those documents.

If they really believed what they wrote they will not shrink from the publication of those reports will not be unduly biased against the Irish people.

If they unduly shrink from advertising this challenge, we will publish it, and invite the public attention of Irish Leaders, and with refusing to retract.

The public, also, will have to judge the conduct of the Government, and, if they have the hands, it never could deny Lord Lieutenant's delinquencies but it never candidly disclaimed, or, should, deny justice indulgence and mercy.

If it withhold now those official reports from the public, the public is bound to believe it stands convicted, by its silence, they contain truths too terrible to be told.

Dublin Freeman's Journal on the Loitrim Outrage.

Our world imagine that in England the press of the country, and, at least, the Irish Leaders, that Irish journalists had never learned that the Government of Ireland, under any circumstances, stirred, spring from causes as easily, as it is afraid that horror and reproduction should be expressed at a great crime; but a philosophical reader, who knows the Irish Leaders, and horror; he endeavors to discover what the true cause of which have given rise to the outrage, the particular description under discussion and the particular place, the Irish Leaders, on occasion, discuss the causes of crime, very seldom, if ever, discuss the effect, and, in a political prisoner of the Czar, shut down in the Siberian mines, or Siberian Prison, the Russian secret police. She was tried by a jury of her peers, and, under such circumstances, amidst a sense of wild enthusiasm, honors, yet, in a political prisoner, the Czar, in spite of, and, the remarkable event, and very little about the circumstances of the outrage, and, in all, only military gentlemen with ball cartridge, had shot down, the Czar, and, in spite of, the system of police and justice—after the arrest and had one, when, it did take a prisoner, and, in a miscalculation, and, that the indignation, the jury and the sense in court were overwhelming, could, in spite of, the Government, and, the Czar, and, the Czar, and, the Czar

AGRICULTURAL.

Hints to Settlers.

The three elements essential to success in agricultural industry are: First, good soil; second, abundance of water; third, timber. Incidental to these are a salubrious climate and good facilities for marketing surplus produce. With a superior climate, abundance of water and timber and ready access to market, an indifferent or only tolerable soil offers greater inducements to settlers than the very best soil wanting in these auxiliaries to successful development. Those who have carefully studied the history and progress of settlement in the Western States will bear testimony in support of this assertion. The well-timbered and well-watered uplands and rolling lands of Ohio, Kentucky, Missouri and Iowa, were permanently settled before the richer bottoms along the rivers, and have accumulated more wealth in the course of forty years. Applying the rule to California, it would seem that the very counties in which agriculture is the most backward are the ones actually affording the greatest inducements to small farmers, while those in which farming has for some years been the one pursuit, are most deficient in the elements essential to success.

The rainfall of this season is a good study for men of small means in search of farms. Those sections which have had most might certainly, with even but a tolerable soil, produce the best average crops. We have had, say 24 inches at San Francisco. At Sacramento they have had 35 per cent. less; in the lower part of the San Joaquin valley, not more than half as much as at Sacramento; from Colusa and Chico, upwards the Sacramento Valley, 12 to 15 per cent. more than here; at Petaluma, 30 per cent. and at Healdsburg 60 per cent. more. Experienced farmers in this State will be able to tell exactly where the best and where the poorest average harvest will be reaped from year to year. In a season like this, when there has been enough rain everywhere, it will make but little difference, perhaps; but in years when the total rainfall on this peninsula is less than 15 or 16 inches, it may be foretold without mistake that the crops in the San Joaquin Valley will be short, those in the Sonoma and Napa Valleys abundant, and nearly full crops in the upper Sacramento Valley.

But as a rule the greatest amount of rain falls along the foothills, in the region of the old placer mines, from Shasta to Tuolumne. One year with another, there is twice as much rain at Shasta, Grass Valley, Newala, Gold Run, Volcano, Georgetown, Placerville, Jackson, Volcano, Mokelumne Hill, Murphys, Angels, Columbia, Sonora and Tuolumne as at Sacramento, and four or five times as much as at any settlement in the San Joaquin or Tulare Valleys from Lat. 37 drop to Visalia. The floods of the San Joaquin River are not caused by valley rains, but by tributaries, the Mokelumne, Calaveras, Tuolumne, Stanislaus, Merced and Kern and Kings Rivers, which all collect their flows away in the foothills and higher timber belt. Where the greatest quantity of water falls there also is the most timber; and there, too, would be the best soil, but for the fact that the topography of the region qui ckly drains off the rain into immense ravines and breaks—Before the destroying hand of the miner and that human hyena, the Chinaman, was laid upon the timber of the foothills, it was one of the most delightfully wooded regions of the continent, overspread with a luxuriant carpet of grass and flowers from Mt. Diablo's lily till the Fourth of July, and even later in the summer. Disafforesting has done its work and turned it into a desert from the last of April till the first rains every season.

Yet this same desert-looking region, denuded as it is of its grand forests of spreading oaks and singing pines, with all its rich and well-studied pastures exterminated by countless thousands of sheep and by the burning sun of the long, long Summers and Autumns, we say again, offers better inducements to small farmers than the great plains of Fresno, Merced and the lower Sacramento and San Joaquin. Because much of it has been denuded, it still possesses a great deal of timber and a superabundance of water. Of the great affluents of the two principal rivers of the State pass through it, and each is fed by hundreds of smaller streams, affording water facilities for irrigating more than half the land. Besides, it abounds in springs up to the very top of the hills and of the higher mountains. It is asserted and admitted to ultimate only because the cure of mining rents upon it. For nearly quarter of a century it had lost its primary pioneer mining. The miner's work was destruction to the agricultural interest. Had three-twenty-five years been employed in the reclamation and cultivation of the soil, in preparing reservoirs to catch and hold the heavy Winter rains, and canals and ditches to distribute it through the Summer and Autumn, the foothills to-day would be the most flourishing farming and horticultural part of the State, as in spite of all that has been done to destroy their natural capabilities, they are still the most inviting to those in search of pleasant, healthful and cheap home and willing to labor in earnest for their improvement. Everything that grows in the valleys can be grown in these foothills, and many things in greater perfection and abundance, particularly the grape and some of the choicest fruits.—Chronicle.

On the Best Seeds and Breeds.

As the season for planting and sowing—the precious and time—has again arrived, we think a call special attention to a matter of great consequence to every and cultivator—the selection and use of the best seeds obtainable. Whatever the crop to be grown, the farmer should first decide upon planting the best or a superior variety, and then endeavor to secure choice seed of the variety he has determined to cultivate. The success of the farmer results in a large degree from his knowledge of the laws of reproduction in both the animal and vegetable kingdoms. Ithas been well said, that without this the husbandman will not realize the importance of procuring the best seeds or the best breeding stock he can obtain, or know how to perpetuate them when once obtained. The vital importance of this department of agricultural knowledge is not sufficiently understood or appreciated. Unfortunately, upon the whole question of profit or loss may depend upon the quality of the seeds and the animals with which a farm may be stocked.

Take for example Indian corn, the planting of which will be in order for several weeks to come in various parts of the country. The seed is important factor in a corn crop; a good seed of suitable varieties," says an Illinois farmer; and he is right. And he is also correct in advising farmers to plant varieties adapted to the climate where grown and for the purposes in view. Speaking to the corn cultivators of the West, he very truly says that "if one desires to have a good early crop for feeding in September he will find the 'Ohio Premium,' one of the best. It ripens in about one hundred days, and with good culture and a fair season will yield fifty bushels per acre. The same variety is also valuable for late planting. There are a great many varieties of the dent corn, both white and yellow, and each has a local name and reputation. What harder many years been known in Central Illinois as 'Tennessee' corn has given good crops and generally satisfaction. Good, good crops and generally satisfactory. Good, sound seed is indispensable, however, and it should be well tested before it is planted. The advice about the necessity of good, sound seed is applicable to all varieties and sections of the country, and should be heeded by corn growers everywhere—as well in the East and South as in the West. There, also, the seed should be selected with care and skill, taking ears that are perfectly ripe, with small cobs and without large butt ends, are said to be most successful and to keep the corn from growing later. This is believed to be especially true of the eight-rowed Canada corn, so generally grown in the Eastern States and transplanted to northern latitudes.

"Let the best," adds the Illinois farmer, "be the motto of every farmer in selecting or purchasing any kind of seed, and he should give a wide berth to any gentleman who has ever supplied him an inferior, foul or spurious article, representing it as choice. It is a matter in which the growers of cereals and vegetables of all kinds cannot exercise too much care, for, as before stated, the whole question of profit or loss may depend upon the quality of the seed used. Many farmers are extremely careless about the selection and saving of seed, and they are generally the ones who at harvest time—the men who so insistently and hopelessly assert that "farming don't pay."

What is true in regard to seeds is equally so concerning breeding animals. The wise farmer knows it is nearly as cheap to raise an animal which will sell at a given age for $100 as it is to grow one that will bring only half or quarter that amount—the main difference being in the extra expense incurred for the services of a good sire and in the saving of thousands of farmers who know better (who "know the right and still the wrong person") continue to breed from scrub animals and lose the profits they might secure by breeding from the best. Indeed, in conclusion, let us say that the wide-awake farmer takes advantage of his knowledge of the fact that it costs little more to raise a good animal than a bad one, and that it may prove several times as profitable as the other. In brief, he "goes for" the uses the best breeds of animals, and the choicest grains and seeds of the best varieties. And that is just what we urge every farmer to do this season, confident that all who use the best seeds and sires and pay proper attention to their stock and management will find the little extra cost on the start to prove a good investment, returning many fold in profit.—N. Y. World.

Shall the Farmer be Educated?

Although it has been said that every farmer should not try to be a geologist, meteorologist, chemist, etc., or study medicine to be his own doctor, or law to make it unnecessary to employ a lawyer, or theology with the idea view of doing his own preaching, still there is little doubt that all general information, and the more exact the better, has a tendency, if well applied, to be useful to the farmer's best interests. Every cultivator desires to gather from the soil, at small expense, large crops, with as little injury as possible to the source of production. He cannot do this without being familiar with the general principles in the various departments of his profession and understanding most thoroughly the art of agriculture. The man who grows crops well must understand the nature of soils, which includes more research than would enable him to arrive at the conclusion that one is sandy and another clayey, etc. And he who would market his crops to best advantage, and properly attend to the multitude of affairs that accumulate about the farmer of to-day, he must possess a knowledge beyond the common branches of reading, writing and arithmetic. What kind of an education, then, should the farmer have? Whatever other opinions they may entertain in regard to the farmer's education, all will agree that it should be made essentially practical, that education shall be a thorough training in business affairs. This more than any other one thing will fit him for the various and many-sided transactions of his busy life. It is necessary that he should be a man of business as well as a producer. It is, then, to be regarded as a fortunate fact at the time that so many of our farmers sons are attending Agricultural College, in institutes of learning, and that they are in a position to secure a good education in the most enlightened manner, and be more independent and self-reliant.

The Cultivation of Wheat in China.

Reports come from China that some of the Chinese who have returned there from California are embarking in the cultivation of wheat, with very flattering prospects. The crop average fully forty bushels to the acre, of good quality, and the product promises in fair time to be in excess of the home consumption. As it costs only about twenty cents per bushel to raise it, the profit is very large greater than that realized from vegetables. It is thought that vast tracts, not applied to useful occupation for years, will be turned to good account in the new enterprise, and give employment and provide food for even millions of laborers. The hope will go further than this Coast that the reports are true, that the most sanguine expectations of the most enthusiastic in the matter will be more than realized, and that not only will the wheat field afford labor for every unemployed native there, but also entire from the Pacific States the laborers who are here. If there is any crop or any industry which can yield in China a profit so rich as to cause the exodus from California of every mother son of the Mongolian race, the mass of our people will be only too happy to have the good news proclaimed at the very earliest time, that all join in the happy send-off—the "Hinaman" and may they never return here. Success, therefore, to the wheat culture in China. Even our own farmers and millers will fervently join with the working classes in the invocation, beyond a doubt.—Examiner.

ENGLISH BUTTER IMPORTS.—In relation to the importation of butter into England, the Journal of Commerce of Liverpool, in reply to France, Next in importance is Holland, then Hohmark, Germany, Belgium, British North America, then the United States. The best foreign butter comes from the Continent of Europe. Of these, Kiel butter is the best early sort from February to April. From April to October Normandy and Friesland are in great swarp. From October to November, what is known as "Island butter, has which, really comes from Germany, is considered as best. In 1873 England received 1,227,720 hundred weight, value £6,207,000, and last year 1,620,674 hundred weight value £9,053,457. In 1867 the amount of imported American cheese was 95,476 hundred weight, and in 1876 1,538,437 hundred weight, or of a value of £5,000,000.

COD PLANTING.—In New England the past season the farmers showed a large increase of the Indian corn crop; in many towns double was raised of what had been grown on preceding seasons; and the coming year it is already predicted that therein crop will be double what it was last year in many of the towns in New England. We hope this will be so, for Indian corn is not only one of the best crops, but one of the surest crops that can be grown on our New England soil. It is valuable for its grain and its forage, as the latter is said when well cured to be worth as much as the hay crop that may be grown on the same area the year after the land is seeded down to grass.

GET READY FOR SPRING'S WORK.—Winter is gone, and Spring has made its appearance! Farmers: are you ready to begin your work? Are ploughs in order? Are harrows ready for use? Are your teams well fed and ready for work? Are your plans all made for the opening of the new campaign on the farm? If so, then go ahead, driving your work—never suffering it to drive you as the prompt farmer never does.

GRASS.—Grass that is merely thin, and not weedy, many, if the soil is weak and exhausted, be greatly improved by sowing over it in the spring a good lawn mixture, and then covering with fine soil rolling in. Turf that is rather thin may be restored to a fine condition by means of occasional thin sprinklings of nitrate of soda in the months April, May and June. Grass seeds may be sown in March and April, and in August and September, and turf can be laid down at any time between October and May, provided the ground is in proper condition.

MORE than five million cans of corn are now packed—in Maine annually and sold in every part of the world, yielding a business to the state of about $1,150,000, and giving profitable employment to about eight or ten thousand people during the packing season.

In feeding stock, wheat, clover, beans and oats are considered among the most rapid producers of flesh, while corn promotes the growth of fat more readily than other grains.

Market Reports

FOR THE WEEK ENDING MAY 30, 1878.

(From the Commercial Herald of To-Day.)

The price of Wheat has now fallen to 2s 4 B., while the price in Liverpool has dropped below that. Our stocks of old Wheat are diminishing rapidly, as there are now several ships on the berth loading, either on farmers' or speculators' account—that of the latter said to have been purchased some time ago at rates far above those now ruling. Barley is in light supply, and prices are off, particularly for feed grain, while choice flowing is offering less freely. Oats are without material change. Corn keeps up well, particularly for choice doublide lots suited to milling and the Mexican trade. The venture made from Nebraska, by rail, were not successful, as the quality of the Corn was a very inferior mixture. The Rye from same was more successful, owing to the very light stock of this grain in market. Hops are plentiful, and prices of good Oregon suited to the English market have been placed below 5c. Potatoes, both old and new are in light supply, causing high prices to be paid for Sweet Potatoes, etc., are cheaper than ever, and now scarcely pay for the labor of gathering. Hides remain almost as heretofore. Tallow continues to shave and make export. Wool has declined 3c & 9 lb on low and inferior grades, while good medium and Spoken qualities continue quotably firm, and show decline from the highest rates of the season. Beans continue scarce and high, with an active trade supposed to be going on. Butter and cheese are plentiful, and the price of the former very low, even for the best choice roll. Eggs are unusually plentiful for this season of the year, owing to very heavy arrivals from Nebraska and other overland marts. Fruits of all seasonable varieties are now arriving freely, and for the most part selling at low prices as compared with previous years—we allude to Berries, Currants, etc.

FLOUR. The price of Superfine has now declined to $4 75@5; Extra Superfine, $5@5 50; Bakers' and Family Extras, $5 75@6 25; Oregon Extras $5 50@5 75. The best Silk dressed Extras are now selling at $6 50 @ 7 00 Bbl.

WHEAT. We quote good to choice Milling at $1 85@1 92½; common to fair Milling, $1 70 @1 80; and good Shipping common.

BARLEY.—We quote feed at 95c@1 05 @ ctl, and Brewing at $1 10@1 30 ctl—according to purchaser and time of payment.

OATS.—We quote choice Feed at $1 50@1 65 ctl; ordinary to good Feed at $1 35@1 45; and Milling at $1 60@1 72½ctl.

CORN.—At this date we quote Large Yellow at $2 62½@2 75; Small Round, $2 65@2 75; and White, $2 50@2 60 ctl.

HAY.—The market continues light. Transcontinental of the new crop have been received, but were in unsatisfactory condition, being more mixed with Clover, which sells at $7@10 $Ton. We quote Old Wheat at $12@14; Barley at $8 @11; and Oat at $10@13 $ Ton.

RYE.—In the absence of sales we may be quoted at 90c@$1 $ ctl.

PEARL BARLEY.—This article seems to be quite a favorite in Hong Kong, as the trade is steadily increasing. Prices rule from 3½c @4c.

BUCKWHEAT.—Sales light, and the season over, prices nominal.

BEANS.—Sales Bayo, $3 50@3 75; Pinks, $3 25@3 50; Small White, $4@4 25; Lima, $4 50; White, small, $4 50@4 75; Red, $3 25@3 50; Navy White, $4@4 50; Pink, $3 25@3 50; Navy White, $4@4 50; Red, $3 25@3 50. The market remains the trade has been confined to the retail trade, and considerable has been sold at prices ruling from 12 to 15c. The stock of this class is therefore very light, in fact the market is almost cleared of all grades, and yet it is dull on all hands. Receipts are so light as compared with former years, that the cash transactions are small they must expect to be kept down out down very close. The northern Wools arrive very slowly, and so far as known, there is but little for sale. As regards condition, the result is that buyers are indifferent about purchasing, and the prices may be termed dull for this grade. Occasionally, however, a parcel of Northern Wool comes to hand and they are taken at fair prices. A few samples of Humboldt Wool have been received, which sell, and at the proper time they will be doubtless be sought for at full prices on account of their superior quality. The range of quotations are as follows: Southern and San Joaquin, 12@ 16c; Northern, 18@22c. Sales for the week compute 80,000 lbs in lots, within the range of 19@20c, the latter for a superior lot of Northern.

HIDES.—The local market is more active, and quite an improvement in prices is noted, especially in the hides of the small stock, for which competition between buyers and at not due to any actual advance in values, but to the demand in the Eastern markets, which latter are quoted at a higher range than previously noted. We quote Dry at 15c; Dry Kip and Calf, 18c. We quote heavy salted Steers, 8c; light salted Steers and Cows, 8c; Salted Kip, 8c; Salted Calf, 7c lb.

TALLOW.—The prices rule light with steady demand for all offered, which for the week just report. Rendered, of fair to choice grade, is quotable at 7@8c, and Refined at 8@8½c. In hogs, shipping order, with sales of 20,000 lb within the range.

POTATOES Receipts of old are very light, the crop being nearly exhausted. New are running in quite freely, and in good order, but have declined slightly. We quote the range of prices for good to choice new at 3@3½c. Sweets are extreme rate, 1@1 at nominal, say 3@3½c, as to condition.

ONIONS.—There are very few choice in market. The best comes in Sacks, and sells at the latter price for Oregon; inferior at lower prices, ranging down to 2½@3c per lb. Very poor, selling at 1@1½c for red or white.

BEANS.—Sales of Bayo are retailed are large. Crops are in light supply. New strained is quotable within the range of 3@3½c, according to quality for choice white. Pinks and Colds command 3@3½c as to quality.

BEESWAX.—Is in moderate supply, with limited demand. The present rate is 27@30 for good to choice.

HOPS.—Market extremely dull at very low prices, principally in consequence of the low local trade. Present quotations, 4@6c for good to choice, the latter for a shipping crop.

BULBS.—Are in good demand, and we quote bulbs, for export, private, but understood to be quotable at 75@80c ctl.

FRUITS, VEGETABLES.—Receipts are moderate, demand very limited, and we quote present rates as follows: Hens, $7 50@8; Roosters, $8@8 50; Chickens, $6@6 50; Broilers, $4@4 50; Turkeys, $2@2 50 ⅊ pair; Turkeys, live, 19@15c ⅊ lb.

CATTLE.—The supply of choice Beef is not in so free, and the prices are a shade firmer. All the other varieties are plentiful, prices ruling very low. Slaughterers prices are as follows: Beef, per quarter, first quality, 6@7c; second quality, 4@5c; Mutton, Alfalfa, 6@6c choice. Calves, 6@8c. Spring Lambs, 6@7c. Hogs, Spring, 8@8½c; Fat, 6@7c; Sows, 5@6c. Pork, 6@7c. Hogs dressed is extremely quiet, owing to the low prices ruling for Eastern corn meats. We quote rates on foot for all descriptions at 6@6½c; dressed, 8@8½c; the latter an extreme rate for choice hard flows.

DAIRY PRODUCTS.—Receipts of fresh roll Butter for the week have been very large and the market is kept steadily, carding to prices to rule. The market is limited and merchants are anxious to effect sales. The large prices for choice grades is offered at 22@25c; common to good, commands 16@22c. New Pickled Roll goes slowly at 12@15c. Cow Keg, fair sales at 20@22c; old California Keg and Firkin is in good demand, offering to close at 12@ 17c as to quality. Eastern keg is in limited demand at very, the rates ruling 16@18c. Fresh California Cheese is coming in quite freely, and stocks accumulating, now quotable at 9@12½c, good to choice grades. Dairy factory, Inglesses, sells at 12@13c. Fresh California Eggs are in fair supply. Eastern are plentiful, and the market dull and rates declining steadily. We quote fresh Ranch, 25@26c; Oregon, 23@ 24c; Eastern in order, 20@22c.

FRUIT.—The daily receipts of Currants, Cherries, Strawberries, etc., are liberal. A few Apricots have also appeared. Apples are very scarce. The supply of oranges and lemons is liberal. Vegetables, other than Potatoes, are plentiful and cheap. Cherries choice, 10@12c ⅊ lb common, 8@10c ⅊ lb; Strawberries, 10@12½c ⅊ chest. Gooseberries, 6@7c ⅊ lb. Raspberries, in fair supply, 20c ⅊ box. Apricots, 10@15c ⅊ box. Apples, 10@15c ⅊ box.

VEGETABLES.—Cabbage, 75c ⅊ 100 lbs; Cucumbers, 50@75c ⅊ doz; Asparagus, 50@75c ⅊ doz; Summer Squash, 25@50c ⅊ box; Rhubarb, 50@75c ⅊ lb; Green Peas, 6 ⅊ lb; String Beans, 20@25c; Chili Peppers (dry), 12½c; Garlic, 15@20c; Okra (dry), 15@20c.

Gun regards not how much we give, but the good will with which we give it.—St. Gregory.

New Advertisements.

GRAND SPRING OPENING —OF— MILLENERY ...AND... FANCY GOODS AND LADIES' FINISHED UNDERWEAR, Notions, Household Goods and Gents' Furnishing Goods.

Manufacturers of Boys' and Men's Nice Fitting Suits of French Beaver, Diagonals, California and Oregon Cashmeres and Scotch Tweeds.

PALMER BROS. 736, 738, 740, 742, 744 MARKET ST. S.F.

McCARTHY BROS. BEST OLD GOVERNMENT JAVA COFFEE, NO PURE SPICES.

New Advertisements.

THE CLEARANCE SALE OF D. LANDERS WILL BE Continued Until Further Notice, And during the week I shall offer still GREATER INDUCEMENTS. BED SPREADS, Half Price. BLANKETS, Half Price. TOWELS AND NAPKINS, Half Price. SILKS AND DRESS GOODS, Half Price.

I am Selling Cartwright & Warner's English and Merino Underwear at less than Eastern Manufactured Goods. Now is the time to Buy them.

During the continuance of this sale all Goods will be sold strictly for CASH.

All persons indebted to the late firm will please make immediate payment.

D. LANDERS, SUCCESSOR TO BYRNE, LANDERS & BYRNE, THURLOW BLOCK, 120 Kearny St. 1824

Important to All. A. GOLDMANN, Practicle Repairer of Broken Articles, AUCH AS — VASES, Marble Statuary and Platters, Piano, Bronze and Alabaster Figures, Mugs, and Glass Ware, Fans, PEARL and SHELL in OPER. Toilet Articles, Amber, Meerschaum, Fancy Ornaments, Opera Glasses, Porcelain Gas Stacks and Dishes of every description. No matter how Badly Broken. With or without Hinges. Also, Jewelry, Silver and Plated Table Ware, Bronze Figures, Vases, Card Receivers, Metal Ornaments, etc. Bronzing, Silver and Gold Plating, In all its Branches A Specialty. Shop and Residence 1025 Market Street, Between Sixth and Seventh streets, S. F. The above Place is also the Depot for Goldmann's Celebrated Fire and Hot Water Proof MAGIC CEMENT (Liquid Form) ☞ The only Article of the kind now in Market, which is guaranteed by the Inventor as represented. Price 25 and 50 cents per Bottle. ☞ A Liberal Discount to the trade. 1819

Ancient and Modern Fountains, Vases, Statuary, Bronzes, Lanterns and Chandeliers, Fountains complete with Statuary, Gas Fixtures, Chandeliers, Pendants, Brackets, Globes, Shades, Etc. Manufacturers of Bronze Goods, Gas Fixtures, Chandeliers, Lanterns, Etc. Gas Fixtures Gilded by the Process Known only to Us. Gilding Repaired by Our Own Process. Gas Fixtures Repaired and Repaired. Gas Fixtures Altered to Suit Other Gas. Gas Fixtures Manufactured to Order

THE MISER'S DEATH.

BY A CATHOLIC MISSIONARY.

One afternoon I received the following note:

"HEV. AND RESPECTED SIR—I hope you will pardon the liberty I take in addressing you, but my poor old master has not long to live; he cannot, I think, last many days; and it would be very thankful if you would see him before he dies. He does not know that I have written this, and I am afraid will not receive you kindly; but pray have the charity to come.

"From your most obedient servant,

"MARTHA WILSON."

The direction was to a small street in the suburbs, one of those shabby-genteel localities, in which small rickety houses shoot up with unknown growth; their unused fronts generally displaying in a couple of years several unsightly cracks, the streets ill-paved, and badly drained.

After several fruitless inquiries, I at length found myself at my destination. I knocked, and was admitted by Mrs. Wilson, she was the housekeeper to the old gentleman who was sick, and had been long a penitent of mine. She was a woman of rather superior education, as appears from her letter, and had been many years in the family, and loved her master. She was about sixty years of age, of a tall, thin figure, a mild intellectual cast of features, and was dressed in faded black silk, that looked as if, like her, it had seen better days.

"Oh, sir," said she, "thank God you are come! but have the goodness to step into the parlor before you see my master, as I wish to speak to you about him."

She showed me into a small dingy room, plainly furnished, but every thing clean and in scrupulous order. One side, opposite the window, from the floor to the ceiling, was occupied by large japanned tin letters, forming an aristocratic name emblazoned on a capital ground. An old bureau, placed in a corner, by its massive iron safe; and a few numbered drawers, with their frowsel with papers tied with red tape, occupied the centre of the apartment. The only embellishing features in the room were two opposite paintings in oil; one, a Murillo, a Holy Family, in which breathed the tenderest piety—the other, a portrait of a Spanish cavalier, by Velasquez, and painted with extraordinary force and breadth. I could have gazed long at those beautiful paintings, which gave an intellectual tint to the grinding, penurious air of the room, but my conductress was anxious to obtain my attention. Her information was somewhat jerky; it was the outpourings of an overcharged heart, and was accompanied with many tears. What I remember is as follows:

Her employer's name was Hamilton. He was the youngest son of an ancient but decayed Catholic family. With a younger son's scanty portion, he devoted his talents, which were of no mean order, to the law. He was article to a respectable solicitor of large practice in a wealthy town in Yorkshire. After finishing with a London conveyancer, and passing a successful examination, he entered into partnership with his late master. They lived together in apparent harmony for some years, until his partner died. Left unshackled to his own resources, and the full development of his power in fairly unfolded, he rapidly acquired wealth, chiefly by lending money on mortgage to country squires who lived too fast for the welfare of their estates, and who stood in need of a temporary supply to meet their fashion-taxing engagements.

On his forty-fifth anniversary he was still a bachelor, though, from his property and wealth, he had been for him to have selected a willing bride from the neighboring families who had unmarried daughters to dispose of.

"He was then, sir," said the housekeeper, "very different looking man to what he is now—tall, well-made, and of dignified carriage; his impressed reverence, and, if not love, a certain fear by his presence. His face was pale and very thoughtful; he never entered into any amusement, except in occasional rubber at whist, at which he excelled.

"It was at this time that he had to manage the affairs of an East India colonel of the name of Graham. The colonel had retired from his profession with a large fortune and an only daughter. His constitution was much shattered by thirty years campaigning in India, and he lived alternately at Bath and Cheltenham, for the benefit of the waters, varying his enjoyments with an annual visit to London in the season. But his sanguine temperament and irritable disposition did not suit a quiet life. Hurried by gambling, at first, merely as a stimulus to kill time, afterwards as the great resource of his life. His days and nights were devoted to this fatal and all-absorbing pursuit. He danced for fortune, and lost his only child, a beautiful and accomplished girl of eighteen, and in a moment of excitement he married her to a man, whom, for position, or his family, she considered in the degrading interval of the marriage ceremony, a beggar and long-lost son.

"As yet he was largely; crowds, unsuccessful and ruined gamesters would hang on his chair and envy his luck as he nightly swept his winnings from the board. He was called the lucky colonel; and the owner and the partners of the hell through respectful and fawning attention to his slightest wish, and at length to treat him as an equal, preach it was a house where heavy and almost unbalanced stakes were played. At length fortune made a deal so against his colonel. Night after night he lost, until not only his immense winnings had disappeared, but he had dipped considerably into his ample fortune. Stung with desperation, he redoubled his efforts to retrieve himself; played higher stakes—but in vain. The result was still the same—he was pursuing the hunted track—accomplishing the usual end of the gambler—to be sucked down and overwhelmed in the vortex of ruin.

"His disconsolate child had long witnessed with grief the fatal and absorbing passion of her father. In vain had she, with tears and earnest prayers, remonstrated with an infatuated parent that he would abandon play forever, and leave that scene of horror where his peace was nightly unnerved, for ever, and quiet pleasures of a country life. 'No, Emily, he would say, with a stern and sad smile, which angered and grieved her, 'no my dear child—I must regain from those ruffians what they have robbed me of, or my ruin is complete. My fortune must not be impoverished by my last fatal folly. I will yet win back with interest gold—I know I will, and more than I have lost.'

"The night fortune again smiled on him he doubled pounds. Exulting from success, he joined the opposite table, where every night, every evening, wine provoked the laughing, jostling, and sometimes fierce altercation of the votaries of hazard. He could not sit quietly for his opposite had long failed him, but he quaffed many bumpers of champagne in congratulatory libations to his success. With a heated and excited brain he returned to the gaming table, and flushed with wine, he seized again the fatal cards. Fatal they were to him. He lost again—and again, and again, until he had given notes of hand for every shilling he possessed, with the exception of his house, furniture, and a small property in Yorkshire. With every rigid feature fearfully discolored, with an excessive pallor fearful to utter, and which made the callous habitues of the hell even start and stare with wonder, the colonel retired once more the place, which was nearly crushed in his clinched fingers, and muttering the direst vindictive vehemence for some moments, dashed them with massive force on the board. 'Seven's the main! I stake my commission on the event.' His bet was taken. He lost. Rising from his seat, he strode into the middle of the salon stopped—raised his eyes to the ceiling, until their bloodshot white was almost visible; his clenched hands were outstretched and rigid—his lips moved convulsively, but not a sound was audible; his chest heaved and swell—and he fell to the floor in a fit.

"'Call a coach for the colonel, and the croupier, with unusual apathy and easy sang froid. 'Gentlemen, make your game.' And the game was resumed. In a short time he had not been ruined, the demon of despair at his heart, and his life in deadly peril.

"An acquaintance of the colonel, who had more humanity than the rest, accompanied him home. He was in a state of stupor. He was a young officer in the army, and I had previously known him in Yorkshire where he regretted—was captured. Here my master was out, and Captain Ellering was waited for him in the drawing room. My young mistress went there to seek for some embroidery, and they had scarcely the acquaintance that was commenced in happier times.

"Suffice it to say, in less than a month he married her hand. She was too fondly attached to him to refuse, but still she could scarcely bring herself to give her consent. The captain did ask my master's consent, and a pretty storm of abuse he got for his pains.

"'Marry my daughter, you walking piece of animated pipe-clay? Pray what settlement can you intend to make upon her? I believe, sir, your whole estate consists of your beggarly commission and some ninety pounds a year, and which your present extravagance will in a few weeks or months deprive you of.'

"Mr. Hamilton, said the other, 'I do not wish to marry your daughter for money.'

"'You would be disappointed if I did,' replied the excited old man. 'I have you what, sir, if you marry my daughter, she shall be no longer a child of mine. I will never see her again; never give her assistance; and don't expect anything after my death. I will rather leave my money to an asylum for stray dogs. There, sir, you have your answer. Good morning, sir.'

"Poor Miss Emily soon became most stretched, and almost heart in him in the mental strife and misery she endured in her father's house. To unpleasing, bitter and relentless, which pierced the heart of his innocent victim, he one day added blows. He struck to the ground the pale, defenseless girl, in his violent fury, and she was still. I could endure my feelings no longer. I rushed into the room and beheld the poor child stretched upon the carpet with her mother, and my old master coolly employed in entering into his ledger that day's gaming money.

"With my upbraiding him for his cruelty, he merely replied, 'Take the girl away, let her marry him if she like, it is no concern of mine—she is no longer a child of mine.'

"'You do not deserve to have a child, sir, to treat her with such cruelty.

"'Leave the room, sir,' said he, looking at me with intense bitterness.

"I carried out the pale, inanimate form of my deer child, for so I felt she was! followed by applying some simple restoratives, she soon recovered. The poor girl sobbed for a long time, feeling that behind her to her parent was now rudely severed. That night, sir, the disinherited girl left her father's roof, that unfortunate old man. He was found next morning, sir, the blood expelled her from his bosom. But she did not go alone, sir, I went with her. I got her a temporary asylum with a respectable family, with which I was connected, and I shared her poverty, and who felt for her sorrows as if she had been her own daughter.

"In a short time, she married Captain Ellering. I was then occasionally, and then by stealth, in my old master's house, so that they always seemed truly happy. But misfortunes, sir, soon followed them. They lost two children out of five; and last year, the captain died too; and poor Miss Emily, or rather Mrs. Ellering, was a widow, with only a small pension for her support, and that of her three children.

"Eight years ago, sir, and shortly after his daughter's marriage, my master gave up his house, which he said was too expensive for him, and came to this poor little abode. All the furniture was sold off, and the left this house with the exception of those two pictures, and a few in his bedroom as stories; for any quantity of lumber he got rid of the pictures, and they were purchased by a gentleman who lived in the neighborhood, who knew the value of them, however small the best cheap from his titled debtors, when they extravagance prompted their taking up their lids in time. We have lived here in the greatest apparent penury—every day almost, some little comfort has been stolen, or, as a useless luxury; in fact, my master has become more miserly since the death. His only pleasure is in counting the gold. His appetite has fallen off from the low diet, and which he always keeps locked, I am in gold which he always keeps locked, I am so afraid he will lose it, and then it will make me very uneasy, as fear every night the old man's life may be taken for the honest pence we have saved to know the wealth that is in the house.

"You may ask, sir, why I have been in his service so long. I will tell you, sir. When his poor wife was in the agonies of death, she took me aside to her bedside, and gave me to leave him, but to watch over the welfare of her motherless baby; and that sacred trust, sir, I have endeavored to fulfill to the best of my poor ability. It is for her sake, chiefly, that I have sent for you this evening, sir, as in the hope that you may move his cold and unfeeling heart to be reconciled to his child. I know he has been grievously wrong, and that you may prepare him for death, as a Christian man ought to do.

"He was, in early youth, sir, very attentive to his religious duties. He was then a good Catholic, sir, but that was overclouded with the gloomy hue of the fatal virtuous career of his son. But I fear the lonely and relentless, which pierced the heart of his innocent victim, he one day added blows. He struck to the ground the pale, defenseless girl, in his violent fury, and she was still. I could endure my feelings no longer. I rushed into the room and beheld the poor child stretched upon the carpet with her mother, and my old master coolly employed in entering into his ledger that day's gaming money.

"With my upbraiding him for his cruelty, he merely replied, 'Take the girl away, let her marry him if she like, it is no concern of mine—she is no longer a child of mine.'

"'You do not deserve to have a child, sir, to treat her with such cruelty.

"'Leave the room, sir,' said he, looking at me with intense bitterness.

"I carried out the pale, inanimate form of my deer child, for so I felt she was! followed by applying some simple restoratives, she soon recovered. The poor girl sobbed for a long time, feeling that behind her to her parent was now rudely severed. That night, sir, the disinherited girl left her father's roof, that unfortunate old man. He was found next morning, sir, the blood expelled her from his bosom. But she did not go alone, sir, I went with her. I got her a temporary asylum with a respectable family, with which I was connected, and I shared her poverty, and who felt for her sorrows as if she had been her own daughter.

"In a short time, she married Captain Ellering. I was then occasionally, and then by stealth, in my old master's house, so that they always seemed truly happy. But misfortunes, sir, soon followed them. They lost two children out of five; and last year, the captain died too; and poor Miss Emily, or rather Mrs. Ellering, was a widow, with only a small pension for her support, and that of her three children.

"Eight years ago, sir, and shortly after his daughter's marriage, my master gave up his house, which he said was too expensive for him, and came to this poor little abode. All the furniture was sold off, and the left this house, with the exception of those two pictures, and a few in his bedroom as stories; for any quantity of lumber he got rid of the pictures, and they were purchased by a gentleman who lived in the neighborhood, who knew the value of them, however small the best cheap from his titled debtors, when they extravagance prompted their taking up their lids in time. We have lived here in the greatest apparent penury—every day almost, some little comfort has been stolen, or, as a useless luxury; in fact, my master has become more miserly since the death. His only pleasure is in counting the gold. His appetite has fallen off from the low diet, and which he always keeps locked, I am so afraid he will lose it, and then it will make me very uneasy, as fear every night the old man's life may be taken for the honest pence we have saved to know the wealth that is in the house.

"You may ask, sir, why I have been in his service so long. I will tell you, sir. When his poor wife was in the agonies of death, she took me aside to her bedside, and gave me to leave him, but to watch over the welfare of her motherless baby; and that sacred trust, sir, I have endeavored to fulfill to the best of my poor ability. It is for her sake, chiefly, that I have sent for you this evening, sir, as in the hope that you may move his cold and unfeeling heart to be reconciled to his child. I know he has been grievously wrong, and that you may prepare him for death, as a Christian man ought to do.

"He was, in early youth, sir, very attentive to his religious duties. He was then a good Catholic, sir, but that is overclouded with the gloomy hue of the fatal virtuous career of his son. But I fear the

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 3

"Providence seems to have given us our day as a special season to the Catholic press. It is for it to preserve the purity of old order and faith of the faith, where they still prevail, and to impart them where these impiety and cold indifference have caused them to be forgotten." Letter of Pope Pius IX.

THE PRESS, ITS USE AND ABUSE.—"If such a powerful instrument of good and evil, we should be all anxious to extend the benefit and check the baneful influence. Therefore, you wish to have an honest press, you ought honestly and generously support it." Archbishop MacHale.

Most of the diocesans or provinces possess a weekly journal, which they design to some or more Bishops, which, as a true friend periodically visits the various families, and is entitled to a corresponding kindly welcome. Instead of sending scurrilous sheets, we should rather encourage such Catholic journals as greatly contributing to the cause of truth. We take pleasure in echoing here the wise words of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, who say on this subject: "We cheerfully acknowledge the services the Catholic Press has rendered to religion, as also the disinterestedness with which, in most instances, it has been conducted, although yielding to publishers and editors very insufficient tuition for their labors. We exhort the Catholic community to extend to these publications a more liberal support, in order that they may be enabled the better to serve so worthy the great cause they advocate. It is our duty to avail ourselves of this mode of making known the truth and of refuting the great cause they advocate. It is our duty to avail ourselves of this mode of making known the truthful and to refute, and counteract the misapprehensions which so great ally prevail in regard to them." Archbishop Kenrick.

Notice to "Monitor" Subscribers.

We have forwarded bills to many of our subscribers, and hope they will respond promptly. By the use of smaller type we now present our readers every week with a very large amount of carefully selected and interesting reading matter, forming a complete compendium of the week's news, particularly Catholic and Irish intelligence. This has necessitated our expenses, which now every year over two hundred dollars a week. Any one can therefore see the necessity of subscribers paying up regularly in advance, so as to enable us to bear this constant strain. The sums due may appear small to each individual, but in the aggregate they are considerable. We must, therefore, urgently request all who are indebted to us, to hasten to clear up their accounts as soon as possible.

Several have replied promptly and sent us their remittances, together with kind and appreciating remarks on the improvements made in our paper. We thank them sincerely for their cheering encouragement, and must to do all we can to merit its continuance.

We take also to announce that, in order to avoid mistakes, all moneys that hereafter forward be paid directly to the office, either by Express or Post Office orders, except in the case of first subscribers paid to our authorized agents, whom receipts will be always duly acknowledged.

We receive a payment of four dollars last week from Vallejo without any name accompanying it. The person who sent it will please send his name to this office.

Death of a Sister of Mercy.

At St. Mary's Hospital, on this city, September 21, Sister Imelda Rice, a native of Ireland, aged twenty-two years and nine months. A Solemn Requiem Mass was celebrated at St. Mary's Hospital Chapel, after which her remains were interred in St. Michael's Cemetery. R. I. P.

Death of a Sister of Charity.

Sister Fidelia Buckley died on Tuesday, October 1st, at the Orphan Asylum, South San Francisco. She was one of the pioneer Sisters who came to California in 1852 with Sister Francis, and was scarcely six years of age, the greater part of which was spent in the religious state, which she entered at an early age, immediately after her conversion to the Catholic faith. After the Solemn Requiem Mass this morning she will be interred in the plot of the orphans and sectarian Calvary Cemetery. Boston papers will please copy.—R. I. P.

Illness of Father Gibney.

We regret to learn that the Rev. Father Gibney, Rector of St. Peter's parish, has had a very severe hemorrhage, which seriously endangered his life. Though very weak, there are still some hopes of his recovery. He is now at St. Mary's Hospital.

Bishop Elder.

The latest accounts say that Bishop Elder is slowly recovering in his yet very weak Pho Natchez Democrat says: "One of the saddest scenes we ever witnessed occurred in St. Mary's Cathedral last Sunday (Sept. September 8), at High Mass. Father Finn had delivered a sermon in which he alluded in most pathetic terms to the beloved Bishop Elder, who was supposed to be dying at Vicksburg, a martyr to duty. Just at the close of the Mass, Very Rev. Father Gringoire, V. G., read to the congregation several dispatches about the Bishop's condition. They grew from bad to worse, and the good Father's voice, as he read the last and most discouraging of them, became tremulous; his eyes filled, and the emotions of sorrow almost entirely overcame him. When the last was announced from Bishop Leray, he says, 'We have very little hope for the Bishop, he asks your prayers.' There was a sudden outburst of grief, a suffusion of tears; strong men wept, and the scene was one long to be remembered.

The Western Watchman says: "Nearly all our Eastern exchanges contain obituaries of Bishop Elder. The good Bishop will be sorely tempted to envy when he shall have advanced sufficiently towards recovery to permit his reading the newspapers. The escape of the Bishop of Natchez, under Providence, and to the assiduous attentions and kind nursing of his mother, who hurried to the bed side from New Orleans on the first announcement of the Bishop's illness."

Ordained for California.

On Sunday, September 8, at the Cathedral, Killarney, at eight o'clock, Mass, the Rev. Patrick O'Connor of Ballyhegland was ordained priest by the Most Rev. Dr. McCarthy. The Rev. Gentleman will be attached to the Colleges of All Hallows and St. Sulpice, and is destined for the mission of San Francisco, California. Very Rev. Canon Coffey, and Rev. M. McCarthy, Adm., assisted at the ceremony. The young gentleman has the happiness of being the first ordained by his Lordship the Most Rev. Dr. McCarthy.

ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH, SAN JOSE.

We learn from the San Jose Herald that the work of breaking ground for the above structure commenced Monday morning at the corner of Ninth and Santa Clara streets, under the supervision of the contractor, Mr. John Charles. The building will be of brick, 50x100 feet on the ground. The style will be gothic, with the usual accompaniments, such as will be a steeple, the gables, steeples, and pots such buttresses, stone, in which can be sold such merchandise as shall be large enough to cover wall, and change for the stores as tight roof, while at the same time the upper stories are used as a church, one hundred and fifty feet long, and sixty feet wide, or she is willing to pay a rent of from $250 to $300 a year, I don't see any objection to those people paying taxes for that purpose (applause).

"General Butler next said that while he believed that all men lie a right to be exclusive if they wished, he did not believe in their doing it with other people's money (laughter)."

THE BOSTON PILOT ON GEN. BUTLER'S NOMINATION.

The Democracy of Massachusetts have nominated by acclamation General Butler for Governor, in defiance of the will and authority of the party managers.

It is a terrible rebuke to the politicians. We have had in favor of the nomination we would have preferred to see General Butler make an independent fight, believe, represented the right of the people to do as they pleased.

There is yet was a bitter popular sensation than this. The people feel it without leaders, rebelling against the tyranny of the schemers who assumed to control them.

So irrepressible is the popular result, so significant the determination to think and to choose for themselves, that the leaders of the Democratic party of Boston sinks into secondary importance.

The Democracy of Massachusetts has spoken its will, and has thrown to the winds the swaddling clothes that had been prepared for them. This is an example that will be followed by the Democracy of the Union. The people are sick of the tyranny of the politicians. The State caucus and Congressional district conventions have been abolished by one unanimous vote of the convention.

Whether Butler is elected or not—and we are certain he will be—this grand fact remains, that there is nothing higher than an convention of the people, and the people know it.

The coming election will be a contest between the working people and the jobbing gold classes. The Sun of the 30th says: "Our advices from all sections of the country, as the newspapers are nearly all on the 'Democratic side,' but which are independent of party, leave the impression that the Democrats are in a majority in Massachusetts, and that the Republicans are in a minority, and that the Democrats will carry the State, and that the Democrats will carry the State, and that the Democrats will carry the State

LATEST IRISH NEWS.

Railway Accident in Cork.

A serious accident occurred on Sunday night, September 8th, on the Cork and Macroom Railway. The train due in Cork from Macroom at 8.20 ran off the rails between Ballincollig and Cork, and dragged four carriages with it. The carriages were quite new and several persons injured. It is reported that some of the passengers are killed. The carriages are stated to be broken and huddled together in a heap, and the cries of dying and wounded are terrible. One man has already been ascertained to be dead, another has had his leg cut off. The train was pretty well filled with passengers, it being Sunday evening. Particulars wanting. A special train left Cork for the scene, with physicians and medical assistance.

The train consisted of four carriages and the guard's van—two third-class carriages, one second-class, and one first. The train was proceeding at the ordinary rate of about thirty miles an hour, when the engine suddenly left the rails, dragging the two third-class carriages with it. The engine embedded itself in the soil at one side, and the carriages swaying to the other side were completely shattered. The train was unusually crowded, and the two third class carriages were filled with passengers. Fortunately the accident occurred at a level part of the line or the consequences would have been more disastrous. The engine-driver, a man named Maltray, was killed on the spot; the fireman, Patrick Kidney, had his leg completely cut off; a boy (unknown) and a lady named Dwyer were also killed. A great many passengers were injured. A young lady, named Hayes, had both her legs fractured. Two brothers, named Burke, who were in company with Miss Hayes, had each their legs fractured. Several other injuries of a similar character were sustained. The military from Ballincollig were among the first arrivals, and did good service.

Up to midnight eight persons were treated at the North Infirmary for injuries caused by the railway accident. Several had untouch cuts and bruises, and when the wounds were dressed they left. Others received fracture of the ribs and spinal injuries, and were detained in the institution.

Mr. Casey, publican, one of those injured, states that he joined the train at Ballincollig, with his wife and child. They occupied the last compartment of a carriage second from the engine. The train was pretty full. There was a festival at Kilmurry, and a large number of people had been attracted. The train left Ballincollig at the regular time. They were proceeding along at a speed of about thirty miles an hour, when suddenly they felt the carriage jolting and swaying. In a minute or so the carriage left the rails and were dragged along. Nothing could be heard but the breaking of timber and glass. The carriage which Mr. Casey occupied was upset, and those who occupied the compartment fell upon him and trampled him. The scene was one fearful—screams and children screaming; the moans of wounded persons were heard mingling with the smashing of glass, the creaking of timber, and the steam escaping from the engine. He seized a child, thinking it was his own, and with his wife, endeavored to make his way out of the carriage. The carriage was completely broken, and it was not difficult to get out. He found, on reaching a place of safety, that the child he had taken with him was not his own, but on inquiry he ascertained that his own child was safe. When moving through the debris he was cautioned not to stand on a woman who was lying almost dead. The carriage in front of the one he occupied was shattered to pieces.

Spies in Churches.

An extraordinary story is told by the Galway Vindicator respecting an attempt to meddle with the consciences of some members of the Constabulary force, quite superior to anything tried by Prince Bismarck or Dr. Falck, though just in the same spirit as the notable May laws. On Sunday week and the preceding Sunday, it is stated, a number of men were told off by a head constable to attend in two grey Catholic Church in the city, as well as that at Rushy Park, and to report verbally what words were uttered by the officiating clergymen when addressing their respective congregations. "If this remarkable tale be true—and the Vindicator says its authority is credible—we have no hesitation in saying that it reveals a state of things in the management of the Police Force which would discredit the rule of Russia. Even in that semi-barbarous country no such thing would, we are convinced, be attempted as sending policemen of a particular religious belief to act the spy upon their pastors. It is a most discreditable attempt—always presuming the story to be well-founded—to sow and foster a brood of pestiferous Tallowts in the Police Force. It is an outrage on the men and an insult to the Catholic people of this country which has no modern parallel. It is, in fact, a stretch of police espionage which would not be attempted, we verily believe, in any country in Europe.

We are enabled to state that the Lord Lieutenant and the Duchess of Marlborough have selected for their winter residence Knockdrin Castle. Sir Richard Levinge's beautiful place, near Mullingar, in the very centre of a lovely lake country, and within such easy distance of Dublin as will allow the Lord Lieutenant to attend without inconvenience to official requirements. Their Graces seem determined to become thoroughly acquainted with all the various attractions of this favored island. Black Castle on the Boyne; Carrowville, on our Irish Rhine, the Blackwater; Cork and "the pleasant waters of the Rirer Lee; Killarney, Connemara, Belfast, and Donegal, in the far north, have each in its turn welcomed with acclaim the Duke and Duchess. Their presence in the county of Westmeath will, we are sure, have the best effect. There will be for his Grace peculiar enjoyment in the lake fishing and shooting of the district; and her Grace, with that solicitude for the poor and suffering she has so constantly evinced since she came to Ireland, will have ample scope for the exercise of her benevolence.

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

Antrim.

A public meeting, composed chiefly of the working classes, was held in the Victoria Hall, Belfast, on Aug. 21, to consider the proclamation recently issued by the Mayor, Sir John Preston, against bands and processions parading within the borough. The hall was densely crowded, and hundreds were unable to gain admission. Resolutions were adopted condemnatory of the Mayor's conduct, which was regarded as an undue restriction up the liberty of peaceful citizens.

Armagh.

The Following Orangemen were convicted and sentenced to two months imprisonment each for participating in the disturbances at Portadown on September 15th: James Watson, William Vernon, James Stewart, John Alimore, Thomas Bunbury, John Crawhell, John Russell, Irwin Mathison, John Watson, Isaac Watson, John Boyd, John Russell, Jr., Thomas McCourtlie, Waters, McAuley, Rooney, Ferguson, Hanna, Peel and Allen.

A handsome new bell arrived at Porta down station on August 25th for St. Patricks, and was greatly admired by the large crowds which flocked to see it. It was cast by Messrs. Thomas Sheridan & Co., Eagle Foundry, Dublin, and its purity of tone, high finish, and excellent workmanship reflect much credit upon their skill and taste. The weight of the bell is 10 cwt. 1 qr. 17 lbs.; the frame, bell, etc., weighing altogether 3 tons, 3 cwt. and some pounds. The bell when it is properly swung will have cost £300. Of this sum Mr. James Greer collected £100. Mr. Chas. Greer gave a handsome donation previous to his death, and the parishioners subscribed liberally.

Carlow.

The Irish Times of August 27th, says of the crops in Carlow: "Although the weather during the past week was most unfavorable for harvesting, the amount of corn uncut in this district is very small, and the favorable change in the weather which happily took place on Friday afternoon, and still continues, has enabled the farmers to place the corn which had been reaped in a condition of comparative safety. They must, however, be at considerable loss by the manner in which the crops, particularly oats, were lodged, as it was a matter of extreme difficulty to reap. The wages of the laborers have rarely been so great as during this season, and it will certainly be their own fault if they do not try to make some provision for the coming winter. Great fears having yet been throbbed, growers have unanimously had an opinion of pessimism upon the probability of the yield, but complaints as to the quality of the barley are rather rife; however, we have heard that many of those who complain of the smallness of the grain had, indeed, by the favorable character of the weather, cut the corn before it had become properly matured. We have heard no complaints about the oat crop, and he would be exceptions indeed who could have failed to be satisfied with the appearance of the wheat in this district. Turnips, mangold wurtzel, &c., look first class, but the potato stalks have almost disappeared. Farmers are seldom with their harvest operations they have not time to dig them in any quantity, so that we are in a state of comparative ignorance as regards the extent to which the blight has attacked the tubers."

Cavan.

Rev. Mr. Tierney, a distinguished student of St. Augustine's College, Cavan, and a zealous and indefatigable member of the Redemptorist Order, which he entered in September, 1873, died August 13. He was a native of Lavey, county Cavan, and highly esteemed and held in great respect by the superiors of his order. He was born in 1846, and all through his sacred mission he proved a devoted and untiring servant of his Divine Master.

Clare.

A mission, which was opened in Newmarket-on-Fergus, on Sunday, 4th August, by the Redemptorist Fathers, Maloughlin (superior), Mullett, and Dougherty, was brought to a close on Sunday, the 25th. The mission was in every respect successful. The various services were attended by immense congregations. Perhaps one of the most striking proofs of the success of the mission was the fact that even on those evenings when the rain was heaviest and most continuous, many came a distance of five miles. It is said that the procession which was held on the 22nd of August was attended by the largest body of people ever brought together in the county Clare since the famous Clare election. The Most Rev. Dr. Ryan confirmed four hundred children on Thursday, the 23d of August.

Cork.

We are happy to be able to state, says the Cork Constitution, that the health of the Rev. Dr. Donovan, of Skibbereen, has received a letter from Mr. Algernon Turner, Private Secretary to the Prime Minister, informing her that Lord Beaconsfield "is ready to recommend her name for a donation of two hundred pounds from the Royal Bounty Fund and Special Service Fund in consideration of the humane and successful efforts of her late husband during the famine of 1846-7." We are sure that the announcement of this richly-merited compliment will give much pleasure to the many friends of the late esteemed Dr. Donovan. Mr. Goulding, M.P., had charge of the memorial which was presented to the Prime Minister.

The Cork Examiner of August 26th, says: "In the district of Mallow, as elsewhere, the farmers of the county are placed in a most perilous condition as regards the saving of their crops, owing to the continuation of the present unfavorable weather. Wheat and oats are completely destroyed, and, owing to its being so much lodged, much difficulty must be found in the reaping of it. Some fields in this locality are utterly damaged that it is not considered worth while engaging hands to endeavor to save them, as farmers dread this year's harvest and long-remembered harvest. It hardly holds do not state a portion of rents from those tenants who, unhappily, are entirely in their power, many and many is the family who will be cast on the world from their holdings. It may be anticipated that kindness will be shown to this class when we refer to, and in time to come they may again repay the fruits of the present bad weather.

Derry.

ARRIVAL OF THE MARQUIS OF CONYNGHAM'S DERRY.—The Marquis of Conyngham's yacht arrived in the Foyle about eight o'clock on Tuesday, August 27th, and cast anchor opposite the Rock Mills. His Lordship intends visiting his Donegal tenantry during the week, and arrangements are being made to give him a cordial reception. A committee has been appointed to prepare an address.

THE NEW CATHOLIC CHURCH, MAGHERAFELT.—On September 1st, the foundation stone of the new Church of Our Lady of the Assumption, Magherafelt, was solemnly laid by the Primate, Most Rev. Dr. McGettigan. It is some years now since the necessity of providing a new church for the Catholics of Magherafelt was realized. The accommodation which the venerable Canon Donnelly and his parishioners have had, and still have, when assembled together on Sundays, could only be described as inferior—very much so, indeed, for a place of such rising importance as Magherafelt, and it is easily understood that all of them had pray in assisting at the interesting ceremony which took place amongst them on that Sunday. The work which was then inaugurated under the blessing of the Church has already given Canon Donnelly many days—even years of anxious thought and study and diligent labor, and we hope he will have the satisfaction of seeing large numbers on occasions like this, and on those tending to him the benefit of their practical sympathy.

Down.

Charles Mutland, Esq., of Ardnabannon, Castlewellan, has been appointed to the Commission of the peace.

In the prosperous district surrounding Ballynahinch the farmers are reaping the grain. Both wheat and oats are likely to yield well, the occasional showers of the past month having lilled the ears. A few rains the straw will be short, but the scarcity of white fodder will be made up for by an abundant crop of hay and aftergrass. Wheat in this neighborhood is a splendid crop. The flax has all been pulled, watered and dried safely, and is now going through the operation of scutching. There is a difficulty at the mills in securing sufficient hands, and scutchers at present receive extra remuneration.

Dublin.

The Lord Lieutenant has appointed Christopher O'Connor H FitzSimon, of Glencullen in Dublin, to be Deputy Lieutenant for Dublin, in succession to the late O'Neal Segrave, D. L., of Killymon, county Wicklow.

The monument about to be erected to Lady Gray over the grave of the late Sir John Gray at Glasnevin is ready to leave the studio of the sculptor, Mr. Farrell, and is one of the happiest productions of his genius. The entire work is a white marble, and consists of a sculptured shaft, rising from, and in the centre of, a base, crowned with a massive bust of Sir John Gray. The latter part of the work, which is modelled from a photograph taken in his age, should be chiselled statue which Mr. Farrell is fast approaching, from the public monument, breathes inspiration of the highest kind, matched with exquisitely delicate material skill.

A hitch is anticipated in reference to the retirement of Mr. Keogh from the factual business of Ballyragan, Kilbarry, and Ballyrobert. If he should not complete the contingency which, it is understood, he will, if he thinks it may be necessary, to cure the omission. The latest rumor with reference to the tenancy existing on the Earl of Bandonedy's chiselled statue which Mr. Farrell is fast approaching from the public monument, breathes inspiration of the highest kind, matched with exquisitely delicate material skill.

Donegal.

The Home Rule Association throughout Great Britain have voted about one-thousand pounds to the Home Rule Committee in Dublin during the present year on the occasion of the National Home Rule Conference. As the duty of calling the conference rests with the Home Rule League, it is understood that the Committee, which in that case it has been resolved to hold the convention of delegates from the Home Rule Conference in London.

The agricultural statistics for 1878 have been published. The number of holdings in Ireland is 600,000. The total acreage under crops is five million two hundred and three thousand odd, showing a decrease of 62,196; the decrease in cereals was 31,174 in green crops, 37,249. The number of cows under cultivation is 1,000,000, 1,000,951 woods and plantations, 330,616. There is an increase in live stock, that is in horses and mules, 1,952; asses, 1,000; goats, 13,324, and a decrease in cattle, 12,847; and in pigs of 199,577. The number of scutching mills in Ulster is 1,162, Leinster, 13, Munster, 20, and Connaught, 11.

Fermanagh.

FUNERAL OF THE REV. PETER M'KENNA, P.P., DERRYGONNELLY.—The Rev. Peter M'Kenna, who had been for a very considerable time, parish priest of Derrygonnelly, died on Monday, August 25, at Derrygonnelly, a severe attack of illness, and the funeral of the deceased was one which proved how deeply he was respected, not only by the flock immediately under him, but also by all those with whom during his career he had come in contact. A long line of carriages and cars, and an immense number of persons on foot, and horseback accompanied the remains. After the Requiem Mass and ceremonies for the dead had been performed, the remains of the beloved priest were lowered into their last resting place amidst the tears and sobs of his faithful congregation.

Taking all the disasters common to agriculture into account, the crops around Ballinamore are in excellent condition. All the hay in high meadows is cut and saved. Oats and wheat have been reaped, and the grain is fully ripe and large. Potatoes are turning up large and floury, no sign whatever of blight being visible. The price for good potatoes in our market is 3s per cwt. Cereals are in as blooming a condition as could be desired. The harvest is, on the whole, a bountiful one, which will tell in favor of the poorer classes during the coming winter.

Galway.

On the parish chapel of Glennamaddy, on Aug. 29th, the Great Archbishop of Tuam, the Most Rev. Dr. McHale accompanied by a number of his clergymen, attended to give Confirmation to the youth of the district. The Rev. Father Rosmyn celebrated Mass, which was followed by an eloquent sermon in the Irish tongue by the Rev. Father O'Dwyer.

Kerry.

The consecration of Right Rev. Dr. McCarthy as Bishop of Kerry, took place on August 24th, at Killarney. The following prelates were present. The Archbishop of Cashel, the Bishops of Limerick, Clonfert, Down and Connor, Raphoe, Killaloe, Ross, Galara, and Waterford. Right Rev. Dr. McCabe, Bishop of Galara, preached the consecration sermon.

On Sunday, 18th instant, a mission was opened at Newtown Shandrum by two of the Franciscan Fathers, Kilkenny, which has since been very largely attended.

On August 26th, feast of St. Augustine, Miss Margaret Kennedy, Dingle, called in religion Sister M. Joseph Francis of the Sacred Heart, pronounced the final vows of the Sisters of the Presentation, Most Rev. Dr. McCarthy, Bishop of Kerry, in the new home of the cloistered Sisterhood of the Presentation, Killarney.

Francis Wise Lane, Stilleberlane, Kilgarvan, county Kerry, has been appointed to the Commission of the Peace, for the county of Kerry.

Kildare.

THE BRITISH ASSOCIATION IN MAYNOOTH COLLEGE.—A party of one hundred of the British Associates visited Maynooth College. Rev. Gerald Molloy, D. D., Vice-Rector of the Catholic University, who was the director of the excursion, delivered a brief history of Maynooth, and showed the visitors through the college and described each department. The party lunched with the Duke and Duchess of Leinster, at Carton.

New church of St. Joseph was dedicated August 4, at Ballymore. The church is fledge in style, and is about 70 feet long by 20 feet in width in the nave, and about 60 feet across the transepts. Ballymore is situated in the south-west part of the parish of Naragh, which extends over a very large district, and contains a population of over 4,000 Catholics.

On August 29th, the tenantry on the Kildare estate of Mr. Thomas J. de Burgh, J.P., presented him with an address and testimonial on the occasion of his marriage with Miss de Burgh, eldest daughter of Baron de Robeck, D.L., of Gowran Grange. The presentation consisted of a splendid silver centre piece, supplied by Messrs. Waterhouse & Co., of Dame street, Dublin.

Kilkenny.

At St. Brigid's Convent, Graiguenamanagh, took place on Sunday, the 25th inst the solemn interment of a young and holy religious. The Sister of St. Brigid, who has got closed a holy and innocent life, was Sister Mary Ignatius Bridget Power, daughter of Mr. James Power, Broad street, Waterford. She entered religion at the early age of eighteen, and from that moment to her last her life was entirely consecrated to the true service of God as a holy religious, and in an especial manner to the education of the poor children attending the convent schools. To these little souls the Child of Christ also dwelt hard with all the affection of a true mother, so that "many shall call her blessed, as the poor children," became a proverb in her convent home. She was borne to her early grave in the prime of her age, and, notwithstanding the sorrow of her bereaved relatives, it was a cheerful, almost joyous, thought to the friends of those children afforded some of the most interesting examples of holy death. Although the blight made its appearance early in the season, the damage done was inconsiderable. The turnip crop is also a splendid one, and looks vigorous and better than last year. Mangolds are also a good crop, and on the whole the prospects of a fair harvest are very encouraging. The greater part of the corn has been cut, and the weather was everything that could be desired for ripening the crop, appearance of being healthy, with the exception of potatoes, but the blight which, in some places, has carried off a good portion of the crop, is not so universal as to cause serious, and the consequences may not be very alarming. Turnips this year have proved an extremely bad crop owing to the drought that prevailed almost all the season. In fact, this is the only thing the farmers can complain of, as the others have almost universally been a success.

Mayo.

The Mayo Telegraph says: "Mr Jouve, a grand-nephew of General Humbert, who visited this country last year to search for information relative to the expedition so brilliantly commanded by his illustrious ancestor, purposes making a second tour through Mayo early next month. He has nearly concluded his work on the General's Campaign in Ireland, and has the highly valuable work in his character from the fellow-persons cast on it by English historians. Monsieur Jouve is anxious to obtain, if possible, every detail that local tradition has associated with the name of General Humbert."

The Rev. Father Healy, C. A., acknowledges the following contributions to the Fund for the Rev. M. P. Allies, the landlord of Boffin and Shark, towards the repairs of the Catholic Church:—

Roscommon.

The Lord Lieutenant has appointed Edward Robert King Harman, Esq., Rockingham, Boyle, M. P. for county Sligo, to be Lieutenant and Custos Rotulorum for county Roscommon, in the room of Lieutenant Colonel Twistleton, deceased.

Sligo.

The Rev. Thomas Loftus, Administrator of Kilmactigue, diocese of Achonry, has been transferred to the parish of Castlebaldwin, Charlestown, county Mayo. This amiable clergyman's name will be long associated with the magnificent little church, at Grange Taft, towards the completion of which all the energies of his head and heart were devoted.

On Sunday, August 25th, at the Church of Ballysadare, the Very Rev. Canon Gallagher, Sligo, the Rev. Father Mannion was ordained priest by his Bishop, the Most Rev. Dr. McCormack, assisted by the Very Rev. Canon Staunton, P. P., Ballysadare (as Archdeacon), the Rev. Fathers Lyster, Scanlon and Cregg, Sligo.

Tipperary.

Samuel Hopkinson, Minister Bank House, Ballybrack, Tipperary, has been appointed to the Commission of the peace for the county Tipperary.

We regret to state that the harvest prospects in this locality are anything but hopeful. After a few weeks of exceedingly fine weather late in August, it was hoped to bring the crops to maturity, and gave promise of a fair average yield. But the wet weather and stocking the farm yard with the produce of the soil, the fickle elements and all destroyed the hopes of the farmers. Men the farmers commenced operations their efforts were totarded by heavy rains and storms, and now the crops are in stacks and their crops seriously damaged. Tipperary Advocate.

Waterford.

Half yearly meeting of the Waterford and Limerick Railway was held August 22 at Waterford. The chairman, Mr. Sinnot, remarked upon the slight decrease in the traffic, both in goods and passengers, the net decrease in both departments in the half year being £800. He observed that the Company had to thank the Midland Company to start a paying load for Water ford goods were constantly delayed for days at Limerick junction, which gave Cork opportunities for competing routes to divert some of their goods traffic.

The Future of Italy.

More than two hundred million Catholics are interested in the future of the city of Rome, and, therefore, in the fate of the Papal Court, and the Papal Nuncio, Ciccarelli, has been transferred from Vienna to Madrid, where he will be the future of Italy. By the death of Victor Emanuel, the royal robber, Italy became the willing tool of the secret societies, which have long sought to destroy the Papacy, and with it the religion of Christianity. No reliance can be placed in Humbert.

The Prince of Carignano, uncle of the King, has swell known in all Europe knows the character of his nephew, and, accordingly, which he feels would France as well as its sympathetic, enthusiastic admiration he has long been a sincere friend of the Papacy, and, consequently, a determined opponent of the Vatican. Humbert, the Republican, is a certain extent in favor of France, he is a republican, and, as such, he knows that his interest and his ambition, and his government which he compelled to crush, rather than to be a tool in the hands of a foreign power.

Rome.

Rome is in a state of excitement. The Pope, the Cardinals, the Papal Nuncio, and the Catholic Church are in a state of anxiety. The Pope is in a state of anxiety. The Pope is in a state of anxiety. The Pope is City News in Brief.

— Dr. C. C. O'Donnell, who was arrested for obstructing the streets by exhibiting lepers on two occasions, was before the City Criminal Court on a hearing on the first charge. He appeared, bringing five leprous lepers with him to show the Court and jury. The Court immediately ordered the case continued, and the lepers were hustled out without ceremony. Subsequently the second charge against the Doctor was called and dismissed immediately.

— Under the convention between the United States and the Mexican Republic of July 4, 1868, the claimants against Mexico are now beginning to receive, out of the two installments of $300,000 each already paid over to our Government by Mexico, the pro rata of their respective awards. C. A. McNulty, attorney for some of the claimants on this coast, received the first full draft from the Secretary of State of the United States in part payment of one of these claims, amounting to 14 per cent. of the amount awarded.

GUSTAVE MAHE'S WILL.

A Letter He Left to His Friends While Still Was Contemplating Suicide.

When Gustave Mahe, the Director of the French Saving and Loan Society, committed suicide, he left a letter in the safe addressed to the Bank Directors. Another letter, as it was supplementary in character, and his will, were filed yesterday in the Probate Court of San Mateo. The will is dated January 5, 1878, and is subscribed by Edward Schommel and George Jandin. It leaves his entire estate, both real and personal, to his wife, Elizabeth Mahe, who is also appointed sole executrix. The devisee intimates his full confidence in her disposition to take care of their two children, Jeanne, aged thirteen years, and Gustave, aged seventeen years, the latter of whom is now in Europe finishing his education. The letter is as follows:

San Francisco, September 17, 1878.

I am possessed of property sufficient to pay all I owe the bank. I transfer all said property to the French Mutual Provident Savings and Loan Society.

I have 6,670 shares of Derbec stock; 1,000 shares of this stock belong to my son Gustave; and 1,000 shares to my daughter Jeanne. They have been given to my children by Mr. Jean Thedfide, the remainder belongs to Mr. Jean Thedfide, to whom I am indebted in the sum of $58,000; to Mr. B. Favre, to whom I owe $40,000; and to Mr. J. H. Guillomin, to whom I owe about $12,000.

In my safe will be found the jewelry I buy with. I think no difficulty will be made about my committing it to her. I have also some money in my hands at home. It would be human to remit it to her, without which she would be left entirely without resources.

She is very sick, my poor wife. I wish she may have the courage to resist the grief I shall cause her. If she should unfortunately succumb to her grief, I request my friends to remember my little family.

I have never knowingly done wrong to anybody. I have done all the good I could. I have organized a good society, which has produced more than $100,000 profit for the members—in liquidating the society, said I believe it necessary to be done, they will lose nothing. If the necessary time be allowed for the liquidation, which must not be less usefully, for the purpose of obtaining a satisfactory result.

At the moment of leaving this world, the bad side of which I have too often perceived, and in presence of God and the good men, I feel that I am an honest man, in whatever manner my actions may be appreciated, and I leave it without fear of the eternity.

I leave my friends of the bank, Schommel and the others, to forgive me the annoyance which my death will cause to them. They will forgive me, I instantly request them, while recovering all the business from the ways shown to them.

I request my friends Barrolhet and Delcour not to leave my dear Gustave in France in embarrassment. He has taken very little money alone. His mother must join him as soon as possible, if she is able to support the voyage, or send for return, for the prolonged separation would cause them, I fear, the gravest misfortune.

Good-by, my dear wife, good-by my beloved children; I embrace you from the bottom of my heart. And you, all my friends, don't curse my memory, and retain for me an affectionate remembrance.

GUSTAVE MAHE.

A Person and a Legal Bubble.

The Rev. Dr. W. H. Platt has been appointed by the Chair of Legal Ethics in Hastings's Law College. Dr. Platt has been admitted a Counselor in the Supreme Court of the United States, and has made the ethical grounds of the law and the application of the principles of morals to the practice of law a special study. He will deliver a course of lectures upon Ethics, and also on Criminal Law, regularly during the senior year, and in addition will, from time to time, lecture on these subjects before the present class.

The Catholic Societies.

The committee appointed by the Catholic Societies to perfect arrangements for an entertainment to be held at the Grand Opera House on Friday evening, in behalf of the pauper children of Scotch, met in St. Mary's Cathedral Hall and reported that the following persons had volunteered their aid: James O'Neil, Lewis Morrison and Rose Wood, of the Baldwin Theatre; Madam Ristori and some of her pupils, Fr. Jansen Scott, Tompkins, Lisser, Vandenscheldt and Parkman; Miss Kattie Rethers, Miss Collins, Miss Gobbin, Miss Dargen, D. W. Neufield, Miss Del Gurney and the Tyro Dramatic Club. Rosen Tubin, Jr., will deliver an oration. Mr. Maguire, of the Baldwin, has kindly given the stage for any of his actors or actresses to assist, who could leave the theatre on the evening named. The admission will be fifty cents. Reserved seats can be secured at Sherman & Hyde's for twenty-five cents extra.

The Hotel Bonch Sold.

The Board of State Harbor Commissioners met in their room on California street the week. There were present Messrs. Blanding, Burns and Lapp. It was ordered that the contract for filling Kearny street with earth and stone, from Bay street to the line of the sea-wall, be awarded to Andrew Onderdonk, at $11,975. The form of Onderdonk's contract was submitted and approved, as was also his bond for three thousand dollars.

Thielsten at Los Angeles to be Tried for Libel.

Los Angeles, October 1.—Thielsten, of the Daily Gazette, arrived here to-day in charge of Under-Sheriff Hill. He was committed to jail in default of six bills of indictment for libel found by the Grand Jury of this county.

A Rush of Mishes.

During the eight months ending August 31st, 1878, the exports from the United States exceed of the imports by $188,501,067, or at the rate of $22,562,266 per month. All of this had to be paid for either in national goods or gold; and the prospect now is that the exports for the next eight months will much exceed those of the last. The excess of exports over imports (gold and silver included) are now at the rate of nearly $300,000,000 a year—with the greatest grain crop ever raised in the country nearly all behind. In short, with all the noise and confusion about "hard times" it is doubted that the country was ever at any previous time as rich and prosperous as now.

A Better Feeling.

Every section which refuses to free the Atlantic States and from Europe indicates that the financial depression has been much worse in the people elsewhere than in California. Building has, to a certain extent, slackened in San Francisco, but a close observer of the signs can see in a much better condition than are the inhabitants of the East. As a result, people are again turning their attention to California, and now that the crop of large tracts of land seem inclined to dispose of them for reasonable prices, we expect to see an improved condition of affairs. Any number of improvements would be benefited by a division of our large ranches.

Items from Mazeppa's Real Estate Circular.

The real-estate market was not so active in September as in August. This perhaps shows that the activity then noted was not the precursor of any decided change for the better. Nevertheless, we think it was look for better times and prices in real estate than we have had for two or three years. The number and value of the sales of last month were certainly as large as we have any right to expect at a time when every other price is down crazy. 254 sales were made in August, of the value of $1,024,560, while but 194 sales were made in September, amounting to $886,841. No large business sale was made last month at all, exclusive of $60,000 on Montgomery street and one of $140,000 on the corner of Post and Dupont, not yet of record. Rich men are not yet investing; the great bulk of the sales are for sums below $4,000. We cannot help but calling attention to the remarkable steadiness in prices and to the manner in which sales maintain their monthly average in the face of doubtful taxes and the religious, white or political, of four or five of our savings banks. All these occurrences been predicted a year ago, after a three years spell of great general depression in every branch of business, it would have been almost universally prophesied that the result would be an unprecedented real-estate shake-up and fall in prices. Has for such calamities would have been erroneous the events and sales of the past three months clearly prove.

Hibernia Bank Building.

The remodeling of the Hibernia Bank building has been accomplished, and its appearance is greatly improved. The cost has been but thirty thousand dollars, whereas, to have erected a new building of the modern stamp would have cost $100,000 or $150,000. The season of evening, therefore, instead of rebuilding is unsolicited. There has been a tendency of late, all over the East, especially on the part of banks and insurance companies, to remain in old quarters in preference to building. We do not want to see more of this. Instead of the rents of the Hibernia Bank building have lately increased, the late change made in it, while the space occupied by the Bank has not, but has been increased. There has long been great need of more room for the transaction of the bank's business.

Each Supervisor to Watch Street Work in His Ward.

The Board of Supervisors has passed an ordinance requiring each Supervisor to appoint a committee and see if the work is needed, and to report for or against it to the Street Commissioner. The object of this resolution is to make the Supervisors some of not responsible for the street work in the ward, and to prevent jobbery, by keeping a watch on the operations of the Street Department. If each Supervisor was honestly to comply with this resolution, without regard to the status of the Street Superintendent or contractors, a great and very much needed check would be placed on street work.

A New and Much Needed Railroad to the Presidio.

An ordinance was introduced by ex-Supervisor Bowman, Jack McGlynn and A. S. Hallidie authorizing the right to build a wire-rope street railroad from Montgomery street, along Montgomery Avenue to Union street; thence along Union to the Presidio street. The road is to be a first-class one, the parties seeking the franchise being men of means and the proper energy to engage in the action in which the line is to run. This last is the reason that impels Bowman to introduce the road. Land toward the Presidio is practically as inaccessible as though it were at San Mateo, and such a road as that noted will alone bring real estate up to the value from it, at the end of the day, hereofore almost entirely neglected, is, in fact, one of the most desirable portions of the peninsula. The ordinance was drawn in haste, too, are unnecessary. We wish Mr. Baldwin and his partners all possible success in building this road.

State News in Brief.

— Hollister is afflicted with diptheria.

— San Luis Obispo is building a new City Hall.

— San Jose is to have a Board of Underwriters.

— Diptheria, in a very fatal form, is prevalent at Colusa.

— Venison sells at seven cents a pound in Petaluma.

— China's Board of Health has ordered all cows peste removed.

— The bonded warehouse at St. Helena is ready for occupancy.

— The beach gold excitement at Half Moon Bay has about subsided.

— The forest fires in the southern part of the State are all extinguished.

— Quail are very numerous this season in the vicinity of Mokelumne Hill.

— A daily mail has been established between San Mateo and Spanishtown.

— Petaluma is to have a free library, and a tax of 10 cents on the $100 is assessed.

— The San Jose police are raiding the Chinese gambling dens and lottery shops of that city.

— Indian braves are doing a good business at Petaluma.

— Eleven houses in Petaluma were robbed by burglars on the night of the 26th ult.

— The South Coast Narrow-gauge Railroad Company are constructing a depot at Santa Clara 200x70 feet in dimensions.

— The cash premiums awarded exhibitors at the State Fair are now ready for delivery at the office of the Secretary in Sacramento.

— The Mission grape in the Sacramento Valley is said to be unusually juicy this year, which is thought to indicate a large yield of wine.

— The railroad track is raised and filled a within five miles of Salem, so that it is in very good running condition.

— The Government will expend $20,000 in the erection of barracks and officers' quarters for the garrison at San Diego.

— The San Diego News says last year there could be bought for two bits. This year they are offering at one dollar and a half.

— J. D. Peters has shipped 19,000 tons of wool from Stockton to San Francisco this season, from June 1st to date, worth almost $600,000.

— The Record-Union states that all laborers out of employment can find work at $1 a day payable nightly at the mud pile at the mouth of the American river.

— It is estimated that 54,225 tons of grain were raised in Solano county the past season. The value of this crop at $20 a ton, or $1 50 a cental, foots up $1,627,150.

— There is a great scarcity of carpenters at Copper City at present, and men and good men that business could get employment at good pay.—It is represented by an exchange.

— Sealed proposals for furnishing supplies for the Napa State Asylum for the Insane for the six months ending May 1, 1879, will be received up to 12 o'clock noon of Monday, October 28th.

— The store of A. P. Whitney, at Petaluma, was robbed of $115 in coin on the 27th ultimo by a crack thief. He left the cash drawer open, and attached the Golden Eagle Hotel and Grand Church, Sacramento, for $1,176 65, issued in suits brought against the Odd Fellows' Bank.

— What is claimed to be a well-defined lodge of marble has been located in Monterey county. It is represented to be pure white, susceptible of a high polish, and to be found in sufficient in large masses, may prove valuable.

— The Chinese hatchetymen of Santa Barbara are on a strike. They have entered into a combination, and hereafter where they would shave for one dollar, they now ask about two dollars, and if any Chinaman breaks this agreement he is fined two.... or thirty dollars.

Produce Market.

FLOUR—A dull Wheat market induces caution among Flour buyers. This is particularly true at the present time, and concessions are asked out of all reason by many sellers. Mill-ers adhere to their former rates, as a rule, except in common grades, which are easy. We quote. Superfine, $4 25@$4 50; Extra Superfine, $4 75; Extra Bakers and Family, $5@5 50; Best Family Flour, in cloth, jobbing at $5 62½@5 75 $bbl, outside for silver. Oregon Flour is quiet. Standard Brands Extra Family, $5@5 12½; strictly choice, $5 12½@5 37½ $bbl, according to time and manner of payment. Exports of Flour were made to Liverpool, amounting to $800,841.

WHEAT. The market is extremely dull and prices still lower. Exporters do not offer for Spring and Fall, and the Millers are holding, are unwilling to accept, and hence there is but a limited movement. The reported business embraces 1,000 and 800 ctls good shipping, delivered, at $1 62½; 2,000 Walla Walla at $1 60; a special lot of shipping, indirectly reported, at $1 62½; 700 and 410, and other small lots choice milling, at $1 67½ per ctl. Exports today, 99,871 ctls to Great Britain.

BARLEY. Brewing is scarce and in active demand, but common and dark feed continues very dull. Brewing quoted at $1 17½@1 25; big feed, $1@1 10; coast feed $1@$1 per ctl. 700 bags Bay brewing sold at $1 20, 1,500 do do, $1 17½, and 1,000 do at $1 22½; 100 bags feed at $1 20 and 300 at 95c per ctl. The exports yesterday, per Australian steamer, were 1,601 ctls. Exports to-day, 992 ctls, to Liverpool.

OATS—A liberal supply on the market, and there has been a tendency of late, all over the East, especially on the part of banks and insurance companies, to remain in old quarters in preference to building. We do not want to see more of this. Instead of the rents of the Hibernia Bank building have lately increased, but the late change made in it, while the space occupied by the Bank has not, but has been increased. There has long been great need of more room for the transaction of the bank's business.

Each Supervisor to Watch Street Work in His Ward.

The Board of Supervisors has passed an ordinance requiring each Supervisor to appoint a committee and see if the work is needed, and to report for or against it to the Street Commissioner. The object of this resolution is to make the Supervisors some of not responsible for the street work in the ward, and to prevent jobbery, by keeping a watch on the operations of the Street Department. If each Supervisor was honestly to comply with this resolution, without regard to the status of the Street Superintendent or contractors, a great and very much needed check would be placed on street work.

A New and Much Needed Railroad to the Presidio.

An ordinance was introduced by ex-Supervisors Bowman, Jack McGlynn and A. S. Hallidie authorizing the right to build a wire-rope street railroad from Montgomery street, along Montgomery Avenue to Union street; thence along Union to the Presidio street. The road is to be a first-class one, the parties seeking the franchise being men of means and the proper energy in the action in which the line is to run. This last is the reason that impels Bowman to introduce the road. Land toward the Presidio is practically as inaccessible as though it were at San Mateo, and such a road as that noted will alone bring real estate up to the value from it, at the end of the day, heretofore almost entirely neglected, is, in fact, one of the most desirable portions of the peninsula. The ordinance was drawn in haste, too, are unnecessary. We wish Mr. Baldwin and his partners all possible success in building this road.

New Advertisements.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
JOHN SWEENEY'S
MARBLE WORKS
AND WAREROOMS,
ARE REMOVED TO
Junction of Market, Hayes, and Ninth streets,
SAN FRANCISCO
MANTELS IN STATUARY,
ITALIAN AND COLORED MARBLE
Of the Latest Designs.
New York and English Grates,
Low and half-low down, Nickel Plated, Gilt and Bronzed.
Monuments, Head Stones, Tomb Stones, and Table Tops.
Plumbers Slabs, etc. Marble Mantels. Low Prices. Disp

JONAS J. MORRISON,
LUMBER DEALER,
COR. WASHINGTON AND SPEAR STS.
SAN FRANCISCO
HEREBY GIVE NOTICE THAT I HAVE THIS DAY ASSOCIATED WITH ME IN MY LUMBER TRADE, formerly of Messrs. Morrison and Sweeney, the firm of Morrison and Sweeney will continue to do a lumber business at the above place, and will carry on the business under the firm name of MORRISON & MCKINNON. Thanking my friends for their kind favors, we hope to merit a share of the same for our successors. JONAS J. MORRISON. San Francisco, Aug. 29, 1878.
NEW GALLERY.
SHEW & BRADFORD,
PHOTOGRAPHERS,
914 MARKET ST. (Room 15.) Above Stockton
A Large and Choice Selected Stock of HATS, FLOWERS FEATHERS and FANCY GOODS, JUST RECEIVED BY
JOS. HUBBART,
And for sale Cheap at his New Store,
808 Market Street.
GAMELLINE
For Preserving and Beautifying the Complexion and Teeth.
NEW AND VALUABLE PREPARATION. PRICE 50 CENTS. Unlike other preparations it is not only harmless but a valuable cosmetic, leaving the skin free from all impurities and imparting a healthy and clear appearance to the complexion. Ladies, try it. Sold by Druggists. Depot, 104 Montgomery st., S. F.
H. P. WAKELEE & CO., Druggists, Under Occidental Hotel, SAN FRANCISCO.
VALLEJO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS.
TO THE PUBLIC.
I have the honor to inform you that I have after many years' informal assessment, the management of the VALLEJO WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, and that they open them to the public
Some improvements have been made, and a hundred thousand dollars has been expended in renovating the buildings and improving and enlarging the grounds.
The springs are now furnish seven hundred to two hundred guests, with every comfort and luxury.
Conveyance of resort, the Vallejo Springs are the most healthy and pleasant of any in the state.
The waters have high testimonials of their properties, and are used by the most eminent physicians, not only sanitary, and added to their medicinal properties, the waters are so pure and blended make these Springs one of the most eligible and pleasant watering places in the world.
No pains is spared to provide the comfort and enjoyment of guests.
The Springs reach Commercial Street, Sacramento and Turning Trays at the North Vallejo Depot.
HENRY CONNOLLY, MANAGER.
NOTICE
THE NEW GROCERY
South side of Market Street,
Bet. Fourth and Fifth, No. 827.
BEST GOODS AT LOWEST PRICES
FOR CASH.
Teas Away Down.
Disp-lay Fancy Department.
THE
CATHOLIC PARENTS' FRIEND.
A New Catholic Monthly Magazine.
IT IS INTENDED TO BE A WELCOME assistant to Catholic Parents in the art of bringing up good children, so very difficult in these days.
One copy, postpaid, one year, $1. Special discount to agents.
To each subscriber a beautiful chromo of The Immaculate Conception.
Send on subscriptions and orders to
J. H. O'CONNOR & CO., Publishers,
103 Sixth street, corner of Mission, San Francisco.
A. C. BRADFORD, JOHN MOREAU.
McHENRY & BRADFORD,
ATTORNEYS-AT-LAW,
NEVADA BLOCK, SAN FRANCISCO
$55 to $77 a Week to Agents. Solicits free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Me.

THE MONITOR.
CATHOLIC FAMILY WEEKLY, CONTAINING THE LATEST AND MOST RELIABLE INTELLIGENCE.
Published every Saturday for the Proprietors at 652 Clay Street, San Francisco.
All letters, whether on business or other matters, should be addressed to Rev. P. Kenna, Box 1, P. O. Drafts, checks, or post-office money orders should be made payable.
Terms (Payable in advance):
Single copies, per copy ... 10c
Six months ... $2 50
Six months ... 2 25
Postage in each case prepaid by the publisher.
Advertising Rates.
1 square 1 month 4 00 | 1 square 6 mos 20 00
1 square 3 month 7 00 | 1 square 9 mos 12 00
1 square 6 month 9 00 | 1 square 1 year 25 00
The above rates will be strictly adhered to.
Special Notices of Marriages, etc., will be charged for at the same rates as Advertisements.

LATEST NEWS BY MAIL.

The Dublin "Freeman" on the Afghan War.

The Miserable drama of the Afghan War may become somewhat more exciting than it has so far been. It is said that the Governor of Candahar is expected to arrive in Lundon a little far on side of that fine city, that he is posted in great force outside the walls, and that to-morrow the fight may be expected. We do not expect that the attack will be made upon the Sunday, if it be at all possible. The number of troops in the city is considerably small, and although the Afghans may be brave, they are, it is now plain, only half civilized. The Ameers of Afghanistan, in the Candahar falls, this will close the present campaign, and for the second time the Ameer of Afghanistan will be stripped of his dominions, and the Ameer Yacoob Khan, who has proved false to his country, and who has sold his Indian troops, children of the Tropics, who never great difficulty and danger of the invaders will, however, be restored to his throne. It is hoped that the effort to bring the wild tribes of the hills into order will be made, and that it will be successful. Not a day passes but we hear news of another tribe coming in. The Ameer of Afghanistan is the only Indian country will talk seriously the Russians. The Ameer of Afghanistan knows that the expense of such a task will be immense, and that the Russians are ready to lend him money on other failure. It is plain that the design only Russian influence in Afghanistan. Russia needs advance rapidly into the heart of Afghanistan, and the Ameer of Afghanistan knows that if he proves to be troubling Aspear, and then return to India in triumph. The flight of the Ameer of Afghanistan will, we suppose, be a thing that has not the power, and, it is believed, has not the will, to make any treaty with the invaders. The English journals will open up old questions, and the Russian journals will, that after their triumph should they have only succeeded in persuading the Ameer of Afghanistan to do what he was willing to do, namely, to make a treaty with the Russians. But the week Arabs is no match for the English troops, and by the time that the Ameer of Afghanistan has made his peace with the Russians, he will be in a position to do the bidding of the Russians, and to make a treaty with the Russians, which will be the ruin of his country. The Ameer of Afghanistan is a man of great ability, and he is well aware that the Russians are the only people who can make his country prosperous, and who can make his country a country of importance

ROSEMARY.

A Tale of the Fire of London.

CHAPTER VI.

Continued from our last.

A tall, pretty, and very smartly-dressed person came into the room, and in a manner which surprised not much emotion, but some agitation, said,

"I suppose you do not remember me, Mistress Coggle. I am Lady Davenant."

"I beg your ladyship's pardon. I did not recollect you at first; but now I do. I am not like to forget Mrs. Mordaunt's daughter."

"Yes, I know you were very much shocked to my mother. I suppose you heard, at the time, of the death of my husband and my child."

"I heard speak of Sir William's death, my lady, but I did not know that your ladyship had any children. Since Mrs. Mordaunt died, I seldom had news of the family."

"About six weeks before the fire of London, I had been confined of a little girl; I was in trying to save her that my husband was burnt to death. I lost them both that dreadful night."

"Dear me, my lady, what a mercy you did not die too! It was a cruel night for many poor souls. The poor Jews said, we'll never forget it. And did you go abroad then?"

"Yes; my uncle Mordaunt carried me with him to the south of France, and I have lived with him ever since. He is a great invalid, and cannot bear me to leave him. I was obliged, however, to come to England on some business of his, and I thought I would call and see you."

"I am sure it is very kind of you, my lady. It is not often as I have the pleasure of a visit from the likes of you.

"At that moment a sudden thumping at the door made Lady Davenant start; she seemed very nervous, and when the thumps were seconded by a childish voice calling out, "Open, Coggy—go way, Missy Crump—go way!" her color changed.

"Have you a child living with you?" she asked. "Is it a girl? let her come in." The door was opened, and like a living picture of childlike beauty, Polly stood before her, half-triumphant at having got into the room, half-abashed at the sight of a stranger, scanning her eyes with her little hand, and peeping through her fingers at the dazzling appearance of the lady in her flowered dress, high heels, and flowing curls.

"What a pretty child!" Lady Davenant exclaimed. "Come here, my sweet one; come and speak to me."

Polly hesitated; but the sight of a gold locket held out by the stranger induced her to come forward, and she consented to stand by her side and to examine her various trinkets.

Lady Davenant stroked her cheek, patted her hand, kissed her forehead, and at last said to her, "What is your name, sweet little pussy?"

"She does not know it, my lady; she does not know who she is," Mrs. Coggle quickly replied.

But Polly, to disprove that assertion, cried out immediately, "Me's Polly."

"Yes, I know you're Polly, I suppose, but do you know who she is?"

"Not in the least, my lady."

The colonel was in Lady Davenant's cheeks, and she said, "Tell me all you know about her."

"Nothing, my lady, except that one Mrs. Peterkin brought her here the night of the fire, three years ago.

"That she did," said Mrs. Crump, who had followed Polly into the room. "It's as true as I'm alive; I met her carrying the child in her arms."

"And she left her on that chair—that one on which you are sitting, my lady—and never has been heard of since."

"I have heard from her, and I have seen her at Dover," Lady Davenant exclaimed. "She found out my direction, and wrote to one to Montpelier to say that a child had been thrown out of the window of a house, which she had since by accident learned was Sir Wm. Davenant's, and that her friend Mrs. Coggle—"

"Friend! good gracious! the impudence of the woman!"

"Well, she said you had taken charge of the child, and that she did not doubt that the little girl she had left with you was mine. I spoke to her on my way at Dover, and she adhered to her story. Now, tell me, what do you think? Is there anything that could help to prove it?"

"I! thinking—O yes, of course, the shawl—wait a moment, I'll get it."

Lady Davenant sat gazing at Polly, quite satisfied that she was one of the precious children she had ever seen. "She does not look like a low-born, common child," she ejaculated, as she stroked the soft silken hair that curled round Polly's little face.

"No, to be sure not, my lady; nor never did, from the first day she came to this roof. She was always the genteelest little creature, the delicatest infant."

"O, heavens!" Lady Davenant exclaimed, as Mrs. Coggle returned with the blue shawl in her hands. "There can be no doubt about it—not a shadow of a doubt. That is my shawl, by the same token that my good mother gave it me as part of my wedding gear. Look here! There is a bit of the fringe missing. I perfectly remember, the day before the fire, as I was passing through a narrow passage a nail caught and tore it off. You swear that this child was wrapped in this shawl on the night she was brought to you?"

"My lady, I do most solemnly swear that the child that Mrs. Peterkin brought to this house on the night of the Fire of London was wrapped up in that shawl."

"Good enough, quite enough for me; your testimony, and Mrs. Peterkin's, and this good woman's," she added, turning to Mrs. Crump; "I all hear evidence to what my heart wishes to believe and tells me is true."

As she said these words, Lady Davenant lifted Polly to her knees, and pressing her to her heart, said, "My own little darling, I am your mother."

"Where's no cow?" Polly asked.

"What! what does she say?"

"I want no cow."

"O, nonsense, Polly, nonsense; look at the lady's beautiful rings. My baby! I do feel certain this is your child, and I have always."

"That she has, through thick and thin, my lady," Mrs. Crump testified, who had often been present at the disputes on that point.

"I am overjoyed, Mrs. Coggle, at finding my little Rose. Rose is her name, and you must not call her Polly any more. How good it is of you to have taken care of her so long and dressed her so nicely, and without any remuneration. But now I shall pay. If you please, a regular pension for her. I wish to leave Rose with you for the present; I must return immediately to Montpelier. Mr. Mordaunt expects me back before the end of the month, and I must not disappoint him. He is an old man now, and I am bound to attend to all his wishes. He cannot endure children, and I am afraid it will be difficult to make him understand or believe that Rose is alive. I am sure he will say there is not sufficient proof of it. Let me see, there is Mrs. Peterkin's assertion that this dear child was thrown out of a window at Davenant House: I asked her if her son would confirm her statement, but he is dead, it seems; and then this shawl—I am sure that I may not be mistaken about it; this fact of the rent in it, you see, inconclusive. Did Mrs. Peterkin tell you that it was out of Davenant House that the child was thrown?"

"No, my lady, I can't remember that she did. She said it was a large house on the other side of the river."

"Exactly; and that tallying with the production of this shawl, I am perfectly satisfied. But if you know Mr. Mordaunt! He always takes the opposite view to that of other people; and when he has once pronounced an opinion, he will not endure to be contradicted."

"That is just like Joan Porter. It no use to withstand her when she has made up her mind upon anything," Mrs. Coggle observed with a sigh.

"My uncle quarrelled with his sister's son, Mr. George Yates, because he married against his advice; and nothing could induce him to forgive them. He will probably leave me his fortune, who an his niece only by marriage; but I am obliged to take every precaution not to offend him. He is so strangely suspicious, too. He always thinks people are trying to deceive him. I once said, 'How strange it sould be if by some possibility my little baby had been saved, and I should find out her, after all, she was alive!' He went quite into a passion, and said, scornfully, 'Your baby! ship!—he always addresses me in that way when he is angry—'your ladyship had better express that hope publicly, and plenty of knaves and impostors will produce beggars' brats to palm them upon you!'"

"Lor, good gracious!" Mrs. Crump exclaimed, "to think of Mrs. Coggle being called such names."

"Indeed, I never meant to speak of her so such. Please do not cry, my good Mrs. Coggle. I might not have relied wholly on Mrs. Peterkin's statement, but I believe every word you say. And then, you know, I am aware we have met before, that it was alive. Perhaps in time, and with great prudence, I may be able to bring Mr. Mordaunt to admit that this is my little Rose. In any case, when it shall please God to remove him from this world, I can then openly adopt her. In the meantime how very fortunate it is that she should have fallen into your hands; you, who lived with my poor mother so many years that I quite look upon you as a friend."

"I am sure your ladyship is very good to say so," Mrs. Coggle said, with a sigh, and glancing uneasily at the door, having heard a sound resembling some one opening the one on the street. Feeling desperate, she whispered to Mrs. Crump, "For pity's sake, go and see who's in the passage, and if it's Joan don't let her come in."

Lady Davenant kissed and fondled the child on her knees, and then went on saying, "It was very good of you to take care of Rose, when you did not know who she was, and no one paid for her support. I am obliged to leave London directly. Mrs. Mordaunt cannot possibly spare me any longer, and my fortune prospects depend entirely on him. I shall write and tell you all my wishes about this dear little new-found girl of mine."

"I shall be sure to attend to them, my lady."

"Here are fifty pounds to begin with," Lady Davenant said, "I brought this sum with me in case I should find Mrs. Peterkin's statement confirmed. I would like you to hire at once a nice cottage at Spitalfields or Islington, or Paddington—somewhere out of town, where there would be a garden and Rose could run around on the grass. She is really a very pretty child. I was amused at her crying at the window at home, which she had since by accident learned was Sir Wm. Davenant's, and that her friend Mrs. Coggle—"

"Friend! good gracious! the impudence of the woman!"

"Well, she said you had taken charge of the child, and that she did not doubt that the little girl she had left with you was mine. I spoke to her on my way at Dover, and she adhered to her story. Now, tell me, what do you think? Is there anything that could help to prove it?"

"I! thinking—O yes, of course, the shawl—wait a moment, I'll get it."

Lady Davenant sat gazing at Polly, quite satisfied that she was one of the precious children she had ever seen. "She does not look like a low-born, common child," she ejaculated, as she stroked the soft silken hair that curled round Polly's little face.

"No, to be sure not, my lady; nor never did, from the first day she came to this roof. She was always the genteelest little creature, the delicatest infant."

"O, heavens!" Lady Davenant exclaimed, as Mrs. Coggle returned with the blue shawl in her hands. "There can be no doubt about it—not a shadow of a doubt. That is my shawl, by the same token that my good mother gave it me as part of my wedding gear. Look here! There is a bit of the fringe missing. I perfectly remember, the day before the fire, as I was passing through a narrow passage a nail caught and tore it off. You swear that this child was wrapped in this shawl on the night she was brought to you?"

"My baby, I do most solemnly swear that the child that Mrs. Peterkin brought to this house on the night of the Fire of London was wrapped up in that shawl."

"Good enough, quite enough for me; your testimony, and Mrs. Peterkin's, and this good woman's," she added, turning to Mrs. Crump; "I all hear evidence to what my heart wishes to believe and tells me is true."

As she said these words, Lady Davenant lifted Polly to her knees, and pressing her to her heart, said, "My own little darling, I am your mother."

"Where's no cow?" Polly asked.

"What! what does she say?"

"I want no cow."

"O, nonsense, Polly, nonsense; look at the lady's beautiful rings. My baby! I do feel certain this is your child, and I have always."

"That she has, through thick and thin, my lady," Mrs. Crump testified, who had often been present at the disputes on that point.

"I am overjoyed, Mrs. Coggle, at finding my little Rose. Rose is her name, and you must not call her Polly any more. How good it is of you to have taken care of her so long and dressed her so nicely, and without any remuneration. But now I shall pay. If you please, a regular pension for her. I wish to leave Rose with you for the present; I must return immediately to

HOW I WON MY CROSS.

"Come, tell us, sergeant, how did you win your cross?"

This question was put by one of a number of young soldiers who stood around a veteran of the Imperial Guard, in the Invalides. The person addressed was an old unscarred man, who seemed so child that a certain air of fierce, unmelting gravity must become a soldier of the Empire. His face, too, was so wasted, hid over with the heart hearts under the outer form of stern severity. On being thus questioned, he took a well-used pipe from his mouth, slowly puffed out a column of smoke, dreamilessed as erect as age would permit him, and replied

"Won my cross! Yes, mon enfant, you say right in that phrase. I did not win my cross, it was just given. It was worth winning too. We didn't, with the Emperor, fight for winning against one another. There was no harricoing then no battles in the streets of Paris. That great man, so wonderful in his genius, so indomitable in his courage, who always conquered, would not allow it; and let me tell you, no one dared to do what he said they should not—he soon made short work.

"Ah! those were the days when we knew what true freedom was. There were none of your Republicans, your Orleanists, your old or young men in Paris; we were all Frenchmen then—Frenchmen, do you hear, my children? It was the glorious empire of la belle France we fought against those who hated the great nation because it was the glorious empire, and not English—the stupid Germans—the barbarous Russians.

"Yes, it was against them we fought when always fought, but, when traitors did not betray us, we always conquered. They hated us, and we hated them—it was fair enough. Ah, with what glory he conqered Prague!

"Ah! the man's eyes glistened with enthusiasm, and his face glowed.

"But all this is changed now," continued the old soldier in a more doleful tone. "Times change, and men change with them, and they care not for their old comrades. The Grand Army is no more, and the Emperor—ah! he died far from France! Yes, we had to leave him there, and let the cross. Well, I will tell you, for it will show you what a man the Emperor was.

"It was the 5th of November. For a long time our march had been full of glory. The enemy had fled before us, for whatever he tried to stand we defeated him. We had reached Moscow that fatal city. We were to have winter there. But what did these cowardly villains of Russians do? Why, as you know, they set fire to their city.

"We were compelled to retreat; and a terrible march we had, with frost, snow and hunger. It was the 5th of November, I say. We just fought the Battle of Viazma, and won it of course. The Emperor, in his order of the day, said we had annihilated the enemy. Still we had to retreat, not before the Russians—no, we had crushed them, I tell you,—but before the weather; it was terrible! Oh; what frost! It froze the very marrow in our bones. We had snow! It cut our skins, it blinded us, we sank in it to our knees as we marched. We had no food, no clothes, no fire, and it was now past noon. An awful march it was. The ground was hard as the pavement, covered with our dead and dying. Not that we saw much of the foe—no, those we had killed frost, we thought at first, we had killed them, they came near us. It was that terrible wind, and the empty stomachs that did for us. When these made any halt behind, the recally Cossacks, hanging all round us like a swarm of bees, either killed and plundered them, or, if they were at all able to walk, stripped them, and then, tying them to their horses, made them run at their sides till they dropped from fatigue, hunger, and cold.

"Many of the officers had men in my company had perished. All were dispirited and in sorry, no, no joke, sad, what was worse than all, no grumbling. The sullenness and reckleasness of utter despair had taken hold of us.

"Our captain was a terrible little man—as a brave man as ever led a whole army. And then, you see, we were all brave. He did not stand more than so high, 'pointing to his shoulder, "but he would have his own way, he made such it; if he said so, it was so; if yes, then yes; he would not change. We called him Captain Tetu, and, my faith! it was a good name, for he was obstinate.

"He had been a stunt, red-faced man, but now, how changed! thin, pale, and sunken. We thought that he might be robbed of his strength, but not his firmness. He was hardly able to keep up with us; but he was determined to do his share, and he did it, for he sternly gave the lift circuit into her tiny hands, and saw her press it to her lips as he laid down her to rest.

"Good Jesus—me love him," little Polly said, and then, slipping off of Joan's knees, went back to her plaything.

Joan took up her sewing, and as she watched the little girl running up and down the room, and then stopping short and turning upon her her large dark, blue eyes, full of tenderness and grave surprise, at hearing any she had ever seen save three of poor Mrs. Yates—she thus soliloquized in a low voice:

"For anyone to tell me you are not Polly Yates! When you are up like to your mother as a lamb is to a sheep. Mistress may do as she pleases; get a cottage and buy you finery, too, if she likes, with that rich lady's money. She may call you Rose, but for all that you will never be anything but Polly to me, and as long as I live you shall hear from old Joan of your true mother and your Catholic baptism. With my last dying breath I shall witness, my sweet one, that you are her child, and no one else's.

TO BE CONTINUED.

Christmas Day.

TRUCONT.—We here see the King of kings, before His birth, obeying a king of earth. Augustus, however, whilst sending forth his edicts t. the utmost limits of the East, little knew that on his part he was obeying the decrees of the King of kings, God had foretold that the Savior should be born in Bethlehem. In order that this might be accomplished He made use of Augustus, and through this prince the order was given for the census of the whole people. At the sight of those wars and revolutions that upset the world, you feel inclined to imagine that God no longer governs the world or those in it. You are mistaken. God permits the fierce and wild catastrophes should take place, just for the salvation and perfection of this or that person whom the world knows not.

PRAYER. Jesus, like to Thee, I will be guided by Thy Providence, knowing that those who are over me are only Thy instruments.

PRACTICE.—Acknowledge Divine Providence in all events.

EARTH is our work house and heaven is, or should be our store-house. Our chief business here is to lay up treasure there.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT

ST. APOLLONIA AND THE MARTYRS OF ALEXANDRIA.

FEBRUARY 9.

"At Alexandria, in 249, the mob rose in savage fury against the Christians. Metras, an old man, perished first. His eyes were pierced with reeds and he was stoned to death. A woman named Quinta was the next victim. She was led to a heathen temple and hadden worship. She refused to comply, the false gods of gold again and again, and she was stoned to death. After this the houses of the Christians were sacked and plundered. They took the spoiling of their goods with all joy.

"St. Apollonia, an aged virgin, was the most famous among the martyrs. Her teeth were beaten out; she was led outside the city; a huge fire was kindled, and she was told she must deny Christ, or else be burned alive. She was silent for a while, and then moved by a special inspiration of the Holy Ghost, she leaped into the fire and died in flames. The same courage showed itself the next year, when Decius became Emperor, and the persecution grew till it seemed as if the very elect must fall away. The story of Dionysius illustrates the courage of the Alexandrian Christians, and the esteem they had for martyrdom. He was a boy of fifteen. To the urgent entreaties of the judge he returned answers: he was good against torture. His older companions were executed, but Dionysius was spared on account of his youth; yet the Christians could be stated to have been ready to drink that cup which had been deprived of the martyr's crown, except to receive it after years were gloriously. "Dionysius," writes Dionysius, Bishop of Alexandria, "is still here, remains with us, reserved for some longer and greater combat." There were indeed many Christians who came, pale and trembling, to offer the heathen sacrifice. But the judges themselves were struck with horror at the multitudes who rushed to martyrdom. Women triumphed over torture, infant and the judges were ashamed of their cruelty. Christians were

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY ..... FEBRUARY 8.

"Problems seem to have given to our days a special attitude to the Catholic press. It is for it to preserve the authority of order and of the faith, where they shall yet shine, and to propagate them where they begin to wane. Liberty of thought is no longer thus in the ferment." Letter of Pius IX.

THE PRESS IN THE USA AND ABROAD.—"If such a powerful instrument is of great utility, we should be all anxious to defend the honor of the Church, and to spread her doctrines. If, bitterness, you wish to have an honest press, we ought honestly and generously support it."—Letter to Bishop Maffatt.

"Most of the dioceses or provinces have a Catholic journal, which is read by the Bishops, or more fittingly, which is read to them. Where this is established, it is entitled to a corresponding friendly welcome instead of asking scurrilous shocks, we should rather encourage such Catholic journals as greatly contributing to the peace of Faith. We take pleasure in extolling beyond the wonts of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, the way on this subject. "We cheerfully acknowledge the services the Catholic Press has rendered to religion, and for the distinguished zeal with which it has, in our dioceses, it has been conducted, although yielding to no yielding to no yielding to no

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

Antrim.

Two fires, which resulted in a considerable destruction of property, broke out in Belfast at an early hour on Dec 26. The first occurred in the coach factory of Mr. Armstrong, and the other in the premises of Mr. Russell, builder, Elm street. The fire brigade had the difficult task of having to do duty in both places at the same time, and while a snow storm of unusual severity was raging. In spite of the efforts of the brigade Mr. Armstrong's shop was entirely gutted, and Mr. Russell's has suffered considerably. Prior to the arrival of the brigade a horse was burned to death in Mr. Armstrong's place, and two met a similar fate in Mr. Russell's premises. The origin of the fires is unknown.

On Dec. 20, Sir Thomas McClure, M. P., arrived in Belfast from Londonderry. At the railway station he was met by a large number of his friends, and Sir Thomas Sinclair, on their behalf, congratulated him warmly on his success in the County Derry. When Sir Thomas and Lady McClure reached the borders of their own estate at Strandtown, a short distance from Belfast, they were most enthusiastically received by the tenantry. The houses in the Belmont and Strandtown districts were illuminated. There were also fireworks, bonfires, &c.

On Dec. 20, the libel action of Rev. M. H. Cahill vs. Daniel Read, proprietor of the Belfast Morning News, ended in a verdict for the plaintiff for one farthing damages.

Armagh.

Mr. Joshua Pim, of Limnagarvey, died suddenly of heart disease, at his residence, on Dec. 21. He had been in Belfast that day, on business, and appeared to be in his usual health. Mr. Pim was well known in the North. He was married to Miss Richardson, daughter of the late Mr. J. S. Richardson, of Glanmore, and was a partner in the well-known firm of Richardson Brothers & Co. The deceased gentleman was a little over sixty years of age.

Down.

On Dec. 24, a melancholy accident occurred at Carlow, resulting in the death of two men named Hayden and Fitzpatrick, who had fallen into the River Barrow, and were drowned. It appears that the deceased, in company with another man, named Tobin, were engaged sliding on that part of the Barrow known as the Quay, which, although very deep, was frozen nearly quite across. After some time the ice gave way, and the three men were immersed in the water. Tobin managed to escape by swimming across the thin ice to the other side, but the other two men sank almost immediately. A great crowd witnessed the sad affair, but were powerless to render any assistance. The bodies of the two men were recovered shortly afterward. Hayden leaves a wife and several children to deplore his untimely end; but Fitzpatrick was a young man and unmarried. Both men were in the service of the Barrow Navigation Company as boatmen.

Derry.

Relief committees have been formed in Gortahill, Killeshandra, Belturbet and Ballyconnell, in the County Cavan.

The Lords of the Treasury have appointed Mr. W. H. Nesbit, T.C., of Cavan, to be Postmaster for that town, in the room of Mr. Patrick Fay, resigned.

Clare.

Owing to a heavy fall of snow during Dec. 20, accompanied by a strong wind, in many parts of the County Clare, the drifts were five feet deep.

Cork.

The new church in connection with the Capuchin Convent at Rochestown was dedicated on Sunday, Dec. 22. At the dejeuner, which took place at the conclusion of the ceremonies, the Rev. Father Hennessy, in behalf of the order, thanked the Bishop and the Dean for the great interest they took in the welfare of the Franciscans at Rochestown, and Mr. James O'Connell and Mr. George Griffin, the two great Benefactors of the new church. Great satisfaction was also expressed at the manner in which Mr. J. Delaney, builder, had erected the work.

Mr. George C. Foott, of Carrigacunna Castle, Killarnlaun, has been appointed a magistrate of the County Cork.

A shocking death stroke occurred on Christmas morning in a house on Kyrl's quay, Cork, inhabited by a man named Butler and his family, consisting of his wife and three children. In the shop there was a disused gas pipe, and during the night an escape of gas took place, which filled the whole house with the poisonous vapor, and caused the death of Butler and his three children, who were sleeping in an upper room. Some of Butler's neighbors, finding the house still closed at 11 o'clock on Christmas morning, forced an entrance, when a shocking spectacle presented itself. In a bed lay Butler and his three children quite dead, and his wife apparently in the same condition. She was removed to the North Infirmary, where she recovered and gave birth to a dead child. Butler had been drinking.

The result of the case arising out of the Mitchelstown shooting is a disagreement of the Jury. The case has been one of vast importance, and the issue has been awaited with interest. The prosecution was conducted by the Crown at the Cork Winter Assizes, before Judge Barry—Burns, the sub-constable, being charged with feloniously killing John Lenihan. Burns and another sub-constable were returning from Mitchelstown on the 12th of November, and overtook parties on the roadside who were quarrelling. One man attempted to mount on the car on which they were driving, but was pushed off. A stone was thrown which struck burns on the head. His companion handed him a gun, telling him to load and fire, which he did, and the killing of Lenihan was the result. Mr. Justice Barry said, if a number of persons joined in an attack, and one of them struck a blow, the others aiding and abetting, they were all guilty with respect to that blow; or if one of them was about to strike a deadly blow, and the person assisted shot one of the others, he would be justified, provided they were satisfied that what he did was necessary for his defense. Here there was no evidence that the deceased was one of a party at the moment of the shot, and the evidence given related only to individual acts on his part. Unless he was either attacking himself or aiding and abetting those who were, the defense was not made out. The jury could not agree to a verdict, and were discharged, and the accused was allowed out on bail.

With reference to the meeting held a short time ago, in connection with the bequest of the late Miss Russell toward establishing a Christian Brothers' school in Kinsale, the permission (obtained by Mr. R. F. Walsh from the meeting) to make use of the subscribed fund for the purpose of making an application to the Master of the Rolls to allocate the portion of Miss Russell's estate for the education of poor boys in Kinsale is not without good results. Mr. Walsh has obtained the opinion of eminent counsel, through Mr. J. Blake, that if the money cannot be applied for the establishment of Christian Brothers' schools in Kinsale, it must be distributed between the three alternative charities mentioned in Miss Russell's will, and he has also received authoritative intelligence in connection with this matter that once more causes a welcome probability of the original intention being carried out, of the money now amounting to nearly £7,500—being allocated for that purpose. Mr. Walsh, a Catholic school there, and for the long-wished-for advent of the Christian Brothers to Kinsale being accomplished.

Down.

On December 19, a stack yard filled with grain, the property of a farmer named Hay, who resides on the Londonderry estate, between Newtownards and Greyabbey, was destroyed by fire. The property was not insured, and Mr. Gaw, believing the burning to have been incendiary, has taken the necessary steps for the recovery of the value of it from the Grand Jury.

On December 20, Constable Price and Sub-Constables Campbell and Strong, of Rostrevor, came upon an illicit still in full working order on the Cooley Mountains, between Rostrevor and Hilltown. The potees manufacture and a large quantity of spirits, together with a number of articles essential to distillation, including barrels, were removed to Rostrevor, a quantity of mash being destroyed.

Dublin.

The death is announced, on Christmas Day, at his residence, Rathgar, of Mr. J. E. Tolling, Taxing Master of the Court of Chancery. Master Tolling was one of the oldest and most respected citizens of Dublin. He had for many years held the important office of Taxing Master, and he was by a large circle of friends and acquaintance greatly respected and beloved. His death places at the disposal of the Government a very valuable office.

On Christmas Day, the Lord Mayor, accompanied by the Lady Mayoress and several members of the Dublin Corporation and the city officers, attended High Mass at the Marlborough Street Cathedral, where they occupied seats reserved on special occasions for the City Fathers. The members of the Corporation who attended were Messrs. Mullagan, Bolger, Mayne, Doyle, Gavan, McDermott, Ralph, Dempsey, A. O'Neill and Kelly. The Lord Mayor, and Lady Mayoress, attended by the usual escort of mounted police, drove in state to and from the Cathedral.

A regular case came to light, in Dublin, on Dec. 20. It seems that John Baggot, Secretary to the St. Anthony Friendly Society, No. 9 Nicholas street, was absconding with the money of the members of the society, which was intended as a Christmas divide, and arrived at Kingston on the previous day by the 11 o'clock train, and called at Brazil's Hotel directly afterward and requested accommodation for the night, as he stated he was leaving by the mail boat on the following morning. He retired to bed, but about 2 o'clock called the night porter, as—he was suffering from cramps in the stomach. The porter seeing the condition of the man, summoned the proprietor of the hotel, and Dr. Reid, of Marine road, was sent for. Rev. Mr. Dillon, C. C., was also called in. Dr. Reid did all that was possible for his patient, but died about 6 o'clock. Baggot had at the time £30 8s. in his possession, with some new clothes and others in a handbag. It appeared that on the 16th, with the Chairman, Wm. Osborne, of Ike St. Anthony Society, and two members, the sum of £47 7s. was drawn out of the Penny Bank of Mr. White, Winetavern street. Having retired to a public house and produced some refreshments, Baggot got the money into his possession. During the next day he made the necessary purchases for his flight, and left by one of the last trains for Kingstown. Dr. Hartney, County Coroner, attended at Brazil's Hotel, and held an inquest on the remains. After hearing the medical evidence, the jury found that death resulted from congestion of the lungs.

At the recent annual examination in the Irish Land Academy of Music for the vocal scholarship, the Begley and other prizes, Miss Susan D'Arcey was pronounced the first in merit; but, having already been awarded the Scholarship and Begley prize of last year, she was disqualified from winning them again. They were, therefore, given to Miss Johanna Ward, an admirable soprano. Miss D'Arcey is a young and highly-promising soprano.

At a meeting in Dublin it was resolved to raise £35,000 within the next few years for the rebuilding of Jervis-Street Hospital.

The Lord Lieutenant has given £100 to the Lord Mayor for distribution among the poor of Dublin.

The death of Mr. John Mooney, which took place on Dec. 28, in Dublin, removes one of the most prominent Irish temperance advocates. His allusion to the cause dated from the days of Father Mathew, in whose crusade he took an active part. Through evil and good report, in sunshine and shade, he was true to the movement. One of the late Dr. Spratt's most trusted men, he was, on the formation of the Dublin Total Abstinence League, elected chairman—a position he retained until advancing years compelled him to surrender it. All through the Sunday-closing fight he was a prominent figure, presiding at more than one of the workingmen's meetings in favor of the bill, and acting to the last as Secretary to the St. Jame's Catholic Total Abstinence League, of which the Very Rev. Canon Kennedy is the President. His last illness was of a brief nature.

Fermanagh.

On Dec. 22, a party of about twenty were on the ice which covers Lough Erne, between Market street and the workhouse shore at Enniskillen, when it suddenly gave way, and four girls were drowned. The names of the drowned are: Kate Frith, who was drowned in endeavoring to save the other; Kate Gallagher, aged seventeen years; Maria Gallagher, aged thirteen, and Maggie Johnston, aged eighteen. Kate Frith leaves a mother whom she almost supported. Besides the four females who were drowned at Enniskillen, there were three persons also drowned at Belleek on Christmas morning. Miller, who was out shooting at Belco, met a similar fate. The accident occurred close to the shore.

Kerry.

Owing to the severe and continuous frost all outdoor work has been suspended in Listowel, which has entailed upon the families of many poor laborers in town and country no small distress and privation. Were it not for the laudable exertions, opportunely made by the St. Vincent de Paul Society, recently established in the town, to meet the trying emergency, by dispensing pecuniary relief, in weekly contribution, among deserving objects of charity, it is feared that many should have to seek admission to the workhouse.

Kilkenny.

The result of the election for the Corporeship of St. John's Ward, Kilkenny, was declared on Dec. 23, as follows: James Ryan, solicitor, 49; Mark Shearman, 27. Mr. Ryan was accordingly elected. James Langham, J. P., Mayor-elect, gave an inaugural banquet at the Club House on New Year's Day.

Michael Sullivan, Esq., Lacken Hall, died on Dec. 23, in his eighty-first year. Mr. Sullivan occupied a leading position for a lengthened period in Kilkenny, which he represented for twenty-two years in Parliament, his principles being those of independent opposition—and he was never known to give a wrong vote during that period. Mr. Sullivan was also High Sheriff of the county, Mayor of the city, and, as an extensive merchant and employer, he displayed energy and thorough business capacity, in conjunction with his brother, the late Richard Sullivan, Esq., M. P., which contributed materially to the promotion of the trade and prosperity of the city. His remains were buried in the family burial place, Kilmanagh.

The following names of gentlemen have been returned by the Town Council, in pursuance of the provisions of the "Act to extend the Privileges of Municipal Corporations in Ireland," to fill the office of Sheriff for the ensuing year: City of Kilkenny—Arthur McMahon, of Rose Inn street, Kilkenny, and Danville House, in the county of Kilkenny, Esq.; Aldermen Wm. O'Donnell, of Castlecomer, New road, Kilkenny; Alderman Patrick Murphy, of Thomas street, Kilkenny.

King's County.

A large fund has been raised by public subscription for the poor of Tullamore, and relief is being left undone to alleviate the distress now so prevalent. The committee, composed of the Lord Chancellor, the Lord Very Rev. Dr. Bugler, P.P.; W. Fitzpatrick and George Dooly, meet every morning in Dooley's Hotel to inquire into the most urgent cases of relief. Coal, provisions and money are being freely dispensed to the needy.

Limerick.

Arrangements are being made at Dromore Castle, the residence of the Earl of Limerick, for a leffee at an early date, the first, perhaps of its kind in Ireland. His Lordship has imported a number of bisons, or, as they are called in Limerick County, "wild cows," from South America, and stocked a large park with the animals, which are allowed to live there in their native state. A large shooting party from this and the sister county are to be invited, and have an opportunity afforded them of trying their luck at this sport, so entirely new in Ireland.

The death is announced of Madame Antoinette, for many years a devoted and saintly member of the Community of Nuns—the Faithful Companions of Jesus—at Laurel Hill, Limerick, and a relative of the Bourbon family of France. Her relatives were solemnized in the beautiful chapel of the convent by a large number of the clergy, at which the community and people of Laurel Hill attended.

Louth.

The Lord Lieutenant has appointed Mr. P. McDonough, merchant, West street, Drogheda, High Sheriff for the county of the town of Drogheda for the coming year.

Mayo.

The Mayo Telegraph of Dec. 21 says: "Father Rhatigan, C. C. Clifden, rescued two little children, named Peter and Jane Corbitt, from a scorpe school on Inishbofin. The Rev. gentleman was prosecuted by the proselytizers for entering their school, but the case was withdrawn. The cold and severe season—the period of distress—is the great trading time for the traffickers in souls and the children of the poor."

The City Mining Company have established branded stores in Castlebar, as a commodation the want of which dealers have long and expensively felt.

Meath.

On Dec. 20, the house of a gentleman named Reade, residing near Moate, was forcibly entered during his absence, and a double-barreled gun, a pistol, and some ammunition stolen. The constabulary of the neighboring stations were quickly apprised of the occurrence; but although they were quickly on the spot, no clue was obtained which would lead to the belief that the daring robbers will be apprehended.

Mr. Thomas Rodgers of Kells, left his favorite entered during his absence, and a double-barreled gun, a pistol, and some ammunition stolen. The constabulary of the neighboring stations were quickly apprised of the occurrence; but although they were quickly on the spot, no clue was obtained which would lead to the belief that the daring robbers will be apprehended.

Mr. Thomas Rodgers of Kells, left his favorite entered during his absence, and a double-barreled gun, a pistol, and some ammunition stolen. The constabulary of the neighboring stations were quickly apprised of the occurrence; but although they were quickly on the spot, no clue was obtained which would lead to the belief that the daring robbers will be apprehended.

Mr. Thomas Rodgers of Kells, left his

Roscommon.

It has been rumored that Mr. A. O'Connor, The Palace, Elphin, will offer himself as a candidate for the County Roscommon, at the approaching general election, in opposition to the present members, The O'Connor Don and the Hon. C. French.

Sligo.

The Sovereign Pontiff, Leo XIII., has created the Rev. John Molony, President of St. Michael's Seminary, Ballinasloe, Doctor of Divinity, on the occasion of a visit he recently paid to the Eternal City with an address of congratulation to His Holiness from the Arch-confraternity of the Holy Family, Ballinasloe.

On Dec. 22, it was discovered by the persons living in the neighborhood that the old collegiate church of St. Nicholas, Galway, was on fire. The church, which is one of the most stately edifices in the country, was founded in 1320, and on several occasions afterward was considerably improved and added to. The splendid chapel, the roof of which was destroyed by the fire, was erected in 1603 by James Lynch Fitzstephen, the celebrated Mayor of Galway, who condemned and executed his only son for the crime of murder. The Lynch chapel contains the family tomb, which has not, however, been used since the church ceased being a Catholic house of worship, and there are many ancient monuments besides. It appears the fire was the result of an accident. The fire had burned the boiler for the hot pipes was made too large, and the chimney took fire toward the roof which it adjoined. Immediately on the alarm being given, Col. Hagan and the officers and men of the Brigade drove hastened to the church with their engine, and poured a continual stream of water on the burning roof until it fell in. Nothing has been destroyed but the roof of Lynch's chapel and some church furniture, pews, &c. Lynche's tomb and all the ancient monuments are uninjured. St. Nicholas has since the Disendowment Act, become the parochial church for the Episcopalian Protestant community of the parish of St. Nicholas, which includes Galway and Rahoon, attending some miles to the south of the city, including Salt hill. The church

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.

YOUNG LADIES' INSTITUTE.

THIS INSTITUTION, WHICH IS INCORPORATED according to the laws of the State and empowered to confer academic honors, will commence the first term for the scholastic year, on WEDNESDAY, AUGUST 4, 1878. The course of instruction embraces all the branches of a thorough education.

TERMS:

Entrance, to be paid but once $15 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter 62 50
Washing, per quarter 12 50

Physicians' fees, unless it may be preferred to pay the bill in case of sickness, per quarter 7 50
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but these is no extra charge for the French, Spanish or German languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.

Payments are required to be made half a session in advance. Pupils will find it much to their advantage to be present at the opening of the session. aug24

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,

OAKLAND, ... CALIFORNIA

Conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary

THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY situated between Webster street and Lake Merritt, commanding an extensive frontage on the lake. The building recently erected, is supplied with all the modern improvements—no expense having been spared to render it in every respect a model institution.

The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.

TERMS:

(payable half yearly in advance):

Board and Tuition (French and Spanish included) $250 00
Washing 50 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution) 10 00
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, each 50 00

For further particulars apply to
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

BENICIA, ... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of Mercy, and is located in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia.

The scholastic year comprises ten months, opens on the 15th of August, and ends about the middle of June.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly):

Board and Tuition $225 00
Entrance Fee 10 00
Washing 45 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged for

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

The Expressage on packages sent to pupils is to be paid.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the City. The grounds are extensive and the building is large and convenient.

Pupils are prepared for the various commercial branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.

TERMS:

(Invariably half yearly in advance):

Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing, etc., per annum $200 00
Piano, use of instrument, per month, $6 50 ..... 68 25
Guitar, per month, $5 ..... 52 50

No extra charge for Plain Sewing, Fancy Needlework, etc.

The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences on the second Monday in August and ends on the last Thursday in June.

For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
Santa Barbara, Cal.

jy20

SANTA INEZ COLLEGE.

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED ON the Santa Inez river, in a beautiful valley at the eastern slope of the Rafael mountains, four miles, in a direct line, from the ocean, and twelve miles inland from Gaviota Landing. There is no more delightful spot in the State than the Santa Inez Valley. Protected on the north by the Rafael range, and in the south by the appearance of a verdant sea, the Pacific, it is as favorable to health as any in the State, but adds an additional charm to the proverbial beauty of Santa Inez. What healthy more appropriate for the education of youth than that in which the beauty and tranquillity of the mountains, where the gently-rounded hills and valleys, and the ever-changing tints of light of the ragged mountains; where the limpid dashing of the hills hasten to swell the Santa Inez, and the balmy breath of the forest and the flower is ever laden with the incense of nature's choir. The gentle influence of Christian teaching exercised in such a place is indeed calculated to cause the mind to "look through nature up to nature's God."

The healthiness and salubrity of the climate of Santa Barbara are not unknown to the medical profession. There are few invalids who have for a season inhaled the balmy air, amidst the beautiful and varied scenery of this county, who have not returned improved in health of body and mind. In view of these facts Santa Inez College may be safely recommended as a most desirable health resort.

By request of his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop the Brothers have just taken charge of the College. A limited number of boys between the age of eight and sixteen will be received. For particulars, address St. Mary's College.

Steamers make regular trips from San Francisco to Gaviota.

SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE.

A Select Boarding and Day School.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers,

COR. K AND TWELFTH STS., SACRAMENTO.

STUDENTS ARE RECEIVED AT ANY TIME DURING the year, and particular attention is given to such Commercial and Mechanical studies as prepare them for the duties of practical life. For particulars, apply to BRO. CLAUD,
President.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

LOS ANGELES, CAL.

CHARTERED IN 1865, AND CONDUCTED by the priests of the Congregation of the Mission, under the patronage of the Archbishop. For further particulars, address
REV. E. RUBI, C. M., President.

ACADEMY OF ST. ACNES

STOCKTON, CAL.

FOR YOUNG LADIES

Directed by the Dominican Sisters

EDUCATIONAL.

COLL GE OF NOTRE DAME

OF SAN FRANCISCO,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.

THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1866, chartered in 1876 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and situated on Lower California, adjoining the Mission Dolores street, opposite the Old Mission Church.

A large solid edifice has recently erected for the more ample accommodation of boarding pupils.

The course of instruction embraces all the branches necessary to the acquisition of a solid and refined education.

Parents in confiding their children to the care of the Sisters, may feel perfectly satisfied that every attention will be given to their intellectual and moral culture, while the system of government combines sufficient firmness, with maternal solicitude, to insure the real progress and advantage of the pupil.

The Thirteenth Annual Session will commence July 29, 1878.

TERMS:

Per quarter session, (payable in advance):

Board, tuition, washing, and use of bedding $62 50
Music, with use of instrument 13 50
Vocal Music 5 00
Drawing and Painting 5 00
Vacation spent at the College 30 00

EXTRA TERMS:

Terms per month (in advance):

Rhetoric Classes $3 00
Preparatory Classes 2 50
Primary Classes 2 00

Those pupils residing at a distance from the College, and desiring a hot luncheon, will be provided therewith at a trifling expense. For Bed and other particulars apply to the Superioress.

Pupils will be required to furnish a good solid English edition, free of charge.

jy5

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,

RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.

THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, is beautifully situated on the Sacramento River, in the town of Rio Vista. The location is remarkably healthy, the building new, and well furnished with all that contributes to the health and comfort of the pupils. The pleasure grounds are extensive and well adapted to healthful exercise. Pupils of all persuasions will be received. The course of instruction includes all the useful branches of a solid education.

The Spiritual Instruction, and the exercises of the Catholic church, the first to commence January and ending in June.

Terms per Session, Payable in Advance

BOARDERS, PUPILS

Board and Tuition, with use of bedding $150 00
Instrument Phone 20 00
Washing 20 00
Vocal Music (private lessons) 10 00
Drawing in class, Drawing, French, Plain and Ornamental Needlework ..... Free

DAY SCHOLARS.

Terms per month, in advance:

Senior Class $2 00
Intermediate Class 1 50
Primary Class 1 00
Music, Piano lessons, with use of instrument 7 00
Music Guitar lessons, with use of instrument 3 00

$5 00 for expenses has required. For further information apply to

M. M. CAMILLUS, Superioress.

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY,

UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE

Sisters of St. Dominic,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THIS INSTITUTION, HEALTHFULLY LOCATED in that street, now extensively during Early for the acquisition of a refined and solid education.

The scholastic year consists of two terms of five months each.

TERMS:

Board, washing and English tuition, per quarter, $62 50

EXTRAS

Languages, (each) $10 00
Piano Lessons 15 00
Vocal Lessons 15 00
Private Vocal Lessons 3 00
Drawing and Painting in Water Color 10 00
Oil Painting, per lesson 1 00
Embroidery, per 10 00
No Extra Charge for Needlework

DAY PUPILS

Primary Class, per term $10 00
Intermediate 15 00
Higher 20 00
Use of Piano for Practice 5 00

Each young lady is required to be provided with bed linen, six towels, of under-clothing, two bonnets, dresses, dressing case, four sheets, four pillow slips, one dozen napkins, one silver cup, one knife, one fork, one teaspoon, one silver spoon, one silver ring, one silver napkin ring, one gold band, one gold ring, and napkin ring.

Surplus articles entered to pay.

Pupils of any religious denomination will be received, but for sake of uniformity, all are required to attend the religious services of the Institution.

For further particulars address
SISTER SUPERIOR.

CONVENT OF

The Immaculate Heart of Mary,

SAN JOSE, CAL.

FOR THE

EDUCATION OF YOUNG LADIES

GILROY, SANTA CLARA CO.

Conducted by the Sisters of the Most Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary.

TERMS FOR BOARDERS:

Board, tuition, washing and mending, per annum $200
Entrance fee, to be paid but once 10
Tuition on Piano, per annum 60
Use of Piano 20

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the French language.

TERMS FOR DAY SCHOLARS:

Primary, per month $2 00
Elementary and Junior, per month 3 00
Tuition on Piano, " " 6 00
French, " " 3 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

N. B.—The above establishment is also the novitiate of the Order.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to the Superioress.

aug24

ST. JOHN'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES,

SAN JUAN, ... CALIFORNIA

THIS INSTITUTION IS UNDER THE direction of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

The scholastic year commences August 16 and terminates June 15.

Boarders are received at any time through the year.

For prospectus and further particulars apply to SISTER CARMEN ARGELLAS.

jy6 superioress

MT. ST. MARY'S ACADEMY

CONDUCTED BY THE

Sisters of St. Dominic,

RENO, NEVADA.

For particulars address
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

The American Irish Nationalists.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE FREEMAN.

NEW YORK, Dec. 22, 1878.

SIR—Notwithstanding the very unusual length of the communication I addressed to you some days ago, I hope you will allow me space for a few more lines, which I present it to the Freeman for reasons which you will easily understand, but which may not be so plain to some of your readers. In the first place, the Freeman, in its anxiety for an organ of public opinion, published as news such details of the so-called "new departure" of the Irish Nationalists as were to be found in the American Press, and, as fished a perfect right to do, commented editorially upon it. The nature of these comments was such as to call for further explanation from some of those whose words and actions were criticised, and in an especial manner from me. This would have been a sufficient reason for asking you to insert an explanatory letter, but there were others. The circulation and standing of the Freeman would enable me to reach a larger number of Irish people than I could do through the columns of any other journal likely to publish my letter, and I naturally availed of the proper opportunity thus presented. The Freeman, in giving insertion to my views on a public question, would assume no responsibility for them, just as I accept none for those of the Freeman.

The Nationalists have no public exponent of their opinions or objects in Ireland. A journal which sometimes assumes that role is not, from its nature, entitled to be the organ of Mr. Isaac Butt or of the National Press, and, moreover, it would be obvious to the relations of the Nationalists to the paper in question, so that the view of the Nationalists would be taken from it, and illustrate a peculiar phase of Irish politics, all sections of Nationalists and all shades of those Nationalists are impatiently restrained, by turns impatiently, should an occasion arise, at the publication of views which, if not their own particular principles may be, or whether it has any at all, are questions not easy to determine with the evidence at present available. But, however that may be, it is more better than the Nationalists themselves, as their principles are, or at least that they ought to be, and undertakes to bag them steadily to their work within the limits which its tremendous wisdom has prescribed. Purely from a sense of duty it awfully keeps out of this track itself, but nevertheless its vigilant eye unerringly detects, from its safe point of observation, the slightest symptom of a disease which is widen the lines or escape into the outer world, and the culprit is mercilessly lashed back to the fold. The Press is clearly acked out. It is to conspire perennially and to protest occasionally, so that such victories may be achieved by the constitutionalists, and patriotic papers may be sold.

Nationalists have no public exponent, and are also necessary for benevolent patriotic purposes sometimes, but they are to be sent all cases for the purpose of being used as opulent questions asked. It must be admitted that Nationalists have no public exponent questions asked. It must be admitted in all fairness, however, that the Nationalists are not the only people who are two for themselves occasionally, but always under a pristine disclaimer of all responsibility for their utterances, and, as well known, "the Press is not free in Ireland, right honorable sir, the law of libel, permissible now and then, for it will is really conceded that one's editor who pleads a few phrases in the cause of a country prison becomes a "martyr" at infinitely less cost than those stupid fellows of the Press, who have to be constantly paying long fines than penal servitude and wasted their time and their lives setting great fires making stones in Portland. Consistency is the part of the Nationalists that it is necessary to have a public exponent, but the infallible monitor who kindly relieves them of the bother of thinking for themselves, and rewards his absence, and a hall forth the highest enthusiasm and the fatest sacrifices; for who would not risk a few years in Portland, and, if he is a fool of himself, for the honor of a crown the back from such an exalted perspage?

But no Nationalist must presume to think for himself, or to make and say that a little constitutional agitation might advance National cause, even if he should discover, that they remained in Ireland, and, or going into the English Parliament, must stay in the rational and constitutional manner, lest he is stifled, when he is "individually useless," martyr, and a multitude of the Irish people that I could do through the columns of any other journal likely to publish my letter, and I naturally availed of the proper opportunity thus presented. The Freeman, in giving insertion to my views on a public question, would assume no responsibility for them, just as I accept none for those of the Freeman.

The Nationalists have no public exponent of their opinions or objects in Ireland. A journal which sometimes assumes that role is not, from its nature, entitled to be the organ of Mr. Isaac Butt or of the National Press, and, moreover, it would be obvious to the relations of the Nationalists to the paper in question, so that the view of the Nationalists would be taken from it, and illustrate a peculiar phase of Irish politics, all sections of Nationalists and all shades of those Nationalists are impatiently restrained, by turns impatiently, should an occasion arise, at the publication of views which, if not their own particular principles may be, or whether it has any at all, are questions not easy to determine with the evidence at present available. But, however that may be, it is more better than the Nationalists themselves, as their principles are, or at least that they ought to be, and undertakes to bag them steadily to their work within the limits which its tremendous wisdom has prescribed. Purely from a sense of duty it awfully keeps out of this track itself, but nevertheless its vigilant eye unerringly detects, from its safe point of observation, the slightest symptom of a disease which is widen the lines or escape into the outer world, and the culprit is mercilessly lashed back to the fold. The Press is clearly acked out. It is to conspire perennially and to protest occasionally, so that such victories may be achieved by the constitutionalists, and patriotic papers may be sold.

Nationalists have no public exponent, and are also necessary for benevolent patriotic purposes sometimes, but they are to be sent all cases for the purpose of being used as opulent questions asked. It must be admitted that Nationalists have no public exponent questions asked. It must be admitted in all fairness, however, that the Nationalists are not the only people who are two for themselves occasionally, but always under a pristine disclaimer of all responsibility for their utterances, because, as well known, "the Press is not free in Ireland, right honorable sir, the law of libel, permissible now and then, for it will is really conceded that one's editor who pleads a few phrases in the cause of a country prison becomes a "martyr" at infinitely less cost than those stupid fellows of the Press, who have to be constantly paying long fines than penal servitude and wasted their time and their lives setting great fires making stones in Portland. Consistency is the part of the Nationalists that it is necessary to have a public exponent, but the infallible monitor who kindly relieves them of the bother of thinking for themselves, and rewards his absence, and a hall forth the highest enthusiasm and the fatest sacrifices; for who would not risk a few years in Portland, and, if he is a fool of himself, for the honor of a crown the back from such an exalted perspage?

But no Nationalist must presume to think for himself, or to make and say that a little constitutional agitation might advance National cause, even if he should discover, that they remained in Ireland, and, or going into the English Parliament, must stay in the rational and constitutional manner, lest he is stifled, when he is "individually useless," martyr, and a multitude of the Irish people that I could do through the columns of any other journal likely to publish my letter, and I naturally availed of the proper opportunity thus presented. The Freeman, in giving insertion to my views on a public question, would assume no responsibility for them, just as I accept none for those of the Freeman.

The Nationalists have no public exponent of their opinions or objects in Ireland. A journal which sometimes assumes that role is not, from its nature, entitled to be the organ of Mr. Isaac Butt or of the National Press, and, moreover, it would be obvious to the relations of the Nationalists to the paper in question, so that the view of the Nationalists would be taken from it, and illustrate a peculiar phase of Irish politics, all sections of Nationalists and all shades of those Nationalists are impatiently restrained, by turns impatiently, should an occasion arise, at the publication of views which, if not their own particular principles may be, or whether it has any at all, are questions not easy to determine with the evidence at present available. But, however that may be, it is more better than the Nationalists themselves, as their principles are, or at least that they ought to be, and undertakes to bag them steadily to their work within the limits which its tremendous wisdom has prescribed. Purely from a sense of duty it awfully keeps out of this track itself, but nevertheless its vigilant eye unerringly detects, from its safe point of observation, the slightest symptom of a disease which is widen the lines or escape into the outer world, and the culprit is mercilessly lashed back to the fold. The Press is clearly acked out. It is to conspire perennially and to protest occasionally, so that such victories may be achieved by the constitutionalists, and patriotic papers may be sold.

Nationalists have no public exponent, and are also necessary for benevolent patriotic purposes sometimes, but they are to be sent all cases for the purpose of being used as opulent questions asked. It must be admitted that Nationalists have no public exponent questions asked. It must be admitted in all fairness, however, that the Nationalists are not the only people who are two for themselves occasionally, but always under a pristine disclaimer of all responsibility for their utterances, because, as well known, "the Press is not free in Ireland, right honorable sir, the law of libel, permissible now and then, for it will is really conceded that one's editor who pleads a few phrases in the cause of a country prison becomes a "martyr" at infinitely less cost than those stupid fellows of the Press, who have to be constantly paying long fines than penal servitude and wasted their time and their lives setting great fires making stones in Portland. Consistency is the part of the Nationalists that it is necessary to have a public exponent, but the infallible monitor who kindly relieves them of the bother of thinking for themselves, and rewards his absence, and a hall forth the highest enthusiasm and the fatest sacrifices; for who would not risk a few years in Portland, and, if he is a fool of himself, for the honor of a crown the back from such an exalted perspage?

But no Nationalist must presume to think for himself, or to make and say that a little constitutional agitation might advance National cause, even if he should discover, that they remained in Ireland, and, or going into the English Parliament, must stay in the rational and constitutional manner, lest he is stifled, when he is "individually useless," martyr, and a multitude of the Irish people that I could do through the columns of any other journal likely to publish my letter, and I naturally availed of the proper opportunity thus presented. The Freeman, in giving insertion to my views on a public question, would assume no responsibility for them, just as I accept none for those of the Freeman.

The Nationalists have no public exponent of their opinions or objects in Ireland. A journal which sometimes assumes that role is not, from its nature, entitled to be the organ of Mr. Isaac Butt or of the National Press, and, moreover, it would be obvious to the relations of the Nationalists to the paper in question, so that the view of the Nationalists would be taken from it, and illustrate a peculiar phase of Irish politics, all sections of Nationalists and all shades of those Nationalists are impatiently restrained, by turns impatiently, should an occasion arise, at the publication of views which, if not their own particular principles may be, or whether it has any at all, are questions not easy to determine with the evidence at present available. But, however that may be, it is more better than the Nationalists themselves, as their principles are, or at least that they ought to be, and undertakes to bag them steadily to their work within the limits which its tremendous wisdom has prescribed. Purely from a sense of duty it awfully keeps out of this track itself, but nevertheless its vigilant eye unerringly detects, from its safe point of observation, the slightest symptom of a disease which is widen the lines or escape into the outer world, and the culprit is mercilessly lashed back to the fold. The

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN.

The Directors of the City of Glasgow Bank, Rupert Sommer, Hannah and Lewis Potter, convicted of fraud, theft, and embezzlement, were sentenced to eighteen months imprisonment. The two other Directors, convicted of attempting false statements of balance sheets, were sentenced to eight months imprisonment. The light sentences caused some surprise. Justice Mitchell, in passing sentence, said he considered the circumstances, that the prisoners had not falsified accounts for their own personal benefit, but for the mistaken idea that it was for the public good. It is reported that the Government intends appointing the Duke of Connaught Viceroy of Ireland. Three Catholic Bishops have had a conference with the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and intimated him that the Catholics were willing to accept any fair compromise on the University Education question.

A Times London cablegram says: It is difficult to say what ails Russia is playing. While the Czar is pacific the press again breathe fire. The Globe says England is an implacable foe; calls for the strengthening of the Caucasus and the evacuation of Central Asia, at the same time putting out that the present operations of the British are to be pushed to develop the new protector of Asiatic Turkey. Troops continue to replace those which leave Turkish territory through the Czar assures England of the complete evacuation of the Russian Monarchist the Bulgarians are coming on all hands and showing bitter hostility to the European Commission. The belief is growing that there will be a rest recess in the Congress when the Russian Ultimatum. The is said to suit the diplomatic plans of Russia. It will create a new situation; she will then make from the Sultan of Turkey, while the British operations in Asia will be as easy to go on as possible for Czar's ends. Russia makes slowly, though looking far ahead. It is learned from a pretty reliable source that an order of $5,000,000 is yesterday to leave Sebastopol for the Caucasus at the end of February.

BRITISH INDIA.

A dispatch from Khost says: General Roberts has not so once evacuated Matoon—capital of Khostat—that it was surrounded by thousands of Mussuds. The Khost returned and recent the chief whom they had left in authority burned the fort, and retreated to camp. In their retreat they were harassed by the Mussuds. General Roberts has abandoned Khost for the present, as he is confident such disturbances will be increased.

A correspondent of the Civil and Military Gazette of Lahore telegraphs from Kandahar (Ghilzai), January 25th, that supplies there are obtained with great difficulty. The arrangements of the Commissariat in the rear of the army are in a deplorable state, and Commissariat officers appear unable to forward stores to the front. The cavalry, artillery and horses are suffering from want of clothing and food. The people of the country are sullky and hostile to the British. All native suspected of bearing arms in Kandahar have been searched, the number of arms being insignificant. Four elephants and 100 bullocks died from cold and starvation. The forward majority required was 206. M. Jules Ferry obtained 336 votes, and General Declaux 206. M. Grevy was accordingly declared elected and was proclaimed President of the Republic amid great enthusiasm.

VERSAILLES, January 31.—Gambetta has been elected President of the Chamber of Deputies, by 314 votes out of a total of 465.

EASTERN.

Disparagingly of Our Minister to Mexico. New York, February 1.—Dispatches and recent arrivals from Mexico state that the Government seriously meditates asking the withdrawal of Minister Foster, as the result of his disparagingly with the Cabinet and his diplomatic course.

A correspondence with the Mexican Minister at Washington from the City of Mexico—Some of the Cabinet decline to visit Foster. George S. Bowen, of Chicago, says Foster mixtures a policy for the acquisition by the United States of a portion of Mexico with the twenty-sixth parallel, and is interested in an international railway. Bowen thinks the visit of the American Delegation to Mexico will result in securing a peace treaty, making it impossible for any political action to raise the question of war with Mexico.

The Cabinet in the Ascendant. WASHINGTON, February 4.—Owing to the failure of yesterday's executive session and other causes, only five of the nine members of the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations attended today's meeting. The Chinese Immigration bill was taken up, but an account of the disparate views and shortness of time remaining before the hour for the Senate to assemble, it was laid over for action at a special meeting. Senators Hamlin and Beck, Senators Conkling, Matthews, Eaton, and Morgan and the members present today positively promise shall be held next Friday. They also promise that the bill will be promptly reported back to the Senate on that day without recommendation either for or against it, unless—which is not considered probable—a majority will agree to report it, without delay, favorably.

Mission Indians. The House Committee on Indian Affairs has agreed to recommend the passage of a bill authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to purchase, at a cost not exceeding $50,000, some tract of land suitable for a reservation for the Mission Indians of California. The proposition submitted to the Committee was to purchase the Santa Ysabel Rancho, the property of Inspector Vanderver, at a cost of $75,000, which, it is claimed, is the best tract for the purpose, and, secondly, by our Indian agents, who have visited it, and, thirdly, by Jar. Sanson, Esq., Hartshorne, formerly of Ohio, and, and of Ohio, and, and, and, is the owner of the tract.

Disease Among American Cattle Shipped to England. NEW YORK, January 31.—News that the British Government had prohibited the importation of live cattle from America has created considerable excitement among shippers of live stock and also among shipowners, several lines of steamers running from this and other American ports having made large contracts about for 1879. The Evening Post says: "During the Summer months last year some of the large steamers of the National Line were especially fitted up and wholly devoted to this business. The number of cattle shipped by that line alone last year numbered more than 60. The alleged decline of the English Government, we are officially informed. The present is the dullest time in the trade, but even now there are probably more than 1,000 head of cattle on the way to England. Two steamers sailed from Philadelphia Saturday for Liverpool yesterday, and Phillips sailed he had received word from his agent there of any attempt to prevent their landing. The British Consul at Boston, he said, had heard of any attempt on the part of the British Government to prevent the importation of American cattle."

WASHINGTON, January 31.—The British Minister has informed the Department of State that the plague prevalent in Bombay has been discovered in a cargo of cattle on the ship Ontario, from Portland. Her Majesty's Government are considering whether they can retain the United States in the enjoyment of Part 6 of the Fifth Schedule of the Act of 1878.

LIVERPOOL, January 31.—The Privy Council Department has received a cable dispatch from the future arrival of cattle from America. These engaged in the trade contend that unnecessary alarm has been created out of the Ontario case, and dispute the statement. The animals condemned suffered from pleuro-pneumonia. They are retained veterinary surgeons of high repute to act as a check upon the Privy Council Inspectors.

PUBLITZER is not a sign of wisdom; but the want of it always leaves room for a suspicion of folly.

THE MONITOR.

Catholic Family Weekly, containing the Latest and Most Reliable Ecclesiastical Intelligence.

Published every Thursday for the Proprietors at the Printing Office, 622 Clay Street, San Francisco.

Editorial and Business Office, 549 Green Street.

All letters, whether on business or other matters, should be addressed to Rev. J. E. Hardesty, to whom, also, drafts or post-office money-orders, should be made payable.

Terms (Payable in advance):

Spread by carriers, per week	10c.
Mail subscribers, per year	$4 00
Six months	2 25
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces	2 25

Postage in one penny paid by the publishers.

Advertising Rates.

1 square 1 time	$1 50	1 square 4 mos	$10 50
1 square 1 month	4 50	1 square 6 mos	13 50
1 square 2 months	6 00	1 square 9 mos	18 00
1 square 3 months	9 00	1 square 1 year	25 00

Reading notices 20 cents a line.

Business cards not to exceed one inch, $5 per month.

No New Advertisements can be changed after the first issue of each month.

Advertisements of Boards, Meetings, etc., will be charged for at the same rate as Advertisements.

LATEST NEWS BY MAIL.

Distress in Ireland.

Scarcely a day passes which does not bring any proof of the existence of the distress which has overtaken the agricultural classes throughout the country. Lately we have published the Farmers' Clubs this is the most absorbing topic of discussion in the agricultural journals. We publish the monthly table. At no period since the famine years has such a large proportion of cultivation been felt. The distress is not confined to the poorer tenantry; it is a general one, and searching. It has already planged countless families into the direst distress. It is a fearful prospect, which, in many cases, it will cost many years of prosperity to repair. The Land Bill, with its provisions for authority that the farming classes throughout the country have laid in vain for years, is now being hurried into shape to keep themselves afloat, the rent is not forthcoming and by the rigorous nature of the law, of course even such poor expedients as these are perhaps beyond the reach of many. When it comes to the turn of the power classes we fear it will be too late to be of any practical benefit. In other huge excites is beginning to be feared as the outcome of the present calamity an exodus of all who can arrange "either the means of leaving the country, and some other means of getting them to do so. The outlook is, indeed, the darkest which has for many a year, and we regret to say that so far the facts do it seem to have taken that hold upon the public mind which their gravity demands. We hear of a hollow fund and a hollow fund there making a wise gesture of action in their rents; but these cases are confined, so far as we can ascertain, to the tenants of one landlord. The general movement in the country is one of hesitation, towards facing the realities. We therefore, think it high time to call the attention very emphatically to the Irish Press of all shades have expressed—

THE BAPTISM.

CHAPTER I

The Roman theatre had reached its last decline. The barbarians had never in the queen city of the world reached the height to which it had risen among the Greeks. Delighting in the sanguinary tragedies of war, the republic found inspired those horrible pictures that charmed the habitants of Rome. The comic muse, as portrayed in Terence and Plautus, was never popular; to amuse this populace of freedmen something more piquant than sacrificial was needed. Even in the time of the elder Cato, the people lostly hooted obscene farces, and they loved neither tragedy nor comedy; naval shows nor chariot races; they delighted in the sight of blood, thirsting from the wounds of gladiators, habituated to make a Roman holiday, or streaming from the mingled limbs of Christians.

Nero, after having terrified the Romans by his dramatic successes, as a rare holiday sport, decided their city to the flames; but his favorite amusement was to make flaming torches of the bodies of the Christians.

Set at the time of our legend, this scene, scenes of cruelty did not yet exist; yet the crowd, even then, rushed with eagerness to the circus whenever the faithful were to be delivered to wild beasts. They were no longer contented with having the holy martyrs torn by lions; but even while they were in chains they overwhelmed them with the most insulting revilings.

The Christians were happy in the midst of these persecutions, for God changed those abusive words into pearls and diamonds, and formed of them the starry diadems with which His glorified saints were crowned. But it was painful those holy ones far more than the torments of martyrdom, was to see the august ceremonies of their faith turned into ridicule; not alone by freedmen and slaves, but by the buffoons upon the stage.

No one was more successful in acting this foul part than Ardelion; hence he stood high in favor with the populace. His very appearance on the stage was sufficient to excite the wildest shouts of admiration from every tier of seats in the amphitheatre.

Ardelion possessed fine talents, and he had no equal in the art of provoking laughter. His consummate skill in parodying the Roscius; but he was much more learned.

On a certain day, the martyrdom of a band of Christians, in the public circus, was to be preluded by a farce, composed expressly to ridicule the mysteries of our holy religion. Ardelion, as usual, was to play the principal. But to write this farce it was necessary to know those mysteries; and this was not easy, for the faithful concealed with care their religious rites.

Among Ardelion's slaves was one called Tertia. He knew well that she was a Christian; her modesty and dignified conduct sufficiently distinguished her from other women of her condition; but he had hitherto failed to ignore her religion, on account of the edicts which would have obliged him to denounce her to the judges. He had several times sought to draw her into conversation on the subject; but Tertia, fearing some profanation, had always evaded his questions, and, without appearing ashamed of her faith, had baffled his curiosity by her prudence. Knowing well the constancy of the Christians, he felt assured that he could not obtain any information by threats or severity; he therefore resorted to duplicity and falsehood.

"Tertia," said he to the slave, "I have heard of the doctrines of the Christians; they appear to me to be beautiful, but I am not yet sufficiently acquainted with them. I do not know why, but I feel thoroughly impelled to embrace their faith. But can I not first receive further instructions? I fear, should I engage myself irrevocably, without a perfect understanding of the subject, to find myself pledged to absurd and impious doctrines."

"Our enemies, replied the slave, spread these reports to ruin us; you will find in our worship only what is good and pure. If your wish is sincere, I will present you to one learned men; and I am sure, when you know our belief, you will abhor the abominations of idolatry."

"Well, good Tertia, you will lead me to them; but will they not despise my profession?"

"We despise no one. The kingdom of heaven is open to all—to whomsoever inside to gain it."

"Will they not forbid me to appear on the stage?"

"When you have become a Christian you will regulate your own life; no one will constrain you."

"After all, if they should exact it, it would matter very little; I am tired offering myself every day to the laughter of the foolish crowd. But, then, if I visit your learned men, I shall be counted among their disciples. I value my fools, and I have no wish to lose my life."

"Baptism will free you from those fears. He who has been fortified by it, far from fearing death, desires and implores it."

"Yes, that is what I have often seen, and I cannot comprehend it. What, then, is this baptism, which has such power, and so completely changes the nature of men?"

"It is the first of our religious rites, by means of which we are transformed from children of darkness into children of light."

"Ah, it is doubtless some grand feast, where you are served with magic beverages and enchanted meats!"

"Oh, no! It consists only in pouring pure water on the head, and pronouncing the sacramental words."

"Cabalistic words! I supposed so; invocations to earth and hell."

"We invoke God alone. Earth and hell are the works of His hands; we are not permitted to invoke them. We are baptized in the name of the triune God—of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Ghost."

"Another no other ceremonies?"

"Thus, and, thus only necessary one."

"What! is no more needed to transform men, and change the weak and timid timbered Lucius, as soon as they have shown a little water on my forehead, shall I become capable of braving every torture?"

"Yes, my child, your faith will ever waver, you could always strengthen and re-establish it by our other sacraments."

"But what are they? These secret, mysterious festivals—for which you are reproached!"

"The hatred of our enemies alone forces us to celebrate them in secret."

"Do you there drink rare wines which inspire your courage?"

"We drink a mysterious wine; but I am not free to reveal our mysteries. If you seek the truth, consult you shall learn all our doctrine."

"Let us wait a little while. To become a Christian, now-days, is to seek death. It is good to think twice."

"At least I beseech you not to abuse the confidence which, perhaps too lightly, I have reposed in you."

"Fear not, Tertia; I shall not betray you."

Yet, in spite of this promise, Tertia bitterly repented her indiscretion. She vaguely felt that some misfortune would come of it, and she was filled with sad forebodings which were soon realized.

She heard that a magnificent spectacle was to be represented in the circus; where Christians were to fight with wild beasts; and before their martyrdom Ardelion and other buffoons were to ridicule our religion. At this intelligence Tertia was overwhelmed with grief and remorse. Hastening to the venerable priest who had baptized her, she confessed her fault, with many tears; and following the good man's counsel, she fasted and prayed to expiate her guilt.

In baptism she had taken the name of Mary, and she now invoked with fervor the patron to whom she had been given, continuing her to intercede for ignorance, and teach her to repair the scandal caused by her involuntary error.

CHAPTER II.

It was on the eve of the day marked for the triumph of the saints. Amphitheatre, facing before a mirror of brass, was practicing his comic gestures, when Tertia entered his apartment, and, without listening a word, threw herself, bathed in tears, at his feet.

"What is the matter? impatiently exclaimed the actor. "If you have been guilty of a fault, be resigned to receive the punishment it merits."

"I have committed a great fault. Alas! would that I could repair it by submitting to any bodily injury whatever! Only listen to me, my master."

"Not now—not now! do you not see that I am engaged?"

"What I have to say to you cannot be delayed, and it concerns my salvation."

"The actor had neither heart nor soul, and his natural sensibility was increased by a willful hardening—a his conscience. But there was in the accents of Tertia's grief so profound, so real, that in spite of himself he pitied her. "Speak," said he, "but be quick; what do you want?"

"I implore you not to perform in derision our holy mysteries, and thus make me guilty of your sacrilege."

"Humph! And is that all you had to say to me?"

"Oh, my master, I entreat you."

"Why, you should be grateful to me for making your mysteries known. Perhaps, he continued mockingly, "I shall gain many proselytes."

"Alas! if you could but represent our faith in truth."

"Never fear; your God will be enchanted with the glory I shall throw around Him."

"Beware, my master: He is not deaf and powerless as your idols are. When His vengeance He is terrible. And to this hour no one has mocked Him without punishment."

"Ha, indeed! He has, then, become powerful since His death, for it is certain that He was not able to save His own life. Besides, what is there to fear? He will laugh at my jests, and if He is a wise God, He will know how to turn them to advantage."

"He has power to do so; but you will still be guilty of the blasphemous pronouncing. Oh, I beseech you, do not provoke Him! Remember this applause, which may cost you too dear. Your fame enough. God will reward you for this little sacrifice, and is recompense, he may even open your eyes and admit you among His children."

"Well, well, Tertia, that is enough for the present. Leave me and I will think over it."

Mary retired in despair; she passed the night in prayer, accusing herself, and implorine pardon of God.

When the hour arrived at which Ardelion, in his litter, was carried to the theatre, the slave placed herself in his path. She spoke no word, but by her attitude, her imploring look, the actor knew what she would have said. But the bitter bitterness passed on and he soon forgot his Christian slave and thought only of his part. Once, in looking back, he fancied he perceived in the distance a woman whose figure resembled Tertia's.

He entered the circus and hastened to his chamber, where the slaves rejoined him and aided in robing him.

Meanwhile Mary, urged by despair, became reckless of her life. She fled from her master's house, without knowing whither she was going. Guided, doubtless, by an instinct from on high, she arrived, in hurrying through the streets, at the house of the manager of the games.

A sudden resolution seized her, and entering, she addressed him:

"Sir, I, too, am a Christian, and I come to combat the wild beasts."

"Unhappy wretch, what fury leads you to destruction! Who are you?"

"I am a servant of Jesus Christ. Open the lists for me; that I, too, may win a crown with my brethren."

"Take back your words, else I cannot refuse your demand."

"Hesitate no longer! I have trampled under foot the orders of your Emperor, and despise the gods of the empire."

"Reflect a little longer. You are young; life is sweet. You may repent when it is too late.

"I have already reflected; and am now ready; I worship Jesus Christ, and Him only."

"Since you will die, you shall take the place of her who died last night. This will stop the people from murmuring about being cheated out of one of their victims, for the number will then be complete." So saying, he caused Mary to be led into the prison, where were already assembled the elect of God—those whom His mercy had selected to enter, that day, the kingdom of their Lord, and share the royalty of Christ.

Four victims were found in that dreary dungeon; Mary made the fifth. On entering, she saluted them.

"The Lord is with you! Blessed are ye, for ye shall always strengthen and re-establish it by our other sacraments."

"Yes, and your faith, should ever waver, you could always strengthen and re-establish it by our other sacraments."

"But what are they? These secret, mysterious festivals—for which you are reproached!"

"The hatred of our enemies alone forces us to celebrate them in secret."

"Do you there drink rare wines which inspire your courage?"

"We drink a mysterious wine; but I am not free to reveal our mysteries. If you seek the truth, consult you shall learn all our doctrine."

"Let us wait a little while. To become a Christian, now-days, is to seek death. It is good to think twice."

"At least I beseech you not to abuse the confidence which, perhaps too lightly, I their eyes on their destined victims. Shouts and cries of savage joy saluted those weak saints. The wild beasts, in their cells, echoed the roars of human beings, as cruel and merciless as themselves. Mary trembled, but she lifted her heart in prayer.

After having, in this manner, presented them to the crowd, their executioners led them to the centre of the circus. Then the old man spoke to them:

"My children, we are blessed among men, that God has thought worthy to shed our blood for Him—who died for our sins. We trust not to our own strength. Pray the Lord to give us courage, and defend us from all weakness."

He began to recite the prayers of the Church, and, with lowered voices, the others followed him. At this moment, the confused sounds of the eager crowd were suddenly hushed, and all eyes were fixed upon the stage. Ardelion appeared, and a tumultuous burst of applause, from all parts of the theatre, saluted the favorite of the populace.

Around the sanded space which bore the name of arena, was erected an iron balustrade, too high to be cleared by beasts of prey in their most furious bounds. A wide gallery, pierced with several doors, separated the spectators from the arena. Beyond this gallery and overlooking it, the seats arose in regular terraces, forming an immense horse-shoe, the two ends of which touched the stage. The whole building was open to the sky.

The throne of the Emperor was prepared in the centre of the seats, opposite the stage. His gilded chair was placed upon a magnificent platform, covered with gold-embroidered purple cloth. On seats below the emperor were grouped his principal officers.

It was at the foot of this throne that the fatal blow was given, after their defeat, to those unfortunate gladiators whom the people, in their caprice, condemned to kill and be the well-known signal of turning down their thumbs, and here it was that the little band of christians stood.

Notwithstanding the immense dimensions of the circus, it scarcely sufficed to contain the eager and impatient crowd which throughout every terrace of seats in the amphitheatre, and there was not an empty place in the ranks of the consulars or patrcians. The martyrs remained standing in modest, but fearless attitudes, and they sustained with a holy courage the insulting jeers and mad jaunt frowns of the ferocious multitude. Conspicuous among the little group was their priest and leader Artius. He was an old man, and familiar with suffering. He had already undergone the apprenticeship for the combat, and the glorious scars of the tortures he had suffered were not yet healed; his body was maimed and bruised, but his soul was invincible. He confronted, with a calm countenance, the dreadful fate now approaching him—a fate which he had long desired and implored. Twelve others, who he had baptized, and who had shared the labors and fatigues of his ministry, had been condemned to share his triumph. Among They were still in the bloom of youth, and they would have regretted being called so soon from the vineyard of the Lord, were they not about to confess Him so gloriously before men. The fourth virgin had lost the most highly favored of God. A laborer called at the eleventh hour, he had been baptized on the eve of his martyrdom, and now he was to exchange the white robe of the catechumen for the empurpled garment of the martyr, with a higher dignity and the grace of heaven than his fervor and his innocence.

CHAPTER III.

The shouts of applause had died away. The crowd, panting and intoxicated with joy, awaited breathlessly the first accents of the omnium bonorum of Ardelion. When the slave, Mary, perceived her master, her head sunk on her bosom, and the tears slowly coursed down her cheeks. The great Artius, saw them, and fearing that her courage was failing, he gently exhorted her:

"Bride of Christ! raise thine eyes to what heaven, where thy spouse awaits thee; and in thy wedding garment, shalt thou sit at the marriage feast of the Lamb.

"My father," sobbed the penitent, "then she hast received the power to bind and loose, say, will He judge me worthy of a place at His table?"

"Fear not, my daughter; when thou shalt have passed thro second baptism, thou shalt appear before him pure as His angels, who have never sinned.

"I have dishonored His worship; I have given up His holy mysteries to opprobrium and mockery."

"Will God refuse these pardon when thou shalt have given him thy bloody proof of thy faithful love—when thou shalt have sought him through the gates of violent death! Behold the confidence which mamates thy brethren! Already have they forgotten this life. Already their souls, nearly loosed from these garments of flesh, enjoy, in anticipation, the rewards of martyrdom."

"They have no cause for remorse. They have not caused the profanation of our holy ceremonies."

"If thou hast done so, my daughter, it was not with intent to sin; thy thought was not of sacrilege, and God will not punish thee."

"No, no, I have not willfully sinned. I was deceived; I too easily believed a false word. I could not foresee the consequences."

"If thou hadst sold our holy mysteries, the diligence of our brethren could repair thy fault."

"Dost grant that my crime be no greater. All the insults which the actor, Ardelion, shall pour forth upon us, it is I—it is I who have taught them to him, it is I who betrayed to him the secrets of our august mysteries.

"Since he deceived thee by his hypocrisy, thou art not accountable for his impiety.

"I spoke without thought; I knew not what I was doing."

"Calm thyself, Mary, and wipe away thy tears, but the idolaters believe that thou repudiate. So long have we blasphemed their gods and ignominies that we care not for them. Are we not blessed when men spit upon us and revile us? Shall we heed the vain words of those jesters? Moreover, is the power of God limited? Can He not turn to His glory the blasphemies of His enemies?

A burst of laughter, from all sides of the amphitheatre, drowned their voices. The martyrs mechanically turned their eyes toward the stage.

Two actors were before the audience. One counterfeited the sacred functions of a priest. He wore the national costume of the Jews—a people always despised in Rome, and absolutely odious there since their last revolt and dispersion. The pagans affected to confound the faithful with the Hebrews, and surrounded both with the same ignominy. Hence the actor exaggerated to the utmost the squalor natural to the descendants of this unfortunate race. His robe was composed of many pieces of different colors, worn out and filthy, as if gathered from a kennel. A grotesque cap ornamented his head, and a tagboard hung on his breast. He walked barefooted, his face bent to the ground, casting to the right and left glowing, sidelong glances. He held in his hand an ill-shaped wooden cross. Ardelion was an hideous caricature of Christ. He wore a coarse toga, of the stuff used by the poorer classes. His head, feet and arms were bare.

If the stage, as it said, is the image of manners, it is but a false and lying mirror. It lies by exaggeration; it lies by caricature, it lies by calumny.

It was not the design of the actors to represent truly the belief and ceremonies of the early Christians. Degenerate as was this Roman mob, it would have been filled with surprise and admiration at the holy majesty of our faith. It was not so to turn Christianity into ridicule, in ancient times as well as at the Roman hour, the pagans had recourse to calumny and fiction. The actors boldly lent their imaginary principles and manners to the Christians, covering them with a ridicule for which no cause existed, in reality. But they united their jests to the triumph of the people. Then did the pagan Bacchanals on Attic ait, but whoever has read Aristophanes will know what must be the comedy of the world, and the vaunted civilization of the Athenian writers is now recognized only in the most immodest songs. The present impious farce was composed of the most obscene jests and allusions, accompanied by disgusting gestures. Omitting these features, which I should blush to reproduce, I give the following specimen:

"My fine fellow," cried the other buffoon, approaching Ardelion, "stop a moment and listen to me. Your fair pleases me. I never saw you before, and already I am interested in you. I should like to make your fortune. What is your trade?"

"I am a slave."

"Very good."

"No, it is not very good; it would be much better if I were a master."

"Well, I hope that you will give yourself to me. This meeting is fortunate for you, since I have the ear of the people. Would you like to become rich?"

"Much!"

"Would you like to possess more of gold than you ever dreamed of before?"

"Where can you get it?"

"Do you remember King Midas, who turned to gold everything he touched?"

"The man who had asses ears?"

"Well, I can perform the same wonder under your eyes. If I pronounce a certain word, this city and everything in it, even the sand in the streets and the filth in the gutters, will become fine gold."

"How?"

"By magic. You know we are all magicians.

"Don't you fear that your ears will grow longer?"

"I desire it; mine have been cut off, and ever since I have been making vows and prayers that they might grow again.

"What! you are a sorcerer, and yet you permitted your ears to be cropped!"

"Perchance! I swear to you that it was artifice my permission, and in spite of me, that it was done."

"It was at the repartee that the audience had uttered those shouts of laughter which so vex the Christians. Every one, in the wedding garment, shalt thou sit at the marriage feast of the Lamb.

"My father," sobbed the penitent, "then she hast received the power to bind and loose, say, will He judge me worthy of a place at His table?"

"Fear not, my daughter; when thou shalt have passed thro second baptism, thou shalt appear before him pure as His angels, who have never sinned.

"I have dishonored His worship; I have given up His holy mysteries to opprobrium and mockery."

"Will God refuse these pardon when thou shalt have given him thy bloody proof of thy faithful love—when thou shalt have sought him through the gates of violent death! Behold the confidence which mamates thy brethren! Already have they forgotten this life. Already their souls, nearly loosed from these garments of flesh, enjoy, in anticipation, the rewards of martyrdom."

"They have no cause for remorse. They have not caused the profanation of our holy ceremonies."

"If thou hast done so, my daughter, it was not with intent to sin; thy thought was not of sacrilege, and God will not punish thee."

"No, no, I have not willfully sinned. I was deceived; I too easily believed a false word. I could not foresee the consequences."

"If thou hadst sold our holy mysteries, the diligence of our brethren could repair thy fault."

"Dost grant that my crime be no greater. All the insults which the actor, Ardelion, shall pour forth upon us, it is I—it is I who have taught them to him, it is I who betrayed to him the secrets of our august mysteries.

"Since he deceived thee by his hypocrisy, thou art not accountable for his impiety.

"I spoke without thought; I knew not what I was doing."

"Calm thyself, Mary, and wipe away thy tears, but the idolaters believe that thou repudiate. So long have we blasphemed their gods and ignominies that we care not for them. Are we not blessed when men spit upon us and revile us? Shall we heed the vain words of those jesters? Moreover, is the power of God limited? Can He not turn to His glory the blasphemies of His enemies?

A burst of laughter, from all sides of the amphitheatre, drowned their voices. The martyrs mechanically turned their eyes towards the stage.

Two actors were before the audience. One counterfeited the sacred functions of a priest. He wore the national costume of the Jews—a people always despised in Rome, and absolutely odious there since their last revolt and dispersion. The pagans affected to confound the faithful with the Hebrews, and surrounded both with the same ignominy. Hence the actor exaggerated to the utmost the squalor natural to the descend-

New Advertisements.

THE GENUINE
DR. C. McLANE'S
Celebrated American WORM SPECIFIC
OF VERMIFUGE.

SYMPTOMS OF WORMS.

THE countenance is pale and leaden-colored, with occasional flushes, or a circumscribed spot on one or both cheeks; the eyes become dull; the pupils dilate; an azure semicircle runs along the lower eyelid; the nose is irritated, scaly, and sometimes bleeds; a swelling of the upper lip; occasional headache, with humming or throbbing of the ears; an unusual secretion of saliva; slimy or furred tongue; breath very foul, particularly in the morning; appetite variable, sometimes voracious, with a gnawing sensation of the stomach, at others, entirely gone; fleeting pains in the stomach; occasional nausea and vomiting; violent pains throughout the abdomen; bowels irregular, at times costive; stools slimy, not unfrequently tinged with blood; belly swollen and hard; urine turbid; respiration occasionally difficult, and accompanied by hiccough; cough sometimes dry and convulsive; uneasy and disturbed sleep, with grinding of the teeth; temper variable, but generally irritable.

Whenever the above symptoms are found to exist,
DR. C. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE will certainly effect a cure.

IT DOES NOT CONTAIN MERCURY in any form; it is an innocent preparation, not capable of doing the slightest injury to the most tender infant.

The genuine DR. McLANE'S VERMIFUGE, who bears the signature of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS. on the wrapper.

DR. C. McLANE'S
LIVER PILLS
are not recommended as a remedy "for all the ills that flesh is heir to," but in affections of the liver, and in all bilious complaints, dyspepsia and sick headache, or diseases of that character, they stand without a rival.

AGUE AND FEVER.

No better cathartic can be used preparatory to, or after taking Quinine.

As a simple purgative they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS.

The genuine are never sugar coated. Each box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the initials DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

Each wrapper bears the signatures of C. McLANE and FLEMING BROS.

Insist upon having DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, and take no other. Fleming Bros. of Pittsburgh, Pa., Proprietors, Agents for the United States.

Beware of Counterfeits.

GOLDEN MEDICAL DISCOVERY

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, THE "LITTLE GIANT" CATHARTIC.

SIZE OF PELLETS

No one of taking the large, popular, sugar-coated pills, or any other cathartic, can fail to appreciate the Pellets. These Pellets are scarcely larger than mustard seed, so that perfect accuracy in dosing is secured; they are quickest in relieving costiveness, biliousness, dyspepsia, sick headache, and all derangements of the liver, stomach, and bowels. Sick Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Fullness after Eating, Sour Stomach, Loss of Appetite, Bowels Costive, Eyes Yellow, Skin Yellowish, Heart Burn, Headache, Dizziness, Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Dreams Frightful, Feet Cold and Clammy, Nervous Irritation and Low Spirits, are the offspring of Dyspepsia. Sold by druggists everywhere. Price, 25 cents. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pellets, "Little Giant" Cathartic, 25 cents per vial.

NEW YORK
Photograph Gallery,
25 Third Street,
East side, between Market and Mission, S. F.

Any kind or style of Pictures, from the Small-tin-type to life-size, executed in a very superior Manner, at reduced rates.

SUNSHINE THE CAUSE.

25 Third Street. San Francisco
April 11 J. H. PETERS, Proprietor.

GIANT CEMENT!

A MOST EXTRAORDINARY AND UNIVERSALLY needed article for mending Furniture, Crockery, Glassware, Marble, Meerschaum Pipes, Ornaments, etc. Also for splicing Leather Belting and patching boots and shoes. The Cement possesses extraordinary tenacity, and is in every way the best article ever offered to the public. Also, MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT, Pure Gum Rubber in Sheet, Belting, Boots and Shoes without stitching. Tools supplied, sewing, lasting, and perfectly waterproof. Both Cements are put up in tin cans with full directions. Take no other. The GIANT CEMENT and MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT, are kept by Druggists and Dealers throughout the country. Country Dealers can be supplied by calling from any jobber in San Francisco. This is the only Cement that need not be used with a brush. Manufactured only by the CALIFORNIA CEMENT CO., 417 Washington street, San Francisco, and 3 Merchant street, Boston. Sample dozen, by express, $2 50. Liberal discount to the trade. Agents wanted in every town in the United States. Address, CALIFORNIA CEMENT CO., 417 Washington street, San Francisco, Cal.

MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT.

$66 a week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. H. HALLETT & CO., Portland, Me. 13-1y

CATARRH
SYNTUNA. Discovered by a physician, for years a sufferer from catarrh, and cured by the remedy he now offers to the public. Sent free to any address, on receipt of stamp. Address, SYNTUNA, 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

In the great Dental Hospital of the World, 1,000 Sets of Teeth are inserted every month by the Cleanliness, Economy, and Time saving, are the great advantages to be derived from the use of Dr. Sherman's Patent Vulcanite Gum Lozenges. Sold by Druggists, or by mail, 50 cents. Address, DR. SHERMAN, 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

DR. SAGE'S CATARRH REMEDY

produces a final cure of the worst cases of Catarrh, in one to five minutes, and a perfect cure in a few days. Sold by druggists everywhere, or by mail, 50 cents. Address, DR. SAGE, 1 Tremont Place, Boston, Mass.

MISCELLANEOUS.

T. J. BRODERICK,
112 Third Street,
Bet. Minna & Mission, San Francisco
A full assortment of
The United Wokingmen's
Best Second-Mare Boots and Shoes.

THE LITTLE CHILDREN'S SCHOOL SHOES a specialty. Boots and Shoes made to order. 1-16

Dr. J. Bennett's Celebrated Spectacles and Eyeglasses, Warranted to be the best in the world, are for sale only by the agent, Dr. Bennett, 338 Kearny street, San Francisco. Beware of spurious imitations. Dr. Bennett's name is on the bridge of each genuine pair. Sold by Druggists everywhere.

CHILDREN'S DEPARTMENT.

ST. JUSTIN MARTYR.

JUN 1

St. Justin was born of heathen parents at Neapolis in Samaria, about the year 103. He was well educated, and gave himself to the study of philosophy, but always with one object, that he might learn the knowledge of God. He sought this knowledge among the various sects of philosophy, but always in vain, till at last God himself appeared the third which he had created that day, while Justin was walking by the seashore, meditating on the thought of God, and had pain not him and instructed him on the subject of his doubts; and when he had made Justin confess that the philosophers taught nothing certain about God, he told him of the sufferings of the ingenuous prophets, and of Jesus Christ whom they announced, and bade him seek light and understanding through prayer. The Scriptures and the martyrs of the Christian martyrs led Justin from the darkness of human reason to the light of faith. In his zeal for the faith he traveled to Greece, Egypt, and Italy, gaining many to Christ. At Rome he sealed his testimony with his blood, surrounded by his disciples. The prefect said to the prefect and to Justin, "that by dying you will enter heaven and be rewarded by God." "I do not think," was the saint's answer, "I know. Then, as now, there were many religious opinions, but only one certainty, the certainty of the Catholic faith. This certainty should be the measure of our conduct and our creed.

REFLECTION. We have received the gift of faith with little labor of our own. Earthly goods, of a value far inferior, we have obtained after long search, and lived in the pursuit of them with great anxiety and toil. Let us fear, as St. Justin did, the account we shall have to render for the gift of God.

INSTRUCTION.

THE SACRIFICE OF THE MASS

Besides the four principal ends for which Mass is offered, and of which we have just spoken, there is another very important one for which we offer it, and that is, to continue and represent the Sacrifice of Christ on the cross. In the Mass, Jesus Christ continues, perpetuates, and represents on our altars the Sacrifice which He once offered on Calvary. The Mass is a continuation of the sacrifice of the cross, because Victim of the Mass is the same as the Victim of the Cross. In both Sacrifices, Jesus Christ is the Victim and priests, officers; and the manner of offering is precisely the same, the only difference being in the manner of offering, which is bloody in the one, and unbloody in the other. The Mass is a continuation of that Sacrifice of the Cross.

The Mass is also "a memorial of the passion and death of our Lord," for Jesus Christ in the offering which He made, but supposed, instituted His Apostles, and that commission they in turn extended to the successors of the Apostles, of which He had done. He ordained that the Mass should be a commemorative sacrifice of the death of the Saviour. This Sacrificing accordingly offer daily, and by which we represent the Sacrifice of Christ on Calvary. The Mass is a commemoration of his sufferings, wounds, and death. Jesus Christ, for our sins, represented the sufferer to God, with the sufferings, wounds, and death of the Saviour. Every time we offer up to God the Mass, we represent

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY ..... MAY 29

"Providence seems to have given in our days a special mission to the Catholic press. It is for it to preserve the principles of order and of the faith, where they still prevail, and to propagate them where they are not. Such is the difference here assigned then to be followed will—Larras, Sur Paris Page 11

THE PRESS—ITS USE AND ABUSE.—"Of such a precious instrument of good and evil as the press, it is easy to find the abuse and check the baneful influence. If, therefore, you wish to have an honest press, you must honest and generously support it—Abundance or Sacrifice

Most of the dioceses of previous possess a Catholic journal, generally the organ of one or more bishops. Make it a true friend, practically vote the salvation of lies, and is entitled to a corresponding friendly allegiance. Instead of making sacrifices there, we should rather encourage such Catholic journals as greatly contributing to the cause of truth. We take pleasure in echoing here the wise words of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, may to this subject. "We cheerfully acknowledge that we believe the Catholic Press has rendered to religion, and to the disinterestedness with which, in most instances, it has been conducted, although yielding to political and sectarian influences, it has been for their honor. We exhort the Catholic editorship to extend to their brethren of the secular press the charity which they shall be treated by them, and to abstain from speaking of them, thus adverse. It is our duty to avoid ourselves of this style of making known the truths of our religion, and converting the min apprehensions which we generally perceive, and to "wed to them."—ABUNDANCE ALMANAC

The Jubilee.

On the subject of the Jubilee the "N. W. Chronicle" makes the following well-timed remark which is equally applicable to some of our own subscribers:

"It is presumed there is no Catholic who will not strive to obtain the indulgence of the Jubilee. In a time like this people are apt to scrutinize their conscience more care fully than usual. We would suggest to those of our subscribers who are in arrears—many of them for several years—whether it will not be well for them to settle these arrears before fulfilling the last of the conditions prescribed for the Jubilee. We owe it in charity to them to say that the neglect to pay an honest debt is a sin, and this alone will be an impediment to their gaining the Jubilee, no matter how exactly or well they may have complied with all the other conditions. A considerable number of former subscribers have been stricken from our subscription list on account of long unpaid arrears. We hold these still our debtors; and we hope they will fully consider the suggestion here made, and if they doubt our words to the effect of their continued neglect, let them consult their spiritual directors upon the subject.—N. W. Chronicle.

The School Trouble in Mallow.

There seems to be some reason to hope that the Mallow school dispute will end in a more amicable manner than some expected. A good priest there has stated publicly that it is not the laity who were consulted before the late changes. A public meeting was held in Dublin of gentlemen connected by the Christian Brothers, to protest against the attacks on that as at valuable body of men. The head of the Order in Dublin requested that the meeting might not be proceeded with, and he succeeded. No doubt the bishops will see their way to a settlement of the dispute.

The Dublin Nation says, in reference to the sermon of Archbishop Croke: "Public gratitude is due to his Grace, the Archbishop of Cashel, for the wise and timely address on the subject of education which he delivered a few days ago at the opening of a new convent school in the town of New Inn, county of Tipperary. On that subject the public mind has recently been much perturbed. Unfortunately, some misunderstanding which have raised the question whether some of the old landmarks of Catholic thought and feeling with reference to education were not about to be withdrawn from us, whether very much of the teaching on that subject given to the Irish people by their bishops and priests with especial earnestness and solemnity during the last twenty-five years was not about to be cast to the winds, and whether we were now to be required to accept a new set of ideas differing very materially from those heretofore impressed upon us under sanction of high and venerated authority. There can be no doubt about it—the action taken and the language used by some of the Mallow clergy in effecting the suppression of the 'Christian Brothers' schools in that town, and with a view to the introduction of the National Board system in their place, has caused many Irish Catholics to feel as if the solid ground was giving way under their feet. It told them that they had been living in a state of illusion, giving heed to words that had no meaning, accepting in simple good faith language that was not sincere, setting great value on a principle that was of small account, and fighting very hard in what was only a sham battle. Inevitably this state of things gave a shock to the hearts and troubled the consciences of many good Irishmen. After having been all their lives contending for the denominational principle in education, with their bishops and priests and the late Cardinal leading them in the struggle, they could hardly be expected to look with unconcern upon the operation which was being effected in Mallow, or to hear without surprise and with indifference the language by which it was defended. If like events were in progress in other parts of the country and similar pleas were being put forward, the condition of things would be extremely trying and painful; but, happily, there is reason to believe that the Mallow trouble is merely local, and that in other parts of the country the standard of denominational education still will be kept flying and be guarded by venerated and saintly hands. The address of the Archbishop of Cashel, which we publish in another column, goes upon the old lines in this important matter. It is in perfect harmony with the teaching on this subject which, coming from the highest authority, has sunk into the hearts of the Irish people, and it will have a quieting and reassuring effect on the public mind. In view of it, we can regard the action taken in Mallow as simply a lamentable local event, not likely to be repeated elsewhere, and that being, as we think, the matter it is suffered to drop out of view and pass from public resolution the better."

University of California.

The students of the State University, or rather some of them, seem bent on earning a rather unenviable reputation. Their escapades in Berkley and Oakland have, on more than one occasion, called for the interference of the Police. We now learn from a morning contemporary that, on account of the recent publication of a "Rogue" article of a vile character, President Le Conte and the Faculty have under consideration the expulsion of thirty-two sophomores. These amiable young gentlemen, in a weak attempt at being witty, became vulgarly personal and disgustingly obscene, and accordingly connected and distributed such a document as the University authorities feel to be a disgrace to all concerned. The whole class of '81 backs up the guilty offenders, and has the brazen effrontery to defy the faculty all of which unknown a peculiar state of morals and discipline. We may be thankful that in no Catholic College in the country is there a parallel for such a lamentable condition of affairs as appears to prevail in the petted University of California.

Yakoob Khan.

The new Amour of Afghanistan has concluded a treaty with the Angle-Indian Empire of such a nature as we ventured to describe or predict some months ago. Substantially, he is left master of the situation, the English carrying off merely the barren honors, as will be seen from our telegraphic summary. The independence of the country is not only acknowledged, but guaranteed, and for the concessions made a subsidy has been agreed on. This is a fit but somewhat ludicrous termination to the noisy bluster and brag with which Afghanistan was invaded. The British authorities, suspecting at the eleventh hour that their troops were in a trap as well as in a mass, suddenly found Yakoob Khan to be an excellent fellow, and now he is acknowledged as their arguest ally. Mirabile dictu.

Spiritualism and Fanaticism.

To judge by recent vagaries in the regions of spiritualism and religious fanaticism, one would be disposed to believe that the human mind in this country, is running to seed. The Superintendent of public schools in the metropolis of the United States, publishes a book on spiritualism, in which he gravely asserts, as the newspapers affirm, that he is in correspondence with the spirits of Shakspeare, Byron, and of other remarkable individuals, and even prints their communications. The two English poets just named, when in the flesh, wrote some splendid poetry, but, alas, how miserably deteriorated have they become in "the beyond," where, divested of human grossness, their effusions, one should think, would be divine. Their verses to Mr. Kiddle, on the contrary, are the veriest drivel; indeed, any postaster in the flesh could write better. But it is not with the spiritualistic poetry of Mr. Kiddle that after all we find most fault, or indeed any fault at all, for one man has as good a right to write bad poetry as another has to write good poetry. But Mr. Kiddle has all the public schools in New York under his management, and has the supervision of 120,000 children, and about 3,200 teachers, and it is to this fact that we would direct attention. Mr. Kiddle has been thirty-six years connected with the schools of New York. Efforts are now being made to remove him from his position, on account of his advocacy of spiritualism. And yet, has not the Superintendent of schools as good a right to be a spiritualist as the teachers of schools to be infidels and atheists? It is for the Christian parents of America to consider both these questions—to decide whether their children shall be inoculated with the dreamy, enervating phantasies of spiritualism, and the more horrid virus of infidelity, or whether their little ones shall imbibe the waters of life from the perennial, undefiled fountains of Christianity.

We would not overwhelm the unfortunate spiritualist with obloquy; the fault lies rather in the system that banishes religion from the schools. Such a perversion would be impossible among Catholics, for the energy propensities of our nature are checked and corrected by its teachings and the aid of the sacraments.

Another and more hideous phase of loose, undirected, private judgment in matters of religion is the unnatural Freeman tragedy. Charles F. Freeman, an honest farmer in Eastern Massachusetts, became, a short while ago, what is called a Second Adventist, that is, as we suppose, a believer in a second visible coming of the Saviour. He and the other Adventists were in the habit of holding religious meetings; they read the Bible; they commented on it; they had dreams and visions, as had the prophets of the Old Law, and every man was prophet and guide unto himself in religious affairs. At last, Freeman had a vision, in which he thought he was commanded by God to slay his daughter Edith, a favorite child four years old. It was to be in the manner of Abraham offering his son Isaac. He awaken in the middle of the night, and communicates to his wife what he has been commanded to do. The wife and mother, imbued with the notion that she and hers were favored by God, consents to the sacrifice even cheerfully. Freeman goes out into an outhouse and procures a butcher's knife, comes back and lifts little Edith out of her bed. The child wakes and smiles on her father. He lays her on a table, as on an altar, on which to perform the sacrifice. He lifts his hand with the butcher's knife in its grasp. He believes his hand is to be stayed by God, as was Abraham, but it was not, and then, to be obedient to God, he plunges the knife in the heart of his child. She utters one piercing scream and is dead—murdered by her own loving, affectionate father! He is arrested, he is not insane; he believes he would arise on the third day, but she did not, and then he lost all faith in God.

The recital is sickening, but it is not one to create indignation. Pity and sorrow are the feelings excited by this most tragic, most terrible and most unnatural murder.

Even the mother of Edith felt no sorrow at Edith's sacrifice, because she believed her daughter would rise again, and that her father, like Abraham would be found faithful. It was only when the child's resurrection was not realized, that the mother's instinct was aroused. Then she wept and was inconsolable. Alas, for the mother, and thrice alas for the slayer of his child! Let even his horror dull not shake the belief of many other members of the infatuated sect, who still regard the deed as a justifiable act of religion.

What is the remedy for all these evils and pernicious phantasies. It is, we answer, in the teachings of the Church of God—in the immutable, imperishable, infallible Catholic Church. Truth 'never changes; the Catholic Church is to-day the same as it was eighteen centuries ago; it has civilized and enlightened Europe, it has cemented and conserved the bonds of civil society; it has heralded wholesome truths and stimulated their progress; it has always combatted error; it is conservative of order and is the consistent opponent of the extravagant tendencies which inevitably result from the want of a fixed and solid foundation for religious belief. Others are taught by men or follow their own imaginations, but the Catholic is taught by God through the ministry of His Church, guided by the Holy Ghost, which Christ promised should abide with her until the consummation of ages.

Since writing the above the New York Freeman's Journal has come to hand with a very able article on this subject from the conclusion of which we take the following.

The enhancement, sharply felt in the infected region of Massachusetts, and that ought to be felt by all Protestants, is how to deal with these conspirators against the public peace according to the dictates of reason and common sense, without violating the very fundamental principle of Protestantism! Already this Bible expounding Freeman asks in his prison to have a Bible, and he "even told it would be better for him to insist from reading the Scriptures"!! And this on the coast, within a few miles of Plymouth rock!

The fundamental principle of Protestantism was laid down by Luther; and re-asserted by every one and out Protestant, is that "Nothing is to be held as necessary to salvation except what is revealed in the Bible, and each believer is the sole judge of the meaning of the Spirit, in the Bible!"

"I can't see," said Freeman, "any difference between my firm belief that God spoke to me, and the firm belief of others that they have been in personal communion with God!" Protestant religionists who sided with Freeman acknowledge they could not answer him! Nay, a certain Protestant feeling seems ready to shield this monster. In the Sun of the 11th inst., pursuing its inquiries at the scene of action, it is said:

"The Attorney-General and the District-Attorney have received verbal and written communications from responsible persons, whose names no one must be presumed to be his religious belief. Nobody defends the acts of Freeman, but there are a dozen lawyers in Boston and more outside who are ready to defend him and his friends, not on the ground of insanity, but on the broader question of whether a man who does an act under an honest conscientious belief that his duty to God requires it, is amenable to human law.

"The Second Adventists have decided to defend themselves on this ground. They have excepted arrests since Monday. They hold a secret meeting on Tuesday or Wednesday, and, it is understood, agreed that they would admit that little Edith had not been resurrected, that Freeman was mistaken and so were they in believing that God called on him to sacrifice his daughter, but that believing it at the time they did, they cannot be held responsible.

* * * *

"The District-Attorney says that he already is confident that at Freeman's trial the whole question of whether the belief in supernatural religion is a delusion or not will be entered into."

But the officers of the law, in Barnstable, and in Massachusetts, have another entertainment. They are given distinctly to understand that a strong and resolute organization has been effected in the region in and around Pocasset, resolved that, "if this nest isn't broken up at once by the authorities, we shall break it up ourselves." And the officers of the law know that what is threatened, is ready to be done. The mob would be lawless, and no doubt, fistal.

But the descendants of the Puritans, in the close neighborhood of Plymouth rock, are brought to the sorry pass that, if they act up to their long-time professions of liberty, they must live mixed up with a gang of fanatical thugs, whose "conscientious scourgerism," lead them to commit the most unnatural murders; or find escape from this intolerable condition by sinking at lawless, and excessive violence, at the hands of a mob.

It is the unanimous judgment of the gentlemen who have examined, that Freeman is insane, and the legal sense of the word. He knew he was committing a crime; and incurring the penalty. In other ages, when fanatics made their false tenets practical in attacks on life and property, though quoting the open Bible in defense of their crimes, as the Waldenses did in the Twelfth Century, and the fighting Anabaptists in the Sixteenth, States, and Civil Rulers, threatened in their existence and their peace, have, in a lawful manner, closed their countries of those that would not obey the laws.

We commend their example to the people of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, in place of either foregiving the place of special imprecation as yearning murder, or suffering the disgrace of getting rid of what is intolerable, by the lawless violence of a mob.

The "New York Nation" on "Peaceful Revolutions."

There appears to be continued confusion in the minds of some Republican papers about the late attempt at "revolution" in Washington. The Evening Post insinuates that although it may be true that the Democrats did not contemplate an armed revolution, they did contemplate "a peaceful revolution," which also was dangerous. We must point out to this esteemed contemporary that a "peaceful revolution" is never dangerous, because no such thing can happen or ever has happened in a free country without the consent of the great majority of the people. In fact, the United States Constitution itself provides for "peaceful revolution" by amendment. In this way the President might not only be stripped of his vetoes, but impeached by the Republican papers. The horrors of a "peaceful revolution" are, therefore, the figments of the esteemed contemporary's own imagination.

"The Monitor" and the "Call."

SAN FRANCISCO, May 24, 1879.

EDITOR OF THE MONITOR.—Your just censures of the S. F. Daily Morning Call for its slanders and misrepresentations of Catholicity in the last issue of THE MONITOR, has somewhat awakened its sensibility, and it strives to creep out of the dilemma into which the unenviable notoriety of your most opportune and richly merited strictures has placed, by its publication in this day's issue, in the following brief, but pungent paragraph:

A Complaint.

Our attention has been called by a newspaper contemporary to some letters published in the journal, written in Paris, France, signed "Flaneur." The correspondent has furnished letters for The Call during the past ten or twelve years, and they have been generally approved and read with interest. In his last letter there are grave objectionable matters as shall cease to publish them, and cannot be to furnish a journal which is acceptable to all classes.

We are thankful to the Call for even so much as this small pecuniary installment of justice to us Catholics, even though it does happen to be promised to us only at the eleventh hour of its journalistic existence.

I am inclined to the opinion that its promised reformation in this respect is due to the apprehension occasioned by the dread of losing a portion of that silver lining which fringes the horizon of its circulation, and fattens its coffers with the golden dew drops of precious "Ads," than to the sense of manly honor becoming a real true gentleman, or the spirit of fair dealing that forms the most precious jewel in the noble character of the truly honorable, conscientious and liberal minded man. J. B.

Good Words Always Good.

EDITOR MONITOR:—The admirable story published in your last issue, under the title, "Ave Maria," so delighted me that I called a friend's attention to it. I may par parenthese remark that, though he is a lover of literature and capable of appreciating its beauties, his life has for some years been of the worldly order. He, however, has just told me a story which, though short, is quite as remarkable as the one above referred to. The paper set him thinking, and evidently produced a deep impression. He says that, in the middle of the night, he woke up, and found himself murmuring: Ave Maria, Beffisiam Percatorum, ora pro me! Before six o'clock next morning he was at one of our city churches; before seven he had gone to confession, and before eight had become a tee-totaller. I give the facts without comment, further than to state that his early days, when the practice of piety was habitual, were virtually recalled by Rev. Father Grat-ham's story; and that, if a moral may be drawn from the circumstances, the advantages of virtuous training in youth cannot be over-estimated. If my friend had not had such training, the words Ave Maria would have fallen on leaden ears. J.

Bismark and Protection.

The Dublin Freeman says that "No great measure of success has as yet attended the the attempt of Prince Bismark to get his protective plans legalized. On the contrary, the farther the discussion proceeds the more formidable appear to be the obstacles which present themselves to the realization of the scheme. Thursday's debate over the matter appears to have resulted in one of the hottest scenes which the Reichstag has ever witnessed. Herr Laaker, the leader of Bismark's former political friends, the the National Liberals, entered into a criticism of the proposals, in the course of which he gave their author one of the severest Parliamentary manglings administered by any politician to another since the fam. ous recorrities between O'Connell and Peel, the statesman now known as Lord Beaconsfield. He charged the prince with using misleading and illusory figures, and with fomenting a dangerous agricultural agitation throughout the country. His mark is more habituated to giving buffets than to the reception of them and he seems to have felt the hard knocks delivered by Herr Laaker very keenly. He was almost pathetic indeed in his tone, this man of iron, and, when he found himself thus unmercifully baited by his former friend and ally, Herr Laaker, he cried out, "Gentlemen, I am though a maker of laws, an anarchist as to the existence of many of the laws which he had helped to put on the statute-book, and this seems to have have "rankled very bitterly in Bismark's mind. While pleading the impossibility of his knowing all the laws of the country, the Prince submitted that it was hardly conducive to the dignity of the country that the person who conducted its affairs should be so mercilessly keel-hauled over his ignorance as to its laws, that the laws of polecteism, if nothing else, should have saved him from this indignity. There is something at most mandlin in this ad misericordiam appeal of the deviser of Konnigratz and Sadan. Quantum mutatus ab illo Hector! Can it be the same Bismark, we are asking, who only a few months ago cowed the old fogies of the German Diet and laughed boisterously, at the pretensions of the most pompous statesmen of his time? The Bismark of diplomacy has not yet fallen from his high estate, indeed, when he can be "belied and cudgel" by every mere member of rhetoric in the German Parliment But as it is. So passes away the glory and the power of this ovanisscent world."

A Grateful Acknowledgment by the "London Weekly Register."

It has been and that the reluctance to incur and bear a debt of gratitude just begounted among the dodging politicians of base and narrow minds, and certain it is that the hearts richest in generosity are always by their own showing so deep in that most honorable debt as to be perpetually in and out of it, and incurring the penalty. Nations have their debts of gratitude too, as well as individuals; and by the same paradox the measure of their wealth of character is their readiness to be deep in debt. Just as the years of astanding liability are not counted the day before, but the waited to count the wealth of our half-century of political freedom and justice, until we could reckon on fulfilling that promise unfulfilled, even to their last day, fifty ment after, their full measure is run, we have years of deep indebtedness from the Catholics of England to Catholic Ireland. Not that we owe them any thing that can ever be paid, but that we never here, but from the ... ment of our debt, a benediction which ... disability to give the highest ... ing, affection is a debt ... to be for Catholic emancipation ... ish Church Establishment has fallen to the ground like a house built on sand, for Ireland has no Church to pull it down. The Irish Church is partly amended, though they are still demanding a far wider and more just amendment; the Catholic schools have been in some way thought of by the Government. When shall we get a hearing for the burning question of Catholic University education in Ireland. Silence has been cried against it for the present, but let the Catholics of England join with those of Ireland in protesting against the disastrous system of giving a hearing. Is it a refusal which has been most keenly felt by the Irish people, for they have kept in these later days their birthright of the early centuries, their rich double inheritance, which no amount of suffering or poverty has forced from their lips, the love of religion and the love of learning. Once these schools were the teachers of Europe, before there was a Saxon monarch to found Oxford. To-day they are craving at the hands of the Government that high education which ought to be regarded, not as a gift but as a right, for any Christian. Canada has its Catholic University, Sydney and Melbourne have theirs. But to Ireland is refused what has been given to the Colonies. Let us say, one and all, that we will take the grievance at heart; that a large part of our prayers shall be in common interest here, and in one openly-expressed Catholic sympathy. Ireland has refused a Protestant University, and refused a mixed University, she will have it Catholic, or she will have none. There is something admirable, there is the ring of the first ages in that nineteenth century protest for learning and a religion. Let no English Catholic turn away from the question, and say that it does not concern him. There is not one amongst us that is not deeply indebted to Ireland. She gave England the Emancipation of 1829. In common gratitude let the Catholics of England prove her that they will take to heart this question of the University Charter; that they will, in sympathy, in word, and in deed, labor for that Emancipation on Irish soil—the unfettering of Catholic higher education by a University charter, the setting free of the Catholic Irishman to stand on a level with his fellow countrymen in the culture of the mind—aims at present the latter by a strange, almost, yet privileged beyond him, because they belong not to the Church of the nation, but to a State creed, but to a Disestablished Church.

The Future of Catholic Countries.

The actual condition of France suggests the serious question as to the future of the Catholic countries of Europe. Will France once more rise up as a truly Catholic nation and bring forth fruits worthy of the periods of her just glorious history? Is that country, which has undoubtedly played a conspicuous part in the moulding of Catholicity in our day on the road to rehabilitation, or decay? These are questions not only of interest to those whom they more intimately concern, but to the Catholic commonwealth. We shall answer them? None but a prophet. We believe, however, that such questions may be occasionally considered with profit, apart from all pretensions to prophecy, or presumptuous forebodings.

The one object all sincere men have in view is to ascertain as far as possible the chief causes actually at work producing the infidelity and materialism which threaten to engulf not France only, but all Europe. Men of piety and learning are placing before the eyes of the Catholic world such special causes of these great evils as appear to them individually the most important to be investigated. It is perfectly certain that the bulk of the fearful evils which beset the whole of European society, may be traced back to one long-standing, existing cause, viz, civil laws in direct opposition to the laws of God and of His Church. And if many of these civil laws must be looked upon as the great barrier to the effective action of the Church's mission, the direct practical remedy would be the repeal of such laws and the substitution of others in harmony with the laws of God and of His Church. Now the only object in advancing a proposition, the truth of which cannot possibly have any other motive than the good of hearty devotion to the Church, and, necessarily, implied in the very word, devotion to the Holy See. But in this first instance the secret spark. The people do not form the legislator, it is the legislator that helps to mould the people. It was for doubt the internal conversion of this truth which caused every saintly prince in Christian Europe to entertain what the world would call such extravagant ideas of his personal responsibilities. The estimate of them formed by these Catholic rulers was not, we believe, the correct one, and this estimate is applicable in its degree to every Catholic legitimately in possession of influence.

It is each individual Catholic who will have to answer for the measure of his opportunities and capabilities, for what the Church, was incapacitated from doing in consequence of his apathy and neglect.—E. O'H., in Catholic Progress.

Annual School Examinations.

We request the Principals of the various Institutions to complete the list as soon as possible.

SACRED HEART COLLEGE.—Commencement, Friday, May 30, at 7½ P. M.

OUR LADY OF MERCY'S SCHOOL, Cor. First and Second Streets.—Closing Exercises, Wednesday, May 28th, at 9½ o'clock A. M.

PRESENTATION CONVENT SCHOOL, Powell street, May 28th and 29th.

PRESENTATION CONVENT SCHOOL, Taylor and Ellis street, Tuesday, June 3.

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.—Annual Commencement at the Grand Opera House, Mission street, June 3rd.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, San Jose.—Commencement Exercises, Tuesday, June 3rd, at 9 o'clock A. M.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL, Mission street.—Distribution of Premiums and Closing Exercises, will take place, Wednesday, June 4, at 10 o'clock A. M.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, Mission Dolores.—Commencement Exercises, Wednesday, June 4th. Boarding school, 2 P. M., Thursday, June 5th.

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE.—Annual Commencement, June 4th and 5th.

ST. CATHARINE'S ACADEMY, Benicia, June 19.

ST. GERTRUDE'S, Rio Vista.—Examination and Exhibitions, Tuesday, June 24.

GENERAL CATHOLIC NEWS.

CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 7.

1 Sunday—Pentecost Sunday.
Monday—Of the Octave.
Tuesday—Of the Octave.
Wednesday—Of the Octave.
Thursday—Ascension, Fast and Abstinence.
Friday—Within the Octave.
Saturday—Ember day, Fast and Abstinence.

The Pope and the French Pilgrims.

On Friday, the 16th inst., Pope Leo XIII received in special audience at the Vatican the pilgrims of French pilgrims who had arrived in Rome to visit the Holy Father and the sacred places of the Eternal City. His Holiness received the pilgrims with great kindness and affection, and had around him at the reception the Cardinals Secretary of State, Monsignor Jacobini, Prefect of the Congregation of Rites, Bishop Pecci, Bishop Bilio, and the Prelates of the Roman Curia, and many others of the Roman Prelates. After a few introductory words the address says:

"On the eve of the 25th anniversary of the definition of the Immaculate Conception it is pleasant for the Christian to contemplate the immense glare wherein it has pronounced that great Catholic dogma, and to unite their prayers with the prayers of reparation and of love, which at this moment are going up from this city to towards the throne of the Mother of God. Many pilgrims have come from the Transpyrenean Cities of Rome. We ask her to render our country worthy of its mission to lead the crusade of peoples to Roman unity—to realize the ardent desire of our Holy Father, who has so dear to the Church and to its children their teacher and their guide. The address concludes with an earnest appeal for the blessing of the Sovereign Pontiff, and with an assurance that the children of France are ready to shed their blood in defence of the Church and the Pope.

The Pope replied in fellows, speaking in French: "It is with the liveliest satisfaction that I see so numerous a pilgrimage from the land of that generous French nation, whose glories and whose sufferings have been always so dear to me, to stand up with these of the Church and the Roman Pontiffs. We thank you for the sentiments of respect, devotion, and unalterable fidelity towards the Chair of St. Peter and towards us. Your pilgrimage is full of that paternal good will which attaches Us to you—a good will which, We are happy to be able to confess, is only the just reward of the zeal and the fidelity which you never cease to dedicate to the service of God, which have brought you to Rome now for the eighth time, and which are deserving of all praise. You, most certainly, worthy of all praise, for that zeal and that activity show themselves to be accompanied with an absolute submission to the authority of the Church in an age when the breath of insubordination, to every authority is producing so many victims, and carrying such ruin throughout the world, and is multiplying the subterranean fires of a hell. That zeal and that activity are furthermore truly salutary, for the nation to denounce, and endeavor to overthrow, that diabolical system which is gradually and secretly as possible pursuing its course for the purpose of starving out all Christian life. A living example of this double action may be pointed to in France in the person of the Count Albert de Mun. He has in the first place infused into the Workmen's Catholic Association the true Christian spirit, and, secondly, he has raised his voice in the Legislature in a way and at a time that denotes the heroic virtue of courage. Should it be asserted that good men of high social position cannot attain to place and power enabling them to raise their voices against anti-Christian legislation, and that the first step to be taken must be to lower the masses, or those classes which alone can confer upon them legislative power, it might to be borne in mind, whilst admitting the difficulty, that the "sacred fire" must be communicated from the upper to the humbler class, though possibly at the expense of time and enormous self-sacrifice. The masses can receive, but do not, as a rule, kindle the first instance the sacred spark. The people do not form the legislator, it is the legislator that helps to mould the people. It was for doubt the internal conversion of this truth which caused every saintly prince in Christian Europe to entertain what the world would call such extravagant ideas of his personal responsibilities. The estimate of them formed by these Catholic rulers was not, we believe, the correct one, and this estimate is applicable in its degree to every Catholic legitimately in possession of influence.

It is each individual Catholic who will have to answer for the measure of his opportunities and capabilities, for what the Church was incapacitated from doing in consequence of his apathy and neglect.—E. O'H., in Catholic Progress.

Annual School Examinations.

We request the Principals of the various Institutions to complete the list as soon as possible.

SACRED HEART COLLEGE.—Commencement, Friday, May 30, at 7½ P. M.

OUR LADY OF MERCY'S SCHOOL, Cor. First and Second Streets.—Closing Exercises, Wednesday, May 28th, at 9½ o'clock A. M.

PRESENTATION CONVENT SCHOOL, Powell street, May 28th and 29th.

PRESENTATION CONVENT SCHOOL, Taylor and Ellis street, Tuesday, June 3.

ST. MARY'S COLLEGE.—Annual Commencement at the Grand Opera House, Mission street, June 3rd.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, San Jose.—Commencement Exercises, Tuesday, June 3rd, at 9 o'clock A. M.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL, Mission street.—Distribution of Premiums and Closing Exercises, will take place, Wednesday, June 4, at 10 o'clock A. M.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME, Mission Dolores.—Commencement Exercises, Wednesday, June 4th. Boarding school, 2 P. M., Thursday, June 5th.

ST. IGNATIUS COLLEGE.—Annual Commencement, June 4th and 5th.

ST. CATHARINE'S ACADEMY, Benicia, June 19.

ST. GERTRUDE'S, Rio Vista.—Examination and Exhibitions, Tuesday, June 24.

GENERAL CATHOLIC NEWS.

CALENDAR.

FOR THE WEEK ENDING JUNE 7.

1 Sunday—Pentecost Sunday.
Monday—Of the Octave.
Tuesday—Of the Octave.
Wednesday—Of the Octave.
Thursday—Ascension, Fast and Abstinence.
Friday—Within the Octave.
Saturday—Ember day, Fast and Abstinence.

The Pope and the French Pilgrims.

On Friday, the 16th inst., Pope Leo XIII received in special audience at the Vatican the pilgrims of French pilgrims who had arrived in Rome to visit the Holy Father and the sacred places of the Eternal City. His Holiness received the pilgrims with great kindness and affection, and had around him at the reception the Cardinals Secretary of State, Monsignor Jacobini, Prefect of the Congregation of Rites, Bishop Pecci, Bishop Bilio, and the Prelates of the Roman Curia, and many others of the Roman Prelates. After a few introductory words the address says:

"On the eve of the 25th anniversary of the definition of the Immaculate Conception it is pleasant for the Christian to contemplate the immense glare wherein it has pronounced that great Catholic dogma, and to unite their prayers with the prayers of reparation and of love, which at this moment are going up from this city to towards the throne of the Mother of God. Many pilgrims have come from the Transpyrenean Cities of Rome. We ask her to render our country worthy of its mission to lead the crusade of peoples to Roman unity—to realize the ardent desire of our Holy Father, who has so dear to the Church and to its children their teacher and their guide. The address concludes with an earnest appeal for the blessing of the Sovereign Pontiff, and with an assurance that the children of France are ready to shed their blood in defence of the Church and the Pope.

The Pope replied in fellows, speaking in French: "It is with the liveliest satisfaction that I see so numerous a pilgrimage from the land of that generous French nation, whose glories and whose sufferings have been always so dear to me, to stand up with these of the Church and the Roman Pontiffs. We thank you for the sentiments of respect, devotion, and unalterable fidelity towards the Chair of St. Peter and towards us. Your pilgrimage is full of that paternal good will which attaches Us to you—a good will which, We are happy to be able to confess, is only the just reward of the zeal and the fidelity which you never cease to dedicate to the service of God, which have brought you to Rome now for the eighth time, and which are deserving of all praise. You, most certainly, worthy of all praise, for that zeal and that activity show themselves to be accompanied with an absolute submission to the authority of the Church in an age when the breath of insubordination, to every authority is producing so many victims, and carrying such ruin throughout the world, and is multiplying the subterranean fires of a hell. That zeal and that activity are furthermore truly salutary, for

Knight of St. Patrick Installation of Officers.

On Monday evening, at Charter Oak Hall, the newly-elected officers of the Knights of St. Patrick were duly installed into their respective offices, after which a beautiful repast was spread, to which full justice was done by the eighty or twenty members present. Appropriate toasts to the outgoing officers, and to other members were offered and responded to. Excellent music enlivened the proceedings. Chief Justice Sullivan presided, and Vice-Presidents, Mr. Ubas, A. Hinton and Dr. John F. Gibbons. We predict for the Society a prosperous career.

The Forgetfulness of People.

The Oxford Professor who, to avoid the wind when taking snuff, turned around, but forgot to turn back, and walked six miles into the country was no more forgetful than those who still use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Purgative Pills, are sugar-coated, and little larger than seeds, are a positive and reliable cathartic, correcting all irregularities of stomach, liver and bowels. Sold by druggists.

A Distinguished Member of Congress.

Hon. Wm. D. Kelly, who had suffered for years from Chronic Catarrh, accompanied by an almost fatal effusion of blood, was induced to try "Compound Oxygen" for relief, and the benefit received was so great that in a letter to the inventors he says: "You are authorized to give any degree of publicity to my assertion that the use of your gas at intervals has so far restored my health that I am well conscious of having discharged my blood for more than a year, and that my cough, the severity of which made me frequent object of sympathy, has disappeared. My experience under your treatment has convinced me that a future dispensatory will be complete that does not include the Compound Oxygen, by inhalation or otherwise, of your agent, or its equivalent, to the sick, the dizzy, the nervous or other causes, as I was, unable to meditate strongly of some child entrusted to make into their system in healthful vigor. Thanking you for renewed health, strength, and the hope of a comfortable old age, I remain your grateful friend." Our "Treatise on Compound Oxygen," with Reports of Cures, Free. Address DR. STARKEY & PALEN, 1112 Girard Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

OUR SAN FRANCISCO CURES are a rule, have the complexion, but there are people who think enough is in my that that beauty is due to Dickey's Cream de Lis. The blooms imparted by Cream de Lis is very natural.

BERKELEY HOTEL.—Corner Dwight and Shattuck, one who was dead for 20 years. Send stamp for particulars. Jas. Gammon, Lock Box, 300, Cortlandt, N. Y.

New Advertisements.

SLAVEN

Keeps the Most Reliable

Drugs and Medicines

And sells them Cheaper than any House on the Coast.

SLAVEN'S YOSEMITE COLOGNE TRIAL SIZE, 25c.

BOOKS AND STATIONERY AT M. SHEA'S! No. 805 Market street.

Large Collection of Standard Catholic Works; Also, Books of Fiction, History, Travel, Biography, Poetry and General Literature.

Bibles and Prayer-Books at all Prices.

Writing Desks, Albums, Photographic Views of Cities and Towns, Card Decks, Base Balls, Cutlery, Pens, SCHOOL BOOKS and STATIONERY.

All the Latest Magazines and Weekly and Daily NEWSPAPERS Constantly on Hand.

MICHAEL SHEA, 805 MARKET STREET, S. F.

HOLMAN'S Liver Pads and Plasters

Cures Liver troubles, Chills and Fever, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Wind Pain, Liver Complaint. No medicine required. Price Pads ..... $2.00 Plasters ..... 1.00 Children's Pads ..... 1.50 Plasters 1.00

WATSON & CO., 10 Battery St., S. F.

R. B. POOLE, Fort Wayne, Ind., Ind., 1879.

MR. G. W. HOLMAN.

Dear Sir—Have generally sold drugs for a period of two months the effects of "Holman's Ague and Liver Pad." I can just now hundred cases under my knowledge and observation, and I have no hesitancy in recommending them as a sure and speedy cure in all cases of ague, biliousness and indigestion. In cases of enlarged and indurated spleen, they are par excellence. I have never known of bad sores and blisters to occur, and that I attribute to extreme cleanliness. Yours, etc., J. M. BOYLE, M. D.

Sold by all druggists. Depot for Holman's Ague and Liver Pad, 10 Battery St., S. F.

P. C. MOLLOY, Real Estate Agent, 116 MONTGOMERY ST.

RENTS COLLECTED.

HOUSES TO LET IN ALL PARTS OF THE CITY.

FULL CHARGE TAKEN OF PROPERTY.

$5 to $20 per month and upwards.

BOOKS AND STATIONERY AT M. SHEA'S! No. 805 Market street.

Large Collection of Standard Catholic Works; Also, Books of Fiction, History, Travel, Biography, Poetry and General Literature.

Bibles and Prayer-Books at all Prices.

Writing Desks, Albums, Photographic Views of Cities and Towns, Card Decks, Base Balls, Cutlery, Pens, SCHOOL BOOKS and STATIONERY.

All the Latest Magazines and Weekly and Daily NEWSPAPERS Constantly on Hand.

MICHAEL SHEA, 805 MARKET STREET, S. F.

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

LEINSTER.

Dublin.

It is expected that the new swivel bridge over the river Liffey, at the Custom House will be opened for traffic on the 15th of August next. On the same date the lateral wings of Carlisle Bridge will be opened, and the contractor will then proceed with the centre of the structure. The entire work is to be completed by the 10th of August, 1890.

The Irish Times of August 30th, says:—Irish flockmasters had better look to their laurels, or our irreparable American cousin will cut the ground completely away from under their feet. Yesterday the City of Dublin Company's steamship Mullingar, from Liverpool, brought to this port 548 American sheep, which had recently been landed in the Mersey, and after the necessary examination re-shipped to Dublin. They were consigned to a city flesher, and but for the fact that their fleeces were somewhat soiled, they appeared nothing the worse of their transatlantic voyage. They were not of a weighty class, and looked like a mixture of Leicesters and mountain raised animals. They were, of course, inspected in Liverpool, and so far as our portal shall were concerned they had nothing further in this way to do with them. The novelty of the importation created considerable curiosity on the part of those who witnessed their debarkation.

According to the returns obtained by the Royal Irish Constabulary and the Metropolitan Police, who acted as enumerators at the several Irish seaports, the number of emigrants who left the ports of Ireland during the quarter ended the 31st of March last, amounted to 6,502—3,780 males and 2,722 females—being 1,116 less than the number who emigrated during the corresponding quarter of 1888, and 3,400 under the average number for the first quarter of the ten years of 1879-88.

Wexford.

The Wexford water works are fast drawing to a completion. Nearly all the pipes are laid in the streets, and all parties are supporting the project.

Louth.

His Grace the Most Rev. Dr. McGettigan, has appointed the Rev. Thomas McVarry, C. C. to the pastoral charge of Carlingford, rendered vacant by the death of the Rev. John Campbell, P. P. Father McVarry has been a curate in Carlingford for the last ten years.

The Very Rev. P. V. Meadhe, O. P., died rather suddenly in the Dominican Priory, Drogheda, on May 24. He was born in the year 1820, and was ordained by the Primate Patrarch of Lisbon in 1843. He labored for very many years in the old Dominican church in Linenhall street, Drogheda. To build a new and fitting church was the great aim and object of Father Meadhe's closing years, and right well and nobly has that object been accomplished.

Meath.

A short time ago a memorial was presented by a few of the inhabitants of Laytown and its vicinity to the Most Rev. Dr. McEvilly, Bishop of Meath, requesting that the holy sacrifice of the Mass might be celebrated on every Sunday and holiday during the year in the church of the Sacred Heart at Laytown. Dr. McEvilly has replied to the effect that the church was built principally to accommodate the summer visitors, and that the people of the locality, with but few exceptions, contributed nothing to its erection. Though willing to overlook all these matters, he could not shut his eyes to the fact that the building is not yet the property of the Church of Meath, there being a mortgage debt upon it to the amount of £270. When this amount is paid off he will be happy to entertain any reasonable request.

MUNSTER.

Kerry.

Mr. Peter O'Leary, who is staying on a visit with a friend in Kerry, attended the meeting of the Kerry Tenants' Defence Association, on April 26th, and made some observations on the land question. The action he proposes is to give the landlords 22 years' purchase of their incomes, and let the tenants in possession in perpetuity. He recommended improved organization and the formation of clubs in every district throughout the country.

Tipperary.

The consecration of the new Roman Catholic Cathedral, Thurles, will take place in June.

An interesting experiment is about to be tried in Clonmel. A company has been formed there for the purpose of establishing refreshment rooms for the people, where good viands, tea, coffee, and wines may be had at moderate cost. The prospectus of the company has been issued, and the names of the provisional committee which appear on it are a good and sure guarantee for its successful initiation. The capital required is a modest sum enough—only £4,000 in 2,000 shares of 10s. each. In order to carry out the objects of the company central and spacious premises are to be looked for in the town of Clonmel, and when these have been obtained the work of getting them up will be a matter of little time. It is intended that nothing save the direct business for which the company was started shall be ventured upon—no public meetings, lectures, or transactions of that sort are allowed to take place in the refreshment room; but it is contemplated to establish a reading room in connection with them as speedily as practicable.

Limerick.

The following promotions have been made by the Most Rev. Dr. Butler:—Rev. W. Connery, P. P., Ardpatrick, has been transferred to Effin, vacant by the death of Rev. P. Ryan; the Rev. Dr. McEniry, P. P. The Rev. John Carrick, P. P., Rosmahil, has been transferred to Ardpatrick, the Rev. John Fitzgerald, C. C., has been appointed P. P. of Stonehall.

On April 26th the Archbishop of Cashel received the vows of the following young ladies who have entered the Dean Convent: Miss Ryan, of Glenroche, in religion Sister Mary Joseph; Miss Madden, of Limerick, in religion Sister Mary Aquin, sister of the Rev. Thomas Madden, C. C.

ULSTER

Antrim.

After being out about seventeen weeks the iron workers employed in the Belfast mills and factories have returned to work at the old rate of wages. A new committee was appointed by the men, who, after carefully considering the whole subject, advised the men to accept the terms proposed by the employers. The result has been that a number of the iron workers returned to work. The managers of the establishments promised that as soon as time improve the wages of the men will again be increased.

On April 24th, an iron screw steamer was launched from the ship-building yard of Messrs. Harland & Wolff, Queen's Island. The vessel, which received the name of the Mohawan, was built to the order of the Anastic Steamship Company, and is the fourth of a fleet of sister ships constructed on the Queen's Island for the same owners.

Down.

On April 30th three young men went to Lowry's Lake, Armagh—the lake that supplies the town with water for the purpose of fishing. They tried to get across to one of the islands with the assistance of a rope which they had used in a straw. It gave way and they were thrown into the water, and one young man, aged 19 years, named Villiers, was drowned.

Fermanagh.

On April 24th, a young lad named Flavin, aged about fourteen years, who was in the employment of Messrs. McNeill & Co., of the steel mill, Enniskillen, was ordered to remove some sawdust under the machinery in the mill, and while stooping at the work the machinery, was set in motion, and one of the saws coming in contact with his hip laceated it very much, the sound extending to the spine. His escape from death appeared to have been miraculous. He was carried to the County Infirmary, where he at present remains under medical care.

Cavan.

The Cavan Board of Guardians have unanimously adopted a petition sent them from the Monaghan Union, in favor of compelling every description of property liable to income tax to contribute to the relief of the distributed poor.

On May 1st, a deputation, consisting of Messrs. John Gannon, J. D., Chairman of Cavan Town Commissioners, Philip Smith, Rathariskin, and James Brady, C. E., Cavan, waited by appointment on the directors of the Great Northern Railway, at Belfast, for the purpose of presenting a memorial in favor of a roadside station being placed at Butlersbridge, village, three miles from Cavan. The directors promised to consider the matter, and have it carried out, provided it would repay the cost incurred.

On Sunday, April 27th, in the Cathedral, Cavan, Rev. Patrick Gilchrist was ordained priest, by Most Rev. Dr. Conaty. Very Rev. James Dolan, President St. Patricks, and Rev. Hugh Brady, Professor, ditto, were the attendant priests.

Donegal.

The prolonged litigation which it was thought would arise out of the will of the late Earl of Leitrim is practically at an end. The Earl, who left an estate of £20,000 a year, willed it away from his heir, the present Earl, and to his kinsmen, Col. Clements. The new Earl took the preliminary steps for disputing the will, but it is said that an amicable arrangement, under which the Earl will get about £10,000 a year, has closed the dispute.

Rev. O. Logue has been appointed by the Propaganda to the See of Raphoe. Father Logue is the well known Professor of Theology in Maynooth College.

CONNAUGHT.

Galway.

On April 29th, at the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy, Clifden, the most solemn and edifying ceremonies of profession and reception took place. The young ladies who were professed on the interesting occasion were Miss Ellen Hughes (in religion Sister Mary Clare), daughter of Mrs. Mary Hughes, Castlebar; and Miss Freely, Roscommon (in religion Sister Mary Agatha). The young lady who was received a Miss Annie Lee, Second daughter of Mr. Edward Lee, Galway. Sister Mary Clare is the third of her daughters whom Mrs. Hughes had the great happiness of seeing enter the cloister. They are all in Clifden Convent.

Mayo.

Patrick O'Rourke, Esq., accompanied by his solicitor, Mr. William Keating Clay, of Rutland-square, Dublin, entered into possession of the 'Old Castle estate, in the county of Mayo, as heir-at-law of his late brother, Alderman Hugh O'Rourke, on April 22d, and was warmly received by the tenantry.

There was recently on view in the yarn stores of Messrs. John Preston & Co., Belfast, a remarkable sample of flax, which has been grown this year in Ireland. It is about four feet in length, is blue-bloomed and bushel, and has a very strong, healthy stalk. This flax, which appears a sample of a field of two and a half acres at present on foot in the county Mayo, was sown at the usual time for wheat sowing.

The May fair of Ballina which is as a rule looked up to by the farmers of Mayo as a guide to the fairs of the season came off on May 1st. The show of cattle was as large if not larger than usual. The attendance of buyers fell far short for the supply, and those who put in an appearance bought cautiously. The graziers tried in vain to get what would recoup them for the winter's feeding. The sheep fair was thinly supplied, and the prices were slack, less for sheep in forward condition. Store hoggets of a superior description brought from 40s. to 45s. each. The horse fair was pretty largely attended, but very few nags exchanged owners. Milk cows were very scarce and dear. Yearling calves and stone heifers were in fair request, up to a class that would realise £10 each, value for £15 and upwards, sold fully 10s. per head under last year's prices. Hoggets were fully 10s. per head under last year's quotations.

Surgeon Major Bourke has given an abatement in the rent of from 15 to 30 per cent. to the tenants on his estate near Irishtown. Major Wilson Bertlesby has also signified his intention to reduce his rents, but to what extent has not yet been ascertained. The tenants on Mr. Murphy's estate have, as a mass, served notice of surrender, and intend acting upon it if a substantial reduction be not at once made, and the tenantry on neighboring estates intend to follow this example. Mr. Nolan Farrell has reduced the rents of the lands of Castlecarra by 25 per cent.

Sligo.

A special meeting of the Sligo corporation was held, on April 30th, for the purpose of considering the distranchisement of Sligo, and the necessity for some steps to be taken for securing a supply of pure water for the town of Sligo. Alexander Gilmore, Esq., J. P., Mayor presided. On the proposition of Councillor Cullery, seconded by Alderman Mcehill, a resolution was passed appointing a committee to prepare a petition to Parliament, to which was to be attached the corporate seal, asking that Sligo should be re-enfranchised. Councillors Nolan and Wood were at first opposed to the proposition, as they considered Sligo was better off and quieter without elections. However, they withdrew their objection. Councillor Scelley said that the Mayor deserved the thanks of the council for bringing the matter forward. A long discussion took place regarding the long fallout of introduction of a supply of water to the town. Councillors Cullery and Crawford proposed and seconded a resolution that a committee be appointed to get samples of Lough Gill and Kilsellagh waters, and to have them analyzed at private cost, pledging themselves to adopt the Kilsellagh scheme if it was found the most suitable. Alderman Reid proposed an amendment that the Kilsellagh scheme had been proved to be the best, and that it should be adopted and got through Parliament. The amendment was lost by a majority of 5 to 3 votes, and the original resolution was lost by one vote that of the Mayor.

Girl's High School, San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 21, 1879.

REV. EDITOR:—Yesterday afternoon, accepting a polite invitation from one of the graduates of the Normal class of the San Francisco Girls' High School to be present at the Commencement exercises, I found myself, though behind time, in the midst of a respectable audience, listening with a degree of attention commensurate with the importance of the occasion, and, if from many points of view, this department of the public school system bears relationship to your readers as Catholics interested in the great subject of popular education, I venture to send you a report of my observations and reflections. "Let their own works praise them in the gates." The programme consisted of twelve select readings, two "original" poems, and eight essays presumed also to be original.

When I entered Miss Ella E. Simson was reading her essay on "Water." This was followed by Miss Harper's essay—"The Story of a Flower," particularly the latter, were pure, sweet efforts of youthful minds gifted with the poet's imaginative talent. Fannie Weatherlige, under the title of "Milestone," was the only one of the class who made any reference to history ancient or modern, whereby we could judge of their proficiency in this important branch of science which has been defined—"Philosophy teaching by example," and her's was so meagre as to suggest serious doubts of the sufficiency of culture in this direction.

The Misses Lulu E. Cullen in the "Profession we have chosen," Florence N. Ferguson, in "To a Kindergarten," Bessie Levy in "Necessity of Normal Training," also Edith M. Palmer in "Education," the last mentioned, read previous to my entrance, appeared in their legitimate role of graduating teachers, trained by the foresight of the public who support the class with the public funds for this especial profession. Of the first nothing need be said, as it was simply a commonplace laudation of the vocation itself. The second introduced to her listeners Frederick Trowbel and his admirable system called Kindergarten—child garden, and sometimes children's paradise. Although we might be inclined to question some of her statements in regard to his early years, yet we must admit her theme was well chosen and developed in an interesting manner. She stated that a Kindergarten had been opened on Silver street—that the members of the Normal class were each required to assist at this establishment for a week preparatory to graduation, and in eulogizing the lady principal, had several anecdotes to show the originality of the little ones. Except in one instance, our essayist observed laudable regard for professional secrecy, not mentioning names, but in the following story vulgarly transgressed the rules of good taste and propriety:—"One day Pat (I was told after the exercises that every teacher recognized here Pat) got into difficulty with a companion, and struck him a blow. Complaint was made to the teacher who, reasoning to moral suasion, addressed to him elevated reasons for a change of tactics, and, finally, said—'Now, Pat, supposing we were to get up a banner, what word should we put upon it?' Pat expected, confidently, that from the force of her moral instructions, Pat would instantly cry out 'Love;' but, no: she had reckoned without her host, for immediately this young defender of self-interest shouted instead—'The Queen, great as, and if they don't go by and by, we'll go and blow them to smoke.' The name of Pat, even had it in no) been her real name, was like saying "this belligerent Irish boy," and henceforth every Pat in the Silver street Kindergarten will be a spotted character, a sort of embryo boasting, among the listeners to this essay. Mr. Editor, I have not, to my knowledge, one drop of Irish blood among my ancestors to make me feel this a personal offence, but I would ask, does the training of the Normal class lead to a better treatment in a teacher than to publish openly the petty faults and childish misdemeanors of a particular pupil?

Reese Levy's essay, in which she insisted on the necessity of moral training, since they, as teachers, would be required to supply the neglect of parents, and instruct the young, generation in the lessons and duties of right and wrong, struck me as a strange illustration of the workings of a system that leaves loosely of its non-religious character. On what principles would Miss Levy found her notions and distinctions between right and wrong? It is presumable, since God is ignored by this system, and the name of Herbert Spencer was conspicuously elevated on one of the blackboards as one of the household gods of those future instructors, that his principles would take the place of principles, and be sent be in the ascendant in those schools. On the day, in the midst of the assembly sat those guardians of the anti-sectarian system—Superintendent A. L. Mann, Deputy D. C. Stone, Director Taylor, and the Principal of the Girls' High School.

Three gentlemen each in turn addressed the graduates after the distribution of the diplomas. This document was not read. I cannot therefore say for how much it vouches. I suppose, as a matter of economy, the Department did not furnish the time-honored blue ribbon to tie the parchment with, and as Deputy Stone presented them spread out in full size, the young ladies could not be expected to receive them with any more grace of department than the Deputy himself manifested. However, two or three of the recipients passed long enough in his presence to be able to secure the treasure without its flying like a kite over their heads, and these vouchsafed a "thank you," with an accompanying curtsey of respect, quite distinguishable to the audience.

The gentlemen above mentioned, in a florid, laudatory style, then occupied our attention, each applauding their combined efforts of a supply of water to the town. Councillors Colliery and Crawford proposed and seconded a resolution that a committee be appointed to get samples of Lough Gill and Kilsellagh waters, and to have them analyzed at private cost, pledging themselves to adopt the Kilsellagh scheme if it was found the most suitable. Alderman Reid proposed an amendment that the Kilsellagh scheme had been proved to be the best, and that it should be adopted and got through Parliament. The amendment was lost by a majority of 5 to 3 votes, and the original resolution was lost by one vote that of the Mayor.

Girl's High School, San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 21, 1879.

REV. EDITOR:—Yesterday afternoon, accepting a polite invitation from one of the graduates of the Normal class of the San Francisco Girls' High School to be present at the Commencement exercises, I found myself, though behind time, in the midst of a respectable audience, listening with a degree of attention commensurate with the importance of the occasion, and, if from many points of view, this department of the public school system bears relationship to your readers as Catholics interested in the great subject of popular education, I venture to send you a report of my observations and reflections. "Let their own works praise them in the gates." The programme consisted of twelve select readings, two "original" poems, and eight essays presumed also to be original.

When I entered Miss Ella E. Simson was reading her essay on "Water." This followed by Miss Harper's essay—"The Story of a Flower," particularly the latter, were pure, sweet efforts of youthful minds gifted with the poet's imaginative talent. Fannie Weatherlige, under the title of "Milestone," was the only one of the class who made any reference to history ancient or modern, whereby we could judge of their proficiency in this important branch of science which has been defined—"Philosophy teaching by example," and her's was so meagre as to suggest serious doubts of the sufficiency of culture in this direction.

The Misses Lulu E. Cullen in the "Profession we have chosen," Florence N. Ferguson, in "To a Kindergarten," Bessie Levy in "Necessity of Normal Training," also Edith M. Palmer in "Education," the last mentioned, read previous to my entrance, appeared in their legitimate role of graduating teachers, trained by the foresight of the public who support the class with the public funds for this especial profession. Of the first nothing need be said, as it was simply a commonplace laudation of the vocation itself. The second introduced to her listeners Frederick Trowbel and his admirable system called Kindergarten—child garden, and sometimes children's paradise. Although we might be inclined to question some of her statements in regard to his early years, yet we must admit her theme was well chosen and developed in an interesting manner. She stated that a Kindergarten had been opened on Silver street—that the members of the Normal class were each required to assist at this establishment for a week preparatory to graduation, and in eulogizing the lady principal, related several anecdotes to show the originality of the little ones. Except in one instance, our essayist observed laudable regard for professional secrecy, not mentioning names, but in the following story vulgarly transgressed the rules of good taste and propriety:—"One day Pat (I was told after the exercises that every teacher recognized here Pat) got into difficulty with a companion, and struck him a blow. Complaint was made to the teacher who, reasoning to moral suasion, addressed to him elevated reasons for a change of tactics, and, finally, said—'Now, Pat, supposing we were to get up a banner, what word should we put upon it?' Pat expected, confidently, that from the force of her moral instructions, Pat would instantly cry out 'Love;' but, no: she had reckoned without her host, for immediately this young defender of self-interest shouted instead—'The Queen, great as, and if they don't go by and by, we'll go and blow them to smoke.' The name of Pat, even had it in no) been her real name, was like saying "this belligerent Irish boy," and henceforth every Pat in the Silver street Kindergarten will be a spotted character, a sort of embryo boasting, among the listeners to this essay. Mr. Editor, I have not, to my knowledge, one drop of Irish blood among my ancestors to make me feel this a personal offence, but I would ask, does the training of the Normal class lead to a better treatment in a teacher than to publish openly the petty faults and childish misdemeanors of a particular pupil?

Reese Levy's essay, in which she insisted on the necessity of moral training, since they, as teachers, would be required to supply the neglect of parents, and instruct the young generation in the lessons and duties of right and wrong, struck me as a strange illustration of the workings of a system that leaves loosely of its non-religious character. On what principles would Miss Levy found her notions and distinctions between right and wrong? It is presumable, since God is ignored by this system, and the name of Herbert Spencer was conspicuously elevated on one of the blackboards as one of the household gods of those future instructors, that his principles would take the place of principles, and be sent be in the ascendant in those schools. On the day, in the midst of the assembly sat those guardians of the anti-sectarian system—Superintendent A. L. Mann, Deputy D. C. Stone, Director Taylor, and the Principal of the Girls' High School.

Three gentlemen each in turn addressed the graduates after the distribution of the diplomas. This document was not read. I cannot therefore say for how much it vouches. I suppose, as a matter of economy, the Department did not furnish the time-honored blue ribbon to tie the parchment with, and as Deputy Stone presented them spread out in full size, the young ladies could not be expected to receive them with any more grace of department than the Deputy himself manifested. However, two or three of the recipients passed long enough in his presence to be able to secure the treasure without its flying like a kite over their heads, and these vouchsafed a "thank you," with an accompanying curtsey

EDUCATIONAL.

WEEKLY COMMUNION.

By Monsignour De Segur.

I.

WEEKLY COMMUNION A SURE PASSPORT TO HEAVEN.

If Almighty God wears to reveal Himself to you, and says to us, "My child, do you wish to go to Heaven? Do you wish for assurance of your salvation, as full as assurance as it is possible to have on earth? you would hasten to reply, "O my Lord, do I not desire it? Ay, from my inmost soul."

Well, then, in the name of that good Lord, who for the love of us remains on earth under the Eucharistic veils, I am going to present you with this key of Paradise. I am going to offer you, in His name, the passport which will certainly admit you to it.

It is regular Confession and Communion once every week.

I am sure that God on His heavenly throne smiles what I am now going to say and repeat faithfully and piously approach the Sacraments once every week, I promise you on my salvation in His service to send, and that you shall be saved!"

In one sense, I cannot know this for certain, the future is known to God alone. But in another sense, I feel sure of it, sure and certain. In eternity, when what now hope for shall be ours forever and ever, you and I, dear reader, will see that to the saint Holy Mass, and perhaps one exception in a thousand cases—nor in ten thousand cases!

Therefore, if you wish to assure your salvation, your eternal bliss, learn and never forget, no matter what events happen to you, this great, this, which is the great work of your whole life, and say after me, "As far as lies in my power, I will never let a week pass without giving new life to my soul by a good Confession and a good Communion. I by the grace of God will do this."

II.

THE INFLUENCE OF WEEKLY COMMUNION ON A CHRISTIAN'S FAITH AND LIFE.

Faith is the first thing necessary for bliss and a Christian life and for obtaining eternal bliss. But in the same way that we cannot live without eating, so, in the spiritual order, it is impossible that we can remain alive if we wish to preserve that life of faith and grace begun at our baptism. And so, in order to live in good health, it is not enough to eat once and for all, or even occasionally; so likewise, in order to keep alive our faith and lead a life worthy of the name of Christian, it is not enough to communion once a year at Easter or even from Sunday. We must communicate often if we would not expose ourselves to the risk of forgetting Almighty God, of separating ourselves from Him by mortal sin, of losing the life of grace, and of missing the path to heaven. Now it is certain, from the experience of thirty years of priesthood, that for the greater number of souls it is not only useful but necessary, how happy you will feel in your resurrection!

III.

WEEKLY COMMUNION PREPARES US FOR A GOOD DEATH.

The excellent habit of communicating every week, every Sunday and holiday, is an almost infallible means to insure a good death! Do you wish to die in a state of grace? Adopt, and keep faithfully to, the habit of communicating every week.

The less frequent our Communions, so much the less are our chances of salvation. I mean our chances of being found in a state of grace when death comes. The more numerous they are, the greater are those chances, especially if our death prove unexpected.

One of my friends, a very distinguished priest, who, after a youth of dissipation, had returned to God's service, and who, to atone for past errors, had taken to communicating every Sunday and sometimes, add to one one day, with most charming faith and confidence, said, "For my part, I do not fear death. I approach the Lord's table often, and with the best dispositions I can; I try to be always ready, and to be always on my guard. When death comes to knock at my door, he won't catch me unprepared.

This is only an application of what we said at starting. A Christian, whoever he may be, who has the habit of confessing and communicating every week, very soon instinctively avoids grave faults, and stopes clear of occasions of mortal sin. Even if death comes unexpectedly, as so often happens, it finds him always in a state of grace, that is to say, in a state fit to appear before God.

Statistics lately published show that out of fifty deaths there are thirty sudden or unforeseen. How alarming!

I was told lately of an excellent mother of a family who was found dead one morning in her bed. Her two sons, both priests, were profoundly distressed, but knowing that their dear mother had had, for a long time past, the habit of frequently communicating, and that on the day previous she had kinds at our Lord's table, they had no anxiety as to her salvation.

A good little college-boy, named Gonson of a rich Paris merchant, who had come home for a few days, died suddenly in his bed, since his first Communion, had hardly ever failed approaching our dear Lord every Sunday, was suddenly taken ill, and in a delirious malignant fever, which rendered him insensible in a few hours, and carried him off at the end of two days, and neither his father nor parents had any anxiety about his eternal welfare.

I have just been informed, whilst writing this, of the sudden death of one of my young seminarists, a worthy and brave gentleman, who, the other day, after his breakfast, felt palpitations of the heart, sat down on the sofa, and quietly asked one of his daughters to bring him some other. Whilst she was looking for what he had in the house, he fell back, his face changed color, his head sank. He was dead. But this excellent man had communicated a short time before. In the midst of their grief, what a consolation this was for all his family!

What a blessing, what a happiness, so far as he himself was concerned!

Although it is no doubt safer and more consoling to receive, before appearing in God's presence, the last Sacraments of the Church, nevertheless, one may say, in all truth, that, except in extraordinary cases, a good death, and the hope of the salvation of a Christian who, after having persevered to the end in the habit of communicating weekly, meets with a sudden death, allowing no time for the last consolations of religion.

Then, dear reader, if you wish to have in your favor every chance of that final grace called a good death, now adopt, and in future never lay aside, the salutary habit of communicating once every week.

[To be concluded in one week.]

The Greatest Good of the Greatest Number.

It is the duty of a Government to legislate for the greatest good of the greatest number. Home was founded by individuals, by laborers, manufacturers, businessmen, professional men, and the keeping of the law, it was no longer regarded as a refuge for the thief, the murderer, the outcast. The country was not founded by convicts, though that has been proven by the same sneers by which O'Connell discovered. If Israel to be established from the impunitent thief; and tracing the family line of some of our prominent people, it is very surprising to find that their great-grandfathers were really respectable men.

The first comers to America left there country for their country's good. Prudence urged to breast the dangers of the deep rather than pine away in jail, the worth of their descendants has spoken for them and the ancestral escutcheon. But now that the system has assumed form, and stands, with all its faults, inferior to no other nation in the world, why should we, in our devotion to abstract principles, which keep the Cyprian motto of Jefferson and Tom Paine, open our gates to a horde of heathens from Hindostan, who, if they come, as they have past may deem it a beautiful thing—this invasion of the Chinese—but no man in Ireland, or even in Henry Ward Beecher, or any other philanthropist of that school, believe it to be a question of placing him in power. The Irish have been there, where, and it is time that the Government of the United States acts which guided the original thirteen States are no longer large enough for us. We have outgrown our Little Breeches. Time has we have been guided by the example of other countries; we must face problems so new and startling, that the experience of Europe and the teachings to history are powerless to help us. If the good of the nation requires that the Chinese should be shut out from our midst let them be shut out firmly and relentlessly, if the good of the nation large requires that the manufacture and multiplication of machinery should be restricted, let the manufacture and multiplication of machinery be restricted. Legislating must be run in the interest of the people, and all interests must be subservient to it. Since the people live by labor, labor must be given them or they die. The North philosophizes in the abstract of slavery, and when it put that philosophy into action, entailed on the whole country a terrible burden and rendered its cross unhappy. The South of the East are philosophizing in the same way on the subject of Chinese labor. The children of the Flowery Empire are not the interesting beings gentle, industrious and sunny that grotesque which Bret Harte has depicted. Individuals may be found among them who are all that the Greek writer makes them, as an occasional Indian may be found who resembles the ideal creations of Fenimore Cooper; but, in general, they are not what our fancy painted them. Intense zeal for labor, prompted the Hoodlum for his persecution of the gentle Chinese; and so of the East-forgot that if there were no Chinese in California there would be fewer Hoodlums. The Chinese are so cheap to monopolize every industry, that there is nothing but hot Hoodlumism for boys and young men. The C's mine are crowding the people of our race from every branch of labor. They do their work well—often much better than the American, Irish or German. We must admit that; but if we accept the facts of their industry and quickness as reasons why they should be allowed to swarm into California and drive the Californiens before them like the foam on the wave, we may as well surrender the United States to China at once. If the Eastern people insist on managing the affairs of the West, the Indian will be driven to the Pacific—will we, forsooth, that California has become to small for them.—Mother's Weekly.

Ireland's Fidelity to the Holy See.

For 300 years the Catholic Church in England lay desolate. For 300 years there was no hierarchy uniting it with the hierarchy of the Church throughout the world; for 300 hundred years there were scattered faithful who preserved their religion at the peril of their lives; there were scattered priests administered to them in secret; but there was no Catholic Church in England in the full profession of its supremacy and authority. It had fallen from being a province in Europe, to be a province of the Mother to be a wilderness. The greater part of those who were after models, and thought, trodden down, and persecuted, never by desolate. It was not. "Its hands were strong and its feet were as those of the hinds." They were lost in England, but when one left his country, another took his place. The Church in Ireland must have never failed. Pius IX. had no need of doubt. Ireland had tried to do in England. No pontiff had been called upon to restore the work of St. Patrick; and you, children of the Church in Ireland, have gone throughout the wide world, and wherever you have been scattered you have carried with you your Catholic faith. Not so with us. And therefore I call on you that greater benediction which you have earned with TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Irish Home Rule Leader in the House of Commons.

The Home Rulers in the House of Commons have chosen as their leader William Shaw, member for Cork County, Ireland, in place of Dr. Isaac Butt, deceased.

The London "Times" on California's New Constitution.

The Times, in commenting on the New Constitution of California, describes it as "the most astounding instrument ever framed for the government of a community," and thinks it must produce widespread ruin.

Dr. Butt's Successor in Parliament.

The election at Limerick City for Member of Parliament, in place of the late Dr. Isaac Butt, resulted in the shelve of Gabbitt, House Ruler, over Speaight, Conservative. Gabbitt received 860 votes and Speaight 656.

A New Commander for the Zulu War.

It is officially announced that General Sir Garnet Wolseley has been appointed Supreme Military and Civil Commander of Natal, Transvaal and certain other Districts adjoining and included in the seat of war, Lord Chelmsford resigns in the present emergency to divide the Office of Good Hope Commander into four districts. The Chancellor of the Exchequer announced these changes in the House of Commons this afternoon. Sir Bartle Frere remains as Governor of the Cape Colony.

General Wolseley will probably sail on Friday next.

The Government's Policy Towards the Suez.

In the House of Commons, after much questioning, Sir Michael Hicks Beach stated the instructions given General Wolseley would be consistent with the desire repeatedly expressed by the Government to arrive at a speedy and honorable peace. He would be told that it was not the intention to attempt to extend the territory, but to take care of its present possessions. He would be instructed to receive and entertain any bona fide overtures for peace.

BRITISH INDIA.

Steamer Sunk—Seventy Lives Lost.

The British India Steam Navigation Company's steamship Ava was sunk in a collision with another vessel, and 66 of her crew and four passengers drowned. The Ava was an iron screw steamer of 2,600 tons, and was built in 1872.

Indian Peace Treaty Signed.

Lord Cranbrook, Secretary of State for India, announced in the House of Lords that he had received a telegram from Major Cavagnari, stating that he had that day signed a treaty with the Ameer of Afghanistan.

Treaty with Yakoob Khan.

A dispatch from Simla states: The British will remain at Candahar until Autumn. It is probable Yakoob Khan will request them to stay longer, as his brother, Ayoub, is at least prepared to seize Candahar whenever it is evacuated. The treaty with Yakoob Khan is most satisfactory. Every political and commercial advantage that the British hoped for has been gained.

FRANCE.

The Inter-Oceanic Canal Congress.

PARIS.—The sub-Committee of the Darien Canal Congress to-day presented a report admitting the possibility of a Nicaragua route, while calling attention to the great canal scheme proposed by Lieut. Wyse and M. Bielve in the best, subject to certain modifications. The Nicaragua route would, it is estimated, cost $84,000,000. The cost of the Wyse scheme is estimated at $131,000,000.

The Committee of Ways and Means of the Darien Canal Congress proposes a transit duty of fifteen francs per ton, at which rate it is estimated the gross receipts of the canal will reach $5,000,000 per annum. The Committee is opposed to Government assistance in the enterprise. The Committee of Ways and Means proposes considers the proposed transit duty too high.

It appears almost certain the Panama-Aspin wall route will be the one selected by the Darien Canal Congress.

Figures of the estimates of the comparative costs of the natural route proposed for a ship canal to unite the Atlantic and Pacific, as given in yesterday's dispatch, are produced for a report by Captain Lewis, a sub-Committee on the cost of the work reported that the Tehuantepec route just would cost $60,000,000, without including cost of terminal ports; Nicaragua, $29,500,000, the Panama, $42,000,000, exclusive of indemnity to the railway companies the San Blas, $32,000,000.

RUSSIA.

The Danish Polar Expedition Heard From All Safe.

ST. PETERSBURG.—The Governor of Irkutsk, Eastern Siberia, has received intelligence from Professor Nordenskjold, of the Arctic Expedition, dated May 24. The Professor announced that he intended to start on the Vega for Europe, by way of Behring Straits and the Suez Canal.

A telegraphic dispatch from Irkutsk reports that the Vega has since arrived in Behring Straits.

SWITZERLAND.

A Request from Bismarck Refused.

A Vienna dispatch to the Globe states: Germany, not Russia, demanded that Switzerland renounce the right of asylum to foreign refugees. Switzerland refused, and Germany referred the question to the other Powers, who refused to co-operate with Germany.

SPAIN.

Negotiations Relative to Importation of Coolies into Cuba.

The Madrid correspondent of the Daily News says:

The Chinese Envoys have been received by the King.

Negotiations for a treaty relative to the importation of coolies into Cuba commenced this week, but the Spanish Government will insist upon the coolies paying their own passages, and requiring the Chinese to agree never to employ foreigners as consular or diplomatic representatives in Spanish dominions. Directly the treaty is concluded, the Chinese Envoys will leave for Mexico and Peru, to establish commercial connections and protect their fellow-subjects there.

Abolishment of Slaves in Cuba Insisted Upon by the Government.

A dispatch from Madrid reports: The Royal ratification will declare the Cabinet leaves the questions of reforms in Cuba to the Cortes, but insists on the emancipation of slaves.

GERMANY.

President of the Reichstag.

BERLIN.—Herr Seydewitz, Conservative, has been elected President of the Reichstag, in place of Herr Forckenbeck, resigned.

A Times Berlin special says: The resignation of Forckenbeck, President of the German Parliament, which was announced yesterday, is regarded as an event of much importance. Forckenbeck is assigns two reasons for his resignation—his ill health and his opposition to the views of a majority of his fellow members on the Tariff question. The latter is understood to be the real reason for the step. The Protectionists are carrying all before them in Parliament, and Bismarck appears to have thoroughly won over the majority of Parliament to support all his fiscal plans.

The First Vice-Presidency.

At to-day's session of Parliament, Frankenstein, Ultramontane, was elected First Vice-President, in place of Baron Von Stauffenberg, resigned.

Debate on Duties in the Reichstag.

The Reichstag has passed the bill authorizing the provisional levying of customs duties proposed in the Tariff and Tobacco bills. This includes duties on wrought iron and petroleum. Debate on the timber duties commenced. Bismarck strongly advocated the duties. He declared the apprehension that henceforth it will be impossible to obtain better sorts of American wood, to be entirely groundless.

ITALY.

The Concordat Between Germany and the Vatican.

ROME.—The rumors of the approaching signature of a concordat between Germany and the Vatican is denied. It is stated that Germany will not accept the Vatican's proposals. Negotiations under current are progressing, but an early result is not expected.

EASTERN.

Catholic Colonization Society.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The Catholic Colonization Society of the United States held a meeting to-day, which was attended by Archbishop Williams, Bishops Ireland, Spalding, Custer, Ryan, O'Connor, and others, and agreed to call a public meeting to further the purpose of aiding colonists to settle in the West. The movement has the hearty approval of Cardinal McCloskey.

What an Officer of the Panama Railroad Company Says of the Proposed Ship Canal.

A World reporter interviewed John G. McCullough, of the Panama Railroad, on the proposed ship canal. He said he didn't think the canal would injure the railroad, for the reason that the Company is protected by its contract with the United States of Colombia. In this contract it is stipulated that no maritime canal to unite the two oceans shall be constructed across the Isthmus without the concurrence and consent of the railroad Company. "Or rather, it is provided that no such canal shall be constructed without our being awarded, in case we do not consent to the undertaking, a sum sufficient to indemnify us for damages and to pay us for the privileges we hold of acting as carriers on the Isthmus. We have reserved to us by the Colombian Government, the exclusive right to operate anywhere in the Westward of the Tuyra River, on the Atlantic side of Point Garachine, on the Pacific. There is hardly a vessel proposed that does not infringe wholly or partly within this compass." He didn't think the canal would be built in his time.

Equal Religious Privileges on Indian Reservations.

The House Committee has authorized a favorable report to the House of the bill giving to all religious denominations equal rights and privileges on Indian reservations.

Reception to Prelates who Attended the Dedication of the Cathedral in New York.

NEW YORK, May 27.—A reception was given to-night to the Archbishops and Bishops who attended the Cathedral Dedication, by the Catholic Union, in the Club House of the Xavier Union. Cardinal McCloskey, accompanied by Archbishop Purcell, of Cincinnati, Gibbon, of Baltimore, and Hannan, of Halifax, arrived soon after eight o'clock. The rooms were handsomely decorated with flags and flowers. Eugene Kelly presided, and an address of welcome was made by John E. Devlin, which was responded to by Archbishop Gibbon, of Baltimore. A banquet followed.

The Proposed Excursion to Welcome General Grant.

NEW YORK, May 27.—The Herald has an editorial on the proposed excursion to San Francisco to welcome General Grant. It doesn't believe Grant is a consenting party to this extraordinary demonstration, and fears it will be a great annoyance and embarrassment to him on his arrival. He will see at once that it is only an electioneering movement, and the participants participated in only by Republicans. Grant will have to receive and entertain all the people who the projected excursion has been so planned as to exclude a majority of the people in every place through which he is to pass from any participation in it. The whole thing is an impudent and mischievous blunder, which will defeat the purpose of its perpetrators by disgusting all that part of the Republican party who think it premature to select in 1879 a ticket for election in 1880.

Review of the Trade of the Country Encouraging Reports.

NEW YORK, May 26, The "Times" review of trade encourages reports from all sections, evidently made with care, representing nearly all the important centres of industry. New England manufacturers of all kinds have felt the revival of business most strongly. Factories are running on full time, with a brisk demand for products. Lumber mills are busy, but prices are low. Jobbers report a good spring trade. Sales are rapid, but on a small margin of profit. Retailers alone complain, being the last to feel the evidences of prosperity. Business is transacted on a sounder basis. Fewer credits are given than were asked and collections are generally easy.

In the Middle States new manufactories have been started in some places, few wages reducing operations in mining and works on a lower scale of profits.

The New Jersey silk factories now employ nearly twice as many hands as a year ago, and iron and steel manufacturers have hard work to keep up with orders, even by running night and day.

The Delaware ship-yards are full of work. Confidence is expressed everywhere. Longer have gone West, and skilled mechanics who remain find work enough. In New England retailers are more cheerful over prospects than present business.

In Southern and Western States the general expression is very cheerful, South Carolina only reporting trade dull. Virginia finds great impetus given to tobacco manufacturing by a reduction of the tax. West Virginia reports, with glass and nail factories in full blast, because the profits are not 100 per cent. The cotton States report reviving business, based on the promise of crops. Other States report a good general feeling with the exception of Kentucky.

In almost every State building operations are on a much larger scale than expectations, so above is the payment of old debts and less desire for long credits.

Comments of the London "Times" on California's New Constitution.

The Times, in commenting on the new Constitution of California, describes it as "the most astounding instrument ever framed for the government of a community," and thinks it must produce widespread ruin. "If all the notions of the reformers who put forth their panacea for the regeneration of the human race from the Pacific Commune were embodied in a document they would not appear wilder, more absurd, more menacing than many of the provisions of the Constitution which now regulates the civil rights of dwellers in California. Everybody is to be punished and restricted in the same way. Those persons only are excepted who have nothing to lose. The Constitution, as a whole, is such an extraordinary production that the people of California might well be stupefied when they learned that Kearney had carried his point. We do not fancy that this exaltation will last long. The mischief which has been wrought may produce a reaction, and an effort may be made to revise a Constitution which must produce widespread ruin.

Decline of Wages for Farm Laborers.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—May returns to the Department of Agriculture show that the average wages for labor, without board, on yearly engagements have declined from $27.79 per month to $26.26, or 4.8 per cent. during the past year. The cost of board of farm laborers declined 4.16 per cent., or from $2.40 per month to $2.14. Four States and two Territories show an increased rate of wages—Minnesota, Colorado, California, Oregon, New Mexico and Washington Territory. All the other States show a decline. The decline is greatest in Vermont, 20 per cent.; Maryland, 25 per cent., and Virginia, 24 per cent. The cost of subsistence has advanced in four States and two Territories—New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Texas, Colorado, New Mexico and Washington Territories. All the other States show small cost of subsistence. Vermont declines three per cent. in the price of board, and Maryland 40 per cent.

Ancient Order of Hibernians Thirteenth National Convention.

The thirteenth annual National Convention of the Ancient Order of Hibernians began its sessions in Cincinnati, O., May 1, at Hibernian Hall. The number of delegates in attendance was about one hundred and twenty. At 9 o'clock the delegates and members of the Order, numbering probably one hundred and thirty now, marched in the hall to the cathedral, where High Mass was celebrated by Archbishop Purcell, assisted by Father W. J. Hafley, as deacon, and Rev. J. F. Murray, Chaplain of the Order, of Boston, county, as sub-deacon. After Mass the Archbishop, taking for his text the words "Ecce Mysterium," addressed the Delegates in a brief sermon of five minutes, in which he exhorted them to remain steadfast in the faith of their church. He thanked God that the order, though during the past years abused, slandered, and reviled, had proved itself to be composed of true men, good and faithful members of society, as well as hard-working citizens. The Archbishop said he had an abiding faith in the Society, and was glad to see that their prominent celebrities in the country were now of the same opinion.

At the close of the services, the delegates repaired until 1 o'clock, when they re-assembled at Hibernia Hall for the purpose of electing a temporary organization.

This was done by the election of Hon. Samuel Inderger, Mr. John Hart, of New Jersey, as temporary President, and Cornelius Horgan, of Pennsylvania, as temporary Secretary. A committee on Credentials was then appointed, the same consisting of one member from each State represented.

The following gentlemen composed the committee—Massachusetts, John Dalton; Kentucky, Matthew Carrigan; Missouri, Thomas Duffy; Delaware, Robert Cunningham; Rhode Island, John Duffy; New York, P. J. Carberry; California, Thad. Flanagan; Pennsylvania, Hon. Samuel Inderger; West Virginia, J. W. Dolan; Ohio, H. E. Mulligan; New Jersey, D. J. Flynn; Louisiana, Peter Lennan; Virginia, M. J. Carey; Illinois, J. J. McMillin; New Hampshire, Hugh McDonough; Connecticut, J. F. Mullen; Maine, A. O'Donnell; Nebraska, Richard O'Keeffe; Illinois, Frank Dunne; Iowa, A. Lonsbury.

Produce Market.

FLOUR—Prices firm. We quote: Superfine, $4@$4 62½; Extra Superfine, $4 75@$5; Double Extra and Family, $5 50@——; Best Family Flour, in cloth, jobbing at $6 50@——; $7 50, outside for silver. Oregon Standard extra $4 75@$5 00.

WHEAT—The market is week and dull and there is apparently neither disposition to buy nor sell. No. 1 is quotable at $1 62½@$1 70; No. 2 at $1 55@1 60. The only sales reported to-day were 2,000 sks fair milling at $1 62½; 3,000 sks do, $1 62½; 20 and 40 tons of good, 1 70 p' ctl.

BARLEY—No sales reported to-day. The market is quiet at $1@$1 05 for Coast feed, and $1 07½@$1 10 for brewing.

OATS—The extremes of the market, covering all grades, are $1@$1 85. Sales of 75 sks Surprise at $1 55, and 100 sks choice feed at $1 60.

CORN—Large Yellow, 72½c; Small Round do, 85@87½; White, 77½@82½ ⅌ ctl.

HAY—Market dull at $6 00@13 00 ⅌ ton.

RYE—Quotable at 90c ⅌ ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Quoted at $1 25@ 40 ⅌ ctl.

STRAW—40@60c ⅌ bale.

POTATOES—Market is dull; Tomatos and Oranges sold at 300@400; River Reds, 50@ 60; Early old Rose, 40c; Burbanks, 50@ 60; ONIONS—Silverskins, 3@3½c ⅌ lb; Red, 2½@3c; BEANS—Pinks, 2½@3c; Mexican, 2½@3c; Pea, 2½@3c; Lima, 4@4½c ⅌ lb.

MILLSTUFF—Ground Barley, from the cars, $18 50@20 00; Middlings, $20@22 00; Rye Meal, $27 50@30 00; Cracked Wheat, 3½@ 4c ⅌ lb; Middlings, selling at $18@——; Rye and Wheat Bran, ——@$14 ⅌ ton, silver; Oil Cake Meal, $37 ⅌ ton—the Pacific Coast Oil Cake Meal, $37 ⅌ ton.

CHEESE—Market for choice Comb is bringing 16@18c; best straight 16@16c.

NUTS—California Walnuts, 16@ 20c; Chile Walnuts, 16@20c; Peanuts, 4@6c; California Almonds, 20@25c for soft shell, 15@17c for hard shell; Hickory Nuts, 5@7; Pecans, 12@14c; Filberts, 15@16c; Brazil Nuts, 12@14c ⅌ lb.

DOMESTIC FRUIT—We quote: Apples, ⅌ box, 75@125; Pears ⅌ box, 75@$1 00; Strawberries, ——.

VEGETABLES—We quote: Cabbage ⅌ ctl, 50@75; Cauliflower ⅌ doz, 50@$1; Turnips ⅌ box, 40; Turnips, do, 75@$1 00; Garlic, ⅌ ℔, 10@12c; Beets, ⅌ doz, 50@60; Marrowfat Squash ⅌ ton, 16 00@18; Dry Okra, ⅌ ℔, 10 @12c; Dry Chile Pepper, ⅌ ℔, 12@16c; Horseradish, ⅌ ℔, 12@15c; Asparagus, ⅌ box, 50@$1 00; Rhubarb—The range is from 60@75 ⅌ box for all kinds.

TALLOW—Rendered is 8c ⅌ ℔.

WOOL—The is active, at better prices. Southern, Cost Burry, 19@14c; Fine, 19@17c; Northern, Burry, 17@14c; free, 20@23c. San Joaquin Burry and seeds, 16@17c; long free, 19@21c; short free, 15@17c; long, heavy and dirty 11c 12@ ⅌ ℔.

HIDES AND PELTS—Heavy salted Steers, over 60 ℔, 8c; medium salted Hides, cows and steers under 60 ℔, 7c; Salted Kips, fair sales 9c; Calves' Calf, for dairy calf and slaughter house respectively, 12@15c; Dry Hides, usually selected, 15c; Dry Kip and Calf, usual selection, 12½ ⅌ ℔; Hair Goat and Sheep Pelts, Per doz, Shearlings, 50c; Short Wool, 75@$1; Medium, 50@75c; Long Wool, 50@75c; Short Lambs, 25@50c; Long Lambs, 50@75c; Calf and Kid, 1 00@1 25; Deer Skins, Summer and Winter, per ℔, 12@14c; Deer Skins, Summer and Winter, per ℔, 12@14c; Deer Skins, Summer and Winter, per ℔, 12@14c

HOW A PRIEST WON A DECORATION.

[From the French.]

H——is a village situated near Rosnac; it looks down upon a great plain, through which the Loire rolls majestically and calmly along. Thereon the place was a stupid fine old man, upon whose shoulders his snow-white locks fell down with patriarchal simplicity. He was of a very cheerful disposition, his face deeply bronzed, and, in spite of his seventy years, he was still strong and straight as an oak. For more than twenty years he administered to the spiritual wants of his people, and was, in effect, like the father of all the inhabitants.

Returning home from the church, where this good old man was accustomed to pass the morning, he would sometimes stop to chat for a moment with the villagers, who, seated outside their doors on large wooden benches, were enjoying their midday refection. His Sunday instruction, simple in execution, had a far more efficacious effect on the hearts of his congregation than the sublime and eloquent discourses of Bossuet and Father Lacordaire would have had. This veteran ecclesiastic was decorated with the Legion of Honor, and upon his left breast he carried a fold of scarlet ribbon, which quickly attracted attention from the striking contrast between the sacred black and the stuff suitane.

Now this simple priest, living in an obscure village, had attained this mark of distinction, was the question I asked of one of the peasants, and this is what he told me:

The cure had amongst his parishoners an enemy. He was a man whose name was Martin, who, on his return from military service ten years before got married in the country, and bought there a little farm on the banks of the Loire, about five miles from the village. Martin hated priests. He forbade his wife to assist at the Divine office, and, as to his two little boys, he taught them their catechism to detest priests, saying to them (these were his expressions) that priests were idle and good for nothing. In vain the cure tried to convert Martin; the latter remained deaf to all his admonitions.

On Sunday, when the church bells pealed forth so invitingly to all, Martin, quietly installed before the table of the inn, right opposite the church, his cap pulled down over his eyes, and a pipe in his mouth, certainly regarded the women, in their neat flower bonnets, and the men, in their holiday attire, as they entered the church. This scandal was a source of sorrow and annoyance to the good pastor. "Ah," he would say to his cousin who spoke sharply of Martin, "I don't know what to do with that poor erring creature," and verily the zealous pastor would have willingly given up his life to secure the return of the prodigal." Some time, addressing Martin upon the road, the cure would exclaim, "You shall see that I will convert you in spite of yourself," to which the impenitent Martin would reply by a loud fit of derisive laughter.

One evening towards the middle of October, the Loire, suddenly swollen by the rains, overflowed its banks, and threatened to inrade the surrounding districts. Some evenings earlier, Martin had taken refuge in his house for the night would be fraught with imminent risk, but Martin, being of an obstinate nature, would listen to no advice, and, seeking the terror of the watermen, replied, "If the Loire pays me a visit I shall have time enough to save myself and, having sent all his family to rest, he himself lay down peacefully to sleep. About o'clock next morning, while it was yet twilight, Martin was awakened by a great noise. The Loire, which had been roaring orably during the night, was now surging over the plain in furious billows, and already the first waves were beating against the wall at the rear of Martin's house, around the corners of which they were gushing with a loud hissing sound. Martin, cursing and blaspheming, woke upha wife and children, and quickly collected whatever portable valuables were in the house, abandoned it, dragging his family with him. They directed their steps toward the village, but scarcely had they gone a few yards when they perceived, to their utter dismay and confusion, that the flood was tumbling along in steady onrush right against them. They were completely surrounded.

They turned back, and re-entered the house. Martin directed his wife and children to ascend to the upper story, but the water still rising with an extraordinary rapidity, they were obliged to betake themselves upon the roof, which fortunately was very nearly flat, and consequently quite available as a resting place.

There, a terrifying spectacle met their gaze. For the space of two miles around, the Loire rolled black and threatening, dragging with it whatever it met in its course. All the village was out looking at the flood, which, rising higher and higher, grew loud against the bottom of the hill, on the side of which the village was pleasantly situated. The terrified women clung to their husbands, fathers, or brothers, while the latter were themselves silent, thoughtful and anxious. Suddenly a cry burst from the hitherto silent throng over the trembling crowd. Twas the cure. The people recoiled, half back, to permit him to pass with that true religious instinct which so deeply characterises the relations of our poor Irish Catholic people with their clergy. The veteran priest cast a long wistful look towards the house. "My children," he suddenly cried, "look there," pointing at the same time in the direction of Martin's house. A cry of horror went up from the crowd, for upon the roof of the house a woman, with dishevelled hair, was running wildly backwards and forwards, like a lioness in her cage, dragging after her two children who cried most pitifully. Upon the chimney was seated a man, his eyes fixed and gloomy, who seemed to be engaged coolly in counting how many moments of life still remained for him. Twas Martin. He still remained for him. "Let us go quickly," said the energetic old cure. "Let us not lose a moment, we must save them," and turning towards his parishoners—"My children," he added, impetuously, "there are some brave fellows amongst you who will not refuse to attach this poor unfortunate family from a terrible death." Not a man stirred. "Let us go," again the cure ventured in a vehement tone of exhortation, "there lately will not leave a wife and little family in this plight." Then, striking one after another upon the broad power of shoulders of the peasantry, who, terrified and ashamed, lowered their heads upon their breasts, "Let us go! Yon, Thomas! . . . You, James! . . . You, Claude! . . . You, John Marie! . . . These men never replied a word. "Now then," continued the cure, addressing himself to a waterman of a gigantic and powerful figure, "You, Pierre, who art bold enough to dare, you will go and save them; will do so, eh?" The waterman made a step to do so, but his wife, placing herself before him, pointing out to him with a single gesture (but to the husband's heart it spoke volumes) their three little children who had just caught hold of his blouse. "Do you wish, then, to leave them?" that look of course captains!" Pierre bowed his head, without daring to look at the cure.

"Very well, he said, cried the generous self-sacrificing priest, "you cannot expose yourself—you there. Well so far for me, I will go to try and save these unfortunates".

"Oh, don't go there, Monsieur le Cure, don't go there," cried the crowd, now surrounding him, "your boat will be broken to pieces against the arches of the bridge," exclaimed Pierre. "The current will carry it away," cried Thomas. "You are going to certain death," added Claude. The cure, listening to none, remonstrated the cure, disengaging himself from the restraints of his loving parishioners, and descending with a prompt state step towards the boat; the courageous old man jumped into it, handled the two oars, and shooting forward into the open space, settled down for a hard pull towards the house of Martin.

The struggle was a terrible one. The rower advanced slowly, heavily, and only by almost superhuman efforts. Sometimes the trunks of trees, sometimes debris of all sorts, drifted down by the flood, struck against the boat with violence, making it turn upon itself.

From the top of the roof the woman and the children received their deliverer, and stretched out their hands towards him in despair. As for Martin, he stood himself erect, and as if being able to believe the testimony of his eyes, he looked fixedly and confusedly at his enemy bent down to the oars. The cure pushed bravely forward towards his destination.

A few minutes more and all were lost! minutes of dreadful anxiety to the straining eyes at the village—minutes of hard struggle for the priest, generously exposing his life—minutes—yes, years of harrowing anguish to Martin's family.

At last the rower made one last supreme effort, and the boat struck against the roof of the house, at the moment when the flood had reached it. Holding on by the chimney, the cure stretched out his hand successively to the children, then to the mother, and last of all to Martin.

All entered the little bark safely. But it was necessary to regain the current of the river, a work of no easy accomplishment. The brave priest was completely worn out with fatigue; nevertheless, he cried to Martin, "Take one of the oars," and turning to the trembling wife and children, he added, "You all pray to the Blessed Virgin, the help of Christians and Star of the Sea."

Finally, after a half hour of fresh struggles and renewed anguish, during which at each moment the frail bark was threatened to be shivered to atoms, the gallant cure with his rescued children landed safe and sound on terra firma. Then the men, women, and children—all, in fact, who had followed with anxious eyes the dreadful struggle, prostrated themselves around the anointed of the Lord, and standing erect in their midst, his eyes they turned, now with respect, to Martin. Another Moses, he was unable to support his hands extended in that direction), the poor old man poured forth his thanksgiving to God in a tone tremulous with deep, heartfelt, grateful emotion.

When this touching prayer was finished, Martin approached his deliverer, and with his head bowed down, indicative of the remorse and sorrow within—"Monsieur le Cure," said he, "I humbly crave pardon for having injured you, and for having hitherto despised your advice."

In reply, the warm-hearted, paternal cure held out his hand forgiringly to his enemy, saying at the same time, while the fire of true satisfaction sparkled in his large blue eyes, and lit up his pale brown face with his accustomed smile—"All right, my poor old Martin, I forgive you from my heart and soul. You remember that I often predicted that I would convert you, and, by the grace of God, I have succeeded." And the paternal, hearty, tender-hearted priest pressed the penitent prodigal most cordially to his heart.

This is why Monsieur le Cure, of H——was decorated with the Legion of Honor.

DOWN THIRTY FATHOMS.

It was fearfully lonesome down under the green waters when I shoot—down where the wrecked ships sway this wayand that in obedience to the swell. The fishes seek you out, rub their noses against the diver's helmet, nibble at his shoulders, and, if encouraged, will show themselves to be pushed away by the heavily-gloved hand.

It is so quiet down there that the feeling makes one nervous, and brings out all the superstition in his nature. There are no voices, no shouts, no sighing of the wind, no whistling of the gale. The sunken ship may rub the rocks as the swell moves her, but there is no creaking nor no sound. It is like one pounding a collin. The bones may creak and groan as they swing this side to side, but the sound strikes a chill through the diver, and makes his heart beat faster, so much do the noises resemble the shrieks or the wails of those in dying agony.

Did you ever stop to think why submarine diving is more nervous work than sailing—why when forced to, preferring a book and a corner over everything else? W. I, it is for the reason—because there is something in the silence down there at the bottom of the lake or bay which seems and overpowers any human mind—which will in a short time change a man's nature.

Not the silence of the sea, but every diver knows that he carries his life in his hand, as it were, and none ever goes down without feeling that the grasp of death may be at his throat before he sees the sun again. A breakage in the machinery of the air pump—a prick of a nail or sliver through the hose that supplies him—a sudden storm—an entanglement of lines—there is everything to hasten his death, and nothing to guard his life. He feels all this; the sights and sounds and sensations of danger are ever buried after he comes up, and he gets to wrap himself up in himself, and then he is no longer sociable.

But there are temptations for a diver to continue on his hazardous occupation, even though he risks his life every day. There is a pecuniary inducement, and besides this, there is something which makes one exult as he passes the chain under the sunken ship, catches the hole in her side which caused her to foundder, or hooks up what is valuable of rigging or machinery. He feels that he is cheating nature; the he is robbing the hungry gale and leaping waves of their legitimate plunder.

Do you recall the fate of the propeller Wave, which went down in Lake Huron several years ago? A staunch craft, well manned, heavily loaded, having a large passenger list she was seen off Lexington one June night at midnight during a storm, and that was the last known of her until the divers dragged and found her, and went down to meet the death state of the many corpses.

It was my job. My job to raise her for her owners if I could, and my task to go down first and assess the sights which might have startled the younger divers—which startled me. We saw our dead as they lay in their coffins, eyes closed, hands folded over their breasts, resting peacefully as a sleep to be broken when the trumpet blows. We put back the hair, we press the cold hands—we wail and grieve that our dead are—and then we go on this and we feel a chill or fear that they will harm us.

But down at the bottom of the lake, the bare knowledge that a corpse was in the steerage or cabin, floating about grasping at panel and door with its stiff fingers, eyes open, hair floating and swaying like seaweed, makes the diver a child.

We found the Wave after a time, resting on the bottom thirty fathoms down. Few divers like to go over a hundred feet; fewer will go one hundred and fifty feet, and not half a dozen in the country have ever ventured down as deep as one hundred and eighty feet. It takes a deal of life-line and hose when one goes that far, and it makes the pumps labor and strain to furnish him air. However, the pecuniary inducements were great, and we got our scow in the vicinity of the wreck as soon as possible. A hundred feet in any direction from the sunken vessel the water was not over forty feet deep, giving us a chance to anchor and work. The Wave had gone down in the only deep hole for miles, as our soundings showed.

I had with me two good divers, but neither would go down until I had first made an exploration. Not a pound of freight, not a single body of the fifty or sixty dead had been washed on shore, and the divers knew what a sight would meet them down there in the cabin, and the cabin door was wide open. I had to make an examination of the vessel's bottom on my first trip, we being anxious to ascertain what had caused her to go down so suddenly, and, as I put on the dress, the heavy helmet was screwed on, the pumps started, I felt a chill at the sight of the dead

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
THURSDAY ..... JUNE 26.

"Pro Nobis seems to have given in our day a special solution to the Catholic press. It is found to preserve the profession of order and of the faith, where they still prevail, and to propagate them. Where impiety and error have prevailed, it caused them to be forgotten." Bishop of New York.

"To Them—Its Uses and Abuse."—"If such a powerful instrument of good and evil, we should be all anxious to employ the good and check the baneful in its influence. If, therefore, you wish to have an honest press, you must liberally and generously support it." Archbishop of Mechlin.

Most of the dioceses of Christendom possess a Catholic Journal, generally the organ of one or more Bishops, which as a true friend periodically visits the unfortunate, and is entitled to a corresponding friendly welcome. Instead of reading scurrilous sheets, we should rather encourage such Catholic journals as greatly contributing to the cause of truth. We take pleasure in adducing here the wise words of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, whose on this subject: "We cheerfully acknowledge the services the Catholic Press has rendered in religion, we take the distinctive tone with which it, most certainly, it has been conducted, although, it may be, not without fault and errors, very inefficient. It is, so far, our duty to publish to the Catholic community to extend to the publications a more liberal support, in order that they may be enabled to become more worthy for great, more lasting advantage. It is our duty to avail ourselves of the media of making known the truths of our religion, and removing the misrepresentations which so generally prevail in regard to them." Archbishop Alemany.

To Our Subscribers.

We would be thankful to our subscribers if they would please to examine the dates on their papers or wrappers, as these dates show the time to which they have paid up, and should they find any error, to please inform us. All money should be paid direct to this office, as we have no longer any agents authorized to receive it, except in case of first subscriptions, on receipt of which the paper will be forwarded to the address of the subscriber, together with a receipt for the amount. No receipts will be acknowledged except those signed at this office or by our city canvasser, Mr. Higgins.

All letters, whether on business or other matters, should be addressed to Rev. J. F. Harrington, to whom also drafts or Post-office orders should be made payable.

[OFFICIAL.]

To the Clergy and Laity of the Diocese of San Francisco.

Dearly Beloved:—The unity of the Church of God is a vital principle, binding together her children of every clime and race in mutual sympathy and love. This entity distance in place and difference of nationality cannot destroy, though the ties of country and blood may strengthen it. Thus St. Paul appealed to the Christian converts of Macedonia to send relief to the suffering Christians in Jerusalem. Macedonia was far from Jerusalem. Its inhabitants had, perhaps, heard but little of the chosen people or of David's city until the Gospel was announced to them; yet, when the cry of distress reached them, their hearts bent, with a prompt generosity, overjoyed that boundaries of continents and seas, and they poured out their treasures at the feet of St. Paul in behalf of their persecuted brethren.

Like our fathers in the faith in ages past, we unfold in our charity all the members of the Church, as if they abode under our roof, grieving in their grief and rejoicing in their joy. As unexpected calamity has lately elicited these sentiments. A great affliction has come upon one of the dioceses of our country. The cloudless day of a diocese of life has threatened to close in gloom. An apostolic man, honored for his virtues and labors, and venerable for his years, has been suddenly entangled in financial embarrassments of a most serious character. Churches and charitable institutions that seemed made for centuries have tottered on their foundations. A church, vibrating from ocean to ocean, has been given to a confidence bitterly mashaken and prolific of great results.

And, yet, the universal and deep emotion awakened by the troubles of Cincinnati is a testimony in the Church's favor, and a compliment to the administration of her temporalities. We are not strangers in this country to great and inexplicable failures. We wisdom, no foresight, can prevent them. The most experienced and cautious men are overmastered by the apparently useless fluctuations of the financial world, are baffled in their calculations and overwhelmed with disaster. If, then, the embarrassments of the Diocese of Cincinnati have excited wonder, this is, not because similar embarrassments are little known in popular affairs, but because they are little known in the Church.

But we believe the sun of Catholic charity has already risen on the sorrowing Church of Cincinnati, and that, after, we trust, many more years of faithful service in his Master's cause, the gray hairs of its saintly chief pastor will go down in undimmed honor to the grave. The history of the Church for 1900 years justifies our conviction. During all those long ages, and amid their endless changes, the tireless hand of Catholic faith has covered the earth with costly and beautiful creations. Those creations, those magnificent structures, have sometimes perished by the torch of fanaticism or been submerged under the wave of social disorganization; but the hand that reared them has never become paralyzed or unnerved. On the contrary, charity guards their own works, renews them in youthful beauty, protects them against the ravages of time, and makes them immortal.

It is, then, impossible for any diocese to perish as long as Catholic faith and charity are free to help it. The difficulties of that of Cincinnati are great, but the charity of the United States is greater. The power that built her up will not suffer her to fall. A lonely step have been taken to call the other dioceses to the relief of their sister. The Cardinal Archbishop of New York and the Archbishops and Bishops lately gathered round him at the dedication of the new Cathedral have signalized the occasion by inaugurating the movement, and have issued an Address which we herewith send you. This Address we make our own. We wish it to be read after this circular, and we direct subscription lists to be opened in every Church of the diocese for three successive Sundays, and a collection to be made on the Fourth Sunday—the proceeds of both subscriptions and collections are to be sent to us, to be transmitted to the venerable Archbishop of Cincinnati.

Your humble and devoted servant in Christ,

JOSEPH SADOC, O. P.,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Octave of Corpus Christi, 1879.

ADDRESS

Of His Eminence Cardinal McCloskey, the Archbishops and Bishops, Assembled in New York, May 28th, 1879, in Behalf of Archbishop Purcell.

To the Clergy and Laity of the Catholic Church throughout the United States:

Venerable and Beloved Brethren:—In addressing you concerning the financial embarrassments of the Most Rev. Archbishop of Cincinnati, it is not our intention to appeal to sympathies which we know are already sufficiently aroused. The facts of the case have touched all hearts with an eloquence that needs no enforcement.

Neither is it our intention to pass any verdict, whether of blame or of vindication, on the causes which have led to this deplorable state of things. No one needs to be assured that the integrity of the venerable Archbishop Purcell is above reproach or suspicion, and it would serve no practical purpose to enter into any discussion of the administrative ability of his business.

And we desire that it should be most distinctly understood that our present action is no recognition of any obligation resting on the Catholic clergy or people of the United States to assume any responsibility in regard to the debts of any ecclesiastic, person or body whatever that may at any time be insolvent or embarrassed. The Catholic Church in the United States forms no corporate organization. Each diocese is responsible for its own financial administration.

Nor do we, even in the present case, assume any responsibility whatever, or in any way engage ourselves to discharge the indebtedness or any portion of it. Burdened as all our dioceses and parishes are, either with debts of their own or with works of charity and religion to be carried on or to be inaugurated, any such action would be evidently rash and unwarrantable.

Neither do we intend that our action in the present case shall stand as a precedent for the future. It would be an injustice to ourselves and our successors, and to all ecclesiastical debtors and creditors, that any such expectation should be entertained. Our procedure is one of charity, of willingness to assist Archbishop Purcell and to second the efforts of his own clergy, and is for the present case alone.

All this being distinctly understood, we now proceed to lay before you the results of our deliberations, and to express our earnest, vigorous efforts in putting them into practical effect.

At a meeting called by his His Eminence Cardinal McCloskey, and held at his residence on the evening of May 26, were present all the Archbishops and Bishops who had assisted at the dedication of the new Cathedral, with the exception of a very few who had called from the city before the meeting. A letter from Archbishop Purcell was read, in which the Archbishop of Cincinnati, with the fervor of a Christian Bishop, expressing his gratitude at the evidences already given of the willingness of the Bishops of the Province of Cincinnati to assist in the spirit of the Diocese of Cincinnati has already manifested.

Sad as is the exhibit here presented, yet the final figures were received with a sense of relief, and of hope that the evil may not be irremediable. Especially did we feel encouraged to action by the willingness already manifested by a portion of the people, and confidently hoped for in the rest, to arrive at an honorable and equitable compromise.

Had the condition of things been such as was at first feared, we would have had a courage to approach an apparently impossible problem, yet had the creditors shown no willingness to make the sacrifices which honor and charity dictated under the circumstances, we would have source forced to put our hands to a work that would fall beyond the reach of all practicable measures. God forbid that we or any one should wish to take advantage of creditors in difficulties which weigh as heavily on them as on their debtors. We fully recognize that obligations of justice are in no way diminished by such difficulties. But since the obligations can be met only by the concurrence of parties who are in no way responsible for the debt, it is full right that we should be met half way by the charity and honor of the creditors, especially as so very large a proportion of the entire debt consists of accumulated compound interest.

All this being taken into consideration, the assembled Prelates resolved that such action should be taken, as follows:

Each Prelate agrees to have subscription lists opened without delay in every parish of his diocese for special contributions, to be paid at once or in installments of five years; one copy of every such list, when closed, to be sent to the Ordinary, and one to be kept by the parish priest for collection of the amounts subscribed. In such parish or mission there shall also be a collection taken up on some Sunday previous to the 1st of November of this year, by which date all subscriptions shall be completely subscribed and collected shall have been forwarded to the Ordinary.

A Central Committee have consented to take charge of all the funds thus collected, and see to their judicious disbursement. This committee will consist of His Eminence Cardinal McCloskey, Most Rev. J. J. Williams, Archbishop of Boston, and Most Rev. William Quinn, Vicar-General of New York.

As a substantial proof of the earnestness of the assembled Prelates, a list was at once made out of the amounts which they generously pledge themselves to contribute in annual installments during five years, as follows:

John Card. McCloskey	$1,000 00
James Gibbons	1,000 00
Jno. J. Williams	1,000 00
John Loughlin	500 00
B. J. McQuaid	500 00
M. A. Corrigan	500 00
P. T. O'Reilly	500 00
Joseph Pecoul (in five years)	500 00
Bishop McNeirny	500 00
Bishop O'Connor	250 00
John Ireland	500 00
Thomas F. Hendricken	500 00
John J. Kain	500 00
J. J. Ryan	500 00
Francis Silas Chatard	500 00
A. F. Ryan	500 00
Jas. A. Spalding	500 00
Wm. H. Gross	500 00
E. P. Wadhams	500 00
John Moore	500 00
J. F. Shanahan (in five years)	500 00
John Quinlan (in five years)	500 00
Bishop Dwenger (in five years)	500 00
P. Lynch	500 00
P. de Goesbriand	250 00

This simple statement of facts we now present, in the firm assurance that the sympathy for the venerable and afflicted Archbishop of Cincinnati which fills our hearts will be fully shared in by all the hierarchy, the clergy and the people of the Catholic Church throughout the entire country, and that the practical measures resolved upon and inaugurated will be heartily received and carried out everywhere.

The Most Reverend and Right Reverend Prelates of the country who assembled in meeting in New York are respectfully and earnestly requested to signify to the Archbishop Cardinal McCloskey their willingness to join in this united action.

And to the Reverend Clergy and the faithful people throughout the United States we now jointly address the exhortation which we will urge upon them in our respective dioceses, that they enter with a great heart and a willing mind into this noble work of charity, and that they spare no effort and step at no sacrifice that may aid to its success. While again declaring that it is no obligation of justice that we shall thus fulfil, we do not forget that we owe to the Irish people a debt of gratitude for the demands of fraternal sympathy and charity. In times of need they have never been thus far appealed to in vain; and we doubt not that the special generosity of the present need will call forth a special manifestation of Christian benevolence which will gives distinction to all men and glory to the Irish Catholic name.

Signed in behalf of the assembled Prelates, and at their request,

James Gibbons, Archbishop of Baltimore,
John Lancaster Spalding, Bishop of Peoria,
John J. Keane, Bishop of Richmond, Committee.

Gen. James Shields.

This distinguished Irish-American, who served his country faithfully as Senator from the States of Illinois, Minnesota and Missouri, and as an officer in the Florida war, the Mexican war, and the late war of the rebellion, died suddenly in Carlton, Mo., at half-past ten o'clock on Sunday evening, June 1st. He delivered a lecture in Ottumwa on the previous Wednesday, characterized by his customary vivacity and fervor, which were remarkable for a man of seventy, and remained to visit friends and relatives."

The Carrollton Democrat says: At the conclusion of the lecture he was conveyed to the Home of the Sisters of Mercy, a beautiful residence purchased and donated to the Catholic Church by Mrs. Tally, a distant relation of General Shields, and whom he was visiting among others, at that place, at the time. This estimable and charitable lady will be remembered by our citizens for having built, out of her own private means, the Catholic Church in this city.

The intervening time from that until the following Sunday morning was spent by the General with the Sisters, Father Krecke, and other admiring friends. On Sunday morning he breakfasted with the Priest after attending mass. At noon he ate more heartily than in the morning, and after attending vespers in the afternoon, left the pastorate for a walk. His direction was towards the Home of the Sisters of Mercy; and while on the way, as we are informed, passed twice to rest. He was, however, absorbed in all surrounding friends, complaining only of a depression over his right arm, the seat of the terrible wound received at the battle of Cerro Gordo. Accompanied by his nieces, Miss Mary Shields, his walk was continued later in the day, after which they proceeded to the Home, and thus ended the last sabbath and last day of the gallant and good Shields on earth.

It is said that he ate heartily at supper, appeared more cheerful than before, and engaged in a lengthy conversation with his niece. Miss Mary reports that the General spoke much of his wife and children, and in affectionate terms expressed himself as to what he hoped to accomplish for them.

After having written two or three letters, he retired, and Miss Mary returned from the apartment and found the General in bed, but in such a slight way that it did not prevent his pronouncing.

Early in the late war Gen. Shield's friends sought to raise an Irish brigade for him. Chief Justice Daly and others were foremost in bringing him out and organizing the brigade. He came back from California with the understanding that he was to be given the command. Meanwhile Thomas Francis Meagher had been acting as general, and, although he gave General Shields a grand dinner and complimentary speech on disposition to give up the command, Shields was much disappointed, and by no means appeased with a command of a brigade only. Banks that was given him. He gained, however, the credit of winning about the only battle credited to Banks: the Battle of Winchester. He had a pet project of capturing Stonewall Jackson, but complained bitterly that just as his plans were about maturing he was ordered to Washington and to retreat.

"Gen. Shields was five years and inches in height, of compact build, and in his youth had dark hair. His eyes were dark and piercing, and gave him a wild look to strangers. He was very attentive to women, and fond of paying them compliments. He made long visits to friends in New York and throughout the country. He was once dining at the house of a prominent citizen of New York, whose wife, a member of a staid Dutch family, did not relish Gen. Shield's intrudence about his domestic relations. She took occasion to speak outloudly on one occasion propos'ng the health of Gen. Shields and his wife.' Some of his military friends present were quite surprised to learn that he was married, but the good woman carried her point, and in this semi public way took the opportunity to warn some of her usual friends not to lose their hearts to Gen. Shields leaves a wife and family at Carrollton, Mo. The son is nineteen.

"I regard Gen Shield's career as a singular instance of the facility with which a man of original power can leave the difficulties of fortune and rise above them. Coming here an Irish lad, without education, working first as a schoolmaster, finding his way to the Legislature of Illinois, then to Congress, then to the Senate, then a Major-General in Mexico, then a Major-General in the late war, then a Senator in Minnesota, then in California, then in Missouri, and then a Senator in Washington, and then a Major

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

LEINSTER.

Dublin.

The Duke of Leinster has presented to the Mechanics' Institute, Dublin, a collection of 500 valuable books.

An extensive cattle dealer in Liverpool offered for sale on May 29th, in the Dublin market, one hundred head of cattle, imported from Canada. It is thought if this experiment prove a success, it will be only the beginning of a regular trade with the Irish markets in Canadian cattle.

His Grace the Archbishop of Dublin has appointed the Very Rev. Monsignor Dean Meagher, P. P., Rathmines; the Venerable Archdeacon Dunne, P. P., Castleknock; the Venerable Archdeacon Lee, P. P., Bray; the Very Rev. Canon Quinn, P. P., Athy; and the Very Rev. Canon Kennedy, P. P., St. James', to be his Vicars-General. He has also appointed the Very Rev. Canon Keogh, P. P., Ballybrack; the Rev. George Harold, P. P., Wicklow; and the Rev. John O'Rourke, P. P., Maynooth, to be Vicars-Forane in their respective districts.

Wexford.

At an election held at the Market-house, Enniscorthy, to select a medical officer in the vacancy in the dispensary district caused by the death of Dr. Goodman, Dr. Thomas Kelly was appointed. There were two candidates—Dr. Kelly and Dr. Thomas Dwyer.

King's County.

Mansell Anthony Eley, Silverhills, has been appointed to the Commission of the Peace.

Meath.

William Bond, Esq., the receiver in the matter of "Cheshire's Charity," attended recently at the courthouse in Navan for the purpose of distributing the annual allowance to the parties entitled thereto—viz., agricultural laborers whose applications had been approved of by the Lord Chancellor. About fifty presented themselves, and received sums of from six guineas to thirteen guineas. Some of the applicants were considerably disappointed at their applications being refused, the decision being on informality in filling up the necessary printed forms.

Westmeath.

On May 25th, the new cemetery of Tullamore was consecrated by the Right Rev. Dr. Nulty, Bishop of Meath. The cemetery is about six miles from Athlone, and adjoins the church of Tyrrellstown. It has been recently enlarged, and extensive and expensive alterations, through the energy of the worthy parish priest, Rev. P. Mahony, Immediately after the ceremony High Mass was celebrated, the Rev. J. Reilly, Adm., St. Mary's, Athlone; deacon, Rev. J. O'Connor, O. S. A., Athlone; sub-deacon, Rev. J. Geoghegan, C. C., Moate; master of ceremonies, Rev. P. O. Farrell, C. C., Tubercurry. The Rev. Brennan, S. J., ascended the pulpit after the Mass, and delivered a most eloquent and learned sermon, which was listened to throughout with the greatest attention by an exceedingly large and fashionable congregation. The sacred music on the occasion was rendered by a portion of the members of St. Mary's choir, Athlone, conducted by Miss Keatinge, the organist.

Louth.

On May 27th the premises of Mr. McConnon, grocer and merchant, Pale street, Drogheda, were discovered to be on fire. The fire had made considerable progress in one of the cross beams of the premises, but by vigorous exertions the fire was prevented from extending its ravages beyond the premises in which it took out. The store was reduced to a shell of walls.

MUNSTER.

Cork.

The Cork Herald of May 31st says: "Although the weather still continues extremely variable, agricultural prospects have improved. Corn fields have assumed a green appearance, pastures have become more abundant, and the blooms of the meadows bid a great deal behind that of other years. Potatoes, too, have recently made considerable progress, it is, however, pretty certain that the quantity of crops will be unusually restricted this season."

At a meeting of the Cork Farmer's Club, on May 26th, Alderman Kaller drew attention to the penal licensing in the Imperatives of American politicians, and said that judging from their statistics it was apparent Irish farmers could not compete with the strangers. He had heard a landlord say that the Irish peasant-farmer tenants are to pay their rents. No such thing was said in Irish chiefs' time, in view of the series of bad harvests and of the competition from abroad, that something should be done on the part of the landlords to bide their tenants over their present difficulties.

At the Privy Council meeting on May 29th, the Lord Justices of Ireland decided to revoke from the 1st of June, remain in force until the proclamation of the 10th of September, 1867, the proclamation of the county of Cork under the Peace Preservation Acts. The accepted districts to which the former proclamation is still to remain in force are the rural districts of Cork, the Great Island and nine parishes of Macroullane, and Monkstown.

The most remarkable and successful mission ever conducted in the South of Ireland has just terminated in St. Finbarr's church, Cork. Some years had almost since this large Catholic district had been favored with a visit from any of those congregations of zealous missionaries, who have of late so effectually co-operated with the secular clergy throughout Ireland in the enjoyment of vice, the reclamation of sinners and the establishment of religious confraternities in the various churches, for the consolidating together of the faithful in the exercise of piety. The mission was opened on Sunday, May 5th, by the members of the Passionist Order, and the immense number of 15,000 communicants were admitted to the Holy Eucharist during the last twelve days of the mission. For the last ten days the church, accommodation of 4,000 people was found insufficient, and a distinct service and sermon had to be given to an additional and more numerous congregation in a field behind the church. In this place an ample platform was raised, and an altar erected thereon for the closing exercises of the mission. This took place on Sunday evening, May 26th. At seven o'clock two of the Fathers—one within the church, the other outside—commenced the closing service and address. Between the two assemblages there were fully ten thousand persons present—all engaged heart and soul in this joyful and most impressive ceremony.

Kerry.

Daniel Crotch Collins, Glenflesk Castle, Killarney, Jr., Esq., has been appointed to the Commission of the Peace.

Father Bruno, one of the members of the Order of St. Francis, in Killarney, died on May 27th, after short three weeks illness. Mr. Little, Bodlin, R.M., adjourned the Petty sessions out of respect to the memory of Father Bruno, and the deceased clergyman's life was also spoken of in very feeling terms by Mr. F. H. Downing, solicitor.

Limerick.

The excitement of the recent election precluded the possibility of any suitable preparations being made for the celebration of the Moore centenary in Limerick, and the result was that there was not a single session of any sort.

Clare.

The Moore centenary was celebrated in the Town Hall, Ennis, which was tastefully decorated. The chair was taken by Colonel The Otiseman Mahon, who briefly introduced Mr. Stephen J. Meany, by whom a lecture was delivered on the Life and Works of Moore. Following the lecture were some vocal selections from the melodies, and the reading of a Centennial Ode, written for the occasion by Mr. Thomas B. Cleary.

Tipperary.

Thomas Osborn Springfield, The Glebe, New Inn, Cahir, Esq., has been appointed to the Commission of the Peace.

The vacant chair of modern languages at Cork College has been filled by a Tipperary man, Mr. Owen O'Hyen.

Waterford.

The salmon supply for the present year at Waterford appears to have been the smallest for many years. The fish, as a rule, are not so large as usual.

ULSTER

Antrim.

Preparations are already in progress in the Protestant districts of the North for celebrating the July anniversary. It has been decided that the Belfast Orangemen will meet by themselves at Lisgoole. The first meeting of the North will be at Antrim, on an interview between the Mayor of Belfast and a number of local clergymen it has been arranged that during the summer months Sunday evening processions should proceed through the streets with banners furled and without music playing until the municipal boundary had been reached. The Belfast Irish evinced his determination to protect the excursionists.

Notices have been posted in the Lesphrike Mill, Belfast, to the effect that after the 5th of June there would be a reduction of a penny to the shilling in the wages of all the workers, and also that one portion of the mill would be stopped until further notice from that date, and that the remaining portion would be put on full time at the reduced rate of wages. The mill has been working short time for some months past, and the depression of trade has compelled the proprietors to take the step they have, which will throw a very large number of people out of employment.

On May 29th, a large number of American immigrants arrived in Belfast by the steamer Magnetic from Liverpool. Some of them had been so long as forty years in the United States, and some for twenty years. The immigrants proceeded by early trains to the country, where some of them are going to spend a few of the summer months.

Armagh.

On May 24th, a lad named Thomas Grimmin, aged eleven years, was unfortunately killed in Thomas street, Portadown, by a kick from a stallion, the property of the Duke of Manchester. An inquest was subsequently held on the body before Sr. D. Atkinson, coroner, and a jury. From the evidence of a number of witnesses, it appeared that the deceased was standing beside his father's house when the stallion, in charge of a groom, was being led out of Mrs. Green's yard. A man named Trotter, who was assisting the groom, struck the stallion to induce it to go on, when it flung out with one of the hind feet and struck the deceased on the chest, and, in knocking him down with great violence, he died almost immediately.

On the night of May 23d, a stack of hay belonging to Jacob Hemston, Ballynamony, near Lurgan, and valued at the sum of £30, was set fire to and entirely consumed. No cause can be assigned for the malicious act.

Down.

Mark McCleery, of Ballyeaster, in the county of Down, farmer, was on the 12th of May, adjudged bankrupt.

The Newtownards Literary Society entertained their friends to a most enjoyable evening in honor of the Moore Centenary, on the occasion, which was given in the Downs Hunt Arms Hotel, we attended by many of the most respectable and influential ladies and gentlemen in the neighborhood. Hundreds of most delicious on the life and genius of Moore, old Irish airs on the piano, by an amateur lady, and the recitations selections from the "Melodies," by Mr. Farr, who came from Belfast, to do honor to the occasion; and readings from the works of Moore. At half past seven the chair was taken by Edward Gardiner, Esq., J.P., Chairman of Downpatrick Town Commissioners.

The Irish Times of May 31st, says of the crops of the North—"Owing to the coldness of the season and the wet weather, vegetation has been greatly retarded, and the crops are in a very backward state. Oats, which are extensively grown in this district, are very late; but the late rain has greatly improved the appearance of the crops. The hay fields are not at all promising, the crops being late, the blade not being so large as it usually is at the 1st of May. Grazing very bare in general, and it is for this reason the past two weeks that the fields even gained a natural color. Potatoes are in a very backward state, and the yield is not expected to be equal to former years. All crops require genial heat, and should this soon come, there might be a prospect of at least an average produce."

Cavan.

The Most Rev. Dr. Conaty, Bishop of Kilmore, has made the following circular to his diocese:—Rev. Thos. Brady, Glengarriff, to be C.C. of Lavey, vice Rev. J. Cullen, to be C.C. of Drumlease, county Sligo. Rev. Edward Lynch, Fivemiletown, to be P.P. of Lavey. Rev. Patrick Daley, C.C., Killan, to be curate in Kildallan vice Rev. Louis Carroll, transferred to the curacy of Killan.

CONNAUGHT.

Mayo.

His Grace the Most Rev. Dr. McHale arrived at Castlebar on the 29th May, accompanied by the Very Rev. Thomas Heany, V.G., Killala, and the Rev. Michael Heany, C.C. His Grace was the guest of the Very Rev. Mr. Heany, P.P., V.F.; and, all will rejoice to hear, is in the enjoyment of excellent health. The Mayo is unfirmed nearly a thousand persons. Before and after administering the sacraments, the beloved Prelate addressed the congregation, his discourses being directed towards the candidates. The church was thronged during the day. Immediately on leaving the Archbishop inspected the new church, and was greatly pleased with the progress made. He gave his blessing to the workmen, and congratulated the esteemed pastor, the Rev. Father Magee, on the advanced state of the building.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

JOHN J. TOBIN,
NOTARY PUBLIC,
.....AND.....
COMMISSIONER OF DEEDS
208 Montgomery Street,
San Francisco. jan22-M

JOHN M. BURNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
623 MONTGOMERY STREET,
Bet. Washington & Merchant...San Francisco

M. COONEY
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
Office—Room No. 7, Court Block,
606 Clay & 526 Merchant sts.

J. F. SULLIVAN,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
607 Kearny Street,
Bet. Sacramento & Commercial...San Francisco
jy20

WILLIAM A. PLUNKETT,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
530 California Street,
ROOMS 16 and 17.)
Bet. Kearny and Montgomery...San Francisco
n29-1y

UNDERTAKERS.

MASSEY & YUNG,
UNDERTAKERS
PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKERS. Barstow's Burial Caskets always on hand, and Agents for Fisk's Metallic Burial Cases.
Everything necessary for funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.
1 Office—653 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb

THAI FLANAGAN. H. J. GALLAGHER.
FLANAGAN & CALLACHER,
UNDERTAKERS,
(Late of No. 604 Market Street,)
HAVE REMOVED TO
No. 20 FIFTH STREET, Opposite the Lincoln School.
EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR FUNERALS kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.
jan5

New Advertisements.

H. T. HELMBOLD'S
COMPOUND
FLUID EXTRACT
BUCHU
PHARMACEUTICAL A SPECIFIC REMEDY FOR ALL DISEASES
OF THE BLADDER & KIDNEYS
DOES IN EVERY CASE.
"Helmbold's Buchu"
HELMBOLD'S
BUCHU
IS UNEQUALED
By any remedy known. It is prescribed by the most eminent physicians all over the world, in RHEUMATISM,
SPERMATORRHŒA,
NEURALGIA, NERVOUSNESS,
DYSPEPSIA, INDIGESTION, CONSTIPATION,
ACHES AND PAINS,
GENERAL DEBILITY,
KIDNEY DISEASES,
LIVER COMPLAINT,
NERVOUS DEBILITY,
EPILEPSY,
HEAD TROUBLES,
PARALYSIS,
GENERAL ILL-HEALTH,
SPINAL DISEASES,
SCIATICA, DEAFNESS, DECLINE,
LUMBAGO,
CATARRH,
NERVOUS COMPLTS,
FEMALE COMPLT'S, etc.
Headache, Pain in the Shoulders, Cough, Dizziness, Sour Stomach, Eruptions, Bad Taste in the Mouth, Palpitation of the Heart, Pain in the region of the Kidneys, and a thousand other painful symptoms, are the offsprings of Dyspepsia.
HELMBOLD'S
BUCHU
Invigorates the Stomach,
And stimulates the torpid Liver, Bowels, and Kidneys to healthy action, effecting a thorough cure of all impurities, and imparting new life and vigor to the whole system.
"A single trial will be quite sufficient to convince the most hesitating of its valuable remedial qualities."
PRICE $1 PER BOTTLE,
Or Six Bottles for $5.
Delivered to any address free from observation.
"Patients" may consult by letter, receiving the same attention as by calling, by answering the following questions:
1. Give your name and post office address, county and State, and your nearest express office?
2. Your age and sex?
3. Occupation?
4. Married or single?
5. Height, weight, now and in health?
6. How long have you been sick?
7. Your complexion, color of hair, and eyes?
8. Have you a complete or cured cure?
9. Relate without reservation all you know about your case. Enclose one dollar as consultation fee. Your letter will then receive our attention, and we will give you a full history of your disease and our candid opinion concerning a cure.
Competent Physicians also to correspondence. All letters should be addressed to Dispensary, 1217 Filbert Street, Philadelphia, Pa.
H. T. HELMBOLD,
Druggist and Chemist,
Philadelphia, Pa.
SOLD EVERYWHERE.

BUSINESS CARDS.

O'BRIEN & WARD'S
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE,
610 CLAY STREET,
Opposite Clay Street Bank, and a few doors above Montgomery street.
HAS ALWAYS ON HAND FIRST-class Hotel Help, Farm Hands, Teamsters, Dairymen, Shepherds, Sawmill Hands, Mechanics, Gardeners, Cooks, and nurses' corps for private families and ranches, without any charge to employers. n26-1m

MURPHY, GRANT & CO.,
IMPORTERS OF DRY GOODS,
And Sole Agents for the Pacific Coast
OF THE
Veuve Zavier Jouvin Kid Gloves.
Bush and Sansome Sts., San Francisco.
n1y2

PACIFIC GLASS STAINING,
CUTTING,
EMBOSSING and
DESIGNING WORKS.
J. MALLON, Proprietor.
No. 19 FREMONT STREET, Near Market
Bending of Glass a specialty.

JOHN MOLLOY,
Produce Commission Merchant,
.....AND DEALER IN.....
Groceries and Provisions,
54 Clay Street,
Bet. Drum and East.....San Francisco.

J. CALLAGHAN
Real Estate and Insurance Agent
AND
Notary Public for Alameda Co.
Houses Rented, Rents Collected, Loans Negotiated. Investments made for Parties at a Distance on reasonable terms.
OFFICE 474 NINTH ST.,
Oakland, Alameda Co., Cal.
n4-78

J. R. KELLY & CO.,
Northwest cor. Pine and Front
Where they offer for sale on the Largest Stock of
PAINTS, OILS, GLASS,
ETC., ETC., ON THE PACIFIC COAST,
AT THE LOWEST MARKET RATES
101, 103 and 105 FRONT STREET,
n26 110 PINE STREET.

MISCELLANEOUS.

GIANT CEMENT!
A MOST EXTRAORDINARY AND FINE-tested cement, for cementing furniture, Crockery, Glassware, Marble, Meerschaum, Ivory, Horn, etc.; also for splicing Leather Belting and patching books and sheets. The Cement possesses extraordinary merit, and is in every way a reliable article. Every one is its own testimonial. Also, MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT, for mending Rubber Boots, Shoes, Belting, Coats and Hose without stitching. Easily applied, forms a durable, perfectly water-proof. Both Cements are put up in tin cans only, with full directions. Take no other. The GIANT CEMENT and MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT are sold by Druggists and Dealers throughout the country. Counter Cards and Circulars furnished gratis by the Manufacturing Co., 417 Washington street, San Francisco.
n26 MINERS' RUBBER CEMENT.

EDUCATIONAL.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
SAN JOSE, CALIFORNIA.
THIS INSTITUTION, FOR YOUNG ladies, is incorporated according to the laws of the State and empowered to confer collegiate honors.
The buildings are large, commodious, and furnished with all modern improvements for the health and comfort of the young. Extensive playgrounds afford every facility for active exercise in the open air; and the pupils are required to avail themselves of these advantages, when the weather permits.
TERMS:
Entrance Fee, to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....62 50
Washing, per quarter.....10 00
Physicians' fees, (unless it may be preferred to pay each time she is called on) per quarter.....2 50
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting, form extra charges, but there is no extra charge for the French, Spanish or German languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.
Payments are required to be made half a session in advance.
For further particulars apply to the SUPERIORESS.
n27-tf

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND.....CALIFORNIA
Conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary
THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY situated in Tween Webster street and Lake Merritt, commanding an extensive prospect of the lake. The building, recently erected, is supplied with all the modern improvements, no expense having been spared to provide for the comfort of the inmates.
The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.
TERMS:
(payable half yearly in advance):
Board and Tuition (French and Spanish included).....$250 00
Washing.....50 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution).....10 00
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.
For further particulars apply to
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

MT. ST. MARY'S ACADEMY
CONDUCTED BY THE
Sisters of St. Dominic,
RENO, NEVADA.
For particulars address
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA,.....CALIFORNIA
THE TWENTY-SEVENTH ANNUAL session will commence on Monday, August 12th.
This institution was founded in 1851, and in the same incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies ten large buildings, with a capacity for study, dormitory, recreation, gymnasium, refreshing, food, etc. It possesses a most complete Philosophical Apparatus, and valuable collections of Mineralogy and Geology. It has also, principal schools of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Photography and Commercial Business.
For the latter a new building 180x40 has just been finished, and furnished with all the requisites.
Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial course.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance.)
Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once.$ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches Washing and Mending of Linen, School Stationery, medical attendance, and Medicines, baths, etc., per session of ten months.....$50 00
For further particulars apply to the President of Santa Clara College, or to St. Ignatius College, 821 Market street, San Francisco.
REV. A. BRUENIGES, S. J., n27 President.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,
LOS ANGELES, CAL.
CHARTERED IN 1865, AND CONFIRMED by the action of the Ecclesiastical Council of the Mission. Terms for scholarship, $250 per annum. Further particulars address
REV. E. BERTHA, C. M., President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF NOTRE DAME.
THIS INSTITUTION, FOUNDED IN 1851, and incorporated in 1859 by Act of the Legislature of the State of California, and empowered to confer Collegiate Honors, is situated on Broadway, opposite the Park, and Fifth street.
A large addition has recently been erected for the accommodation of boarding pupils.
The course of instruction embraces all the branches necessary to the acquisition of a solid and refined education.
Parents, in confiding their children to the care of the Sisters, may feel perfectly satisfied that every attention will be paid to their moral, mental and moral culture, while the system of government is that of the kindest character, combining maternal solicitude, to insure the real progress and happiness of pupils.
The Thirteenth Annual Session will commence July 20, 1868.
TERMS:
(Per quarter session, (payable in advance.)
Board, tuition, washing, and use of bedding.....$65 00
Music, with use of instrument.....15 00
Vocal Music.....5 00
Drawing and Painting.....5 00
Use of Piano, per session.....10 00
SELECT DAY SCHOOL.
Terms (per month (in advance.)
Rhetoric Classes.....$5 00
Grammar Classes.....4 00
Elementary Classes.....3 00
Primary Classes.....2 00
These pupils residing at a distance from the College, and desiring a hot luncheon, will be provided therewith at the Refectory, for 75 cts. Bed and other particulars apply to the Lady Superior.
Music, Drawing, Painting, Languages and all kinds of Plain and Fancy Needlework form extra charges. The Library is well conducted by the Sisters, is a parochial school, in which the children receive a good solid English education, free of charge.
n26-1y

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
Conducted by the Christian Bros.
Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Literary, Scientific or Commercial.
THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.
The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a good practical education in as short a time as possible.
While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in the College, our own language receives special attention. The daily exercises of the students in Grammar, Composition and Rhetoric are publicly discussed and corrected in the classroom.
TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.
(Payable half yearly in advance.)
Board, Tuition and Washing.....$250 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines.....10 00
Use of a Bed.....10 00
Day Students.....50 00
Music and Drawing form extra charges.
BRO. P. JUSTIN, President.

Academy of Our Lady of Angels,
FORMERLY ST. MARY'S ACADEMY
Swiss Chas. Santa Clara Co., Cal.
THIS INSTITUTION COMMENCED THE 10th of Notre Dame, has for its object the training of young ladies of good antecedents, imparting at the same time a solid English education.
Domestic economy in the various branches is practically taught.
TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance.)
Entrance Fee (paid but once).....$ 10 00
Board and Tuition, per session of ten months.....150 00
Washing.....50 00
Use of Bed and Bedding.....10 00
Music and Drawing form extra charges but no extra charge for the French, Spanish or German languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.
Payments are required to be made half a session in advance.
For further particulars apply to the
SUPERIORESS.

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND.....CALIFORNIA
Conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary
THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY situated in tween Webster street and Lake Merritt, commanding an extensive prospect of the lake. The building, recently erected, is supplied with all the modern improvements, no expense having been spared to provide for the comfort of the inmates.
The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.
TERMS:
(payable half yearly in advance):
Board and tuition (French and Spanish included).....$250 00
Washing.....50 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution).....10 00
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.
For further particulars apply to
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
BENICIA.....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and situated in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia.
The scholastic year comprises ten months, opens on the 16th of August, and ends about the middle of June.
TERMS:
(Payable half yearly.)
Board and Tuition.....$225 00
Entrance Fee.....10 00
Washing.....45 00
Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged $50 00.
Drawing, Painting and Music forms extra charges.
The Expenses on packages sent to pupils must be prepaid.
Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the
SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. VINCENT'S SCHOOL.
THIS INSTITUTION IS SITUATED IN Santa Barbara, a short distance from the sea, in the most delightful and healthy part of the city. The grounds are extensive and the building is large and commodious.
The course of instruction embraces the usual branches of a thorough English education. Spanish is also taught.
TERMS:
(Invariably half yearly in advance).
Board, tuition, bed, bedding, washing.....$250 00
Piano, and use of instrument, per month.....$6 00
Guitar, per month, $3.....6 25
Use of Harp, per month.....32 50
Needlework, etc.
The scholastic year of ten months and a half commences August 16th, and terminates on the last Thursday in June.
For further particulars apply to
SISTERS OF CHARITY,
jy30 Santa Barbara, Cal.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,
RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.
THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, under the charge of the Sisters of Charity, is beautifully situated on an eminence in the pleasant and accessible town of Rio Vista. The business is remarkably healthy. The building new, and well furnished and all that can be desired for health and comfort. The pleasure grounds are extensive and well adapted to the wants of the pupils. The course of instruction includes all the useful branches of a solid and refined education.
The scholastic year consists of ten sessions of five months each, the first to commence on the second Monday in July, 1868.
Terms per Session, Payable in Advance
BOARDING PUPILS.
Board and Tuition, with use of bedding.....$117 00
Washing.....12 00
Wood (if required).....10 00
Singing in Class, Drawing, French, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, not free extra charge.
DAY ACADEMY.
Terms per month, in advance.
Senior Class.....$7 00
Intermediate Class.....5 00
Primary Class.....3 00
Music, Drawing, Painting, French, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, not free extra charge.
Music Teacher, with use of instrument.....8 00
Use of Piano, per hour.....1 00
No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.
N. B.—The above establishment is also the residence of the Ordinary.
For Prospectus and further particulars apply to the Superiores.
n1y4

ACADEMY OF ST. AGNES
STOCKTON, CAL.
FOR YOUNG LADIES
Directed by the Dominican Sisters
SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE.
A Select Boarding and Day School.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers,
COR. K AND TWELFTH STS., SACRAMENTO.
STUDENTS ARE RECEIVED AT ANY TIME during the year, and particular attention is given to such Commercial and Mechanical studies as prepare young men for business in the shortest possible time. For particulars, apply to BRO. ELEUTHERIUS,
n4tf Principal.

ST. JOHN'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
SAN JUAN.....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION IS UNDER THE direction of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.
The scholastic year commences August 16 and terminates June 30.
Boarders are received at any time through the year.
For prospectus and further particulars apply to
SISTER CARMEN ARGELLA, n26 Superiorss.

EDUCATIONAL.

Accomplishment
Sweetness expressed
At the low rates charged by Rising Sun Publishing House
Proprietors of Steel Pens
Are the universal delight of all who have Tried them and therefore, where the following
Are mentioned, let Engineers
Use Scores of scribes and secure workmen.
Perpetuities of delivery in a pronounced
Characteristic manner, and
Are the universal delight of all who have Tried them.
Rising Sun Publishing House
Manufactured
Steel Pens
Clay Cup and Remington Streets,
San Francisco.

CATHOLIC COLONIZATION.

Mass Meeting in Its Favor at the Cooper Institute, New York.

Addresses by Bishop Ireland, Bishop Spalding and the Hon. John Kelly Subscriptions Received.

A very largely attended mass meeting in favor of the proposed plans for Irish Catholic colonization in the West was held in the grand hall of the Cooper Institute on the evening of Wednesday, June 8th. Among the prominent gentlemen present on the occasion were Bishop Spalding of Peoria, Illinois, Bishop Ireland of St. Paul, Minn., Bishop Moore of St. Augustine, Florida, Rev. Dr. Middleton, Rev. Dr. Ducey, Rev. Dr. John Laskin, Rev. John M. Kirby of Brooklyn, Rev. Thomas J. Ducey, Rev. Patrick Keagher, Rev. P. F. O'Hare of Brooklyn, Rev. Dr. Woods, Rev. Daniel J. Sheehy, Judge John H. Brady, Hon. John Kelly, Eugene Kelly, Thomas O'Connor, Henry L. Hugard, Jeremiah Devlin, Nathaniel Jarvis, Jr., L. V. Gallagher, Henry Amy, G. H. Hoppenstedt, et alii. Addresses were made by Bishops Spalding and Ireland and John Kelly, after which subscriptions were called for. The total amount collected from the meeting was about $12,000, making the total at present $32,000 toward the necessary $100,000.

Long before the opening of the doors leading to the great hall of the Cooper Institute the spacious hall was thronged with men and women eager to secure seats. A great rush was made when the doors were opened, and the hall was rapidly filled. Members of the Young Men's Catholic Lyceum acted as ushers. As the gentlemen already mentioned on the stage they were received with applause by the assembly. Mr. Ducey arose and stated that the Hon. Judge Brady, at the request of the Catholic laity and clergy and members of the clergy, and agreeable to the wishes of the Right Rev. Bishop Ireland, had consented to act as chairman of the meeting, and which was further applauded by the audience for him.

JUDGE BRADY'S ADDRESS.

MOST REVEREND PRELATES, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN—The business which is to-night assembled on an occasion in the pleasant and accessible town of Rio Vista. The business is remarkably healthy. The building new, and well furnished and all that can be desired for health and comfort. The pleasure grounds are extensive and well adapted to the wants of the pupils. The course of instruction includes all the useful branches of a solid and refined education.

The scholastic year consists of ten sessions of five months each, the first to commence on the second Monday in July, 1868.

Terms per Session, Payable in Advance

BOARDING PUPILS.

Board and Tuition, with use of bedding	$117 00
Instrumental Music	15 00
Vocal Music	5 00
Washing	12 00
Wood (if required)	10 00
Singing in Class, Drawing, French, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, not free extra charge.

DAY ACADEMY.

Terms per month, in advance

Senior Class	$7 00
Intermediate Class	5 00
Primary Class	3 00
Music Teacher, with use of instrument	8 00
Use of Piano, per hour	1 00

No extra charge for Tapestry, Embroidery, Plain and Ornamental Needlework, nor for the Spanish language.

N. B.—The above establishment is also the residence of the Ordinary.

For Prospectus and further particulars apply to the Superiores.

n1y4

ACADEMY OF ST. AGNES
STOCKTON, CAL.
FOR YOUNG LADIES
Directed by the Dominican Sisters

SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE.
A Select Boarding and Day School.
Conducted by the Christian Brothers,
COR. K AND TWELFTH STS., SACRAMENTO.
STUDENTS ARE RECEIVED AT ANY TIME during the year, and particular attention is given to such Commercial and Mechanical studies as prepare young men for business in the shortest possible time. For particulars, apply to
BRO. ELEUTHERIUS,
n4tf Principal.

ST. JOHN'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES,
SAN JUAN.....CALIFORNIA
THIS INSTITUTION IS UNDER THE direction of the Sisters of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.
The scholastic year commences August 16 and terminates June 30.
Boarders are received at any time through the year.
For prospectus and further particulars apply to
SISTER CARMEN ARGELLA,
n26 Superiorss.

ST. SUSAN'S ACADEMY,
SACRAMENTO, CAL.
THIS INSTITUTION, FOR YOUNG ladies, is incorporated according to the laws of the State and empowered to confer collegiate honors.
The buildings are large, commodious, and furnished with all modern improvements for the health and comfort of the young. Extensive playgrounds afford every facility for active exercise in the open air; and the pupils are required to avail themselves of these advantages, when the weather permits.
TERMS:
Entrance Fee, to be paid but once.....$10 00
Board and Tuition, per quarter.....62 50
Washing, per quarter.....10 00
Physicians' fees, (unless it may be preferred to pay each time she is called on) per quarter.....2 50
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges, but there is no extra charge for the French, Spanish or German languages, nor for Plain Sewing and Fancy Needlework.
Payments are required to be made half a session in advance.
For further particulars apply to the SUPERIORESS.
n27-tf

Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart,
OAKLAND.....CALIFORNIA
Conducted by the Sisters of the Holy Names of Jesus and Mary
THIS INSTITUTION IS PLEASANTLY situated in tween Webster street and Lake Merritt, commanding an extensive prospect of the lake. The building, recently erected, is supplied with all the modern improvements, no expense having been spared to provide for the comfort of the inmates.
The course of study embraces the various branches of a solid, useful and ornamental education.
TERMS:
(payable half yearly in advance):
Board and tuition (French and Spanish included).....$250 00
Washing.....50 00
Bed and bedding, without sheets (if supplied by the Institution).....10 00
Piano, Harp, Guitar, Vocal Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.
For further particulars apply to
MOTHER SUPERIORESS.

MT. ST. MARY'S ACADEMY
CONDUCTED BY THE
Sisters of St. Dominic,
RENO, NEVADA.
For particulars address
MOTHER SUPERIOR.

BELLS, ETC.

BLYMYER
Church School and Fire Alarm
BELLS.
THESE BELLS ARE FINE TONED, can be heard as far as Copper and Tin Bells can be heard, and are sold for less than one-half of the money.
A FULL LINE ALWAYS ON HAND.
Catalogues with testimonials sent on application to
LINFORTH, RICE & CO.,
S. W. cor. Market and Fremont Streets, S. F. my16

MENEELY'S BELLS.
WEST TROY, NEW YORK.
Established in 1826.
CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND FIRE ALARM BELLS, of superior quality, warranted satisfactory. For prices and catalogue, apply to MENEELY & COMPANY,
West Troy, New York.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY.
Superior Bells of Copper and Tin, mounted with Rotary Hangings, for Churches, Academies, Fire Alarms, Farms, Plantations, etc. Price-List sent free.
HENRY McSHANE & CO.,
n4y1 Baltimore, Md.

INSURANCE.

FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE.
UNION
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
THE CALIFORNIA LLOYDS,
ESTABLISHED IN 1861.
Nos. 416 and 418 California Street.
CASH CAPITAL.....$750,000 GOLD.
ASSETS EXCEED.....$1,087,000 COIN
FAIR RATES,
PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF LOSSES,
SOLID SECURITY.
DIRECTORS:
SAN FRANCISCO.
J Mora Moss, Nicholas Luning,
B S Floyd, John Parrott,
Jos Seligman, James Moffit,
N G Ellis, J Baum,
M J O'Connor, M H Sweeny,
J Sullivan, Joseph Brandenstein,
Henry Mayer, Gustave Touchard,
Daniel Gizelin, Lewis Leon,
Antoine Borel, Geo C Hickox,
Frederick Kohler, J H Baird,
Joseph Seller, Charles Baum,
Gustave J Rec, W M Hoag,
I Lawrence Pool, William Scholle,
A Weill, John Conly,
N R Stone, J O Eldridge,
Jas Moran M Conway, A B Spreckels.
SACRAMENTO—Edward Calendar, L. A Booth.
HANFORDVILLE—L. Cunningham.
NEW YORK—J. G. Kittle, Benj. Brewster, GUSTAVE TOUCHARD.
C. H. DARLINGTON, Vice-President.
GEO. T. BOHEN, Secretary.
GEO. T. BOHEN, Surveyor.

WINES, LIQUORS, ETC.

Pacific Coast Agency.
GENUINE
J. H. CUTTER WHISKIES.
A. P. ROTALING & CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
n26

E. COMMINS. THOS. M. O'CONNOR.
COMMINS & O'CONNOR,
(Successors to E. Comm

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

The Zulu War—Particulars of the Death of Prince Louis Napoleon.

LONDON, June 21.—Official accounts say: The Prince, with Lieut. Carey, of the 98th Regiment, six men and one friendly Zulu, left camp at Kut Bal Mountain, seven miles beyond Blood River, the last instant, for reconnoissance. The party halted and unsaddled when ten miles from camp. Just as the Prince gave the order to remount a volley was fired from an ambush in the long grass. Lieut. Carey and four of the troopers returned to camp and reported that the Prince and two troopers were missing. At daybreak a cavalry patrol, under General Marshall, left to search for the Prince, and went to Kreel, ten miles further on. The body was discovered among the long grass three hundred yards from Kreel.

The body was borne by General Marshall and officers Drury, Lowe and Stewart of the Seventh Lancers to meet an ambulance by which it was then brought hither with an escort. There was a funeral parade in the afternoon.

Deep sorrow prevails throughout the column. The Prince did not mount after the attack, his horse being restive, but ran about. The corpse will leave with an escort for Pietermaritzburg tomorrow.

Another special from South Africa says: The Prince Imperial had been sent forward by the Quartermaster-General to sketch a site for the next camp. When the volley was fired his staff Zulu was to be seen. The party dispersed and rushed out by under cover. The Zulus were not seen alive again. His horse joined Lieut. Carey empty on the road back to camp.

News of the death of the Prince reached London at a late hour last night. Advices received the morning it was circulated in the lobbies of the House of Commons, when, in reply to inquiries, Colonel Hanley, Secretary of State for War, read the foregoing official telegram.

LONDON, June 23.—The journals, while deeply deploring the Prince's death, regard it as the end of Imperialism in France.

Ex-Empress Eugenie has much improved. She attended Mass this morning in a room overby the late Prince, which was provided with an altar. The Queen will visit her to-morrow.

At the Roman Catholic churches in London prayers were offered for the repose of the Prince's soul.

PARIS, June 23.—Queen Victoria, accompanied by Princess Beatrice and Prince Leopold, visited Ex-Empress Eugenie at Chislehurst to-day. The Queen had an hour's interview with Eugenie.

FRANCE.

The embarrassment of the Bonapartists is increasingly manifest. Paul De Cassagnac is repeatedly called in question for having formed the claim of Prince Victor Bonaparte to the Imperial succession.

PARIS, June 23.—Prince Jerome Bonaparte will publish a manifesto this evening declaring that he is unfaithful to his Ajaccio programme, in which he announced his Republican principles, and adding that he was not a pretender to imperial occupation, while his democrat claims bar the succession of any other pretender.

The Minister of Marine had decided to send three cruisers to the Pacific Ocean to protect French subjects in Chile and Peru.

GERMANY.

The German Parliament has passed the bill creating a constitution for Alsace-Lorraine.

PARIS, June 23.—Official advices received at the Government from Berlin state that the Government would gain the support of the National Liberals. A new proposal has been put forward—that the revision of the tariff be considered temporarily, until the amount to be assigned to the Imperial Treasurer from the Reichsrath, so as not to place the Government in uncontrolled possession of unlimited income.

RUSSIA.

It is stated that one of the London journals, supposed to be the mouthpiece of the Foreign Government, and desire to have a newspaper established in which all ideas of the Nihilist journal, Land and Liberty, can be freely discussed. It is said the Emperor has sanctioned the idea.

In consequence of raids in the Kubleja territory the Chinese officers who are navigating the country with fire and sword, a large Russian expedition will be dispatched against them. As the raiders are likely to receive the support of the Chinese Government, war may supervene.

A correspondent at Berlin reports: There were 1,720 emigrations from Russia during the month of May, occasioning a loss of two million roubles.

SERVIA.

The Russian and Servian Commissioners having been unable to arrange the boundary in the vicinity of Kosiia, the Russian Captain, with 300 men, drove the Servians back to the boundary existing previous to the war; threatening if that army not coming within a league of it. The Russians demanded the town of Zaibar.

AUSTRO-HUNGARY.

The French Ambassador has communicated to the Austrian Foreign Office the steps taken by the Western Powers at Cairo, expressing the hope that Austria would join them.

TURKEY.

At a special Cabinet council, at which the Sultan presided, the Grand Vizier read a telegram from the Khedive of Egypt announcing the Powers demanded his abdication.

The Sultan approves the resolution of the Turkish Ministers advising the Khedive to refer to the Powers to the Sultan, but declared he was inclined to accept the Powers for the abdication of the Khedive.

A dispatch from Jaffna to the Standard states: Pending the result of the meeting of Ambassadors at Constantinople, the Turks have prepared everything for war. Reinforcements of six battalions of infantry and three battalions artillery arrived at Vilo. Large bodies of Bashi-Bazouks are assembling in Albania ready to march into Epirus and Thessaly.

EGYPT.

England and France unite in demanding the abdication of the Khedive. Germany and Austria give the Khedive the alternative of full payment of the floating debt, or their co-operation with England and France. Nothing is known here of the attitude of the Sultan in the matter. The Khedive is in uninterrupted conference with Princes Tewfik and Hakouan.

The British and French Consuls, at their interview with the Khedive, formally demanded his abdication. He asked for a delay of forty-eight hours, in order to communicate with the Porte, before replying. The Cabinet is in council. All the ministers except the Minister of War, favor abdication.

MEXICO

CITY OF MEXICO, June 17—via NEW YORK, June 22.—It is reported that Gen. Negrete has sent in a message to the Chieftain and asked the clemency of the Government.

SOUTH AMERICA.

A telegram from Callao states that the Peruvian frigate Independencia, engaged Von Bennigsen's scheme in the Recistaga for a compromise on the land question, by which, if accepted, the Government would gain the support of the National Liberals. A new proposal has been put forward—that the revision of the tariff be considered temporarily, until the amount to be assigned to the Imperial Treasurer from the Reichsrath, so as not to place the Government in uncontrolled possession of unlimited income.

RUSSIA.

It is stated that one of the London journals, supposed to be the mouthpiece of the Foreign Government, and desire to have a newspaper established in which all ideas of the Nihilist journal, Land and Liberty, can be freely discussed. It is said the Emperor has sanctioned the idea.

In consequence of raids in the Kubleja territory the Chinese officers who are navigating the country with fire and sword, a large Russian expedition will be dispatched against them. As the raiders are likely to receive the support of the Chinese Government, war may supervene.

A correspondent at Berlin reports: There were 1,720 emigrations from Russia during the month of May, occasioning a loss of two million roubles.

SERVIA.

The Russian and Servian Commissioners having been unable to arrange the boundary in the vicinity of Kosiia, the Russian Captain, with 300 men, drove the Servians back to the boundary existing previous to the war; threatening if that army not coming within a league of it. The Russians demanded the town of Zaibar.

AUSTRO-HUNGARY.

The French Ambassador has communicated to the Austrian Foreign Office the steps taken by the Western Powers at Cairo, expressing the hope that Austria would join them.

TURKEY.

At a special Cabinet council, at which the Sultan presided, the Grand Vizier read a telegram from the Khedive of Egypt announcing the Powers demanded his abdication.

The Sultan approves the resolution of the Turkish Ministers advising the Khedive to refer to the Powers to the Sultan, but declared he was inclined to accept the Powers for the abdication of the Khedive.

A dispatch from Jaffna to the Standard states: Pending the result of the meeting of Ambassadors at Constantinople, the Turks have prepared everything for war. Reinforcements of six battalions of infantry and three battalions artillery arrived at Vilo. Large bodies of Bashi-Bazouks are assembling in Albania ready to march into Epirus and Thessaly.

EGYPT.

England and France unite in demanding the abdication of the Khedive. Germany and Austria give the Khedive the alternative of full payment of the floating debt, or their co-operation with England and France. Nothing is known here of the attitude of the Sultan in the matter. The Khedive is in uninterrupted conference with Princes Tewfik and Hakouan.

The British and French Consuls, at their interview with the Khedive, formally demanded his abdication. He asked for a delay of forty-eight hours, in order to communicate with the Porte, before replying. The Cabinet is in council. All the ministers except the Minister of War, favor abdication.

MEXICO

CITY OF MEXICO, June 17—via NEW YORK, June 22.—It is reported that Gen. Negrete has sent in a message to the Chieftain and asked the clemency of the Government.

SOUTH AMERICA.

A telegram from Callao states that the Peruvian frigate Independencia, engaged Von Bennigsen's scheme in the Recistaga for a compromise on the land question, by which, if accepted, the Government would gain the support of the National Liberals. A new proposal has been put forward—that the revision of the tariff be considered temporarily, until the amount to be assigned to the Imperial Treasurer from the Reichsrath, so as not to place the Government in uncontrolled possession of unlimited income.

RUSSIA.

It is stated that one of the London journals, supposed to be the mouthpiece of the Foreign Government, and desire to have a newspaper established in which all ideas of the Nihilist journal, Land and Liberty, can be freely discussed. It is said the Emperor has sanctioned the idea.

THE MIRACLE OF ST. JANUARIUS.

Rome, May 28th.—The city of Naples has a feast that is special to itself, the liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius. Nothing like it occurs in other cities, and according as the liquefaction proceeds well, so many the more do the people augur prosperity and safety during the coming season. In dangers from earthquakes, or when an eruption of Vesuvius threatens the city, the Neapolitans appeal to St. Januarius, pray fervently at his shrine, and have his relics carried in procession through the streets. The liquefaction takes place three times a year—on the eve (the first Sunday in May, on the 19th of September, and on the 16th of December, near the feast of his patronage.

The history of the saint relates that he was exposed to be devoured by lions in the Amphitheatre of Pozzuoli, the immense ruins of which still exist about ten miles from Naples. It was in the year 305, in the persecution of Diocletian. The animals prostrated themselves in presence of the Christian virtue, and refused to touch him, which thing the pagans seeing, many were converted. Orders were then issued that Januarius should be beheaded, and this sentence was carried out at the Solfatara, the crater of an extinct volcano in the immediate vicinity of Pozzuoli. A woman who had been present at the martyrdom collected some of the saint's blood in two small phials; and when peace was given to the Church, and the body of the saint was brought to Naples, some twenty years afterwards, she presented them to the Bishop, St. Severus, in whose hands the blood in them immediately liquefied.

St. Januarius became the patron of the city. From a very early period a church was dedicated to him. The present cathedral, which bears his name, is a fine specimen of architecture. The glory of it, however, is the chapel of St. Januarius, containing his shrine. It is commonly called the Chapel of the Treasure (Cappella del Tesoro). It occupied twenty nine years in its building, and cost half a million of ducats. It was erected in fulfilment of a vow made during the plague which almost desolated Naples in 1527. The splendidly wrought bronze gate enclosing it cost an extra sum of thirty-two thousand ducats, and two workers in metal were occupied on them for forty-five years. It contains seventeen altars, rich in the finest marbles, and numerous pictures from the hands of the best masters, painted on copper and on canvas, and frescoes which adorn the ceiling, all of which render it unique in beauty and magnificence, even in Italy. Amongst the treasures in the sacristy, chiefly presented by sovereigns, are the splendid paraure in emeralds and diamonds, given by Joseph Bonaparte, during his brief reign as King of Naples; the gifts which King Humbert, the latest donor, gave after his recent escape from the knife of the assassin, three silver statuettes of saints, and forty-six silver busts of saints larger than life.

The incidents attendant on the recent liquefaction of the blood of St. Januarius may be briefly told. It took place on Saturday, the 5th of May, and continued for seven days afterwards, as it does on each occasion. By the number of persons assisting at it, and the enthusiasm displayed, it was evident at once that this was an exceedingly popular festival. And, indeed, the demonstration was an extraordinary one. The crowds along the route of procession, as well as in the cathedral and Santa Chiara, where the miracle takes place, were very great, and the city had an aspect such as it has on gala days.

In the procession the forty-six silver busts were borne on men's shoulders, with banners at intervals, each bust being followed by the members of the Order to which the saint represented belonged. Male and female orders were here. A number of confraternities, with their picturesque costumes, followed. A band of music—for the Neapolitans are music-loving—headed the procession, and another band marched in front of the relic, which was carried in a splendid reliquary like a monstrance, such as is used at Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament. In the centre of this, enclosed in a glass case, are the two small phials, containing the dried up, dark, hardened blood. In the rear of the procession walked the Archbishop, accompanied by the Canons of the cathedral, and attended by sixty members of the King's Royal Body Guard in their flashing helmets and rich equipments. Along the line of route, a fast number of militiaymen guarded both sides of the way, and kept an open passage for the procession, prohibiting any vehicle from entering it.

Having reached the church of Santa Chiara, the Archbishop and the Canons entered the sanctuary, and such strangers as were specially honored were admitted to accompany them up to the altar. Amongst these were some some Americans; the Commendatore D. J. Oliver, of San Francisco, his daughter, Miss Minnie Oliver, his niece, Miss Annie Healey; the Very Rev. John Hickey, late Vicar-General of Pittsburgh, Pa., etc., and several of the nobility and notables of Naples. Those crowded round the Bishop, who stood at the centre of the altar—the Archbishop stood at some distance. It may be well to state here that the altar at Santa Chiara differs in one respect from most, if not all, other altars. In the centre, where the tabernacle ought to be, there is a wide arch opening right through the reredos, and thus a number of people behind the altar observe the miracle from that side. Thus it would seem that every facility was given to allow the public to view the miracle.

The Archbishop now recited the prayers from the Pontifical. These preliminary prayers being ended, the reliquary, or ostensorium, if it may be called so, was removed from its base and laid flat on the altar. The Archbishop then exhibited it to every one around him, and they saw clearly that the blood in the phials was not in a state of liquefaction then, but was dark in tint and adhered to the sides of the phials in which it was. The Archbishop and the clergy on the altar then recited in most fervent tones the Apostles' Creed, and the Creed or Symbol of St. Athanasius, followed by the Litany of the Blessed Virgin, and the "Salve Regina," but the prayers most frequently repeated were the Acts of Faith.

One feature in this, and in all similar occasions, is very curious. A number of women of the poorer classes, generally old, and very rarely handsome, who claim to be descendants from the family from which St. Januarius sprang, and consequently relations of his, have a place reserved for them at the Gospel side of the altar. They pray with extraordinary fervor, raising their voices at times to the shrieking pitch, and call upon the Saint to work the miracle. They appeal to God and to the Blessed Mary, and to all the Saints, sometimes through tears. On this day, after the Archbishop in the clergy had intoned a hymn of hour, these "relations" began to utter their prayers in loud, harsh voices, and in imperious tones. The effect was striking. The church had grown dark; at the altar was heard the prayers and responses of the clergy; and, while other voices rose beneath, the loud and harsh and tearful voices of these women, while the vast crowd in the body of the church were silent and awed. About an hour had passed, and then the liquefaction took place. The blood was now detached from the sides of the phials, and although still clotted and thick, it moved about in the phials as they were moved by the Bishop. The prayers were resumed; the liquefaction continued, and at eight o'clock the miracle was complete, the blood was quite liquid, and brilliant in color. Then the Archbishop kissed the reliquary and prayed in thanksgiving. The scene was very solemn. The crowd burst forth in prayers and hymns of thanksgiving. The "relations" were now as loud as before, but there was joy in their voices. The bands began to play jubilant strains. Many of the clergy and the people on the altar were in tears. The Archbishop brought the relic to the American family from San Francisco and to the clergymen from Pittsburg, that they also might kiss it. There was a rush pleased on the altar, and as the light shone through the glass casting in which the phials are fixed, the blood might be seen flowing freely from one end of the phials to the other as the reliquary was moved up and down and reversed. A great number of persons pressed forward to the altar to kiss the relic. The litanies "Te Deum" was chanted, and the voice of the immense multitude in this hymn of praise rolled like thunder through the vast church.—F. A. Considine, to Boston Pilot.

THE CONDEMNED SENTINEL.

A cold, stormy night in the month of March, 1807, Marshal Lefebvre, with twenty-seven thousand French troops, had invested Danzig. The city was garrisoned by seventeen thousand Russian and Prussian soldiers, and these, together with twenty or thirty thousand well-armed citizens, presented nearly double the force which could be brought to the assault. So there was need of the utmost vigilance on the part of the sentinels, for a desperate sortie from the garrison, mile unawares, might prove calamitous.

At midnight Jerome Dubois was placed upon one of the most important posts in the advance line of pickets, it being upon a narrow strip of land raised above the marshy flat, called the Pestnerkopf or Nelrung. For more than an hour he paced his lonesome beat without hearing anything more than the moaning of the wind and the drivings of the rain. At length, however, another sound broke upon his ear. He stopped and listened, and presently he called: "Who's there?"

The only answer was a moaning sound. He called again, and this time he heard something like the cry of a child, and presently soon an object came toward him out from the darkness. With a cautious, cat-like movement he brought his musket to the charge, and ordered the intruder to halt.

"Mercy!" exclaimed a childish voice. "Don't shoot me! I am Natalie. Don't you know me?"

"Heavens!" cried Jerome, elevating the muzzle of his piece. "Is it you, dear child!"

"Yes; and you are good Jerome. Oh, you will come and help mamma! Come, she is dying!"

It was certainly Natalie, a little girl only eight years old, daughter of Lisette Vaillant, a sergeant in Jerome's own regiment, and was in the army in the capacity of nurse.

"Why, how is this, my child?" said Jerome, taking the little one by the arm. "What is it about your mother?"

"O, good Jerome, you can hear her now. Hark!"

The sentinel bent his ear, but could only hear the wind and the rain.

"Mamma is in the dreadful mud," said the child, "and is dying. She is not far away. Oh, I can hear her crying."

By degrees Jerome gathered from Natalie that her father had taken her out with him in the morning, and that in the evening, when the storm came on, her mother came after her. The sergeant had offered to send a man back to the camp with his wife, but she preferred to venture alone, feeling sure that she would meet with no trouble. The way, however, had become dark and uncertain, and she had lost the path, and wandered off to the edge of the morass, where she had sunk into the soft mud.

"Oh, good Jerome," cried the little one, seizing the man's hand, "can't you hear her? She will die if you do not come and help her."

At that moment the sentinel fancied he heard the wail of the unfortunate woman. What should he do! Lisette, the good, the beautiful, tender-hearted Lisette, was in imminent peril, and it was in his power to save her. It was not in his heart to withstand the pleadings of the child. He could go and rescue the nurse, and return to his post without detection. At all events, he could not refuse the childish pleader.

"Give me your hand, Natalie, I'll go with you."

With a cry of joy the child sprang to the soldier's side, and, when she had secured his hand, she hurried him along towards the place where she had left her mother. It seemed a long distance to Jerome, and once he stopped as though he would turn back. He did not fear death, but he feared dishonor.

"Hark!" uttered the child.

The soldier listened, and plainly heard the voice of the suffering woman calling for help. His hesitation no longer. On he hastened through the storm, and found Lisette sunk to her armpits in the soft morass. Fortunately a tuft of long grass had risen within her reach, by which means she had held her head above the fatal mud. It was no easy matter to extricate her from the miry pit, as the workmen had to be very careful that he himself did not lose his footing. At length, however, she was drawn forth, and Jerome led her toward his post.

"Who comes there?" cried a voice from the gloom.

"Heavens! gaspet Jerome, stopping and trembling from head to foot.

"Who comes there?" repeated the voice.

Jerome heard the click of the musket lock, and he knew that another sentinel had been stationed at the post he had left. The relief had come while he had been absent.

"Friends with the countersign!" he answered to the last call of the new sentinel.

He was ordered to advance, and when he had given the countersign, he found himself in the presence of the officer of the guard. In a few hurried words he told his story, and had the officer been alone he might have allowed the matter to rest where it was, but there were other officers present, and when others to give up his musket he obeyed without a murmur, and silently accompanied the officer to the camp, where he was put in irons.

On the following morning Jerome Dubois was brought before a court-martial under charge of having deserted his post. He confessed that he was guilty, and then permission was granted him to tell his own story.

This he did in a few words, but the court could do nothing but pass sentence of death, but the members thereof all signed a petition praying that Jerome Dubois might be pardoned, and this petition was sent to the general of the brigade, and through him to the general of the division by whom it was endorsed, and sent up to the Marshal.

Lefebvre was kind and generous to his soldiers almost to a fault, but he could not overlook so grave an error as that which had been committed by Dubois. The orders given to the sentinel had been very simple, and foremost of every necessity was the order forbidding him to leave his post until properly relieved. To a certain extent the safety of the whole army rested upon the shoulders of each individual sentinel, and especially upon those who, at night, were posted nearest the lines of the enemy.

"I am sorry," said the grey-haired old warrior, as he folded up the petition and handed it back to the officer who presented it. "I am sure the man meant no wrong, and yet a great wrong was done. He knew what he was doing when he left his post, and was detected—he has been tried and condemned. He must suffer."

"Shall we shot him?" asked the officer.

"No, no!" the Marshal cried quickly. "Should I see him and listen to one half his story, I might pardon him, and that must not be done. Let him die that thousands may be saved."

The time fixed for the execution of Dubois was the morning succeeding the day of his trial. The result of the interview with Marshal Lefebvre was made known to him, and he was not at all disappointed. He blamed no one, and was only sorry he had not died upon the battlefield.

"I have tried to be a good soldier," he said to his chaplain. "I feel that I have done no crime that should leave a stain upon my name."

The captain took his hand and assured him that his name should be held in reverence.

Towards evening Pierre Vaillan, with his wife and child, were admitted to see the prisoner. This was a visit which Jerome would gladly have dispensed with, as the feelings were already wrought up to a pitch that almost unmanned him; but he braced himself for the interview, and would have stood it like a hero, had not little Natalie, in the eagerness of her love and gratitude, thrown herself upon his knee and offered to die in his stead. This tipped the brimming cup, and his manly fortitude broke down.

Pierre and Lisette knew not what to say. They wept and they prayed, and they would have a lifelong debt for the noble fellow who had been thus condemned.

Later in the evening came a companion, who, if he lived, would some time return to Jerome's boyhood home. First the condemned thought of his widowed mother, and he sent over a message of love and devotion. Then he thought of a brother and sister. And finally he thought of one—a bright eyed maid—whose vine-clad home stood upon the banks of the Seine—one whom he had loved with a love such as only great hearts can feel.

"Oh, my dear friend!" he cried, bowing his head upon his chained hands, "you need not tell them a falsehood, but, if the thing is possible, let them believe I fell in battle."

His companion promised that he would do all he could, and, if the truth could not be kept back, it should be so faithfully told that the source of Jerome Dubois should not bear dishonor in the minds of those who had loved him in other days.

Morning came, dull and gloomy, with driving sleet and snow, and at an early hour Jerome Dubois was led forth to meet his fate. The place of execution had been fixed upon a few barren spots toward the sea, and thither his division was being marched to witness the fearful punishment. They had gained not more than a little distance when the sound of some strange commotion broke upon the wintry air, and very shortly the aide-de-camp came dashing to the side of the general of the brigade, with the cry:

"A sortie! A sortie! The enemy are upon force. Let this thing be stayed. The Marshal directs that you face about and advance to the relief of the pickets."

In an instant all was changed in that division, and the brigadier-general, who had temporary command, thundered forth his orders for his countermands. There is no use of throwing away words to show that the large cities of the world may be termed national sewers, through which all things are to delegate or delunch the mind of man, say, and even human and high of the human soul, and, may be presented and [illegible]

TRUE COMPANY, 10 Dey street, New York City.

BOOTS AND SHOES.

JOHN SULLIVAN, NORTHEAST COR. of Bush and Kearny streets, Opposite Hale's, makes to order the best French Calf Leather BOOTS at from $6 to $7, Calf Leather Boots, $5; French Calf Oxford Ties, $4; Calf Oxfords, $3.

Boys' and Children's Boots and Shoes made to order.

Persons in the country ordering Boots or Shoes will find a perfect fit guaranteed, and will be allowed a reduction of four per cent. Also, on hand a large stock of Ready Made Boots and Shoes of my own MANUFACTURE ONLY. Boots and Shoes sent C.O.D. to any part of the country.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

E. MAIN, 320 Folsom St., makes to order Boots and Shoes, Ladies' Fine French and American Kid Button and Balmoral Boots, Gentlemen's Fine French Calf Boots, Kip Boots, Calf Boots, Brogans, Pegged and Sewed Boots, Ladies' Fine Calf Boots, Misses' and Children's Boots, Ladies' Fine Calf Shoes, Gentlemen's Fine Calf Shoes, Kip Shoes

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY JULY 10

"Do whatever seems to have, even in ordinary cases, a tendency to the Catholic good. But let it be precisely the principles of order and of the Church, which shall pay all, will be propagandism where impurity and evil in all its forms, is the principle that has to be fought against." Letter of Pius IX.

THE PRESS—ITS USE AND ABUSE—"If such a style of instrument is good and useful, it will be well for us to extend the beneficient and which, the Sacred Scriptures, Holy Fathers, and Church Doctors, have so highly praised, you ought constantly and generously support it." Archbishop Alemany, Sermon.

"Most of the dioceses of prominence possess a Catholic Journal, generally the organ of one or more bishops, other as a close friend periodically visits the episcopal palace, and is entitled to a correspondingly friendly reference. Instead of making scurrilous attacks, we should follow the example of our journals as greatly contributing to the cause of truth. We take pleasure in adhering here to the wishes of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, who speak on this subject: "We cheerfully acknowledge the services the Catholic Press has rendered to religion. We also recommend publishers with which, in most instances, it has been conducted, although yielding to publication, we add without a very large sum for their labors. We exhort the Catholic laity to extend to them their accustomed liberal support, in order that they may be enabled to become more worthy of the great cause they advocate. It is our duty to assist ourselves at this epoch of talking known the brother of our religion, and encouraging the base apprehensions which so generally per vail in regard to the Press." Archbishop Kenrick

To Our Subscribers.

We would be thankful to our subscribers if they would please to examine the dates on their papers or wrappers, as these show at a glance the time to which they have paid up, and should they find any error, to please inform us. All money should be paid direct to this office, as we have no longer any agents authorized to receive it, except in case of first subscriptions, on receipt of which the paper will be forwarded to the address of the subscriber, together with a receipt for the amount. No receipts will be acknowledged unless signed at this office or by our city canvasser, Mr. Higgins.

All letters, whether on business or other matters, should be addressed to Rev. J. P. Harrington, to whom also drafts or Post-office orders should be made payable.

The Condition of Ireland.

On our inside pages will be found the sad details of the wretched situation of the people of that misgoverned country. The clergy, who are better acquainted with the miseries which are being endured, raise their voices and entreat pity and compassion from the relentless landlords, who as yet do not seem, with but few exceptions, to be inclined to make any concession. It is to be feared that if this course is persisted in the people may be driven to desperation. Rent in Ireland has not the same just basis as in other countries. Most of the landlords have no title based on equity. A few generations since the land was ruthlessly and feiolently robbed from its lawful owners, the ancestors of those who are now slaving to make up the rent-roll, and who are denied even the means of subsistence if they continue their drudgery. A crisis is evidently at hand. Who can say what may be its results.

The London Spectator, speaking on this subject and urging the people to keep within the limits of the law, says:

We have some right to claim to be heard by agrarian reformers in Ireland, even by those of the most extreme wing. Through out the discussion on the Land Act the Spectator maintained, to the annoyance of many Liberals and the alarm of its own constituency, who are necessarily conservative above property, that owing to certain historical and economical conditions, the Irish Land Question would never be settled without perpetuity of tenure, the tenant holding his farm as long as he pleased, at rents varying with the prices of produce, like the tithe. We still believe that this system, which prevails over half the world, would greatly enrich the landowners, would increase the saleable value of land by five years purchase, and would make the Irish peasantry one of the most conservative peoples as regards property in the world, almost as conservative as French peasants. Peasant ownership would be better, but as the country will not buy out the landlords and as even Parliament has no right of theft, perpetual tenancy is the practical and would be the successful solution of the difficulties created by the fact that while English law is based on the absolute ownership of the rent-receiver, Irishmen, like Asiatics and Italians, think that the first right in the soil rests with him who makes it produce. They will bear any quit rent, but not eviction. Having consistently preached this doctrine for years to very unwilling English hearers it is from no anti-Irish prejudice, or prejudice in favor of absolute poverty in the soil, that we condemn unreservedly the tone of the recent meeting at Westport, in county Mayo, Connaught, where, unless the reporters are inventing, an anti-rent movement of the most serious character has commenced. The depression in agriculture, so bitterly felt in England and Scotland, has, it appears, extended to Ireland, and the farmers being comparatively poor, they are unable to struggle on, as the cultivators on this side of the Irish Channel are for the present doing. They have less money, and they pay all things considered, higher rents. The landlords, again, being poorer than the similar class in England, and perhaps not equally friendly to tenants so apt to threaten, are not making the reductions and allowances which have been made here. They talk of evictions, and the farmers, as usual in such moments, are ready to save the land, are driven into a sort of frenzy by grief and alarm. We state their case as they state it themselves, and no doubt it is a pitiable case, but it is no excuse whatever for the language and the resolutions in which the farmers of Mayo have permitted themselves to indulge, despite of the determined opposition of the Catholic clergy, which, to do it justice, is always hostile to violence.

A Religious Ceremony at the Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart, Oakland.

On Wednesday, the 23d inst., a most solemn and impressive ceremony took place in the chapel of the Convent of Our Lady of the Sacred Heart. Rev. Father King, pastor of Oakland, conferred the white veil, and religious habit on three young ladies of the order. Among them was Miss May Clyde, a most accomplished young lady graduate of the Convent of the Holy Names, St. Joseph's parish, Tenth street, in this city. Sister Mary Leopold also made her religious profession.

Rev. G. Reggio, S. J., of Santa Clara, delivered a most beautiful and appropriate exhortation, which was listened to with marked interest by all. As the young ladies retired from the chapel to change their secular dress for the novices' habit, the magnificent "Veni, Sponse Christi," was sung by the Sisters. Nothing lovier than this grand quartette, composed, we were told, by Rossini, for the religious profession of one of his relatives in a Roman monastery; it was indeed a rare musical treat for all who had the good fortune to attend.

After the ceremony the guests were allowed to roam through the shady walks of the spacious grounds, which are kept with remarkable taste and good order. The parents and friends of the pupils will be pleased to hear that a large swimming pond on the lake is nearly completed, and will be ready for the use of the pupils at the end of July.

To conclude, we beg to tender our thanks to the good Sisters for their kind reception, and to congratulate the young ladies on their Bona Mater, undoubtedly one of the finest in the land. A. FRIENS.

Russia.

The condition of the colossal Empire of the North is today peculiarly anomalous. Viewed from certain points, its course for the past twenty years has been one of material progress and almost uninterrupted success. The restrictions imposed by the Treaty of Paris, at the termination of the Crimean war, were, many believed, either adroitly evaded or coolly flung aside, so that eventually it became apparent to all men that the lavish expenditure of blood and treasure on the part of the allies, from 54 to 56, was an utter waste of power, so far as its object of confining Russian rule to its former limits was concerned. Checked for the time in its advance towards the Danube, unhindered by the dismantling of Sebastopol, the columns of the Czar soon penetrated the defiles of the Caucasus, and annexed Circassia, Georgia, and the neighboring regions to the Empire. Then stretching east and south from the Caspian, immense tracts of Turkistan were overrun and subdued, and with the fall of the Tartar Khanates, the onward flag of the Russian eagle might be discerned from the northern frontiers of Persia and Afghanistan. England beheld with dismay this rapid advance towards the gates of her Indian dominions, and although recent events have conspired to postpone the fierce and deadly struggle that must eventually take place on Asiatic soil to decide which of the two tyrant empires is the fittest to survive, there is much apprehension felt in London and in Calcutta because of the vast increase of Russian territory, power and influence in central Asia.

Railroads, telegraph lines, and cognate means for developing the resources of the country and making inter-communication between its distant provinces and the capital easy and safe, have been carried out on a most extensive scale; and even now, in the midst of social and financial trouble, a new railroad line is in course of construction, which shall connect the Caspian sea with one of the mercantile centres in northern Persia. Whatever else the Russian may be, he is at least persistent in his purpose and unswerving in his course. If checked at one point, he makes a flank march round it, and marches steadily on towards his objective point by another road. The policy of the empire is evidently an expensive one, but it is also intelligent and consistent. The tactics of Peter the Great are substantially the tactics of Alexander in political matters, and such must probably will be the tactics of Alexander's successors. Whatever changes in detail there have been, or may be, are due to the varying circumstances of different times; but the spirit is the same throughout. Slow, it is, to use every means available within or without, to extend the Empire and increase its power. When the ruling Czar, by an imperial ukase, raised forty millions to the ranks of free Russian subjects, he did a mighty and beneficent deed, though it may be fairly called in question, whether it was a love of liberty or a desire to strengthen the Empire that prompted him to action in the premises. The social and political condition of the people has been ameliorated in many important particulars; but still the grim face remains behind, that the country has no constitution, no clearly-ascertained political rights, no independence of the Imperial court, and no hope that, by ordinary means, the people shall soon be thoroughly liberated. With the local freedom given by their village or communal organization, and with the spread of education in the cities and towns, the spirit of dissatisfaction at their own lot, and of a disaffection to existing institutions has spread widely over the land, and manifested itself in various forms. And not even the glamor of military success, nor the glory of triumphant victory, has been able to lull to rest this troubled spirit.

Pursuing its self-imposed task of crushing the Moslem, Russia, through its agents, roused up Herzegovina, Montenegro and Servia to do battle against the Turks; and just at the moment when the latter appeared victorious, she launched her legions south, and after a protracted struggle succeeded in accomplishing part of her task. The fairest provinces of Turkey were wrested from the Porte, and established as independent States. Russia's triumph was signal, and, for her present purpose, complete. England's interference may be left out of account, because Russian bribery and Russian diplomacy (as we have heretofore noted), rendered it practically impotent as a factor. By conquest, small territory, southeast of the Black Sea, to the Shah, Persia was contirmed in her friendship, and thereby may hang a tale hereafter. Looking to the results of the late war Russian bankers flaunting before the gates of Constantinople, the whole territory north to the Danube occupied by Russian troops, the partial dismemberment of the Ottoman Empire, the acquisition of territory in Armenia and Bessarabia, the agreement to pay a large war indemnity, and the other thousand evidences that Russian soldiers returned to their country as victorious victors we might not unnaturally expect that the Imperial Government should be intensely popular. If the people had gone half with enthusiasm and delight, no one would have been much surprised. But such is the curse of tyranny, whether mild or fierce, whether exercised by an autocrat, like Alexander in Russia, or by a Constitutional lady like the British Parliament, legislating for England, that the people must make some show of protest against it; and when the laws prohibit the free and public expression of opinion, they will adopt the very dangerous one of secret agency and secret illicit action. Even Imperial agents have long been trained in such action. Some of them operated in Servia and Bulgaria with the view of hastening the late war, and it is feared in London that others of them are now engaged in infusing the spirit of the Hindoos against British oppression. As a counter check the central council of the Nihilists receives refuge and pecuniary support in England, and a chain of the agents of that council is stretched across the continent of Europe, and over the Ural mountains to Tobolsk in Siberia.

We can sympathise with the struggles of the Russian people for legitimate liberty, but we cannot approve of the highly criminal means used by the Nihilists in their highest of and attempts to secure it. Private assassination may get rid of one tyrant, but it raises up a hundred others to take his place. It has never yet effected any permanent political good, nor is it in its nature to do so. When the severe repressive measures of the Czar, whereby whole provinces have been handed over to military governors, went into operation, the Nihilists appear to have had down the dagger and taken up the torch. Conflagrations covered the land. That they were the result of concerted and premeditated action is shown by their simultaneous outbreak on the Neva and the Dnieper, the Kherson, Moscow and St. Petersburg, in the forests of Poland, and the wilds of Siberia, and by the fact that for the greater part they have destroyed government buildings, or the property of government officials who had made themselves obnoxious.

Notwithstanding, then, the recent victories of Russian arms, the acquisition of territory, the increase of political power and influence consequent on these diplomatic successes, the condition of the great northern empire is anything but satisfactory. The alopud unum which makes triumph tasteless consists in a specie conspiracy, a reign of terror, an army needing rest and reinforcements, a crippled treasury, and a restless and discontented people.

Agrarian Disturbances in the West of Ireland.

A Brief Description of that Region.

As a cloud no bigger than a man's hand is sometimes the precursor of a storm, so the recent outbreak of the spark on the social and political horizon of the West may prove to be the premonitory symptoms of general revolt against the landlord system in Ireland—a revolt that spares not the centuries has been uprooting families from the soil and spreading poverty and beggary broadcast among the people. At any rate, however, future events may change to shape the controversy, which is now, at last, clearly and fairly begun between the cultivators of the soil and the landlords, and which assumes a broader basis than it has done ever before. It is very evident that the people of Ireland and the Irish in America watch the movement with more than ordinary interest, and that movement, since the Fenian excitement of '66, has affected so much food for speculation as the last great agitation just inaugurated at Westport.

Westport, about ninety miles west of Dublin, and some thirty-five miles northeast from the town of Galway, is in Mayo, right on the borders of railway country, and sixteen miles from Tuam, all in the archdiocese of Archbishop McHale. It is also fifteen miles from Castlebar, the county town of Mayo, a town famous in the annals of Ireland for the fight of the Rares of Castlebar, where 800 Frenchmen under General Humbert, aided by 1,000 half-armed peasants routed 6,000 British troops, and so excited was the panic of the British that they never halted till they reached Tuam, forty miles from the field of battle. They lost the whole of their artillery—fourteen pieces—five stand of colors, and in killed, wounded, and prisoners, eighteen officers, and three hundred and fifty men; but the French calculated the loss of the enemy at six hundred. The fugitives reached Tuam, and

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

LEINSTER.

Dublin.

The first meeting of the Home Rule League since the death of Mr. Parnell was held on June 13th. Mr. Sexton, M.P., presided. Letters were read from Mr. Mitchell Henry, M.P., Mr. Meldon, M. P., and Mr. A. M. Sullivan, M.P., in most of which the present healthy condition of the Home Rule movement was dwelt on with satisfaction. Regret was expressed at the death of Mr. Shaw, declared the title of leader of the Irish Parliamentary party, and said he only accepted the position temporarily until a better man was selected. Resolutions expressing deep sorrow at the loss sustained by the death of Mr. Parnell, urging upon the constituencies the necessity of adopting local bodies for securing the return of Home Rule representatives to Parliament, and congratulating the friends of the movement upon the election of Mr. Shaw, M.P., as leader of the Parliamentary party, were passed unanimously.

The Most Rev. Dr. Woodlock arrived at Kingstown by steamer on June 13th from Rome, where he was consecrated Bishop of Ardagh by His Holiness the Pope in person. The Bishop, who was accompanied by the Rev. Dr. Hackett and met by the Rev. Canon Farrell, is in the enjoyment of good health. He proceeded by the mail train to Westland row, and thence to the Catholic University, where he will spend a few days previous to entering upon the onerous duties of his important See.

The returns made by registrars in Ireland relating to the first quarter of the year 1879 state that 21 of the 32,000 deaths were of persons 100 years old or upwards. The oldest died in Clonakilty, Donaghmore, and the local register says: "This man had reached the advanced age of 110 years. I made special inquiry into his age, and it is even beyond doubt that he was a few years older." Next to this is a man who died in a western district, Corrofin, and the local register says—"In this district I registered a death at the age of 106, which, from inquiries I made, seems to be correct, for being 25 years old in 1798. He has a daughter who is only 17 years of age."

On June 16th the sides of new Carlisle Bridge, Dublin, were thrown open for traffic, and the passage of all vehicles, excepting tramcars, over the old bridge, was stopped. No tram rails have as yet been laid on the new bridge, nor does there appear any intention to do so, or at least for some time, as such single-rail traffic is very dangerous and easy going in one direction only. There is a total absence of the hurry, crush, and occasional "block" which used so frequently occur before, and indeed traffic appears to be conducted more smoothly and satisfactorily than over the old bridge. For pedestrians also there is no accommodation, as the temporary footways, boarded at each side, have been constructed on a level with, but out-side, the roadway, each footway being ten feet wide.

Kildare.

The solemn and interesting ceremony of the profession of a religious took place on June 16th, at the Convent of the Sisters of Mercy, Clane. The young lady who took the vows of the order and received the "black veil" was Miss Theresa Agnes Cullen, the eldest daughter of Mr. Cullen, Walshestown, County Kildare. The Very Rev. Dr. McKinny, P.P., V.G., Tullamore, represented the Most Rev. Dr. Nulty, Bishop of the diocese, officiated, assisted by the Rev. T. Geoghegan, C.C., Clane.

Kildare was queen at Naas on July 14th.

On June 16th, the Month's Memory of the late Very Rev. F. V. Hamilton, O.P., was celebrated in the new Dominican Church, Drogheda, to the complaint and advancement of which all the best energies of his closing years were mainly directed. The beautiful church was crowded by the people, who attended from town and country to testify by their presence the great love and respect they have for the humble Dominican, whose ashes lay beneath the sod in the grounds outside the church. The funeral office commenced at ten o'clock, the chanters being the Very Rev. J. Michael A. Hughes, O.P., and the Very Rev. J. A. O'Dwyer, O.P. After the termination of the office of the Dead, High Mass commenced, the celebrant being the Very Rev. J. Carberry, provincial of the Dominicans for Ireland; deacon, Rev. J. D. Stanley, O.P.; subdeacon, Rev. J. Bagot, O.P.; master of ceremonies, Rev. E. A. Fortunus; master of ceremonies, Rev. E. A. Ryan, O.P., Drogheda. A large body of clergymen, secular and regular, were in attendance.

Longford.

It is suggested at Longford, in influential quarters that county meetings should be held in the purpose of advancing the reduction of fair rents and certain other assessments on the working peasantry of the country.

MUNSTER.

Cork.

The Cork Herald, of June 14th, says of the agricultural prospects—"Vegetation has made very marked progress during the past week. The change is perceptible everywhere, and in the case of all crops. The recent rains came at a period to be of the greatest service to mangles and swedes. We have, however, quite enough moisture for the present, and a greater amount of heat is now anxiously looked forward to. The cereals look healthy. Old complaints of the wire worm, which used to commit such ravages in other years, are nowhere to be heard."

Kerry.

The Kerry Tenants' Defence Association, on June 7th, passed a resolution calling upon all public bodies in Ireland to join them in adopting a petition to Parliament praying that salaries, pensions and superannuations of all workhouse officers in Ireland should be paid in future out of the surplus funds now in the hands of the Irish Church Temporalities Commissioners. Great satisfaction was expressed at the resolution adopted by the clergy of the Tralee Deanery, calling upon the landlords of the county to reduce their rents.

The Roman Catholic priests of Kerry have passed a resolution, in the form of a manifesto, declaring that "in present years the best interests of Kerry farmers since the great famine, and that the tenants will be unable to pay their rents unless the landlords reduce them.

Limerick.

The month's mind for the late Very Rev. E. J. Donnelly, P.P., V.F., Murroe and Boher, was held on June 12th, at the parish church, Murroe. Nothing could better testify the respect and love in which the late worthy priest was held than the large gathering of his parishioners and fellow-priests, who crowded to excess the church which he contributed so much to erect. The office began at 11 o'clock. At the High Mass the celebrant was the Rev. Stephen Donnelly, C.C., Janesstown, Dublin; deacon, Rev. Joseph Donnelly, Doneraile; subdeacon, Rev. Richard Fennelly; master of ceremonies, Rev. Jean Shelly, C.C., Tipperary. About sixty reverend gentlemen were present.

Clare.

Horace Stafford O'Brien, of Cratloe Woods, Cratloe, Esq., has been appointed a Deputy-Lieutenant of the county Clare.

The O'Gorman Mahon, M.P., for Clare, was on June 9th, introduced in the House of Commons by Lord Francis Conyngham, M.P., and was vehemently cheered.

The works in connection with the pier, at Kilbaryatt, for the conveyance of the steam traffic between Limerick and Kilrush, by river, are nearly completed, under the personal supervision of Mr. Mallon, C. E.

Tipperary.

The line from Clonmel to Fethard has been inspected and approved of, and is expected to be opened for traffic shortly. The expansion joints on the Great Southern and Western line at Thurles is expected to be completed by August or September next.

ULSTER

Antrim.

A cargo of 2,000 tons of hypsalcutts, lard, oil, molasses, sugar, butter, cheese, bacon, and jam arrived in Belfast harbor, on June 9th, direct from Antwerp.

There is a probability that a steam tramway will ere long be established between Portrush and the Giant's Causeway. The project was brought recently before a public meeting at Portrush, and a resolution approving of it was adopted unanimously. One-fourth of the required capital was subscribed at the meeting.

The Moore Centenary Committee purpose re-

Distress Amongst the Agricultural Classes in Ireland,

Declarations in Favor of the Reduction of Rents.

The clergy of the deanery of Cashel have published the following declaration:

"We, the Catholic clergy of the the deanery of Cahesrlow, sympathizing with the people in their present dire need, beg to express our entire concurrence in the declaration of our brethren of the deanery, concerning the sad state of the agricultural classes. We prove how miserably prostrate and impoverished is their position in these poor, remote mountainous districts of Ireland, so far as we need only point to the annexed document which has been signed by eighty seven of the leading traders of Cahersiveen, a hope testimony should be heard beyond in a matter of the kind, and who have thus spontaneously put forth their views on learning of intention to take action thereon.

"Most kindly and unselfishly do we implore of those in whose hands are placed the very lives of these poor people to come forward promptly and effectively to their relief, appealing especially to the landlords in the words of the Tralee declaration, "to make such just and reasonable abatements in their rents as will enable them to bear their present unprecedented calamities, heavy taxation, and foreign competition."

The subjoined is the letter referred to in the above declaration. It is addressed to the Very Rev. Precentor Brennan, P. P. and V. F., Cahirciveen.

"VERY REV. AND DEAR SIR—We, the undersigned traders of Cahirciveen, hope to point our views on the present condition of the extreme agricultural district of which Cahirciveen is the centre, in the regret, that it have to state that not since the dreadful twenty years have we witnessed such a disastrous and unprecedented season as the present. Not only have the crops of potatoes, turnips, mangles, and other vegetables been almost totally destroyed, but the hay which shall mainly over-tax us, unless it be counteracted by the generosity of our landlords, to whom we look for aid, and which shall inevitably overtake the cereal crops, which promise very fair, but which, if not housed in good order, will be of little value, and produce so much reduced in value and quantity, as to cause farmers should find themselves in a most pitiable condition.

"Perhaps as a purely agricultural district like this there is no more reliable index of the position of the cultivators of the soil than the condition of business among the tribes of the land. We feel bound to state that the opinions above expressed are fully corroborated, for not in the past thirty years has the trade of this district been so depressed and unsatisfactory than at the present moment. As you are, no doubt, aware, house property does not bring one-third of its former value, many old traders have gone out of business, and those of those that remain have fallen considerably.

"We need not further enlarge upon the sad state of affairs, but we trust, our brethren, therefore, conclude by thanking you for your kind sympathy with us in our ongoing distress, and your anxiety for its mitigation. We beg to submit ourselves, yours faithfully—

Here follow the signatures.

At a conference of the clergy of the diocese of Killaloe, which was held at Broadford, county Clare, on Tuesday, the 10th inst., it was resolved:

"That, considering the great depression in the price of cattle, and of all kinds of agricultural produce, and considering also the prominent and well-known fact of the depression, as well as the widespread pauperism, and even destitute, which has been so long and so prevalent in our diocese, and which, unless counteracted by generous aid from the landlords of Ireland, and especially on those who hold property in our diocese, will inevitably, and in many instances spontaneous, generate a spirit of lawlessness, both in town and country, which we already making a timely effort to allay the growing agitation, and to reduce the existing distress by giving their tenants a substantial abatement of their rents.

At a conference held on Tuesday June 15 in Ennis, the following resolution was unanimously adopted:—"That the clergy of the Catholic parishes of Miltown and Tuamgraney, in the presidency of the Most Rev. Dr. Power, Lord Bishop of Waterford and Lismore, the following declaration be adopted:

"We, the clergy of this deanery of Tuamgraney, desire to express our entire sympathy with the agricultural and trading classes of our country, and we feel bound to state that the great crisis through which they are at present passing.

"We consider that the rigid exaction by landowners of the stipulated rents to which they are legally entitled, and which, under the pressure of some of the causes, which have been peculiarly well organised, every district now representation, who arrived in the Tuamgraney, fight taxation, would be in much more and unpalatable enforcement of legal rights, especially at a time when farmers generally are struggling against the unfavorable seasons and the unfavorable seasons of long-standing.

"We believe that a voluntary reduction of rents on the part of the landowners would be generally fair and right, under existing circumstances, just would confuse greatly the cementing of good will between landlord and tenant, and would be a disastrous blow to the community whose interests are mutually so intertwined, and which is the mainspring of the nation at large, and would inevitably reduced tenant-farmers, who have

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN.

Inquiry into the Causes of Agricultural Depression.

In the House of Commons the Government agreed to the motion of Henry Caplin (Conservative) for the appointment of a Royal Commission to inquire into the causes of agricultural depression, and to fix what they were created, or are remediable, by legislation. The matter caused a debate. All sides were agreed that one great cause of the depression was American competition. Caplin, in his opening speech, said he regarded free trade as a question definitely settled, but he could not shut his eyes to the failure of many of the predictions of the advocates of free trade. He did not propose a remedy now, but only asked for inquiry. He pointed out that the future fate of British agriculture was dependent upon the cost of production in America. If the cost of importation fell below the cost of production at home the ruin of British agriculture was not far distant.

Liberals, such as Beasney, MacDuff and Duff blamed the British land system and game laws for the depression. Their arguments were summed up in a speech by John Bright, who warned landowners that the competition of the United States would go on increasing, and the only way of meeting it was to get rid of the feudal and absolutism legislation of regulating the tenure and transfer of land.

The Irish University Bill Again Condemned.

A large meeting of Home Rulers has unanimously condemned the Irish University bill now before Parliament.

The Irish Catholic Bishops declare the Irish University bill unworthy of acceptance in its present form.

LONDON, July 9.—In the House of Lords the Government Irish University Bill was read a second time. The debate tended to show that the Government may hereafter consent to addition to the Bill tending to satisfy the claims of Irish Catholics in regard to endowments. The Lord Cairns while still opposing direct endowment of denominational institutions, pointed out that the University of London received some thousands yearly for the purpose of rewarding those who pass the examination, which is open to all sects.

BRITISH INDIA.

Cholera Spreading Among Troops on the Burmah Frontier.

A dispatch to the Daily News from Rangoon says: Cholera among British troops at Thayetmyo is spreading.

SOUTHERN AFRICA.

A Cape Town special says: A decisive action is likely to be fought at Umlazi, which the Zulus have strongly entrenched.

A correspondent with general headquarters, says: Cetewayo occupies an impregnable position northeast of Umlazi.

The British forces are disgusted and disheartened with the war.

Inquiry into the Conduct of Lieut. Carey.

The Court of Inquiry convened for the purpose of examining into the conduct of Lieut. Carey, who was said to be in command of the scouting party in which the Prince Imperial was attacked at the time of his death, finds that the Lieutenant did not understand the position in which he stood towards the Prince, and was not aware that he was expected to exercise any special guardianship or care over his person. The Court, however, goes on to assume him for proceeding upon his reconnaissance without a sufficient escort for halting and dismounting on dangerous ground—acts which betrayed a deplorable want of military prudence. The Court regrets that no attempt was made by Lieut. Carey to rally his escort and to embrace opportunity.

After the Court of Inquiry, a court-martial was convened to try the Lieutenant. He sets up in his own defense that he was not in charge of the participation the Prince was killed, and he offers three fire submitted somewhat clears him of the charge of cowardice.

FRANCE.

Probable Return of the Chambers to Paris.

The Senate has adopted the bill providing for the return of the Chambers to Paris.

The Retention Bill.

VERSAILLES, July 9.—The Chamber of Deputies yesterday, by a vote of 381 to 78, rejected the amendment to Jules Ferry's Educational Bill, introduced by Modier Du Mouijin, aiming at the prohibition of all religious orders from teaching.

The Darien Canal.

De Lesseps stated at the last meeting of the Geographical Society that he does not think the expense of constructing the Darien Canal will exceed two hundred and fifty million francs. The difficulties of the work were not so formidable as those which had been overcome in the construction of the Suez Canal, as a railroad already existed along the course of the proposed Panama Canal which a large force was at work upon. It is stated that De Lesseps fully expects commencing work on the Canal next New Year's Day, employing 20,000 or 40,000 workmen, some of whom have arrived, and 15,000 Brazilian negroes. It is announced recently in Amiens.

ITALY.

Resignation of the Ministry

The Ministry has tendered its resignation.

King Humbert has entrusted to Signor Cairoli the task of forming a Cabinet.

The Pope and Bismarck.

Negotiations between Bismarck and the Pope concerning religious differences are proceeding rapidly, and it is expected they will be successfully terminated before the appointment of Dr. Falk's successor as Minister of Ecclesiastical Affairs.

Verdict Against the Reputed Daughter of the Late Cardinal Antonelli.

The Court of Cassation has rejected the appeal of Countess Lambertine against the brother of the late Cardinal Antonelli, with costs to the Counties.

GERMANY.

Action on the Tariff Bill.

On the third reading of the Tariff bill in the Reistag it was finally resolved, on motion of Count Stolberg Wernigerod, that the tariff on flour shall cease into force immediately for grain and wool, the 1st of October, and for all other articles, the 1st of January, 1880. This arrangement postpones the changes in the tariff on all other articles for three months. The Count pointed out that preparations would not be sufficiently advanced for the enforcement of the complete tariff on the 1st of October, as proposed by Prince Bismarck.

RUSSIA.

Four Hundred Nihilists Arrested.

Four hundred Nihilists were arrested at Kieff on the night of June 26th, and a great store of weapons seized.

Chinese Outrages in Central Asia.

LONDON, July 3.—A Berlin correspondent of the Times transmits a report in the Gulos from its Orenburg correspondent, that the Chinese are commencing a hostile outrages in Kulja Territory, and thousands of fugitives are seeking protection at Russian forts.

The Chinese have retaken Kashgar. A portion of the Mussulman population fled, but many people were massacred, and a large body of old men are shut up in the citadel. Inhabitants of Kulja have determined to fly if the Russian province is restored to China by the Russians.

TURKEY.

Fortresses Destroyed.

The walls of the fortresses of Widdin, Silistria, Rustchuk and Varna have been destroyed and the ditches will be left to the operation of the weather.

SOUTH AMERICA.

Chilenas Badly Beaten in Peru.

PANAMA.—The Star and Herald says: Passengers from the South Coast report a battle at Uslioua and the capture of 4 points by the allied forces. The Chilean losses are stated to be 1,500 killed.

EASTERN.

Unusual Activity of Industry and Commerce.

The first half year after the resumption of specie payments has been marked with activity of industry and commerce and brighter prospects for the future. Industrial establishments have not been so fully employed as any time since 1873 as they are now, and though the margin of profit generally is slender, there is strong confidence that production will be kept up, will enable to build upon, and that the advance toward prosperity, though slow, will be sure. In many important branches of commerce transactions have been of unprecedented magnitude; in others, although there has been little improvements in the volume of business, there has been much improvement in the character. There are few departments of industry or trade in which there has not been a perceptible increase in the volume of business, even if measured in values, and not one of importance in which the quantities of products exchanged have not increased. Labor is more fully employed than it has been at any time since the panic, and on the whole more satisfactorily paid, the purchasing power of wages being considered. Evidence of these changes, though not lacking in other quarters, is now here more convincingly presented than in the returns of exchanges at the different clearing-houses. Exchanges in June show an increase in the volume of business, in comparison with June, 1878, at all large cities except New Orleans, and a gain in the aggregate of twenty-five per cent. Clearing-house returns for the first half of June show an aggregate of business of $2,507,990,000 against $2,000,000,000 for the same time last year. Of this total, New York contributes $1,800,000,000, against $60,000,000 last June.

The Public adds: On the whole, the record of exchanges bears witness to a very general and satisfactory revival of business since January, and justified strong confidence in the future. With promise of excellent crops, with crearer activity in the coal and iron trades than has been seen for years, with unprecedented improvement in other branches of commerce and industry, the country may reasonably hope for recovery in a single year if specie payments nearly all that it has lost in the volume of business during the six years since the collapse of 1872.

The Darien Ship Canal Project.

The effect of European capital and influence in the Darien Ship Canal project is actively discussed by the Press. The Herald criticizes Do Lesseps' declaration, that while neutrality should be assumed, the canal can be constructed with the aid of a factor which has no nationality, namely, money, and thinks that only the United States can give the guarantee of neutrality and treaty conformity of the Isthmus, and that while capitalists in Europe wish to invest. We are strong enough to enforce and maintain such a guarantee without European aid and in defiance of European opposition. We shall never assist Europe to any share in the control of a route of commerce in which we have an paramount an interest.

The Bulletin thinks that if a shin railroad could be as cheap and as efficient as Captain Eads claims, his project assets itself as the project of an American scheme. If European capital, that so readily comes at the beck of De Lesseps, were to be withheld from the project, there are men of wealth enough in this country who would support such a triumph of American engineering and such an aid to the commerce of the country, and even were we threatened with two transhipments instead of one, the result would be still the cheapest and were completed Eads to twenty years in advance of his competitors.

The Administration Takes no Interest in the Isthmus Canal Scheme.

A Sun Washington special says: An officer who has accompanied various scout parties in search of a feasible route for a ship canal across Central America, says nothing practicable can come from the present agitation in Europe upon the subject, unless this government takes the initiative. He says, also, that had it not been for Hamilton Fish's yielding to the influence of the Pacific Mail Company, the canal would already be under way with the United States Government at the head of the enterprise. He then relates how, during Grant's administration and under his direction, the Government was formed with Admiral Ammen at the head, which decided in favor of the Nicaragua route, but Fish invited the cooperation of European powers, the Nicaraguan Government applied here as an advantage to negotiate, and now the Pacific Mail, seeing rifts for its Panama Railroad, made such a pressure on Fish that he abandoned the scheme.

Here the matter has rested so far as the Government is concerned. Friends of the old plan are again trying to bring the Government once more to assume the initiative, claiming that it cannot afford to allow any foreign Government to strike a spade in this project, except under the auspices of the United States. But the administration does not take any interest in the scheme.

Telegraphic Reports of European Grain Marts.

The probable price of wheat this year is one of the most interesting subjects to the people of this State, and especially to the agriculturists, many of whom are the best patrons of THE MONITOR. We have therefore devoted a large share of our space to the latest details on this subject, as very often speculators hasten to reap all the advantage from any rise in prices, before the farming classes can be apprised of the advance in the markets. We shall deem it our duty to keep them posted. The following is a summary of the intelligence that has reached us during the past week:

Russia.

LONDON, July 6.—A correspondent at Berlin draws a gloomy picture of the state of Russia, owing to the Nihilists, the failure of the crops and the ravages of the corn beetle. Fifty thousand rubles have been appropriated to exterminate the beetle.

Crops in Bohemia.

LONDON, July 7.—A correspondent at Ischel, after a journey across three-quarters of Western Austria, says: The crops in Upper and Central Bohemia are unlaid to straw, in consequence of the unprecedented rainfall in the valley of the Danube above Linz. The fields are superb, but it is feared the continual rains will prevent successful harvesting.

Anxiety also prevails throughout the East, intensified by almost daily showers.

France—Harvests.

LONDON, July 8.—The Times says: The firmness of the French Exchange is said to be due to the prospect of a demand for gold for the United States, in consequence of a deficient harvest. Business in French corn wheat-growing districts are certainly unfavorable.

The National says, that in the Council of Ministers, Lepere, Minister of the Interior, estimated that in consequence of the bad crop, purchases of foreign grain would amount to £30,000,000.

New York The Advance in Wheat.

NEW YORK, July 7.—The advance in the price of wheat is attributed to unfavorable crop reviews from Europe, and the fact that "shorts" are covering on all months, even as far ahead as September. There are also large European orders to buy here.

NEW YORK, July 8.—During the fury in broadstuffs yesterday in the Produce Exchange, held by two exporters for one million bushels at $1 10 was made, but the speculative clique was unwilling to sell so large a quantity at less than $1 12. One operator said if the unfavorable reports continue, wheat would be cheap at $1 25, at which price the bulk of the European demand would be filled.

The Steamer England, National Line, which leaves here to-day for Liverpool, takes out 100,000 bushels of wheat, probably the largest single shipment of wheat this season. It is said to be a part of recently heavy purchases from parties controlling Nos. 2 Spring.

The grain trade of Boston increases at a rapid rate, especially corn, the receipts of which, since June approximated over 1,500,000 bushels against 929,000 in June 1878.

Review of the British Grain Market.

LONDON, July 8.—The Mark Lane Express, in its review of the British grain trade for the past week, says:

The agricultural prospects cause very grave apprehensions. Should the rain continue, the hay crop will be useless except as manure. The condition of wheat is unimproved. Barley in heavy land is nearly ruined. Nothing but a speedy advent of sunshine can prevent an almost general failure of the principal crops. In consequence of the weather and light supplies in England, wheat has improved in per quarter in a majority of the country markets; but despite the firmness of holders, it has been difficult to establish any advance for home grown in London, in the face of liberal arrivals and low prices of foreign varieties. Previous rates, however, have been well supported, especially for choice parcels, and the tendency is rather toward an advance than a decline. Large foreign arrivals have not caused scarcity of granary room, as a large proportion has gone direct to millers, who bought freely to arrive. Transactions in cargoes have lately been confined to the retail wants of small millers.

West.

The prices paid for northern wool this Spring has been higher than ever before. Some from Manchester brought 35 cents a pound in the Boston wool market. That country has realized over $100,000 more from our expected from the Spring Clip. The Herald Union says:

A few years ago there was a perfect stampede among sheep-men to get rid of their sheep, and whole flocks were offered at fifty cents each, and found but few buyers. At that time we told those who were so anxious to sell that they had better go slow and wait a few years before they sold. There are many sheep men in the State who, either from choice or force of circumstances, look our advice, and are not sorry that they did. While our sheep men are making no big money out of their flocks, all are doing well, and making about as much money out of their investment as any other class of capitalists in the State. At the rate of four bits a head, say four years ago, sheep were a good investment, and have been a money-making business. The price of sheep is governed as much or more by the demand for their wool for manufactures as for their meat for consumption, and in the nature of things, therefore, fluctuations in prices are not so rapid as for most other domestic animals. It takes a long time for manufacturers of woolen goods to overstock the markets. But when once really overstocked it takes a long time for consumers to wear out the clothes. Hence the fluctuations in sheep, though gradual are generally from a high to a low extreme. The tide is now on the rise, and the patient owners are getting the benefit and can well afford to remain patient. They will do well to heed the old maxim, "let well enough alone."

Domestic Produce Market.

FLOUR—Price firm. We quote: Superfine $4@$4 50; Extra Superfine $4 75; Extra Fillers and Family, $5 00@$5 50; Best Family Flour, in cloth, jobbing at $5 62½@—per bbl, outside for advice. Oregon Standard extra $4 50@$4 75.

WHEAT—There is no change in quotations, although some business transacted on Tuesday to-day than for some days past. No. 1 is $1 07@$1 07½, and No. 2 at $1 00@1 05. Sales to-day were as follows: 40 tons ship-stuff at 87½c; 100 sacks new No. 1, and 100 do good milling, $1 10; 872 do choice shipping, $1 05; 100 do new No. 1, and do good shipping, $1 07½; 100 sacks fair milling, $1 05, and 200 do inferior, $1 00.

BARLEY—Prices remain unchanged. Coast feed is quotable at 65@70c; Bay do, 75@80c; Brewing, 90c@$1. Sales of 600 ctls choice Brewing for Australia at $1 90; 300 do, 90c; 1,000 do good Coast feed, 60½c, and 1,250 do do at prevailing rates.

OATS—Sales to-day of a small lot of Surprise at $1 60; 100 do choice Washington Territory, $1 50; 600 do ordinary, $1 25, and 500 do same, $1 12½. Good and choice grains are quotable at $1 40@1 65, inferior and ordinary at $1@1 25 per ctl.

CORN—Large Yellow, 77½c; Small Round do, 85@90c; White, 72½@75c per ctl.

HAY—Market dull. We quote: $11 00 per ton.

RYE—Quotable at 80@85c per ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Quoted at $1 25@1 35 per ctl.

STRAW—60@50c ⅌ bale.

POTATOES—Receipts to-day, 1,923 sacks. There is no change in prices. In the absence of morning sales were made at 30c⅌ⅡBox, and 30@35c ⅌ sack.

ONIONS—Jobbing at 65@70c ⅌ ctl.

BEANS—Small White, 2½@3c; Bayos, $2 15; Red, $1 70@1 80; Pink, $1 60@1 75; Limas, $6 50@6 75; Pedros, $2 00@—per cental.

BRAN—Quotable at $16@17 in bulk, from the city mills, $18@19 in Graham Flour, 2½@3c ⅌ lb; Oatmeal, 5@5½c ⅌ lb; Cracked Wheat, 3@3½c ⅌ lb; Middlings, selling at $19@—⅌ ton, and Wheat Bran, 15@16 for 1 ton, also; Off Color Meal, $22 ⅌ ton—the three latter subject to the usual discount to the trade.

CHICKEN FEED, ETC—Table Meal is selling at $28@29 ⅌ ton; Rolled Barley, $29@30; Feed, 26c ⅌ ⅌.

SEEDS—We quote: Flax, 2½@3½c; Mustard, white, 2@2½c; Canary, 2½@3c; Alfalfa, 10@12c; Hemp, 3½@4c; Rape, 2@2½c; Hungarian, 1½@2c.

DRIED PEARS—Sold selling at $1 25@1 50 ⅌ ctl.

DRIED APPLES—Quotable at 2½@3c ⅌ lb.

BUTTER—Strictly choice California fresh will now quotes at 17@18c, fair do, 13@15 c. Old stock Potts Farm for sale at 20c ⅌ lb. Eastern on advance; choice new Eastern, 18@19c ⅌ lb.

EGGS—The Market is weak. Fresh California, 22½@25c; Salt Lake, 20@22½c; Eastern, 16@18c ⅌ doz.

CHEESE—California, 7@8½c; Eastern, 12@16 ⅌ lb.

POULTRY—We quote: Hen Turkeys, ⅌ lb, 17@19c; dressed do, ⅌ ⅌ lb; Gobblers, ⅌ ⅌ lb, 15@17c; Young Ducks, per doz, $5@5 50; Hens, $6 50@6 00; live Geese, young, $6 50@7 50; Young Chickens, $5@5 50.

GAME—We quote: Hare, 75c@$1 25; Rabbits, $1 25@1 50; Plover, Curlew, Doves and Larks, 75@75 50 ⅌ doz.

HONEY—Good to choice Comb is bringing 6@10c; best strained table.

NUTS—California Walnuts, 8@9c; Chile Walnuts, 8@9c; Filberts, 10@12c; Chile Filberts, 10@12c; Brazil Nuts, 12@13c; ⅌ lb.

VEGETABLES—We quote: Cabbage ⅌ ctl, 70@80; Cauliflower, ⅌ doz, 37½@50c; Carrots, ⅌ ton, $8 00; Turnips, ⅌ ton, $8 00; Beets, ⅌ ctl, 40@50c; Marrowfat Squash, ⅌ ton, $20 00@25; Green Okra, ⅌ lb, 5@6c; Green Chile Peppers, ⅌ lb, 30@35; Horseradish, ⅌ lb, 10@12½c; Asparagus, ⅌ box, $1 50; ⅌ doz bunches, 75@1 25; Rhubarb, ⅌ box, 50@75; ⅌ ⅌ for all kinds.

TALLOW—Rendered is 5½@⅌ lb.

DOMESTIC FRUIT—We quote: Strawberries about $3@$5 ⅌ chest; Cherries, $5@6 ⅌ box; Currants, Boiled, $6@8; Huckleberries, $7@8; Plums, box, 50@60; Sol. Green Apples, basket, 15@20c; Green Pears basket, 15@75c; Peaches ⅌ box, 50@75c.

WOOL—The trade is dull. Southern Coast Burry, 11@14c; Burry, 14@17c; Mixed, 17@19c; Free, 22@25c. San Joaquin, Burry and seedy, 11@13c; long free, 13@16; short free, 15@18c; long, heavy and dirty 11@12c ⅌ ⅌.

HIDES AND PELTS—Heavy salted Steers, over 60 ⅌ ⅌, 9c; medium salted Hides, cows and steers, 8c to 60 ⅌ ⅌; Salted Kips, fair sales at 7½c; salted Calf, for dirty, 7c; Dry Hides, nominally selling at 12@12½c; Dry Hides, nominally selected, 14c; Dry Kip and Calf, usual selection, 12½ ⅌ ⅌; Half Grant, sound skins, 10c; damaged, 7½c; Deer Skins, Summer and Winter, 12@15c; Deer Shoes, 3@4c; Bucks, 2@3c; Elk, 2@3c; Elk Shoes, 3@4c; Sheep Skins, dull; Shearlings, 12@15c; short wool, 20c; medium 60@80c; wool Skins, 60@80c each.

JONAS J. MORRISON,
Cor. Mission and Spear streets, San Francisco.

Always on Hand a choice assortment of Pine and Redwood Building Lumber of all sizes. Also, Shingles, Lath, Sash, Doors, Spruce Shingles, Cedar, Sugar Pine, etc.

NICOLL THE TAILOR

Branch of New York.

Being our own IMPORTERS, we are able to GUARANTEE and give the BEA article at such prices as defy competition. We will CLOSE to all CLUBS and the TRADE MERCHANT and CLERK. Gentlemen, before calling elsewhere will do well to call and INSPECT MY IMMENSE STOCK!

DO NOT FAIL TO SEE THE ELECTRIC LIGHT!

Call and see the ELECTRIC LIGHT at NICOLL'S, by which colors and quality may be seen as clear at NIGHT as at NOONDAY.

TO ORDER.

Pants	$4
Suits	$15
Overcoats	15
Dress Coats	20

TO ORDER.

Black Doeskin Pants	$7
White Vests	13
Fancy Vests	5

Genuine 6 x Beaver Suits, $55.
SAMPLES, WITH INSTRUCTIONS FOR SELF-MEASUREMENT,
—SENT FREE.—
ONLY WHITE LABOR employed, and none but experienced and first-class Cutters.
A small stock of Uncalled-for Goods at Immense Reductions.
SALE PRICES—Pants from $3, Suits from $12; Overcoats from $12; Vests from $2. Cost from 87.
The Trade and Public supplied with Cloth and Trimmings at Wholesale Prices. Any length cut, and all kinds of stock kept on hand.
THE FINEST STOCK OF WOOLENS IN THE WORLD.
NICOLL THE TAILOR'S Grand Tailoring Emporium,
727 MARKET STREET,
Opposite Lick House.

New Advertisements.

TARRANT'S SELTZER APERIENT

A Hundred Symptoms and One Cure. There is scarcely a symptom of any known disease which the confirmed invalid does not at times experience. He is languid, nervous, has violent palpitations or heart disease, is afflicted with sick headache, costiveness, and is constipated; every organ and function of the body sympathizes with the disease which fastens upon the liver, the great laboratory.

Tarrant's Effervescent Seltzer Aperient affords immediate relief, effects, if persevered in, a thorough revitalization of the digestive organs, and restores to healthful activity the secretory functions.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

OFFICE OF
THE HIBERNIA SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY,
Northeast cor. Montgomery and Post Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 7, 1879.

At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of this Society, held this day, a Dividend at the rate of six and three-tenths (6.3) per cent per annum on all deposits for the six months ending with the June 30, 1879, free from Federal Taxes, will be paid to the members of the Society, or their legal representatives, on and after this date.

JOHN FRANCIS, CHAS. CRIM, Secretary.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

THE GERMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY.

FOR THE HALF YEAR ENDING JUNE 30, 1879, the Board of Directors of the The German Savings and Loan Society have declared a Dividend at the rate of Four (4) per cent per annum, free from Federal Taxes, on all deposits, payable on and after Tuesday, July 1, 1879.

San Francisco, June 30, 1879. JOHN LEITZ, Secretary.

MISCELLANEOUS.

DELMONICO
1007 MARKET STEET.
MR. L. MEYER, THE WELL-KNOWN CUTTER, formerly of Meyer's Bakery, is now about to receive the above place in elegant style and respectfully invite a first-class family patronage.
MR. MEYER will be well known to the city as an entertainer to meet his introduction, and as he goes only superior to the culinary department in public restaurant demand that the service will be all that can be desired. The table is supplied with the choicest game in season and perfect system of ventilation. All odors arising from cooking are excluded from the dining room. Prices reasonable. 1m 11 G

DAILY EXAMINER
Reduced to 15 cents a Week
CHIEF ORGAN
OF THE Democratic Party
OF CALIFORNIA AND THE PACIFIC COAST
The EXAMINER is the OFFICIAL Paper of the City and County of San Francisco.
PUBLISHED EVERY EVENING.
Contains the latest TELEGRAPHIC DISPATCHES
AND THE
MOST RELIABLE MARKET REPORTS.
Will be delivered at the residence or the place of business of Subscribers at 15 CTS PER WEEK
PAYABLE TO CARRIERS.
Sent to Subscribers by Mail or Express, Charges Prepaid at $7 50 per year.
Wm. S. MOSS, PHILIP J. BOARD, GEO. PEN. JOHNSON
Wm. S. Moss & Co. 518 & 520 Washington st. San Francisco.
Sole agent for the
UNITED WORKINGMEN'S CUSTOM-MADE BOOTS AND SHOES.
CHILDREN'S SCHOOL SHOES A SPECIALTY
Repairing neatly done.
OUR Ladies' Outfit Case
Containing a full assortment of Cutting Blankets, with Tracing Wheel, Square, 30 rules, 1 paper Linen Marking Alphabets, for sale in the world, price $5 cash. Pocket Fit Charts, Cutting Table and Meter prices the cents. The whole packed securely in a strong wooden box, delivered free to express, postage paid on receipt of $5 in advance.
Liberal inducements to agents.
J. H. SPENCER & CO.,
24 Geary St., San Francisco.
$66 Week in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine.

MISCELLANEOUS.

J. & F. KESSELER
MARBLE WORKS.
WAREROOMS:
Nos. 5 and 7 Taylor st., near Market, opp. Sixth.
FACTORY:
Brannan street, between 16th and 17th sts.
SAN FRANCISCO.
MANTELS IN STATUARY
ITALIAN AND COLORED MARBLE
Of the Latest Designs.
New York and English Grater,
Low and half-low down, Nickel Plated, Gilt and Bronzed.
Monuments, Headstones, Etc.
Choice Marble. Low Prices.
All work guaranteed as represented.
1123-3m8c

HEALD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE,
24 Post Street
San Francisco, Cal.
Opposite Mechanics' Institute.
(CONTINUES TO IMPART SUCH BUSINESS EDUCATION as has made it a household word for the past thirteen years in the Metropolis. Community generally are thoroughly informed that HEALD'S is the only institution in the world where a practical Business Education is imparted. For Circulars and all information address C. F. HEALD, President Business College, San Francisco, Cal. apr27 1y

Notice—Sole Trader.
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN THAT HANNAH CONNEY, wife of John J. Conney, of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, intends to make, and will make application to the County Clerk of the City and County of San Francisco, State of California, for a certificate to the effect that she is a sole trader in the business of Grocery and Provisions, at the corner of Sixth and Howard streets, in said City and County of San Francisco, State of California, and that she is doing business in said place of business in her own name and on her own account as a sole trader in the City and County aforesaid, and elsewhere in said State, pursuant to Title 12 of the Code of Civil Procedure. That the business of said sole trader is that of buying and selling and dealing generally in groceries and provisions, dry goods, notions, and general merchandise, and doing all things incidental to such business.
HANNAH CONNEY.
Dated June 16, 1879 jy12

The Monitor for the Sunday Schools.
PUBLISHED EVERY WEEK
And forwarded in time for distribution in the Sunday School Classes.
Subscription, $1.00 a year.
Not less than five copies sent to one address.
To Sunday Schools taking 50 or more copies, only Sixty Cents a year for each copy.

DR. JOHN E. TALLON
Office—127 MONTGOMERY ST.,
(Room 56, San Francisco.)
Embalming Without Mutilation $50.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly Outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Maine.

THE MONITOR.
A CATHOLIC FAMILY WEEKLY, CONTAINING THE LATEST AND MOST RELIABLE INTELLIGENCE.
Published every THURSDAY for the Proprietors at 622 Clay Street, San Francisco.
Letters on Business should be addressed to the Business Manager. All other communications to the Editor.
Checks and Postal Money Orders should be made payable to and addressed, Rev. J. F. Hardenstein, Monitor Office, P.O. Box 2203.
TERMS:
Mail subscribers, per year, in advance.... $4 00
To Ireland or any of the British Dominions, $1 extra.
Postage prepaid by the publishers.
Single Copies.... 10c.
LATEST NEWS BY MAIL.

The Monitor.

VOL. XXIII. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 5, 1880. NO. 43.

Mr. Redpath Once More in Ireland Detailing New Experiences.

[Correspondence New York Tribune]

DUBLIN, July 9, 1880.

Since a week ago, the swift steamer Wisconsin landed me in Ireland. I have been traveling, night and day, letters from the distressed districts of the West, or building interview with gentlemen whose duties have made them familiar with the private details of Ireland. This month, in the annals of Irish famines, has always been known as "hungry July." The guillotine, in the most Christian of all the Christian Ages, gave us a "gentle shepherd of the plain" when compared with the decimator of the Irish Free Lance of 1847. Many parishes show, by their records, that that year was the "hungriest." A similar history would have been written to-day if this month of July had not been the heaviest "English civilization" had not hung itself between the starving peasantry of Ireland during the present season. I am right happy to say that the worst of the crisis has passed, and that the alleviation in Ireland in 1880 will be counted by tens, or at the worst by hundreds, where, in the famine years of 1847 and 1848 they had been counted by thousands and tens of thousands. The remarkable fall of 4,000,000 that has taken place in my Mr. Parnell's importability in Parliament, I regard as a most fortunate and unexpected event, will make it unnecessary for Ireland to ask for aid from Ireland, excepting for the sick and aged, and the helpless and destitute. Ireland will be able to give a decisive blow to the English Government in a single line, in the phrase of the Irish famine it is a "remunerative step." The ghastly experience of 1847 warned the Irish committee that they must anticipate three possible dangers—that the English

GOVERNMENT WOULD DO NOTHING AT ALL;

that the charitable funds would be inadequate; that the people would be driven to desperate and lawless acts. I have been in Ireland all July and the first two weeks of August. No they were exceptions. The people seemed to be free from all stringency. But they were wise in their action. If Gladstone had been offered in the famine of 1847 what has been repeated on a smaller scale; for there is nothing surer in English politics than that Ireland, when memorially said in 1847 that there were three things, and only three things, that would do nothing to prevent one in 1880. Now the amounts disbursed to the local committees, although large in the aggregate, did not make them in any sense a "fund" for Ireland, two stones (28 lbs.) of Indian meal a week, not to each family in real famine, but to as many families in some distress as they could help, Twenty eight pounds of meal had to support a family of from five to ten persons. The family had no milk, no eggs, no potatoes, no bacon, no fish, no fowl, no butter, no tea, no sugar, no bread—a meal of meal was the entire bill of fare. It was winter and they could not even do some of the poor wretched creatures have done since spring—gather nettles and boil them with the meal. They either had not money enough to make it into bread, or they don't know how to do it, or they made it into a thin mucilaginous stuff, not solid and strengthening, like Scotch porridge, but watery and unsubstantial as "Protestant gruel." Barefooted, half-clothed, half-starved, half-housed, half-clothes—living in cabins that the rain often entered and the wind swept through—cabins with the cold and slippery earth for a floor—is it any wonder that their strong constitutions should break down under a diet of gruel? The dreadful disease that destroyed more than half the people in Ireland in the famine years appeared in these cabins, and now the fever is spreading rapidly, for there is not vitality enough left in the frames of the settlers to resist fever-taint. But I shall write you on this new disaster in my next letter.

POTATO BLIGHT AND THE CROMBAR BRIGADE.

To-day we have news from the Counties Clare and Galway, that the potato blight has appeared there. Nobody can tell yet whether it is local, or whether it is the first shadow of another famine. It all depends on the weather. If it continues as it has been in Dublin, continued and spread, the greater part of the coming crop will be a total failure. The potato disease appears is generally entertained.

The landlords are vigorously at work all over the West serving processes of ejectment and evicting tenants. This is the "Crowbar" third season of bad crops in the West of Ireland, the consequence of the landlords to the relief of Irish distress in those years is tabulated in the official returns just published. They show that in 1877 there were 466 evictions; in 1878 there were 541 evictions; in 1879 there were 1,090 evictions. Six months of this year have passed, and yet the landlords have served more than 1,000 ejectments, and have 1,—in the province of Ulster, 556; in Munster 1,—in Connaught, 1,—in Leinster, 1,—. It is worthy of note that evictions have been most numerous where the tenants have been most created against the landlords, and the result will be that the tenantry of Ireland—that is from 600,000 to 700,000—will soon be consolidated, and directed by the leaders of the anti-landlord movement.

JAMES REDPATH.

THE "FOURTH OF JULY."

Its Celebration in Ireland.

Land 2 monstration in Inishbowen.

On Sunday, July 4th, the anniversary of the Declaration of American Independence was celebrated by a meeting of the tenant-farmers of Inishowen, the descendants of those who fought for the purpose of commemorating the anniversary of the birth of American freedom. The Irish people for the sympathy shown to their brethren in America, and to pay a fitting tribute of a branch of the Land League. The meeting was to take place at Buncrana, but, however, could be seen in the district. It was stated that they had been torn down by the constabulary.

A procession was formed at Carndonagh shortly after one o'clock. It was headed by an American flag. Other banners were also carried in the procession, and the procession was led by a twelve-foot flag. The procession which left the Carndonagh Land League Hall was about a hundred and a half strong. However, it received large accessions from the ranks of the people on the hill, which is a most picturesque sight. There were about 1,000 persons in the procession, with a considerable number in disguise, the and stipendiary magistrate of the district, who was in the town, had sent for a force of two hundred men

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The Once . Communication.

LONDON, July 29.—In the House of Commons this evening Sir Charles Dilke, Under Foreign Secretary, confirmed the accuracy of the published accounts of the Porte's reply to the collective note of the Powers.

In the House of Lords, Earl Granville, Foreign Secretary, replying to an inquiry, said that communications have passed between Queen Victoria and the Sultan of Turkey with the knowledge and consent of the Government. It was proposed to present such communications to Parliament, but the Queen had in very cordial terms expressed the hope that the Sultan would even at some sacrifice accede to the wishes of Europe.

PARTITIONING OF THE EASTERN REGION.

The Times has the following from Candahar, dated August 2d: On the morning of July 27th, General Burrows engaged Ayoub Khan's force of 12,000 men and twenty guns, fifty miles beyond Kushkaba. After four hours severe fighting, General Burrows was repulsed and forced to retreat to Candahar. The British loss was twenty officers, 400 Europeans, and 100 native killed and missing, most of the losses occurring in the retreat. Three horse artillery guns were abandoned. Preparations are making for a siege in Candahar.

AYOOB'S CONFIDENCE.

A Cabul correspondent telegraphed before the interruption of communication: If Ayoob Khan is not too much carried away by his success to perceive the opportunity probably offered him, he may be expected to make the best of his way to Ghuznee. His arrival there would probably instil new life into the opposition leaders there, and the new Ameer, instead of being about to draw over the more influential of them to his side, may find himself confronted in the first days of his reign by a revival of an opposition which will render his hopes of power most precarious.

A REVOLT AT CEBUL.

A Bombay dispatch says: Before the telegraph wire communicating with Cabul was cut, a message was received stating that the Ameer was to have been held on Monday at Kohabjah but been postponed. It was not certain whether it would be held at all. It is supposed from this which has arisen from the evident desire of the Ameer, and his reluctance to venture within the British camp.

TROOPS SENT TO BE SPARED.

BOMBAY, August 2.—News is expected from General Primrose and Jacobabad, by native runners in about two days. The Government have caused spare any European troops for reinforcements.

Irish Compensation Bill.

LONDON, August 2.—In the House of Lords to-day Lord Grimthorpe, Liberal, rising to move the second reading of the Irish Compensation bill, said the bill was aimed from an optional circumstances existing in Ireland during the last few days, and from the large increase of evictions, especially during the present year. The bill, however, was premature, as the Earl Grey moved the rejection of the bill, which, he said, was a measure for compelling landlords of their legal remedy to enforce the payment of the rent. Dwelling in until the recent agitation in Ireland, he could conceive of no more direct encouragement, and claiming the law than the present bill, and treated the bill as one which would refuse assent to the measure, which would be degrading to the Irish Parliament and disastrous to Ireland. (Cheers.) Baron Emly supported, and Lord Lansdowne opposed, the bill. The latter said that if passed the bill would be a standing insult to Ireland, and a ill-considered legislation. The Earl of Dunraven and the Marquis of Hartford opposed, and Baron Waverly supported, the bill. The Earl of Derby said he approved the bill, but could not with certain amendments. Earl Salisbury made a speech, in which he vigorously opposed the bill.

A Blow at the Peers.

LONDON, August 2.—The Irish members intend to introduce a resolution in the House of Commons at the earliest opportunity declaring that the direct and indirect share of the peerage in legislation is far in excess of its legitimate interest in the government of the Empire, and that the time will come when, to redress the prepondereance, the sons, brothers and heirs (presumptive of the House of Lords will be declared as incapable of sitting in the House of Commons.

A Thrge Removed.

LONDON, August 3.—In the House of Lords, this evening, the Earl of Kimberly announced that the Marquis of Ripon had resigned from the Governorship of the Cape of Good Hope. He had that there have never existed between the Government and Sir Bartle Frere the harmony essential for the public interest.

Premier Gladstone's Illness.

LONDON, August 2.—Dr. Andrew Clark, who visited the night at Premier Gladstone's House, reports that he is rather better, but his febrile state continues. There have been numerous calls at the house since seven o'clock this morning. A policeman has been stationed at the end of Downing street from, as early hour, and in accordance with the wishes of the Premier's medical advisers, no vehicles are allowed to pass the house. Mrs Gladstone wrote from Downing street, at noon, as follows: "Mr Wm. Jenner, physician to the Queen, has been summoned, and will be here at 4 P. M. Until then, and for the rest of Mr. Gladstone's condition can be given."

A bulletin issued from Downing street at fifteen minutes past four o'clock this afternoon says: "Mr Gladstone is doing as well as could be expected, but his fever continues." The bulletin is signed by Sir William Jenner and Andrew Clark.

It is stated that, on the whole, Mr. Gladstone passed a more comfortable day than yesterday. His fever has not increased, and his general state is satisfactory.

The "Times" says: "We cannot be wrong in assuming that the illness of Mr. Gladstone must operate to postpone the meeting of the House of Commons for the rest of the session."

Sir Garnet Wolsley for India.

LONDON, August 3.—The Scotsman's London correspondent believes that the Government is considering the advisability of appointing Sir Garnet Wolsley Commander-in-Chief in India.

A Simla dispatch puts the strength of General Roberts' force for the relief of Candahar at 10,000 men.

In the House of Commons this evening the Marquis of Hartington stated that some Afghan cavalry are supposed to be coming in the direction of Kabaun, for the purpose of interrupting the supplies to Candahar. General Stewart has returned to Cabul from the camp at Kalakar.

The Compensation Bill Rejected.

LONDON, August 3.—Lord Cairns, in a study forty cabin speech, in the House of Lords this evening, picked the principle of the Compensation bill to shreds, saying that while it was intended to benefit, it would leave him in a worse position than before. Lord Selborne, Lord High Chancellor, in a long speech vigorously supported the bill.

Earl Granville, Foreign Secretary, said that he did not deny that if the bill was rejected, the Government would be compelled to accept the responsibility as to what course to adopt, but that the cause rather the House of very grave responsibility. When the vote was reached, the bill was rejected by a majority of 94 to 26. Lord Beaconsfield, in opposing the bill, made a violent attack on the Ministry.

Gladstone Better.

LONDON, August 4.—Gladstone is improving. The long congestion has ceased, and he is free from pain.

Parnell's Forthcoming Speeches.

LONDON, August 4.—In the House of Commons to-morrow, Parnell will ask the Chief Secretary for Ireland, whether, in view of the rejection of the Compensation bill, he proposes to employ constabulary and military forces in the purpose of assisting in the eviction of tenants who can be proved unable to pay their rents owing to the recent distress in Ireland.

British Troops to Abandon Cabul.

LONDON, August 4.—A Bombay correspondent telegraphs that a resolution in the House of Commons at the earliest opportunity declaring that the direct and indirect share of the peerage in legislation is far in excess of its legitimate interest in the government of the Empire, and that the time will come when, to redress the preponderance, the sons, brothers and heirs (presumptive of the House of Lords will be declared as incapable of sitting in the House of Commons.

A Thrge Removed.

LONDON, August 3.—In the House of Lords, this evening, the Earl of Kimberly announced that the Marquis of Ripon had resigned from the Governorship of the Cape of Good Hope. He said that there have never existed between the Government and Sir Bartle Frere the harmony essential for the public interest.

Premier Gladstone's Illness.

LONDON, August 2.—Dr. Andrew Clark, who passed the night at Premier Gladstone's House, reports that he is rather better, but his febrile state continues. There have been numerous calls at the house since seven o'clock this morning. A policeman has been stationed at the end of Downing street from, as early hour, and in accordance with the wishes of the Premier's medical advisers, no vehicles are allowed to pass the house. Mrs Gladstone wrote from Downing street, at noon, as follows: "Mr Wm. Jenner, physician to the Queen, has been summoned, and will be here at 4 P. M. Until then, and for the rest of Mr. Gladstone's condition can be given."

A bulletin issued from Downing street at fifteen minutes past four o'clock this afternoon says: "Mr Gladstone is doing as well as could be expected, but his fever continues." The bulletin is signed by Sir William Jenner and Andrew Clark.

It is stated that, on the whole, Mr. Gladstone passed a more comfortable day than yesterday. His fever has not increased, and his general state is satisfactory.

The "Times" says: "We cannot be wrong in assuming that the illness of Mr. Gladstone must operate to postpone the meeting of the House of Commons for the rest of the session."

Sir Garnet Wolsley for India.

LONDON, August 3.—The Scotsman's London correspondent believes that the Government is considering the advisability of appointing Sir Garnet Wolsley Commander-in-Chief in India.

A Simla dispatch puts the strength of General Roberts' force for the relief of Candahar at 10,000 men.

In the House of Commons this evening the Marquis of Hartington stated that some Afghan cavalry are supposed to be coming in the direction of Kabaun, for the purpose of interrupting the supplies to Candahar. General Stewart has returned to Cabul from the camp at Kalakar.

The Compensation Bill Rejected.

LONDON, August 3.—Lord Cairns, in a study forty cabin speech, in the House of Lords this evening, picked the principle of the Compensation bill to shreds, saying that while it was intended to benefit, it would leave him in a worse position than before. Lord Selborne, Lord High Chancellor, in a long speech vigorously supported the bill.

Earl Granville, Foreign Secretary, said that he did not deny that if the bill was rejected, the Government would be compelled to accept the responsibility as to what course to adopt, but that the cause rather the House of very grave responsibility. When the vote was reached, the bill was rejected by a majority of 94 to 26. Lord Beaconsfield, in opposing the bill, made a violent attack on the Ministry.

Gladstone Better.

LONDON, August 4.—Gladstone is improving. The long congestion has ceased, and he is free from pain.

Parnell's Forthcoming Speeches.

LONDON, August 4.—In the House of Commons to-morrow, Parnell will ask the Chief Secretary for Ireland, whether, in view of the rejection of the Compensation bill, he proposes to employ constabulary and military forces in the purpose of assisting in the eviction of tenants who can be proved unable to pay their rents owing to the recent distress in Ireland.

British Troops to Abandon Cabul.

LONDON, August 4.—A Bombay correspondent telegraphs that a resolution in the House of Commons from Cabul will follow the departure of General Roberts with the command for Candahar. It is not considered expedient to prolong the occupation in the face of heavy expenditure and the possibility of fresh complications

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.
THURSDAY..... AUGUST 5.

IT is a trouble, unnerving, and generally confusing, to unhinge our faith, to read sound Catholic principles in which the struggles and triumphs of the Church throughout the world are brought to our mind, to read religious events are recorded, the roles of the evil and defenders of the faith so heard, and the Allocution of the Father of the faithful reach us for our edification. Hence, most of the dioceses or provinces publish a Catholic Journal, generally the organ of one or more Bishops, which, as a true friend periodically visits the various families, and is entitled to a corresponding friendly welcome. Instead of reading scurrilous sheets, we should rather or some such Catholic journals as greatly contributing to the cause of truth. We do not mean to state that what we advance to them is emanating from the Prelates, or that any statement in them should be charged on the Church, even, whereby be the official organs of Bishops, who are responsible only for what appears under their signature, yet we take pleasure in echoing here the voice of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, who say as follows on this subject. We cheerfully acknowledge the service the Catholic Press has rendered to religion, and take this occasion to express our wish, in most instances, it has been conducted, with ability, and in a manner worthy of a very beneficial part in the Church's work. We cannot but cordially encourage its extend to those individuals, who, from support, to some task they must be enabled to become more worthy the great name they assume. Moreover, to avoid suspicion of this sacred of making known the views of our religion, and to show that the sole aspiration which we generally pre-suppose, we will be found to them."—ALCIBIADES ALWAY.

To Our Subscribers.

Those who are in arrears to THE MONITOR are urgently requested to settle their accounts at their earliest convenience. The date on the paper or wrapper shows the time to which each subscriber has paid up. All who have not paid to some time in 1881 are in arrears. Money may be sent by Post office orders or by Wells, Fargo's Express and our express.

Notes and Comments.

On next Monday a solemn Mass will be celebrated in all the churches of this diocese, together with the recitation of the Litany of the Saints and the prayer of Saint Fungelius that Almighty God would be pleased to avert from us all injury by earthquakes. This annual votive Mass was established some years ago at the desire of the clergy, and it is remarkable that since then there has not occurred any serious one throughout the State.

ST. GEREBUDA'S ACADEMY, Ilio Vista, will reopen on Monday, August 16th.

STUDIES were resumed at Santa Clara College on Monday, August 2d.

REV. Father Bachard is giving very successful missions in Oregon. A large number of converts have been received into the Church. The Sentinel promises full details in its next issue.

THE Feast of St. Ignatius was celebrated last Sunday at the church of St. Ignatius. The panegyric was preached by the Rev. Father Bourgeat of the Order of St. Ignatius.

REV. Father Valentini conducted a very successful mission for the Spanish population at the church of our Lady of Guadalupe. It terminated on Sunday last with the indulgences of the Portiuncula, granted to that Church for seven years by special Brief of our Holy Father. A very large number availed themselves of the privilege.

AT the College of All Hallows, Ireland, priests were recently ordained for California. Rev. Michael Dillon, for Grass Valley, and Rev. Alexander Campos for San Francisco.

THE Western Watchman says: We learn that the bills appointing Very Rev. Thos. Smith, C. M., at present Visitor of the Vincentians, to the Presidentcies of Brownsville, Barrodale, have been returned with a proper of the appointee to be relieved of the proffered honor.

ON Tuesday, June 29th, Feast of St. Peter and St. Paul, Monsenor Pedro Loza, Archbishop of Guadalajara, in his Cathedral solemnly consecrated Monsenor Eduardo Sanchez, who succeeds Monsenor de Ota as Bishop of Tacalpa, and Fray Buenaventura Portillo, who succeeds Monsenor Moreno as Vicar Apostolic of Lower California.

ARCHBISHOP GIBBONS has been interviewed in Paris, about the expulsion of the Jesuits. He declined to say much on the subject, but he alluded to the peculiar attitude of the Government in driving away the religious orders at the same moment that it is inviting back the Communists. His Grace spoke with warm admiration of America, which, he said, does not interfere with liberty of conscience, and in which liberty and authority are happily harmonized. The Archbishop was on his return from Rome at the time of the interview.

We cannot understand the success of the Radicals in France at the recent elections, as reported by telegraph. Ninety-eight per cent of the population are Catholics. We believe the great majority abstained from voting, having lost all confidence in the present administration, and that they deem it best to let them have all the rope they want, on the plea that the worse they are, the sooner will the country get rid of them. To our minds, we think they would do better to imitate the Italian Catholics who have turned out their mistake in this do-nothing policy, and are now beginning to make their influence felt.

CHARLES FRANCIS ADAMS said a pretty good thing in his address at the University Convocation at Albany. Speaking of the present school system, he remarked that studies have been multiplied out of all reason, and children are treated as if they were raw material to be put through a mill. "The schools have thus become a combination of the factory, the reformed, and the State Prison. They have run to memorizing examinations and programmes, until it is nothing but 'Company front!' the education." Mr. Adams is not the sort of man to warm up on a subject, but he seems to know something about schools.

THE nations are now being held throughout Ireland, and from every point of view the business, civil and criminal, under the Commission throughout the six circuits, is light in the extreme. Various causes have been assigned for the falling off in the civil business, to one-twentieth of what it formerly was, but that the criminal business should be comparatively lighter than on many former occasions is one of those problems which might fairly puzzle "a skilled hand" at social science, having regard to the trials through which the peasantry of Ireland are so creditably passing in these times of dire and terrible calamity.

WITH regard to the Presidential contests, Mr. Blaine of the New York Freeman's Journal says that Grant was the representative of centralization of power, sniping out State lines, and local self-Government, and, as a consequence of the late armed array, a preponderance of the military over the civil, in the future Government of the country. Thurman, or Bayard—but Thurman, as the very strongest opponent of the opposite, and old American Democracy, ought to have been the candidate of the other party. We very much doubt what the result would have been!

God has been better to us than our own thoughts. It is a not unpleasant reflection among men leaning only the good of the country, that the nomination of Gen. Hancock, made, not by any combination of politicians, or dictated or even—but by a sudden impulse, unexpected, and everywhere acknowledged as best, has been a gift of God to a country with many faults, but still, a country with more hope of good before it, than many older nations. And this, too, gives unhope that, by an overwhelming declaration of preference, the States, North as well as South, will see the advantage of his election, and give him their votes.

THE St. Louis Republican says. It is now four week since Hancock was nominated. The event was attended by a happy popular awakening that even the organs of the opposite party were forced to recognize. But, they produced its gradual disappearance. Seven days after the nomination they proclaimed "the Hancock boom dying out," and they have been repeating the proclaims every day since. And yet the Hancock boom is not dead yet—and what is more, it shows no signs of dying out at present. The profound and emphatic popular satisfaction which the nomination provoked has been waxing and strengthening every day from the 24th of June, until now it bids fair to become the normal national feeling of the campaign. Democrats never had an easier task than they have now. Their ticket makes its own boodlers. It moves forward with a force of its own. It does not require to be defended, for it cannot be assailed. It acquires increased popularity every day from contrast with the opposite ticket. The people like Hancock better the more they hear of him. Even the old opposition to military candidates has lost its significance in the presence of a man who is believed to be as wise a statesman as he is an able soldier.

There is no indication of a subsidence in the Hancock boom, if we may apply that term to the manifest drift of public feeling in the Democratic candidate. It is not a worked up affair. It is spontaneous and cordial. Hancock is drawing away from his straight competitor as easily as a first race horse like Parole or Ten Broeck runs ahead of a cold blooded competitor; and it is clear if the present Republican lifelessness lasts two weeks longer, there will be little of a race worth talking of. It will be what sporting men call a walk over.

PARNELL seems determined to transfer the agitation for Home Rule from Ireland to England. A circular addressed to House Rule members requests them to attend a meeting to-morrow, August 9th, to consider a line of action to be taken in view of the rejection of the Compensation bill. It is anticipated that Parnell will at this meeting propounce in favor of a plan of agitation throughout England, Scotland and Ireland in favor of land reform. Several Liberals have promised to co-operate in this movement.

The House of Lords would not reject an English measure passed by such a majority as voted for the Compensation bill in the Commons. But because it was for the relief of Irish tenants, the Irish Tory aloof combined to defeat it. Hence Parnell is determined to make it a question for Great Britain as well as for Ireland, and there is some prospect of it succeeding. The more the subject is discussed the better, and the sooner will some remedy be applied to restrain the terrible power of landlordism.

WITH regard to the communication of "Veritas," in another column, we have only to say that we have no other feelings but that of esteem and appreciation for our contemporary the Evening, but we fail to perceive in the communication of "Veritas" any impute or ungenerous reflections on the Examiner. It was a merited reproof directed against the Morning Call. The article in this editor's number of the same kind, taken from the off itself, and we commend the spirit of fair play which is evinced by its publication. But it would be far preferable to avoid the necessity for such communications by intimating to "Veritas", that such productions are not acceptable to California readers, who are too well posted to be deceived in such matters.

Gladstone and Ireland.

The Premier is seriously ill, and the Times says he cannot possibly do any more parliamentary work this session. This rendering more than likely that the Irish Compensation Bill will be defeated. Gladstone seems to be downright resentful in his advocacy of the just claims of Irish tenants. Describing the part he took in the debate, a writer says:

"The face of the Prime Minister while he was uttering his denunciations of the Irish land laws as they existed in other days, and of the morals formerly imposed by England on Ireland, was a sight to see. When about to say these things, and before he had spoken a word of them, the whole expression of his countenance changed; he lowered his eyebrows, he drew back his lips, his teeth came into view, and absolutely he seemed as if in spirit he was about to tear something to pieces. I saw his features assuming this aspect, and as he remained silent for a minute or two while the storm was gathering in his brain, and before the lightning leaped out, I wondered what was going to come. When he did speak, he delivered himself with the utmost energy and vehemence; the man seemed to feel for a moment or two aside and force of the condemnation he poured out upon the evil legislation of which Ireland had long been the victim."

Another writer in one of the London papers, describing the scene, says:

"In recalling to the memory of Lord Randolph Churchill passages in the 'painful history of British legislation in Ireland' Mr. Gladstone, carried away by the passion of his own eloquence, almost hissed his words at the head of the young nobleman who sat opposite, and whose spirited attack from the Conservative side of the House had roused him to those excited reprisals of debate."

We fear the opposition he is meeting with, the reverses in Afghanistan and the critical condition of affairs between Turkey, Greece, and the European Powers, is too much of a strain for his advanced years. The friendship he has shown for Ireland makes us deeply interested in the great English statesman.

Important Letter from Archbishop Seghers of Oregon.

Editor Catholic Sentinel:

DEAR SIR:—During my travels through Oregon, I have made a discovery to which, as an advanced Sentry of the Faith, you must direct all your attention. Exils, when nipped in the bud, become harmless, but if allowed to grow rampant they assume proportions that place them beyond control. Such is and will be the case with a most wicked and unjustifiable organization that plots in the dark, spreads in the night of secrecy, and appears to have its headquarters at San Francisco. The horrors of Knownothingism will long be remembered by all true Americans who love their country; but "The Secret Society of the Knights Commanders of the Sun" is determined to outstrip its Knownothing predecessors. Its main, direct and primary object is, prevent the spread of Catholicism, and to use all means to destroy the Church altogether. In project is the so-called organization of the Catholic Church in the Public School System. Its real cause and motive must be sought after in the disordered brain of that Sherman whose silly utterances against the Catholic Church the Secret Society has effectually some time ago. Sherman is one of the founders, promoters and propagators of that secret conspiracy against our Faith, and—would you believe it?—I found it expedient to enlist Gen. Sherman, a young and growing town, where the people would be wiser than to resort to foul means calculated to drive from their midst a county that population of which it is so much in need. At that place an attorney-at-law, who knows as much as a dead stump about the Catholic Church, plays the important role of Grand-Master. The means proposed to be employed by these anti-Catholic secret conspirators are an impenetrable secret; but they disclose their object to the parties whom they approach in view of investigating them, and it is from such persons as have refused to join them after being favored with an insight into their workings that the whole truth can easily be procured.

Raise the cry of alarm, Dear Sentinel, and arouse the vigilance of the Pastors of this Coast. Warn your faithful readers and all to your assistance all the well-meaning journals that place the love of country above prejudice. Whoever claims the Catholic Church, let him meet us on fair ground, in broad daylight, with public arguments. But when people shrouded themselves in the darkness of a secret conspiracy they not only betray the weakness of their cause, but they also give evident signs that they are inspired by the Spirit of Darkness.

I remain, your obedient servant in J. C.

+ JOHN J. SEGHERS,
Archbishop of Oregon, O. P.

General Hancock's Acceptance.

General Hancock's letter of acceptance is as admirable in its kind as his straight-forward, and to the point. There is no attempt to evade pull-in questions, or to palter with the sense by ambiguous expressions. Such a letter presents no excuse for attack. What he means he says in the terest terms. This letter, with the platform upon which he stands, should commend the soldier statesman to the universal suffrage of the country.

We have no doubt that in the almost sure event of his election, General Hancock will inaugurate an era of good will and reform in public affairs, that will send this country forward on a century of progress and prosperity such as it has not yet known. This letter of acceptance, with the letter of Sherman of 1870 to General Sherman, now first published, and which will be found in another column, shows Hancock to be a statesman and a patriot, capable always of discerning his duty, and always courageous enough to perform it.

Hancock is a man of action who know how to speak ably and clearly. He has studied his country's political history to good purpose, and seems to possess the spirit of General Washington, whose sentiments he so happily uses in the letter of acceptance. This is the true spirit of reform—no search prosecution, no desire of conduct of our affairs of government. He is the man of men for those critical times. The character of our politics has suffered deterioration for years, and has contaminated even our private life, and this moral pollution of our political and social atmosphere demands instant treatment. In this situation we must recognize it as our most pressing duty to re-establish the moral character of our Government and to elevate the tone of our public life. This was the sentiment of Carl Schurz, who is now among us, for or five years ago, before he was captured by a seat in the Cabinet. How we recognize he is to this sentiment, it is still as true as when he expressed it. Honest government is the first condition of enduring national property, power, and freedom.

Without the elementary virtues of political and social life, decay will outstrip our progress. Our discussions and struggles about other great questions and principles will appear like mockery and farce, if we permit our public concerns to drift into that ruinous anarchy which must inevitably necessarily bring in its train, because it destroys the confidence of the people in the self-government—the greatest calamity that can befall the republic. It is a simple question of life or death. In view of the gravest circumstances, the country cannot now afford to have any man elected to the Presidency whose very name is not conclusive evidence of the most uncompromising determination of the American people to make the pure Government once more.

We believe General Hancock to possess those qualities of mind and character which are indispensable to the chief magistracy. We are consigned to believe his opponent Mr. Garfield, destitute of the essential qualities necessary to initiate and carry out this great work. It is a question running above the planes of partisanship. It is superior to all considerations of party or caste. It means for us and for our posterity peace, prosperity, progress in political and social virtue to the loftiest attitude.

From the standpoint of Americans, looking into the future to the furthest focus of natural vision, we see in the election of Hancock the surest sign of our country's happiness. Contemplating the possibility of his opponent's success, the future is dark and full of peril. We should be false to every sentiment of love of country, recall our patriotic efforts, if not crowned, we see, we should fail to point out the ominous and dangerous rocks in the road of safety and to mark the rock of ruin. We do believe it is the turning point of our country's history, and we earnest, in all the fervor moved by the perusal of General Hancock's letter, that the leaders should take to heart the great importance of electing to the Chief Magistracy a gallant a soldier, as sagacious a statesman, and as pure a patriot as its answers to hope, judging him solely by his unions and his record.

Mr. English's Letter.

The letter of Wm. H. English, the Democratic candidate for Vice-President, is an admirable production of the issues before the country in this campaign. Mr. English enters into a discussion of the principles underlying the issues, and in his manner of statement sustains the reputation which entitled his selection for the important place of the ticket. He was chosen simply because, selected for a position where he has become a custom to choose persons of mediocre capacity; although it is due to his dexterity to say they have always been men of good calibre as candidates for the Vice-Presidency. Mr. English is a man of acquirements, experience and ability, and would establish an unprecedented record of the duties of the most responsible executive, and, indeed, if he was warmly pressed for the Presidency, he would be found not ill regard for ex-Governor Hendricks. Mr. English declined to be considered in that connection. He is a strong card for the democracy and assures for us, beyond any shadow of doubt the defeat of Indiana with our large Electoral vote. Altogether it does seem as if it were impossible, with such candidates and such a platform, for the democrats this year present to the people, the issues of the Republican administration could be made a matter of conjecture. Morally certain, however, as the result is, no effort should be spared to ensure an overwhelming victory.

The New Charter Again.

As time progresses, but a short space remains for popular consideration of the proposed new Charter. It may contain something of good; it surely contains much that is objectionable, and it certainly provides that our citizens to the most cursory examination, will find it a Pandora box of evil for the grain of wheat! We know what we have in the Consolidation Act. We are standing on solid ground; our present charter is full of checks, securities, safeguards. It is good enough. Our people have had a spirit of change. For years it has been with us trouble and turmoil, election after election, bloodshed, disorder, uncertainty, insecurity, and all the evils and distress. Who is there that has not suffered from all this? Where is the talent, labor or capitalist, in this great city, that has not lost more or less by the unsettled state of affairs for the last three years? What appears upon the surface of the New Charter condemns it incontrovertibly; what is only ascertainable by a close examination is worse. It is better to cast it aside, than to accept so much that is certainly bad, with the risk of a race upon the rocks of ruin. To our particular circle of readers, our previous allusions, that concerning the closure of the cemeteries, is sufficient to secure its rejection.

George's Genesis of Scarcity.

In the current number of the Popular Science Monthly appears, as the introductory article, an account of the origin, rise, and progress of the Kearney movement, with a philosophical explanation of its strength and consequences. This article is the production of Mr. Henry George of this city, and is written with characteristic vigor and ability. Mr. George's literary productions are attracting unusual attention in the Atlantic States, since the publications of his great work which has sold in England over a million copies in Europe. The New York Herald thus notices the Popular Science article:

Mr. George believes that altogether too much importance has been attached to Kearney, both by the people at large and, specially, by the newspapers and civil authorities of the city in which all his work has been done, and he points out also that neither communism nor socialism, although they have rallied to the cause of the agitation with Kearney, was ever really a part of the agitation. Neither has the agitation made much progress in California, the presence of the Chinese having engrossed the attention of the laboring classes to the exclusion of the more remote question of fundamental social changes such as these. Accordingly, the Kearney movement has reached possible by the ordinary course of events in a community where the unequal distribution of wealth is not so much the specially glaring, and where there is a daily growing social and political discontent such, he believes, as exists in other parts of the country, and may yet work harm there. It is the sudden rise of Kearney into notoriety and arousing the uneasy timidity (of the rich) which is its co-relative that an unknown person, without power or adequacies, without following or influence, rose "to the rank of a great leader and drank the sweet of popular fame." The "means" which Mr. George draws from the Kearney agitation is that "the political equality from which we cannot recede, and the social inequality to which we are tending, cannot peacefully coexist. Nothing is surer than that all the inventions and improvements and discoveries of which our time is so fruitful are tending to a condition favorable to carry mere political democracy into anarchy."

The Beginning of the Triumph of Law and Justice.

The Sacramento Leader, calling attention to what it styles a sparing error says:

The report of the school census enumerator of Sacramento has been taken under adverse circumstances, or his method of computation is greatly at fault. According to his figures the number of children between five and seventeen years of age, who have attended public schools within the last scholastic year is 2,887. And the number of those of the same age who have attended private schools during the same time is set down at 697, while the children who have not been to school at all is given at 1,265. Let us show how all these figures are correct. We will admit that 2,887 patronized the public schools, but as to those who attended the schools of private schools there seems to be a great discrepancy which if not corrected, would have Sacramento under a stigma which is not only discreditable but unjust. At the following private schools the statements of the Principals alter the figures of the Census Marshal materially. Mrs. Curtis' school reports 311 pupils, Professor Howe's 250, Mr. Hunt's 125, Mrs. Spillman's 14, Miss Smith's 130, Mrs. Ferry's Seminary 78, Mrs. Rose' 100, Mr. Goether's 164, St. Joseph's Convent 346, Sacramento Institute 314, and the Kindergartens and other smaller schools, not reckoning the business college, will swell the number at least 100 more, making a total of 1,962. Quite a difference between this and 697. Now deduct 697 from 1,962, we have a mistake of 1,265 appearing. If we deduct 1,265 from 1,265, the number of scholars which are said not to have attended any school within the last scholastic year, we find only 0 left. Now, we may be deceived for a time by a tireless democracy, but Catholic France remains Catholic France to the last. At Marseilles, a city, which for ninety years past has been one of the holds of red Republicanism, the expulsion of the Jesuit Fathers from their establishment was the occasion of a wonderfully touching evidence of sympathy for those victims of the Republic's persecution. Driven out of their domicile by the Commissaries of the Government, their departure was nothing less than a triumph. A concourse of several hundred young people spontaneously drawn together by a sort of presentiment of affection in favor of the Missionaries of France, in the Rue Thiers, awaited their egress to testify to the Fathers their love, their respect, and their admiration. Immediately the donats emerged from the principal entrance they were greeted with frantic applause and the most enthusiastic cheers! Ringing cries were raised of "Vivent les Jesuites! A bas les despotes! Vive la liberte pour tous!" The multitude thronged round the gateway to salute the Fathers as they passed. The young their hands with the grasp of affection. They kissed their hands and their very raiment with every testimony of veneration. And as each carriage in turn was filled and drove away, it was to the music of impassioned strains of "Au revoir a bientot! a bientot!" words that were no mere idle exclamations of courtesy, but the echo of that were felt by those who listened to them as an omen to nothing less than a solemn promise of a speedy return. The Jesuits have been officially expelled from France, but in the hearts of the people, in the affections of the people, in the management of the Dioceses in the whole country, I am sure that The Monitor, usually so parsimonious of its praise, will be generous and so scrupulous as to what is admitted to its well-bled columns, had for the moment relaxed in its rigor, also the paper from "Vindex" would never have been allowed, as it appeared, in it. The Monitor is not a political journal, and, as it is, it has did paper must have been conducted with the spirit which animated men to oppose the cause of humanity, good government, justice and liberty, its preference and sympathy with the Jesuits and generosity journalism of any newspaper on the Pacific Coast, with no superior in the Union on the whole country. I am sure that The Monitor, usually so parsimonious of its praise in the management of the 'Disciples of Loyola' that the law has been applied." Now, "Flaneur" ought to be comprehensible bitterness of the "Loyola" constitutes a most important portion of the Catholic Church, and, it means being an moral teaching in any way different from the rest of the Catholic clergy, and that

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

ANTRIM.

A fire broke out at one o'clock on the morning of July 20, on the premises of Messrs. A. J. Lendrum, tobacco manufacturers, Great Edward street, Belfast. The kiln room, in which the fire originated, a loft, and part of the roof of the building were destroyed. The contents of some of the show-rooms were also greatly damaged, but the shop and its contents were saved.

ARMAGH.

A serious party disturbance took place in the Tunnel, Portadown, on the night of June 26. About 9 o'clock an Orange drumming party passed through towards town. It is alleged that the party were only beating the drums into town from the house of a man that was mending them. At all events, the Orange party and the residents came into collision. Stones were freely thrown by both parties. Several windows were broken, and at least four persons were badly wounded—namely, Mrs. Redmond and her daughter, Elizabeth; a young girl named O'Hanlon, and a man named Walsh. The melee, while it lasted, was of a very serious character.

CAVAN.

At a meeting of the Mansion House Relief Committee, held in Dublin on Saturday, June 26, a Poor Law Guardian from the county Cavan mentioned that a landlord in his district, who had borrowed a large amount for works on his property, had engaged a number of his tenants, and had not paid them any wages, but deducted what they were to receive from arrears of rent which they owed.

CLARE

The Clare Independent gives the following wholesome advice to the tenant-farmers: The landlords, or at least many of them, are keeping an eye on the Champions (potatoes) and this being so it behooves the tenants to keep an eye on the landlords. The rent reductions which were given last year will, we fear, be refused "if the pipkin grow," and in cases where there are arrears, perhaps of a few years, we shall not be surprised if very peremptory demands are made for them on the score of the good harvest. It is will then that the tenants should not fall back in their lethargy, let them be up and active helping the agitation, spreading the Land League, and assuming the attitude of determination.

The Clare papers call attention to the scarlatina prevalent in Ennis as follows: The little ones are dropping off quickly, and it is a sad sight to see wee coffins carried past our door every day on the last journey to the grave. Here a child is found alive in the Causeway is a marvel, for there is dirt and slope and stench enough to make a nasoleum for our sanitary authorities where some horrible disorder sweeps them off, as it assuredly will if they don't look out and see that the law of hygiene and nature are enforced. Could it be they intend to settle, by neglect of sanitation, the long vexed question of over-population and how to prevent it.

CORK.

Policemen are being sent from Cork to Galway and Mayo for the purpose of aiding the local police with the evictions in the latter counties.

A large number of ejectment decrees were granted at the Clonakilty Quarter Sessions, June 26. Most of the cases are for non-payment of rent.

Rev. M. Daley, P. P. of Enniskeane, waited on the Bandon Board of Guardians at their meeting June 30, to complain that there were not enough outdoor relief and hungry workmen outside the Board room, who had been discharged from public works at East Carbery, which works had been passed at the Extraordinary Sessions at Dunmanway. Owing to some informality or red-tapism, the County Surveyor had been obliged to suspend the work. There was a row and a day's pay due the men, and they and their families were starving. Guardians passed the following resolution in reference to the matter, as the power of immediate relief was not in their hand: "That we call the immediate attention of the Local Government Board to the fact that 184 men employed on the relief works near Enniskeane, were discharged from the works being not still nearly completed, nor the money for the purpose expended, and without any reason as far as in our knowledge, leaving these men without employment or means of present support, and we may further add that there is at present due to these men seven days' wages. This case requires in our opinion prompt and immediate attention."

DONEGAL

On July 1, the Sanctuary of Lough Derg was emptied for the reception of pilgrims.

It is proposed to erect a new pier at Killybegs in order to give work to the unemployed.

The death is reported, on June 25th, of Rev. Thomas Diver, P. P. of Dunfanaghy, of which parish he was pastor for 18 years.

DOWN.

The county Down election was dismissed June 29th, the judges being divided in opinion.

A correspondent at Newry writes that serious disturbances took place at Newry on the night of June 25th, and the morning of July 1st. For four hours several of the streets were in a state of great excitement. Shots were frequently fired and many windows were broken, the woodwork being in some cases torn out and carried away. The police were on duty all night. The party disturbance, commenced on Sunday morning, June 27, when a Catholic band was passing through a street exclusively occupied by the Protestants, were resumed on Wednesday evening, July 30th, and continued until five o'clock next day. In the evening, a Roman Catholic band paraded the street, causing a crowd to gather, and afterwards some Protestant bands played to usher in the 1st of July, and were fired at by Catholics. Shots were exchanged, but no one hurt. Several houses were attacked, and the magistrates have asked for additional police.

DUBLIN.

The Mansion House Committee have issued Dr. Steevens' Hospital into the alleged famine fever in the West.

The Mansion House Committee recently passed a resolution calling on the government to postpone for a year the repayment of the seed loans.

The report of the Commissioners of National Education in Ireland for 1879, gives the average daily attendance of pupils at 430,054.

At a meeting of the Land League, June 29th, £1,075 was distributed to the various distressed districts.

The Mansion House Committee met in Dublin June 29th. Mr. Wright, the Secretary, read the financial statement as follows:—Amount previously acknowledged, £174,238 7s. 2d.; received since meeting, £2966 1s. 10d.; expenditure, £164,934 17s. 11d.; balance in hands, £10,549 11s. 1d. The attention of this committee having been directed to the question as to the ability of the small tenantry in the distressed districts to meet their liabilities under the Seeds Act, this committee desire formally to record their conviction, founded on information derived from various reliable sources, that even if the compulsory clause of the act be enforced numbers of the tenants will be unable to pay for the seed, together with the many other liabilities incurred by their labor, and that if the burden be thrown upon the ratepayers by a rate to be struck in the ensuing autumn simultaneously with the increased rates which will be necessitated for relief purposes, the result will be to reduce many of the ratepayers themselves to a condition of complete pauperism. This committee therefore strongly urge upon the Government the desirability of postponing the payment of the debts under the Seeds Act for an additional twelve months.

A deputation, numbering about twenty-five gentlemen, had an interview with the Lord Mayor at the Mansion House on Saturday, June 26, to complain of the bad treatment to which they alleged they had been subjected by some officials of the Midland Great Western Railway Company. His lordship was informed that they had taken tickets from Ballina to Liverpool at half past eight on Friday morning. When they arrived at Ballyhaunis, in consequence of some accident, their carriage was shunted on one siding. They remained at Ballyhaunis nine hours, part of the time being locked up in the carriage, and while so situated they saw three trains in Dublin pass them. Finally they reached Dublin that morning instead of, according to the time table, being there at midnight, and they did not expect to reach Liverpool until Sunday morning. The railway company had not given them food on a halfpenny, but left them walking the streets.

The Land League held a meeting on Tuesday June 29. The Treasurer, M. Eagan, announced that since the last meeting £200 had been received for relief, and £139 for League purposes. Mr. E. St. John Brenon was stricken from the roll of members. Mr. Eagan said there was evidence of the emigration scheme being carried on by Father Nugent and other people who acted with him. In the Catholic Times it was stated that a wealthy gentleman of Dublin had gone over to Minnesota and had purchased eleven thousand acres, where he intended to locate a number of deserving Irish people. The Land League would be glad to know the name of this gentleman, and whether he had undertaken this scheme on philanthropist or for the purpose of making a fortune by it (hear, hear). Mr. (Mr. Eagan) also gathered from the Liverpool Courier that it was intended by some people to form some Protestant colonies in Ireland and Finland. If they were to have colonists he did not care whether they were Protestants or Catholics. But they did not want English. What they did want was to support the starving people in the country until better times came round.

GALWAY.

The Aloysian Society established in Galway on the 21st of June, 1850, by the late lamented Dr. Paul James O'Connor, celebrated its Golden Jubilee recently, in the Monastery Schools, Lombard Street. The members assisted at a 9 o'clock Mass at the Pro-Cathedral of St. Nicholas, and made a general Communion. They also assisted in the same Church at the twelve o'clock Mass. In the evening a soiree was held in the meeting-rooms of the Society, in the Monastery.

KERRY.

The Kerry Post says: "We are glad to see that John Watson, Esq., has been appointed first assistant registrar in the above-mentioned Government Office, and Daniel O'Connell Trench, Esq., second assistant registrar. Both these gentlemen have won their laurels by diligence and long service—we are proud to claim them as Kerry men—Mr. Watson being a grandson of the late James Roger, Esq., of Dingle, and Mr. Trench Mary O'Connell, sister of the late Lieutenant-General Sir Maurice O'Connell, K.C.B., formerly Commander of the Forces in New South Wales, and Mr. Trench being a grandson of the late Daniel O'Connell, M.P."

In the House of Commons on the evening of June 28th, The O'Donoghue asked the Chief Secretary for Ireland the following question: "If he will cause inquiry to be made into a case of eviction which has which took place in the last few days taking place in the Barony of Iveagh Upper, and townland of Moyfella, County Kerry, in which Patrick MacNamara, his wife and nine children were evicted, and cast upon the roadside; and if it be not true that since the eviction Patrick MacNamara has died on the road, and left his family in a starving and dying state." The Chief Secretary said he had not received a report, air, from the Constabulary, from which it appears that Patrick MacNamara and his family, consisting of his wife and seven, not nine, of his children were evicted on the 22d inst. MacNamara, a man held, had several friends and neighborhood who would have taken him in. He erected a shelter on the roadside near his late farm, where he became his family. I received a telegram this morning to say that there is no truth in the rumor that he is dead, while within the last hour I received a telegram stating that last night about ten o'clock he was put back in the tenancy by a large party of men with arms and blackened faces, and the two men in charge of the place were assaulted (cheers).

The following property was offered for sale in the Land Court, Dublin, July 2, and could not find a purchaser. This is a sign of the times in the West of Ireland:—Co. of Kerry—Estate of trustees of the will of Robert Conway Hartley, deceased, owners petitioner:—Lots 1, 2 and 3 were adjourned owing to insufficient bidding. Lot 4—33a. or 12p. of the lands of Mullen, producing a yearly rent of £156 9s. 8d.; Mr. S. Macredy offered £2000. There was no offer. After some time Judge Flanagan said—It is a perfect farce to be putting property up for sale. Now, for aught I know, Mr. Macredy, you may get it for half £2000 next year. No mortal man can tell. Your bidding, however, is not quite twelve years purchase. Mr. Macredy—it is the first bid. Judge Flanagan—There is no competition. Put in a private offer, and if you are prepared to bid a substantial sum I may think of it. The sale was adjourned to the Court House in Bridge Street, Tralee. Rent £64 17s. 8d. The only bid was £30. Judge Flanagan—This field is different. It is circumstanced from the other, for it is not an agricultural or pastoral holding, and any proposed measure will not affect it. There was no higher offer and the sale was adjourned. All the other lots were adjourned. Mr. Richard Huggard, solicitor, had carriage for sale. The sale of the Upington estate, in the county of Cork, was adjourned for want of competition.

At the Killarney Board of Guardians' meeting, June 30, Relieving Officer Coffey brought under the notice of the Board the case of a man named John Murphy, who was evicted the previous week from his farm at Cullinahee, near Kilorglin, on the property of Mr. F. H. Chute, Tralee. He said that Murphy, with his wife and seven or eight children, were since living in a small temporary hut on the side of the road passing through the farm. The place was not fit to live in, and the man appealed to him as a man who had a family. He refused to come into the workhouse. A Guardian suggested that they should be compelled to come into the house. Mr. Hogrue—What control have the Guardians over them? They were evicted by their landlord, and how can we force them to come into the house? Mr. R. J. O'Connell—Notice ought to be served, saying that the man and his family would be supported in the house. Mr. Brennan—You say that he has no place to live in? Relieving officer Coffey—I believe his neighbors would be reluctant to admit him into their houses. The only place he has to live in is the hut on the side of the road. Mr. Herbert—He should be summoned for being there. Captain McGill thought if the man was foolish enough to keep his children exposed in the shed without proper protection some measures should be taken to prevent them from suffering. Mr. Herbert—I think what ought to be done is to summon him for the abduction of the road. Relieving Officer—I believe he is summoned for the Coolmagort Petty Sessions for trespass by living in the place he is. It should be here mentioned that the person who has Murphy summoned is Mr. T. H. Talbot, one of the gentlemen present who toss Murphy's farm after he was evicted. The Relieving Officer said he offered the man a car to take his family and children into the work house, but he would not come. Mr. O'Connell—You should call on him, and say that himself and his children will be received here, and supply provision made for them. Relieving Officer—I am afraid they will die there. Captain McGill—If that man's children died of starvation or exposure, we as a Board of Guardians, would be called to question about it. Mr. Brennan—You are aware of the matter, Mr. Talbot, as you hold the main farm. Where is the hut situated? Mr. Talbot—In the road leading passing through the farm. He is summoned to court for being a trespasser. After some discussion the Relieving Officer was directed to give the family an order for food, and, if possible, to induce them to come into the workhouse.

KILKENNY.

The death is announced of Very Rev. E. Kealy, P. P., of Urlingford, June 28. Deceased was 88 years old. He was born in Fennagarry, parish of Lusk, county Dublin.

Mr. George Bryan, late Home Rule M. P. for Kilkenny County, died June 29, at his residence, Ballinaclash, near Algiers, where he had gone for his health. He had large estates in Kilkenny County. He owned the famous Fenian farm where 1848 races are annually held, and of which he was an active patron.

LIMERICK

Mrs. Trousdell of Dublin has allowed her tenants on her Limerick and Cork estate a reduction of 25 per cent. on their rents. She also supplied them with seed potatoes in the spring.

The Limerick Board of Guardians on June 30 passed a resolution in favor of the Government remitting the amount of the loans for seed potatoes, and defraying the cost of same out of the Church Surplus Fund.

About 600 members of the Archconfraternity of the Holy Family left Limerick at 12 o'clock on Sunday night, June 27, on a pilgrimage to Knock. After religious exercises were performed at Knock Chapel, Rev. James O'Shaughnessy, on the part of the pilgrims, presented Archbishop Kavanagh an oil painting of "Our Lady of Dolors."

LONDONDERRY.

On Saturday afternoon, June 26, was held the first annual distribution of prizes at the close of the first session of the Intermediate Schools' Diocesan College, Derry. The proceedings take place in the library of the College, in the presence of a large number of visitors, including many friends of the institution generally as well as parents of the students.

The late rains have improved the appearance of the crops in the Coleraine district. Hay in the better cultivated parts is being cut, and those who have it now in "lops" would be glad of unclouded sunshine, whatever others still desire hot and moisture. It is the general statement that the crop will be light, and as it is the nature of Indian grass to grow "straight from the seed," that the aftermath from his stock will not be weighty. Corn (oats), barley, and wheat never looked more promising. Flax is in flower all over the district, the more forward fields measuring about a foot and a half in. Potatoes have all but wholly recovered from the recent frosts, and earlier sorts are selling at 1s. 8d. per stone. Pasture lands are now luxuriant.

LONGFORD.

At a meeting of the Mansion House Committee June 29, £20 was given as a final grant for relief of distress in Ballinglin.

LOUTH.

Mr. Thomas Roe, editor of the Dundalk Democrat, recently sued Mr. Peter McNulla, a victualler, living in Ardee for libel. The case was heard at the Ardee Petty Sessions and was adjourned to July 7th.

MEATH

The Dundalk Democrat, June 26th, says: the family of James R. Drew, Esq. of Mullaghboy Hills, one of the oldest and most respectable families in county Meath, and whose ancestors lived on the farm for generations, are about to be evicted because Mr. Drew would not consent to pay an increased rent, which he says the land could not afford. The present landlord is the Co. of Dublin, a young man who lately succeeded his father in the property.

A good deal of distress is at present existing amongst the agricultural laborers residing in the district of Dulsek. Work is very scarce, and it is next to impossible for them to obtain the means of support. Scarlatina, measles, and fever are the usual attendants in such cases, are making inroads. From the neighboring district of Julianstown an entire family, numbering seven persons, have been removed to the Drogheda Workhouse Hospital suffering from fever. The landlord of the district, Mr. Sutton, and two or three exceptions, absentees, and take no interest in the people.

MAYO.

A special correspondent of the Dublin Freeman recently wrote his paper: "I have come to-day through Charlestown again and to Swinford, and have visited some of the worst districts around. I have visited the villages of Fahsens and Carn, and have been through some of the miserable country which lies between Swinford and Kilkelly. Every evidence only serves to confirm what I have already stated, namely—that the fever is spreading steadily and surely, and that the people afflicted by it are in the most incomprehensible and abject state of poverty. In Charlestown there were seven additional cases to-day. The priest and the relief committee were in a state of perplexity and alarm, as the relief funds are exhausted, and they have overdrawn the account. The quarter sessions were to be postponed from fear of the epidemic. In Swinford I saw some cases that were unknown to any officials. One family were all down, and had neither food nor drink. That this is fashion fever is the sense of being the result of famine there is no shadow of doubt. I care not who says otherwise.

Up to a late hour on Monday night, June 28, there was great commotion and rioting in Ballina. The effigy of the Rev. Thomas Armstrong, of Ballina, Presbyterian minister, was carried through the streets, fireworks were exploded, and the police assisted self-styled with stones. This was owing to an explanation used by Mr. Armstrong at the Belfast General Assembly, in reference to the Knock pilgrimages and Irish superstition. Mass rout was appreheded.

Mr. David Ferrick, land agent to Mr. George Browne, late M. P. for county Mayo, was shot and killed on Wednesday evening, June 30, in Mayo county. The particulars are as follows: Mr. Ferrick was returning about four o'clock from the Ballycroy Presentment Sessions at Ballina, now to his own house at Brownstown, about four miles distant, when, after passing three or four miles on the road, and having gone only a few yards, he was fired at, the shot penetrating his back. He immediately turned round, and one of the men immediately fired another shot, which took effect in his side. He fell off his car on his hands to protect himself, a third shot was fired, and the bullet went through his hand. The men then left him, and, having searched him, for what purpose is not stated, Mr. Ferrick was subsequently found on the road insensible by Mr. Joseph Sawyer, Mr. Glover, Mr. Ferrick, on recovering consciousness, stated that he would be able to recognize the men, though he did not previously know them. He had a slight acquaintance with one person but had been put up in the district for his protection.

At a meeting of the Mansion House Relief Committee in Dublin, June 24th, the Bishop of Killala (Most Rev. Dr. Conway) in was present, made the following statement regarding the distress in his diocese: The population of his diocese was about 52,000. Of these 4,000 had been on the relief list. Since the funds began to decline in respect of public work was opened, a great many people were struck off, and the number was now reduced to about 50,000. Besides, the supplies given were reduced, and the expenditure curtailed to meet the necessity of the case—the funds having to come from a distance. A good deal was expected from public works, and some landlords were holding out promises that after the crops were down money would be expended in improvements which would give employment to the people. But except on two or three properties, all over the diocese of Killala, those promises were not made. In the instances people were pleased; and there were complaints as to the way relief was distributed. He, therefore, in some instances, took the matter out directly to the committee, but to the meal contractor, desiring him to send out tickets to the effect of £40. The numbers were not doled out, they were very large, and in some places the people were up to six or seven shillings in the pound. Sir John Harrington said the meeting was this state of things likely to cause a good practical advantage. The Bishop of Killala said he thought it would continue until the middle of August. The crops would not be in till the end of October, the climate of part of his diocese was cold and damp. In some places the potatoes might be a little earlier, but in several there was no crop till the middle of August.

SLIGO.

Captain Canfield Beamish, Cromhall, Dymore West; Robert William Orme, Fermoyle, Tubbercurry, Co. Sligo, have been appointed magistrates for Sligo.

At the Quarter Sessions held in Sligo June 28, there were 1,000 civil bill ejectments, 81 of which were defended; 23 ejectments, 3 Crown cases, 6 appeals, and 2 grant applications.

TIPPERARY.

On Sunday, June 27, 500 young men from the town of Tipperary and neighborhood visited the city of Queenstown. They went in two excursion trains and returned the same evening.

TYRONE

When the news of Mr. Dickson's return home was known on Friday night, June 28th, barrels were at once produced and tapped, turned in front of the Courthouse until after seven o'clock. Some of the admirers of Colonel Knox, also burned tar barrel in the Campsie end of the town.

Omlaughlin (near Omagh), June 28th, Liberal and conservative mobs paraded the streets of Dungannon, throwing stones and smashing windows. The police charged the Liberal mobs, which speedily dispersed, but the Conservatives held the market square until after midnight. Two constables were injured by the stones.

WATERFORD.

In the Skibbereen district the potato promises to be more abundant than it has been for years. The crop presents a healthy and most encouraging appearance over the entire district, with the exception of a patch here and there, where the stalks are will look sickly. In the first case the seed was advanced before the planting was effected, the explanation being that the lot was not distributed until a late period, so potatoes in lazy beds are more forward than those in drills, though this may be assigned for by a difference in the time of setting; but the general potato harvest is fortnight ahead of those of the last three four years. The great majority of the men now dig a limited quantity daily, and many have been able to dig so since the middle of June.

WESTMEATH.

The Most Rev. Dr. Nulty, Bishop of Meath, has appointed the Rev. Joseph Coyne, C.C., Mullingar, to the pastoral charge of Ballenalie, vice the Rev. T. Allen, P.P., who was appointed to the charge of St. Mary's Drogheda.

WICKLOW.

On June 26 twenty Arklow fishing smacks laden with herring came into Dungarvan, where the fish was purchased and sent on to Dublin by rail. The Arklow boats are superior in build and gear, and attract much attention in Dungarvan.

The Land National and Independent Club and Home Rule Association held their quarterly meeting June 22. Over fifty new members were admitted. A resolution was passed endorsing the work of the Land League, and recommending the tenant farmers to start branches throughout the county.

Those who blow the coals of other's strife are apt to have the sparks fly in their own face.

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,
FOR YOUNG LADIES.
BENICIA .....CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED by the Sisters of St. Dominic, and is pleasantly situated in the healthy and accessible town of Benicia. The next scholastic year commences on Monday, June 16th, and ends about the middle of June.

TERMS:
(Payable half yearly.)

Board and Tuition	$225 00
Entrance Fee	10 00
Washing	12 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation, per month | 20 00

Drawing, Painting and Music form extra charges.

The Expenses on package sent to pupils must be paid.

Letters of inquiry may be addressed to the 1y19 SISTER SUPERIOR.

SANTA CLARA COLLEGE
SANTA CLARA, ...CALIFORNIA

THE THIRTIETH ANNUAL SESSION will commence Tuesday, August 3rd. This Institution was founded in 1851, and in 1855 was incorporated with the privileges of a University. It occupies a large building, with extensive and well-furnished dormitories, spacious recreation halls, a fine chapel, a philosophical Apparatus, and a valuable collection of Mineralogy and Geology. It has a Museum, and Schools of Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Engineering and Chemistry. It has also a Meteorological Observatory, and a new building 140x40 has just been added to the extensive accommodations for students.

Diplomas are given in two departments—the Classical and Scientific—and Certificates in the Commercial branches.

TERMS:
(Payable semi-annually in advance.)

Matriculation Fee, to be paid but once | $ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all studies, Washing and Bedding | 250 00
School Stationery, medicine, attendance and Medicine, Baths, etc., per session | 40 00
Use of Philosophical Apparatus, per session | 10 00
Use of Chemical Apparatus, per session | 10 00
Use of Mineralogy and Geology, per session | 10 00
Use of Library | 2 00
Use of Music (private lessons) | 100 00
Use of Instrument | 10 00
Use of Bed | 20 00
Use of Bed and Bedding | 30 00
Use of Bed, Bedding and Washing | 40 00
Use of Piano | 50 00
Use of Harp | 50 00
Use of Violin | 10 00
Use of Guitar | 10 00
Use of Cornet | 10 00
Use of Flute | 10 00
Use of Clarionet | 10 00
Use of Drum | 10 00
Use of Drum and Fife | 10 00
Use of Drum and Bugle | 10 00
Use of Fife | 10 00
Use of Bugle | 10 00
Use of Cornet | 10 00
Use of Trombone | 10 00
Use of Bass Viol | 10 00
Use of Bass Drum | 10 00
Use of Cymbals | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Cymbals | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Bugle | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle | 10 00
Use of Tenor Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals and Drum and Fife and Bugle and Cymbals | 10 00

Ancient and Modern Languages, each | 10 00

Use of Apparatus in Chemistry, Philosophy, Astronomy, Mineralogy, Geology, Assaying, Surveying, Telegraphy, Engineering, Music, Drawing, Painting, Dancing, Elocution, Calisthenics, Military Tactics, Gymnastics, Boating, Bathing, Fencing, Hunting, Fishing, Shooting, Riding, Driving

The Price of Wheat.

The price of wheat will hardly be any lower this year; all the signs are to the contrary. At one time, it was thought that it would be much lower. The magnitude of the wheat crop all over the world was exaggerated. It appeared from the statistics as if the Atlantic and Western States would have a surplus of 120,000,000 bushels over all demand. But now the crop of the Western States does not look so large as it did on paper a while ago. Storms and floods have apparently thinned it out.

On the continent of Europe the weather based been very favorable. Violent storm and rains have kept back the wheat and other cereals from ripening—so much so that they were not nearly ready to be cut at the time of year. It would be manifestly unreasonable to look for full crops under such circumstances. The Public, of New York, is reported by telegraph as representing that France alone will need 50,000,000 bushels this year. That is to say that she would need nearly as much as we in California have to sell. Ordinarily France supplies herself, so if this statement be true, it would appear as if a market was opened for this year's surplus, and, irrespective of whatever might be needed by other countries, it is also stated that the demands of Europe will not fall more than 50,000,000 bushels below those of last year.

It is evident that the wheat market has reached its lowest level. There was a sharp fall in the markets of New York and Chicago during May and June; Liverpool followed suit, then San Francisco. But the downward movement has been checked and the tendency is upward. The price of California wheat in Liverpool advanced 10s. from July 1st to July 13. In New York there was also an advance, while since the first of July the Chicago market has gone up from 87 to 89½. All this shows a turn of the tide. Here there is a margin of from $1.40 to $1.60 on good wheat, and there is no likelihood of the market being any lower unless, indeed, usage should allow very much. We have here tonage but for a very small portion of our wheat surplus, but we shall send a great deal. Whatever is let by advance in tonage freights will, however, be met by an advance in wheat as the season progresses.

It is fairly certain that wheat in San Francisco will not be anything lower than it now is $1.40 @$1.60, it is probable that it may be higher but not very much so. Probably $1.50 will be the average price of the year. It is very certain that it will. It is a good price, and will's a good year, such as this is, will make California rich.—S. F. Journal of Commerce.

The English Grain Market.

Harvest Already Begun—Good Outlook for American Wheat.

LONDON, August 2.—The "Mark Lane Express" in its review of the grain trade for the past week, says: The weather has been very unsettled, and showers have continually given the Kingdom have been laid and twisted by the rain, and mildew, which had appeared among the wheat, is increasing. Dry warm weather is much needed to harden grain. The harvest has already begun in Kent, barley being, as a rule, the earliest crop. Unless the weather becomes settled and fine, farmers' sanguine expectation relative to barley will hardly be realized, and good English malting descriptions will again be scarce. Oats have ripened less than other cereals. The markets have been generally firmer, and more parcels of wheat have been sold held for an advance, and a strong feeling in trade is increasing. Although fully arrivals from abroad were over a million quarters of wheat and flour, English deliveries have been so scanty that the small reserve which existed at the beginning of July must be diminished nearly four hundred thousand quarters. August arrivals from abroad are likely to be good, but if deliveries of English wheat are practically nil, it will be difficult to meet the wants. Markets are likely to be speculative for September. The market for forward delivery is of a different character. American red Winter is offered at about 7 shillings below the price of old grap. England is taking an increased share of American grain shipments. Purchasers for the country have taken 100,000 quarters. There are a fair number of cargoes off the coast, but buyers are reserved. Imports into the United Kingdom during the week ending July 24th, were 1,051,000 cwt of wheat, and 239,000 cwt of flour.

The Outlook for Wheat.

The New York Herald comment editorially in a long and able article upon the probable demand of Europe for grain, and in conclusion says:

"Fortunately for us, and fortunately for Europe also, we shall have enough for all, and such an abundance that prices are not likely to reach an exorbitant figure on either side of the Atlantic. This will be good news for the producers, and not bad news for the consumers, since it is never, or but very seldom, the gainer of the grain trade profits by its advance to unusually high prices. Our crop of wheat is likely to be but little short of five hundred millions, which is an unparalleled yield, at least two hundred millions more than will be needed for our own use. Europe never bought so much as this from us by one-third or one-fourth only, and will not certainly want so much this year. In her utmost need she would not want more than half our surplus, and seventy million bushels this year will probably supply her demand. In early certainly the bulk of the surplus will be of value in hands, as it will tend to head off mischievous speculations by showing that the margin of supply is not narrow enough to put it within reach of rival speculators or combinations to make great fortunes by locking up the crops.

"There is the kind of information that the farmers of the State should receive and reflect upon. Prices are at times unreasonable, but it is always better that the exact state of affairs should be known. There really seems to be but one thing that can cause a great boom this year, and that is the breaking out of war over the old, ever present, the Eastern difficulties. That such a war will certainly come sooner or later there can be little doubt, and when the most obstinate condition of affairs is such that no man can tell whether it will be transgressed at an early date or not.—N. Y. Herald.

Domestic Produce Market.

FLOUR—City Mills Superfine, $4 00@$4 50; Bakers and Family, $5 12½@$5 50; Best Family Flour, Extra, jobbing at $5 00@ (? bbl); Oregon Standard extra $4 00@$4 00; choice, $5@$5 25; Oregon Superfine, $3 50@$4; Walla Walla Extra, $4 00@$4 12½; Interior extra, $4 75@$5; Interior Superfine, $3 50@$4 0 bbl.

WHEAT—We note that small attention appeared to be bestowed on the market to-day by local operators. Shippers show more determination to secure business. Lots of superior long large quantities secured in the interior, is it quite certain that purchases at this port of more or less extent will be shortly consummated. Now is the time for moving grain, and those interested do not require much encouragement. Millers are in the market for new crop, and pay pretty fair prices for suitable parcels. Sales of 600 ctls choice new milling, $1 37½; 300 do do, $1 37½; 250 do do, $1 37½; 300 do do, $1 37½; 300 do do, $1 40; 300 do do, $1 37½; 300 do old, superior, $1 55 per ctl. We quote No. 1 at $1 37½@$1 40; with choice milling at $1 40@$1 50; No. 2 at $1 32½@$1 37½ ctl.

BARLEY—Sales were 300 sks choice feed, 80c; 200 sks and 200 sks good do, 82½c; 400 sks do, 85c; 300 sks do, 87½c; 200 sks do, 90c; 200 sks do, 77½c. Bearing is quite at 80@90c; bay Chevalier at 95@97 ctl; coast do 87½@ $1 20 p ctl.

OATS—Good and choice grades, $1 30@1 50; Surprise, $1 50@1 55; Surprise, $1 50@1 60 ctl.

CORN—Small remain. Yellow $1 10; large do, $1 12½ and White $1 35 p ctl.

RYE—Market quiet at $1 00@1 05 p ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Quoted at $1 50@1 60 p ctl.

HAY—Market quiet at $8 00@12 00 p ton.

STRAW—40@47½c p bale.

POTATOES—receipts to-day's were 1,050 sks and boxes. To-day sales were lower, at 50@65c p ctl for Sonora, and 30@37½ cfor sks.

ONIONS—Small receipts, $1 00@1 10 p ctl.

MILLSTUFF—Ground Barley, from the city mills, $18@21½; Graham Flour, $4@5 p ctl; Cracked Wheat, $4; Cracked Wheat, $4@5 p ℔; Middlings, selling at $17 p ton, and Wheat Bran, $18@19 p ton, and Rye Meal, $20 p ton—the three latter subject to the usual discount to the trade.

CORNMEAL, ETC—Table Meal is selling at $3@3½ pℓb; Feed, Corn $26 50 p ton; Hominy, $4 50 p ℔.

SEEDS—We quote: Flax, 90@3c; Mustard white, 2@2½c; Canary, 3@4c; Alfalfa, 7@8c; Timothy, 8@9c p ℔.

DRIED FRUIT—Quotable at $1 25@1 50 p ctl for Blackberry, and $1 10@$1 25 for Green.

BREWERS' GRAIN—$16 p ton.

BEANS—Small White, 1 00@1 15 Bayos, $1@1; Red, 90@$1 00. Pink, 90@1 00; Lima, $5 50@6; Pea, $1 50@1 55 per ctl; Bay is dull on paper a while ago. Storms and floods have apparently thinned North.

On the continent of Europe the weather based been very favorable. Violent storm and rains have kept back the wheat and other cereals from ripening—so much so that they were not nearly ready to be cut at the time of year. It would be manifestly unreasonable to look for full crops under such circumstances. The Public, of New York, is reported by telegraph as representing that France alone will need 50,000,000 bushels this year. That is to say that she would need nearly as much as we in California have to sell. Ordinarily France supplies herself, so if this statement be true, it would appear as if a market was opened for this year's surplus, and, irrespective of whatever might be needed by other countries, it is also stated that the demands of Europe will not fall more than 50,000,000 bushels below those of last year.

It is evident that the wheat market has reached its lowest level. There was a sharp fall in the markets of New York and Chicago during May and June; Liverpool followed suit, then San Francisco. But the downward movement has been checked and the tendency is upward. The price of California wheat in Liverpool advanced 10s. from July 1st to July 13. In New York there was also an advance, while since the first of July the Chicago market has gone up from 87 to 89½. All this shows a turn of the tide. Here there is a margin of from $1.40 to $1.60 on good wheat, and there is no likelihood of the market being any lower unless, indeed, usage should allow very much. We have here tonage but for a very small portion of our wheat surplus, but we shall send a great deal. Whatever is let by advance in tonage freights will, however, be met by an advance in wheat as the season progresses.

It is fairly certain that wheat in San Francisco will not be anything lower than it now is $1.40 @$1.60, it is probable that it may be higher but not very much so. Probably $1.50 will be the average price of the year. It is very certain that it will. It is a good price, and will's a good year, such as this is, will make California rich.—S. F. Journal of Commerce.

New Advertisements.

WASHING.
PRICES REDUCED.
La Grande Laundry,
LAUNDRY.
Thirteenth St., bet. Folsom and Howard, S. F
Baker Street, 11th Street Station.
PRINCIPAL OFFICE
648 MARKET STREET,
Opposite Union Ferry Depot.
Open from 7 A. M. to 7 P. M. Saturdays, 11 P. M.

SHIRTS
Nainsook	10c
Linen Bosom	15c
Linen Wristbands	15c
Linen Collars	15c
PLAIN WORK
Per Dozen
Gent's Drawers	15c
Gent's Undershirts	15c
Gent's Hosiery	15c
Gent's Handkerchiefs	15c
Sheets	15c
Pillow Slips, Starched	15c
Pillow Slips, not Starched	10c
Towels	10c
Table Cloths (ordinary size)	5c
Napkins	5c
Flannels	per yard
Blankets	per pair
Quilts	25c per doz. or 5c per pair
Vests	25c per doz. or 5c each
Pantaloons	25c per doz. or 5c each
Drawers	25c per doz. or 5c each
Undershirts	25c per doz. or 5c each
Hosiery	25c per doz. or 5c each
Handkerchiefs	25c per doz. or 5c each
Children's Plain Starched Pieces	5c each
Children's Fancy Pieces for Starch	5c each
SINGLE SMALL PIECES	5c each

These Prices apply only to plain pieces. Goods returning every time and delivered in a week.
WASHING CALLED FOR and DELIVERED to any part of the city.
Orders will receive prompt attention.

"While I Live I'll Grow!"
J. O'CONNELL,
Horse, Sign and Ornamental Painting
781 FOLSOM STREET, NEAR FOURTH.
AND 502 FOURTH ST., NEAR BRANNAN . . . SAN FRANCISCO.
WHITENING, TINTING, PAPER-HANGING, Glazing, etc. All orders promptly executed. Estimates given on Shop and Residences.

GARFIELD vs HANCOCK.
T. C. W. B. S.
IT IS EXPECTED THAT ALL PATRIOTIC CITIZENS will have an opportunity to choose from several good candidates for President in the approaching contest, but in the realm of soap,
THE CHOICE LIES BETWEEN
"ALPINE" BLEACHING SOAP
and all other Soaps. "ALPINE" BLEACHING SOAP, Alpine Soap, Castile, and Castile Soap, are synonymous. Its name has become a household word, its virtues have flown on the wings of the wind. Its manufacture success has stimulated a legion of base imitations, of which SPURIOUS, and purchase none that does not bear the imprint of the BANNER SOAP CO., who manufacture the most extensive assortment of Family, Laundry and Toilet Soaps made in the United States. If your grocer or druggist does not keep our goods, order direct from the STANDARD SOAP CO.,
204 Sacramento St., S. F.

BLACK FROCK COAT SUITS
For Funerals and other Occasions.
Can be had at the Tailoring Establishment of
J. COOPER,
24 New Montgomery St., Palace Hotel Block.
☞ Also Evening Dress Suits; latest, finest, finish.

LADIES' SUITS
Made and Trimmed for $3.50
SILK SUITS, $7.
Perfect Fit Guaranteed.
LINDELL HOUSE, Sixth and Howard Sts.,
Room 76.

SPECTACLE WEARERS
Should call and have their eyes tested by the
Johnston & Conrath Patent Eye Tester,
And wear the
Easy Fitting EYE GLASS and Economical Spectacles, for sale by
A. SPAULDING,
Watchmaker and Optician,
108 FOURTH STREET . . . SAN FRANCISCO
Engraving a Specialty.

T. PATE is sell our Rubber Hand Printing Stamps, 1 Cornelius Place. (O. A. Harper & Bro., Cleveland, O.

14 STOP ORGANS, SUB BASS & Oct. Coupler, 9 Set Reed, $65 p. 4800, $135 4 upwards sent on trial. Catalogue free. Address Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

HOPE FOR THE DEAF
Garmore's Artificial Ear Drums
restore perfect HEARING, and perform the work of the natural drum. Always in position. Invisible to others. Comfortable and are whisper heard distinctly. We refer to those using them. Circulars free. F. HISCOX, 853 Broadway, cor. 14th St., New York. Mention this paper.

$55 $77 a Week in Advertising. Samples free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Maine.

DIED.

GARCIA—In this city, August 2, Felipe E., wife of V. Garcia, a native of Mexico, aged 30 years, 2 months and 14 days. Deceased's Mass and funeral was celebrated at the Spanish church of our Lady of Guadalupe.

HAYES—In Oakland, July 30, Margaret, wife of Patrick Hayes, a native of King's county, Ireland, aged 72 years. Requiem Mass and funeral services were celebrated at the church of the Immaculate Conception, Oakland.

O'REILLY—In this city, July 30, at his residence, of heart disease, Captain Hugh J. O'Reilly, aged 41 years. Requiem Mass and funeral services were celebrated at the church of our Lady of Guadalupe.

LANTI—In this city, July 28, Alexander Lanti, beloved husband of Catherine B. Lanti, a native of Aberdeen, Scotland, aged 44 years. Boston papers please copy. Requiem Mass and funeral services were celebrated at the church of St. John Baptist.

McNEIL—In this city, July 28, Catherine, wife of Daniel McNeil and mother of Mrs. Thomas D. Riley, a native of Edgewortholtown, County Longford, Ireland, aged 53 years and 3 months. New Orleans papers please copy. Requiem Mass and funeral services at St. Bridget's Church.

LAWLOR—In this city, July 29, Johanna, beloved wife of Daniel Lawlor, a native of Tralee, County Kerry, Ireland, aged 65 years. Washington (D. C.) papers please copy. Requiem Mass and funeral services at St. Peter's Church.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Card to the Ladies.

Madame Tedford, from Paris, makes to order suits in the most elegant styles, as was seen in her display of beautiful French Infantile Opera Cloaks and matchless Dress Goods, at her parlors, 809 Sutter st., over which hangs suited to much attention will hardly, viz: the beautiful French Corset, invented by Mme Mathe, (late dressmaker to the Empress of France) the unequaled Corset, which has stilled so much admiration. Ladies can be fitted with the Corset at the parlors of 809 Sixteenth st. MADAME TEDFORD

C. R. HANSEN & CO.,
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE,
624 CLAY STREET, 626
Male Depart. SAN FRANCISCO. Female Depart.
The largest retail establishment on this coast. Families, Hotels, Farms, Mills, and Mines supplied with Male or Female Help,
FREE OF CHARGE.
Telephone Connection.
Scandinavian, German, and French spoken by the Proprietors.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
DR. J. J. CLARKE
Has removed his office from
106 Stockton Street, to 639 Clay.
OFFICE HOURS—From 9 to 10 A. M. 12 to 1 P. M. and 7 to 8 P. M. Residence 1416 Sacramento St.

FOR Sewer Pipe, Chimney Tops,
TERRA COTTA WARE, VASES,
FLOWER POTS, ETC.
—FALL OF—
WM. E. STEVENS,
Junction of Market and Larkin Sts., S. F.

J. L. NUGENT,
One Price
Cash Grocery Store,
723 Montgomery St.,
Bet. Washington and Jackson, S. F.

LESSONS GIVEN
—ON—
Piano, Organ, Accordeon, Concertina, Violin and Banjo.
PIANOS FOR SALE OR HIRE.
RES. BENNETT, 145 Fourth st., nr. Howard.

M'DONNELL & CO.,
AUCTIONEERS
St Ignatius Hall, Market street.
(Formerly the Jesuit Church.)
The attention of Merchants, Importers, Furniture Dealers, and others, is called to our large and commodious Salesroom, which, from its central position, is more convenient to the United States, specially suited for the proper disposal of Merchandise by Public Auction.
CONSIGNMENTS SOLICITED.
Liberal Cash Advances when desired. Houses and Stores sold on commission. Sales promptly attended to. Sales every Tuesday and Friday.

Real Estate Department.
Persons desirous of selling or of having their property in our hands, either for public or private sale, will find it to their interest to call on us. We have a large number of applicants for Ranches, Farms, and City property, principally before the public. Special attention given to the sale of Country Seats, Ranches, Farms, Lots, &c. House and Room Renting attended to.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Mechanic's Institute
FAIR!
1880.
OPENS AUGUST 10,
. . . AND . . .
CLOSES SEPTEMBER 11.
P. B. CORNWALL, President.
J. H. CULVER, Secretary.

YATES' SALOON,
NO. 707 MARKET STREET,
(Forty-Two Steps West of Market.)
JOHN D. YATES INVITES HIS FRIENDS AND THE Public to give him a call at his new, first-class Saloon, 707 Market street, Parlors. GRAND OPENING ON WEDNESDAY, JULY 21st.

WATCHES CLEANED, $1.
CLASSES, 10 cts.
Established in San Francisco for the last 15 years. H. HALLETT & CO., 566 Clay st., Oakland, Cal. 14-ly

THIS PAPER may be found on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce Street), where contracts may be made for it IN NEW YORK.

BELLS, ETC.

BLYMYER M'F'G CO.
BELLS.
Church, School, Fire Alarm, Time Stand, Factory, Farm and Plantation BELLS.
Warranted Superior to Any Made. Illustrated Catalogue Free.
LINFORTH, RICE & CO.
Sole Agents for Pacific Coast, 653 Market St., San Francisco.

MENEELY'S BELLS.
WEST TROY, NEW YORK.
Established in 1826.
CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND other Bells, made of copper and tin, warranted satisfactory. For prices and catalogue apply to MENEELY & COMPANY, West Troy, New York.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY
Manufacture of Best Copper and Tin for Churches, Schools, Farms, Factories, Plantations, BELLS. WARRANTED. Catalogue sent Free.
VANDUZEN & TIFT, Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY
MANUFACTURE THOSE CELEBRATED BELLS for Churches, Academies, etc. Price-List and Circulars sent Free.
HENRY McSHANE & CO.,
Baltimore, Md.
sep18

Church & School Bells.
STEEL AND IRON.
Plain or Wrought Cast
Bell Iron & Bell Metal.
No. 6, $5 lb . . . 7½ lb . . . 8c
No. 8, 6½c . . . 8½c . . . 9c
No. 7, 30c . . . 40 lb . . . 50 lb
No. 8, 30c . . . 40 lb . . . 50 lb
No. 9, 30c . . . 35 lb . . . 40 lb
Warranted Superior Cross Falls, N. Y.
M. C. Hawley & Co., Agents, S. F.

UNDERTAKERS.

O'CONNOR & SHEEHY,
UNDERTAKERS,
Every requisite furnished for Funerals at short notice.
1024 MARKET ST.

MASSEY & YUNG
UNDERTAKERS
PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKERS, Harstow's Burial Caskets always on hand, and Agents for the Celebrated Fire Proof Safes.
Everything necessary for funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.
Office—631 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb.

THOS. FLANAGAN H. J. CALLAGHER.
FLANAGAN & CALLAGHER,
UNDERTAKERS.
(Late of No. 834 Market Street.)
HAVE REMOVED TO
No. 20 FIFTH STREET, Opposite the Lincoln School.
EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR FUNERALS kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

WINES, LIQUORS, ETC.

F. & P. J. CASSIN,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
IN
WINES AND LIQUORS,
12 & 14 California St., cor. Drumm.
AGENTS FOR
Heidsieck & Co., and Dry Monopole Champagne; also, for O. K. Golden Plantation Whisky.

Pacific Coast Agency
GENUINE
J. H. CUTTER WHISKIES
A. P. HOTALING & CO.,
San Francisco, Cal.
mr21

PHILADELPHIA
BREWERY.
JOHN WIELAND . . . PROPRIETOR
SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM,
San Francisco.
Amount of Beer sold in 1877, 41,601 barrels.
apr28

MISCELLANEOUS.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

The German Savings and Loan Society.

For the half year ending this date, the Board of Directors of THE GERMAN SAVINGS AND LOAN SOCIETY has declared a dividend on Term Deposits at the rate of 8 (eight) per cent per annum, and on Ordinary Deposits at the rate of five (5) per cent per annum, free from Federal Taxes, and payable on and after the 15th day of July, 1880, to depositors.
HEO. LETTE, Secretary.
SAN FRANCISCO, June 30th, 1880.

HOP BITTERS!
If you are a man of business, suffering over your sickness and pain, and cannot attend to business, take HOP BITTERS.
HOP BITTERS!
If you have friends and relatives far from any kindness and care, and they are sick, or worse, and you cannot be with them, you can do the kind thing by sending them HOP BITTERS.
HOP BITTERS!
Wherever you are, whenever you are, whenever you feel that your system needs cleansing, toning or stimulating, HOP BITTERS are the best medicine.
HOP BITTERS!
Have you dyspepsia, debility or nervousness? Are you troubled with Biliousness, Fever and Ague, Kidney Complaint, Blood Disease, or any form of Kidney, Liver, Urinary or Nervous Complaint? Use HOP BITTERS.
HOP BITTERS!

GO TO
IRVING & CO
(Successors to Anderson and Irving.)
FOR GOOD SHIRTS
MEN'S UNDERWEAR
COLLARS, CUFFS,
TIES, SOCKS, ETC.
206 KEARNY ST . . near Sutter.
Shirts to Order a Specialty.

WOLFE TONE MARKET
J. W. KEHOE,
SUCCESSOR TO
Fresh and Salt Meats,
Cor. Ninth and Minna Sts.
BRANCH MARKET, Cor. 11th & Natoma sts

FRANCO-AMERICAN SAVINGS BANK,
638 Montgomery Street.
☞ For the half year ending June 30, 1880, a dividend has been declared on the deposits of five and three quarters (5¾) per cent per annum on term deposits and five (5) per cent per annum on ordinary deposits, free from Federal tax, payable on and after July 15, 1880.
LUKE D. RAND, Secretary.

FLOOD & HARPHAM,
(Noah F. Flood, G. E. Harpham.)
Attorneys at Law,
504 Kearny St., San Francisco.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY
ALLEN'S LYMAN'S COCKER'S RESTORATIVE
Is a never failing Cure for Nervous Debility, Exhausted Vitality, Seminal Weakness, Impotency, Sexual Decay, Premature Old Age, Wakefulness, Pimples, and all the sorrowful results of Youthful Indiscretion, and excesses in maturer years, such as Loss of Memory, Lassitude, Pain in the Back, Dimness of Sight, Nervous Irritability, Diseases of the Urinary Organs, Wasting Weakness, Nausea in the Head, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Costiveness, Blotches on the Face, Blood Humors, Pimples, and all the consequences of Self-Abuse, Or Excess in Venery, Dissipation or Smoking Opium.
THE MINTIE will agree to Indemnify Any Person who may be Injured by using THE GREAT REMEDY. Pamphlets, containing full particulars, and testimonials, free by mail. Price of THE MINTIE REMEDY, $1.00 a bottle, or four times the quantity, $10.00; sent to any address upon receipt of price, or C. O. D., secure from observation, and in perfect order, upon receipt of 25 cents. Address
THE MINTIE REMEDY CO., San Francisco, Cal.
Sold by all Druggists.

DR. MINTIE'S KIDNEY REMEDY, NEPHRETICUM, cures all kinds of Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Gravel, Gleet, Leucorrhœa, Inflammation, etc. Sold by all druggists, $1 00 a bottle, or four for $3 00.
DR. MINTIE'S DANDELION PILLS, are the best and cheapest DYSPEPSIA and BILIOUS cure in the market. For sale by all druggists.

CURES WHEN ALL OTHER MEDICINES FAIL, as it acts directly on the Kidneys, Liver, and Bowels, restoring them at once to healthy action. HUNT'S REMEDY is a safe and speedy cure. Thousands have testified to Lasting cures covering a period of from twenty to thirty years. It is the best medicine for the Diseases it is intended to cure.
HUNT'S REMEDY.
Prices, 75 cents and $1.50. Large size, containing three times the quantity of HUNT'S REMEDY. Take no other.

DIVIDEND NOTICE.

OFFICE OF
THE HIBERNIA BANKING AND LOAN SOCIETY,
Northeast cor. Montgomery and Post Sts.
SAN FRANCISCO, July 2, 1880.
At a regular meeting of the Board of Directors of this Society, held this day, a dividend at the rate of 8 per cent per annum was declared on all deposits for the six months ending June 30, 1880, payable from and after this date, and free from Federal tax.
JAMES LICK, Treasurer.
Secretary pro tem.

THE MONITOR,
A CATHOLIC FAMILY WEEKLY, CONTAINING THE LATEST AND MOST RELIABLE INTELLIGENCE.
Published every THURSDAY morning at 622 Clay Street, San Francisco.
Checks and Postal Money Orders should be made payable to the order of P. O. BOX 2203, San Francisco. Monitor Office, P. O. Box 2203, San Francisco.
TERMS:
Mail subscribers, per year, in advance . . . $4 00
To retail in city at . . . 4 50
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces the postage prepaid by the publishers . . . 5 00
Single Copies . . . 10 cents.

LATEST NEWS BY MAIL.

Speech of Mr. Dillon on his Return from America.

Mr. Dillon presided as Chairman at the next meeting of the Irish Land League, Dublin. The "Dublin Freeman" gives the following report of his speech.

The chairman said the question they had to consider could be looked forward to in America as the result of Mr. Parnell's mission. After Mr. Parnell left he (the chairman) traveled a good deal, chiefly among the Irish people in the United States, because, owing to a variety of circumstances—owing chiefly to the fact that he was present to return—he did not think it was wise and did not endeavor to make any speeches in the Union. He (the chairman) was anxious to get the opinions of the Irish people in the United States or enter into any engagements with the Western States. He was glad to be able to state from his personal experience that there was a remarkable unanimity of feeling in support of this land movement. There was a growing feeling that this movement promised to effect more good for Ireland than any movement that they could remember in their day (applause). The Irish people in America, and the Catholic press of America, all the leading organs, and all the organs, as he took pleasure in saying, which commanded anything like a wide circulation and a large influence over American Catholics, had supported this movement—not only supported it, but supported it in a way quite as far in the movement as the most advanced man in Ireland (Mr. Dillon's speech was interrupted by applause). However, he would not detain them with a long speech on the subject. In America, for they were waiting very much there to know what would turn out in Ireland (applause). But from what he had seen that if an attempt was made in Ireland to sell the country and the people, and that once it became generally known that the people were struggle to a man to keep the harvest in Ireland to feed the people, there would be, if they wanted it, an injection of public sentiment among their countrymen in America which never been equalled (applause). If an attempt was made to take away the harvest for absentees or any other purpose or for anything impure or injurious found in it, THE MINTIE treats all Female Complaints on a new and improved method. Observation Free. Thoroughly examination and advice, including medicine for one month, $5 00. Price of Vital Restorative, $1 00 a bottle, or four times the quantity, $10 00; sent to any address upon receipt of price, or C. O. D., secure from observation, and in perfect order, upon receipt of 25 cents. Address
THE MINTIE REMEDY CO., San Francisco, Cal.
Sold by all Druggists.

DR. MINTIE'S KIDNEY REMEDY, NEPHRETICUM, cures all kinds of Kidney and Bladder Complaints, Gravel, Gleet, Leucorrhœa, Inflammation, etc. Sold by all druggists, $1 00 a bottle, or four for $3 00.
DR. MINTIE'S DANDELION PILLS, are the best and cheapest DYSPEPSIA and BILIOUS cure in the market. For sale by all druggists.

ELGIN WATCHES.
Sold Everywhere. Cheaper than Ever. Best Watch Made for the Money. Every Watch Warranted. Sold by Jewelers Everywhere. Beware of Imitations. Ask for Elgin Watches and Take No Other. Illustrated Catalogue Free. JOHN WATCH CO., PITTSBURGH, PA.
GREAT WESTERN GUN WORKS.
Send stamp for Catalogue.
Rifles, Shot Guns, Revolvers, and Sporting Goods.

MENEELY & COMPANY,
Bell Founders, West Troy, N. Y.
Fifty years established. Church Bells and Chimes. Mounting, Hangings, Warranted. Catalogues free.

The Monitor.

THE MONITOR, A CATHOLIC FAMILY WEEKLY, CONTAINING THE LATEST AND MOST RELIABLE INTELLIGENCE.

Published every THURSDAY morning at 622 Clay Street, San Francisco.

Checks and Postal Money Orders should be made payable to the order of P. O. BOX 2203, San Francisco. Monitor Office, P. O. Box 2203, San Francisco.

TERMS:
Mail subscribers, per year, in advance . . . $4 00
To retail in city at . . . 4 50
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces the postage prepaid by the publishers . . . 5 00
Single Copies . . . 10 cents.

Vol. XXIII. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, AUGUST 19, 1880. NO. 45.

The Bristol "Times" on the Disaster in Afghanistan.

The close of our campaign in Afghanistan has been marked by a greater disaster to our arms. Such was the intelligence which Lord Beaconsfield walked down to the House of Commons on Wednesday afternoon, telegram in hand, to announce his startled assembly which, a few hours before, had been informed by the Premier of the progress of our negotiations with Abdur Rahman, of the achievements of our arms, and of our preparations to retire to a position on Indian territory, which we should hold under an amicable arrangement with the new Ameer's authority. The telegram came from the Governor of Bombay, the Disaster Persuasion, and it was based upon a message from Gen. Primrose at Jellalabad on Tuesday. The message was very short—"Terrible disaster, Gen. Burrowes's force annihilated. We are doing into Jellalabad." General Phayre telegraphed to collect what force he can and march on Candahar. Poole was being concentrated at Chuman." That was all. How the brigade was made up—what its strength—how the disaster happened or what annihilation meant—there was nothing to indicate, and Lord Hartington, knew nothing, except what we all knew, that Burrowes had left Candahar, at least with the army of the Wali, to meet the Kheis of Herat on the banks of the Helmand, that he had been defeated and annihilated, and left the British brigade, a mere handful of men, to meet the victorious Afghans, with a force of 12,000 at their back. It was not till close upon six o'clock that the intelligence got out of the House of Commons, and, leaving upon the distinguished assembly a sadness and a gloom such as the result of his inquiries by telegram, and the news from the seat of war, had left Lord Beaconsfield in the India Office.

Such a tragedy happened at a place called Khiki-Nahaki, a village on the Candahar road, about 80 miles from Candahar, and 20 miles from Jellalabad, people a year ago. The name of this station appears to have been selected by the frightful crimes—not only pardons the crime, but it seems to sanctify the criminal, if he be a man with a grand station. This is called survey but it can hardly be said that the quality of mercy is not strained." Still it looks magnanimous to make the world think that the Republic feels

SECOND TO ONE STRENGTH.

Simultaneously—I believe on the very same day—if they never or quite should be balanced by greater disaster to our arms, which is a useless precaution against the Jesuits. Whilst we are boasting of our victories, without an accusation of any specific offence or defined unofficially, the Jesuits are seizing on our lands, property and denial the right to instruct its disciples, and the Jesuits are, without an accusation, probably the explanation of the attack on the cells crime of the worst and most Jesuitic.

Gen. Primrose is now shut up in Jellalabad, and will be rescued, or escaped from the slaughter in the citadel of Candahar, a position which, if properly defended, will be well provisioned, and capable of withstanding a far greater force than Ayoub Khan. Gen. Phayre will undertake or the British allow them to attempt to rescue the remnant of the Kabul force. The General's whitehead into the citadel of Candahar, a population, till now, very friendly to the British, and who believe in the Wali, because this withdrawal leaves the city practically open and unprotected, and the British formed their only protection. Gen. Phayre can reach Candahar, and, if he can, he will, which we do not the contest of a general in his position or in the place he is ordered to defend.

The disaster has revealed a profound impression upon the nation and the Government. The Ministerial organs have for the first accounts published of it, and of the panic-stricken scene in the Commons, have spoken of it as a disaster, the Times, the same of ourselves, as in the march of Ayoub Khan, and the Standard, the organ of the party of his game the child of Russian grandeur. It will be a disaster, and it will be felt to be a disaster, although not large, perhaps, for news travels in this age of wonders, and we have learned very almost as quickly as by telegraph.

THE PERSIST BY CANDAHAR.

If it towards Candahar, where Gen. Primrose and his forces will be beleaguered by the force of the Ayoub Khan, we have to go, it is a very forlorn to the sort of the spot now necessary, the Ayoub Khan, the victorious Afghan brigade, and the internal of country that separates the two forces, and the fact that it is proposed that the mounted vanguard of the expedition should be sent to Candahar, and that they are expected to traverse the distance in two days, Gen. Phayre's force will be left to the Ayoub. The Afghan brigade, regular for its complete, Gen. Phayre's force, and the Ayoub Khan's force, has at his command, although—in that portion of it which is regular—it is a very large force, perfectly virtually impregnable to assault, and capable of withstanding a long siege, and, if it be not so, then either General Phayre will permit or the Afghans will permit, the Ayoub Khan to take the specialities of its construction are such as to make it difficult to carry it by assault, and of enormous this time, but the so-called citadel is itself a complicated series of formidable cells, and, if the Ayoub Khan's artillery should be clearly damaged unscientific assault. When first occupied by the British, it was within made use of perplexing that, after several days' tenderness, the Ayoub Khan, the British, and, perhaps, found themselves puzzled when making their way from cell to cell, and, when the Afghans were been removed during our occupation, every change has been made in the place, and, if it be not so, then John Bull Crying out for Cheap American Meat.

The London Despatch says: We cannot but regret the Government's declaration that it has no power to deal with the restrictions imposed on the importation of fresh food from America, which, if maintained, will, not only injure Government, which made the occurrence of the case of pure-pecuniary interest, but, under the pretext for excluding from our markets the cattle plague, will inflict a serious loss on our farmers' prices. We have every sympathy for distressed agriculturists, but we do not see why the interest should be relieved by practically putting a tax upon the food of the people. The cattle plague is a very serious matter, depending on conditions as favorable for growing beef as Texas, and, therefore, the alliance of the farmer working—in other words, to arrange matters in America, so that those who work on the soil would not have to support in pecuniary injury those who do not work on it. But if, in the state of the necessity for organizing such an equitable arrangement, the fact of the poor is to be taxed in order that farmers may be better able to lose the business of supporting as life crisis—we must protest against the fraud. There is practically no disease amongst cattle in America just now, and, therefore, there is no justification for restricting their importation to this country. At present there has been a falling off in the number of home-grown sheep and cattle to the extent of 1,372,000 (for 1879), and if the English graziers cannot produce enough for us, what sense is there in preventing us from getting the Americans to fill our hungry mouths? The Government has been asked to allow the Irishmen they are disembarked not only pass a restriction on the importation of fresh meat, but also of good feed to be wasted; all the offal, or the "fifth quarter," as it is sometimes called, is merely fit for manure, and, therefore, it is a fine way of explaining the injustice done to the farmers by the restrictions, that these restrictions with that which resulted from the cattle outbreak of pecuniary—pecuniary in England. Trade was covered by £8,000,000. But every cattle disease, and, if it be not so, then, the amount owing to the prohibitory conditions that hinder the importation of American meat. In other words, the people of England sacrifice £8,000,000 a year to the cattle disease, and, if it be not so, then, the amount owing to the prohibitory conditions that hinder the importation of American meat. In other words, the people of England sacrifice £8,000,000 a year to the cattle disease, and, if it be not so, then, the amount owing to the prohibitory conditions that hinder the importation of

The Price of Wheat.

The price of wheat will hardly be any lower this year; all the signs are to the contrary. At one time it was thought that it would be much lower. The magnitude of the wheat crop all over the world was exaggerated. It appeared from the statistics as if the Atlantic and Western States would have a surplus of 120,000,000 bushels over all demands. But now the crop of the Western States does not look so big as it did on paper a while ago. Storms and floods have apparently thinned it out.

On the continent of Europe the weather has been very favorable. Violent storm and rains have kept back the wheat and other cereals from ripening—so much so that they were not nearly ready to be cut at the close of June. It would be manifestly unreasonable to look for full crops under such circumstances. The Public, of New York, is reported by telegraph as representing that France alone will need 30,000,000 bushels this year. That is to say that she would need nearly as much as we in California have to sell. Dellasalle, France's agent in Europe himself, as if this statement be true, it would appear as if a market was opened for this year's surplus, and, irrespective of whatever might be needed by other countries. It is also stated that the demands of Europe will not fall more than 60,000,000 bushels below those of last year.

It is evident that the wheat market has reached its lowest level. There was a great fall in the markets of New York and Chicago during May and June; Liverpool followed suit, then San Francisco. But the downward movement has been checked and the tendency is upward. The price of California wheat in Liverpool advanced 15c. from July 1st to July 19. In New York there was a slight advance, while since the first of July the Chicago market went up from 87½ to 90½. All this shows a turn of the tide. How there is a margin of from $1.40 to $1.60 on good wheat, and there is no likelihood of the market being any lower unless, indeed, foreign should advance very much. We have here tonage for a very small portion of our wheat surplus, but we shall send a great deal. Whatever is lost by advance in tonage freights will, however, be met by an advance in wheat as the season progresses.

It is fairly certain that wheat in San Francisco will not be anything lower than it now is $1.40 @1.40; it is probable that it may be higher but not very much so. Probably $1.50 will be the pivotal price, of medium. It is very certain that it will ... It is a good price, and will, a good year, such as this is will make California rich.—S. F. Journal of Commerce.

The English Grain Market.

Harvest Already Begun—Good Outlook for American Wheat.

LONDON, August 2.—The "Mark Lane Express," in its review of the grain trade for the past week, says: The weather has been very unsettled, and large tracts of land all over the Kingdom have been laid and twisted by the rain, and mildew, which had appeared among the wheat, is increasing. Dry warm weather is much needed to ripen it. The harvest has already begun in Kent, barley being, as a rule, the earliest crop. Unless the weather improves and settles, farmers' sanguine expectation relative to barley will hardly be realized, and good English malting descriptions will again be scarce. Oats have suffered less from the recent weather. The markets have been generally dense, and most sorts of wheat have been slightly held for an advance, and a strong feeling in trade is increasing. Although July arrivals from abroad were over a million quarters of wheat and flour, yet English deliveries have been so comfy that the stock of wheat which existed at the beginning of July must be diminished nearly four hundred thousand quarters. August arrivals from abroad are likely to be good, but if deliveries of English wheat are practically nil, it will be the reverse of pleasant to the market. Rates are likely to be sensitive for September. The market for forward delivery is of a different character. American red Winter is offered at about 7 shillings below the price of old grain; England is taking an increased share of American grain shipments. Purchasers for the continent have taken 100,000 quarters. There are a fair number of cargoes of the coast, but buyers are reserved. Imports into the United Kingdom during the week ending July 24th, were 1,051,000 cwt of wheat, and 236,679 cwt of flour.

The Outlook for Wheat.

The New York Herald comments editorially in a long and able article upon the probable demand of Europe for grain, and its conclusion says:

"Fortunately for us, and fortunately for Europe also, we shall have enough for all, and not an abundance that prices are not likely to reach an exorbitant figure on either side of the Atlantic. We will be good men for the people, and not bad news for the farmers. Since it is never, or but very seldom, the case of the grain who profits by its advance to unusually high prices, the crop of wheat is likely to be but little short of five hundred million bushels—an unparalleled yield, at least two hundred millions more than will be needed for our own use. Prices never bought so much as this from us in her years of great scarcity, and will not certainly send so much this year. The farmer need also hold his wheat until more than half our surplus, and seventy million bushels this year, will probably supply her deficiency. An early certainty on this point will be of value on all hands, as it will tend to keep off mischievous speculations by showing that the margin of supply is not narrow enough to put it within reach of individual speculators or combinations to make great fortunes by locking up the crop.

This is the kind of information that the farmers of this State should receive and reflect upon. Facts are at times unpleasant, but it is given better that the exact truth of affairs should be known. There really seems to be not one thing that can cause a grain boom this year, and that is the prospect of a war over the settlement of the Eastern difficulties. That such a war will probably come sooner or later there can be little question; but the complicated condition of affairs is such that no one can tell whether it will be inaugurated at an early date or not.—S. F. Globe.

Domestic Produce Market.

FLOUR—City Mills Superfine, $4 00@$5 50 Bakers and Family, $5 12½@$5 50; Best Family Brands, $5 50@$6 00; Oregon Superfine, $4 00@$4 50 Oregon Extra, $4 50@$5 00; choice, $5@$5 25 Oregon Superfine, $3 50@$4; Walla Walla Extra, $4 00@$5 12½; Interior extra, $4 75@$5; Interior Superfine, $3 50@$4 87½ ⅌ bbl.

WHEAT—More than usual attention appeared to be bestowed on the market to-day by buyers for spring wheat. Shippers show more determination to transact business. Even if exporters have large quantities secured in the interior, it is quite certain that purchasers at this port of more or less extent will be absolutely necessary. Now is the time for moving grain, and those interested do not propose to miss the opportunity. Millers are in the market for new crop, and pay pretty fair prices for suitable parcels. Sales of 200 ctls choice new milling, $1 37½; 200 ctls do, $1 37½; 200 do fair grain, $1 35; 200 do good do, $1 35; 500 do old shipping, $1 47½; 400 do old superior, $1 35 ⅌ ctl. We quote No. 1 Shipping, $1 37½@$1 40; choice milling at $1 37½; No. 2, at $1 32½@$1 47½ ⅌ ctl.

BARLEY—Sales were 300 ctls choice feed, 30c; 100 do and 200 ship good do feed, 30c; 400 do do, 30c; and 1,000 and 200 ctls dark coil coast do at 30c. Large receipts are reported. We quote: Feed, $1 30@$1 40; coast do $1@$1 25 ⅌ ctl.

OATS—Good and choice grades, $1 30@$1 50; inferior to fair, $1 20@$1 25; Surprise, $1 50@$1 60 ⅌ ctl.

CORN—Small round Yellow $1 10; large do, $1 15; and White, $1 12½@$1 15 ⅌ ctl.

RYE—Good choice is quotable at $1 15@$1 25 ⅌ ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at $8 00@$1 00 ⅌ ctl.

STRAW—60@75c ⅌ bale.

POTATOES—To-day's were 1,602 sks and boxes. To-day's sales were lower, at 37½@40c ⅌ ctl for boxes, and $1@$1 10 ⅌ ctl for sks.

ONIONS—New California, $1 00@$1 10 ⅌ ctl.

MILLSTUFF—Ground Barley from the city mills, $18@$19; Graham Flour, $2@$2 ⅌ ⅌; Oatmeal, $5@$5 ⅌ ⅌; Cracked Wheat, $5@$5 ⅌ ⅌; Middlings, selling at $17 ⅌ ton, and Rice Meal, $18@$19 ⅌ ton; Jersey Oil Cake Meal, $30 ⅌ ton—the latter subject to usual discount to the trade.

COTTONSEED, ETC.—Table Meal is selling at $1@$1 ⅌ ctl; Feed, Corn $26 50 ⅌ ton; Hominy, $27@$28 ⅌ ton.

SEEDS—We quote: Flax, 2@3c.; Mustard white, 2@3½c; Canary, 3@4½c; Alfalfa, 7@8½c; Timothy, 6@8c ⅌ ⅌.

DRIED PEAS—Quotable at $1 25@1 50 ⅌ ctl for Blackeyed, and $1 10@$1 25 for Green.

BEESWAX—Quotable at 25c ⅌ ⅌.

BEANS—Bayos, $1 85@$1 90; Lima, $3 15@$3 20; Pinks, $2@$1 05; Reds, $2@$1 05; Bulls, $2@$1 05; Lima, $5 50@$6 ⅌ ctl; Peas, $2@$2 25 ⅌ ⅌ ctl.

BUTTER—Fancy dairy, 30@32½c, choice California roll 25@28½ mixed lots from country stores, 17@18c new firkin, 20@22 ⅌ ⅌.

CHEESE—Good and choice California 10@12c; Eastern 13@20c; Western, 12@14 ⅌ ⅌.

POULTRY—We quote: Live Turkeys, ⅌ ⅌, 17@20c; dressed do, none in market; Geese, ⅌ pair, $1 25@1 75; Ducks, per doz, $4 50@5 50; Hens, $5 50@7 00; Roosters, $5 50@6 00; Young do, $7 00; do old, $5 00@6 00; Broilers, $2 50@$4 50.

GAME—Hares, $1 75@2 25; Rabbits, $1@1 25 ⅌ doz.

EGGS—California, 21@22½c; Oregon, 20c; Eastern 18@20 ⅌ doz.

HONEY—Good to choice Comb, in first hands 11@13 best strained 6@7 ⅌ ⅌.

NUTS—California Almonds, Soft shell, 12@15c; Walnuts, 8@10c; Peanuts, 9@10c; Hickory Nuts, 5@7; Pecans, 16@17c; Filberts, 12@13c; Brazil Nuts, 14@15c ⅌ ⅌.

DOMESTIC FRUIT—Prices quotable $3@3 50 ⅌ chest, Apricots $1 50 ⅌ box; Watermelons, $2 25@2 50 ⅌ dozen; Cantaloupes, $3@3 50 ⅌ crate; Grapes, 75c@$1 50 ⅌ box; Crabapples, 75c ⅌ basket; Peaches, 60c@1 00 ⅌ box; Plums, 50@75c; Pears 50@75c; Apples ⅌ box, 75@1 00; Figs, 50@75c; Plums ⅌ box, 75@1 00; Raspberries, 20@7 ⅌ chest.

VEGETABLES—We quote: Cabbage ⅌ ctl, $1 25; California Potatoes, 60@65c ⅌ ctl; Carrots, ⅌ sack, 75c; Turnips, ⅌ ctl 50c; Garlic, ⅌ lb, 3@4c; Beets, ⅌ ctl, $1 00@$1 25; Tomatoes, ⅌ box, $1@1 50.

HIDES AND PELTS—Heavy salted Steers, over 55 lbs, 10@10½c; medium cows and steers, 9@c; light Hides, 8@9c; Salted Kips, 10@salted Calf, 10@12c; Dairy Calf Skins, 60@70c each; Dry Hides, sandy shasian, 19@19½c; Dry Kips, 20@by Calf, 20 prime Hair Goatskins 25c; fall and winter, 30@37½c; prime do, Doe Skins, Summer 40c; medium Long Hairs, 30@37½c; Long Wooled Sheepskins, Spring Shearlings, 25c; short wool, 40@50c; medium Wool, 75@$1 ea; prime, $1@2.

PELTS—Quotable at 25@45c ⅌ lb.

TALLOW—Good and choice rendered, 5@6c; refined, 7@7½c ⅌ lb.

WOOL—Quotations are: 17@24c for southern and San Joaquin 20@31c for coast, and 28@32c for from Humboldt and Sonoma.

HEAT—The annexed quotations are for whole carcasses from slaughterers to dealers: Steer—Prime, 5@5½c; medium grade, 4@4½c; fair, 4c ⅌ lb. Veal—Steady Large Calves, 50 ⅌ head, and 7@8c ⅌ lb. Mutton—Wethers are quotable at 3@4c, and ewes at 3½ ⅌ lb. Lamb—Is quotable at 10@c ⅌ lb for good to choice. Pork—Live Hogs, 5@5½c for lard and 6@6½c for soft; dressed do, 7@7½c ⅌ lb.

A Card to the Ladies.

Madame Tufford, from Paris, wishes to render aid to the most expert style, as she says, to her late display of Parisian Corsets, Dress and Skirt Supporters. We feel confident in saying to those of our readers who attended such attention will satisfy, the beautiful bright mosaicque of Mme Rafine Finne, daughter of John T. Finne also the inaugural ball dress of Mme Tufford, which for the time only, she consents to remain. MADAME TEFFORD

309 Bisteenth st.

C. R. HANSON & CO.,
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE,
624 CLAY STREET, 626
Male Dept. SAN FRANCISCO. Femal Dept.
The largest establishment on this coast. Families, Hotels, Farms, Mills, and Mines supplied with Male or Female Help,
FREE OF CHARGE
Telephone Connection.
Scandinavian, German, and French spoken by the Proprietors.

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
DR. J. J. CLARKE
Has removed his office from
106 Stockton Street, to 639 Clay,
OFFICE HOURS.—From 9 to 12 a. m. 1 to 3 p. m. and 7 to 8 p. m. Residence 1416 Sacramento st.

UNDERTAKERS.

O'CONNOR & SHEEHY,
UNDERTAKERS,
Every requisite furnished for Funerals at short notice.
1024 MARKET ST.

MASSEY & YUNG
UNDERTAKERS
PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKERS. Barstow's Burial Caskets always on hand, and Agents for Pak's Metallic Burial Cases.
Everything necessary for funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.
638 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb.

THOS. FLANAGAN. H. J. GALLAGHER.
FLANAGAN & GALLAGHER,
UNDERTAKERS,
(Late of No. 824 Market Street.)
HAVE REMOVED TO
No. 20 FIFTH STREET, Opposite the Lincoln School.
EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR FUNERALS kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

MISCELLANEOUS.

LADIES!
MONS. A. MOREL
Removes instantly, permanently and without injury
Superfluous Hair, Freckles, Moles Birth and Pock Marks.
Specifics Sent to any part of the World.
ADDRESS,
FEISTEL & CERRARD,
638 Market street, Parlors 2, 3, and 4
WHO TREAT CORNS, BUNIONS, NAILS AND ALL Diseases of the Feet. Agents for the DOBBS, a preventive for Excessive Perspiration.

THE GREAT ENGLISH REMEDY is a never-failing Cure for Seminal Weakness, Lost Manhood, Impotency, Nervous Debility,

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

Seizure of Rifles at Queenstown.

CORK, August 12.—At 1 o'clock this morning a large party of Fenians left Cork in a special train, escorted the Norwegian ship Jesse, repairing at Queenstown, went into her hold and stole three cases of rifles, which formed a part of her cargo. The robbers cut the telegraph wires leading to Cork.

Fully one hundred men were engaged in the robbery of arms from the Jesse. There were sentries posted at various points. The crew of the Jesse were battened down in the forecastle, and armed parties placed over them by the Captain and the revenue officer were sent up in the cabin. The Captain would have fired on the sentry guarding the cabin door, but for the entreaty of his wife, who feared that they would be killed. It is supposed that one of the party fell into the hold, thus putting an end to further operations, marks of blood being traceable. Twenty men kept guard on the road to assist in carrying off the spoil. All the rifles appear to be of one pattern. A pool of blood was also found on the deck. The Captain, and revenue officer, were shut up in the cabin an hour and a half. They finally forced the door and saw the men leg departing in the boat. Six men have been arrested, who evidently formed part of the party. They were found lurking about the town of Cork. The dockyard constables, while on their way to assist the members of the mob of the ship to secure the remaining rifles, the whole boats being rowed towards the wharf, was suddenly set upon, some of whom pointed a revolver and enjoined him to be quiet. The revenue officer on the deck of the Jesse was similarly served. The marauders told the crew to keep quiet or they would be shot. The Captain was compelled to surrender his keys, provided with which the marauders searched the ship. After their departure it was found that only forty stand of arms were taken. The guns were all smoothbore, of the pattern musket, useless, except at close quarters. The ammunition was of no use to the rifles, being bore expense. A body of police to the police by horse expense. A body of police soon arrived and searched the district in vain. A fragment of a boat-cloak, similar to that worn was found in the hold. One of the crew stated that he heard a sentry cry, followed by trampling of feet, as if a burden was being borne ashore. The Captain of the Jesse says that he saw an injured man jaken off the boat, apparently dead. The Captain has received a letter, bearing the Cork postmark, apologizing for the trouble given and stating that the guns taken are not what were expected. The raiders thought they were breechloaders, and if such had been the case, they would have secured the Captain that they would have given him a couple on their friends in New York for their full value.

CORK, August 13.—It is no secret that there were arms on board the ship Jesse lying in the harbor. All the marauders were armed with revolvers. The six men arrested were before the magistrate yesterday. They all belong to Cork, and were mostly employed at unloading ships at once at the Passage. They were remanded for trial. The most remarkable circumstance connected with the affair is, that while the boats were leaving and while the Jesse was being emptied, no shots were fired by the captain or revenue officer on board. At the time of the attempt to board the Jesse, there were only two on the outside the dock wall, only twenty-five yards from the ship, and a slightly more than ordinary exertion on the part of the Jesse would have reached them. The police at Black Rock, a village between Queenstown and Cork, patrolled at three o'clock yesterday morning, saw two boats passing up, containing a number of men who they recognized as belonging to Cork. At this time the Black Rock police had heard of a robbery, and had accordingly produced an uneasy feeling in the neighborhood, and it is thought will only hasten the outbreak, and shows that the element of disorder still exists.

The Irish people are in a state of excitement. Four rifles were found in a garden at Roebertown. It is understood that the police have arrested the man who fell into the hold of the Jesse. Twenty-five patrolled along the river Lee last night, but no further clue to the identity of the raiders was obtained.

Sixteen more rifles have been found in Ivor, not a hundred yards from where the first lot was found. It is statistically stated that the number of the missing rifles amounts to 1,000. The authorities have taken charge of two boats left at the Jesse.

The island of Inishbor the stamp of 1840, and appear to have been polished up before coming on the John.

DUBLIN, August 13.—It is remarked that a greater number than usual of minister looking people have passed through this city, some in persons, having an American air, are to seen about the city and towns of Ireland, and within the last four days about 600 stand of the best breech arms have been purchased here by agents.

RESOLUTION OF THE COMMONS.

In the House of Commons to-night O'Connor Power called attention to the political reports in regard to the fever stricken districts in Mayo and other parts of the west of Ireland, and moved a resolution that it was essential that effective sanitary arrangements be inaugurated immediately made. Thomas Sexton, Liberal and Home Rule member for Belfast county, seconded the resolution. Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland, said that the distress had been much exaggerated. The Government had sent an efficient medical staff. It would be willing to have a resolution placed on record to the effect that in the opinion of the House the government, the clergy and the agricultural population of Mayo, Sligo and other parts of the west demand the immediate attention of the Government. Forster incidentally spoke of the contributions made by Irish Americans to relieve the distress in Ireland, and said that English laborers would probably not have done as much for their own people under similar circumstances. Power accepted Forster's resolution, which was then agreed to.

SERVICE ON FLINKETT.

LONDON, August 13. The Committee of the Irish Land League has determined to defend a portion of the funds subscribed by American sympathizers, with the view of the Land League, to the prosecution of the actions of the Earl Spencer Divisions of High Court of Justice, for the recovery of the penalties against Lord Plunket, for voting for time before taking the oath as Ver. Lord Plunkett has been served with five writs.

Crops in Ireland.

DUBLIN, August 13.—The recent cloudless days and bright nights have done an immense amount of good to crops of all kinds.

Ireland's Land Affairs.

DUBLIN, August 16.—Alderman Dillon, Member of Parliament for Tipperary, speaking at a land meeting at Killaloe, yesterday, said that as soon as the Land League had 200,000 men enrolled they would be able to strike against rents and if their demands were not granted, that all the arms in Ireland would not be able to keep rent in Ireland. They would have no Compleat Act, and they could go out at any hour of the night and shoot and carry off the rents. At the meeting of the Land League at Cork, the demonstrate was condemned, and the belief expressed that the raid must have been effected by persons desiring to see a renewal of the Crimean Acts, and wishing to give the Government good value for their secret service money.

Orange Attack.

LONDON, August 16.—In a fight yesterday at Castlewellan, County Down, between Catholics and Orangemen, many persons were badly wounded. The Catholics were cruelly treated with the affair is, that while the boats were leaving and while the Jesse was being emptied, no shots were fired by the captain or revenue officer on board. At the time of the attempt to board the Jesse, there were only two on the outside the dock wall, only twenty-five yards from the ship, and a slightly more than ordinary exertion on the part of the Jesse would have reached them. The police at Black Rock, a village between Queenstown and Cork, patrolled at three o'clock yesterday morning, saw two boats passing up, containing a number of men who they recognized as belonging to Cork. At this time the Black Rock police had heard of a robbery, and had accordingly produced an uneasy feeling in the neighborhood, and it is thought will only hasten the outbreak, and shows that the element of disorder still exists.

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY..... AUG. 19, 1880.

It is agreeable, interesting, and generally conducive, to enlivening our faith, to read sound Catholic periodicals in which the struggles and triumphs of the Church throughout the world are brought to our notice, the pious religious events are recorded, the voice of the ancient defenders of the faith is heard, and the Allocution of the Father of the faithful reach us for our edification. Hence, most of the dioceses or provinces possess a Catholic Journal, generally at the organ of one or more Bishops, which, as a true friend periodically visits the various families, and is entitled to a corresponding friendly welcome. Instead of reading scurrilous sheets, we should rather encourage such Catholic Journals as greatly contributing to the cause of truth. We do not mean to state that whatever appears in them is emanating from the Prelates, or had any statement in them should be charged on the Church, even when they be the official organs of bishops, who are responsible only for what appears under their signatures, yet as it takes place in editing here the wise words of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, who say on this subject. "We cheerfully acknowledge the services the Catholic Press has rendered to religion, as also the disadvantages with which, in most instances, it has been conducted, although yielding to publisher and editors a very insufficient remuneration for their labors. We exhort the Catholic community to extend to these publications a more liberal support, in order that they may be enabled to become more worthy, like great many at present, it is our duty to ward ourselves of this mode of making known the tenets of our religion, and bringing the salutary instructions which so generally prevail in regard to them." —Instructor Advocate

To Our Subscribers.

Those who are in arrears to THE MONITOR are urgently requested to settle their accounts at their earliest convenience. The date on the paper or wrapper shows the time to which each subscriber has paid up. All who have not paid in some time in 1881 are in arrears. Money may be sent by Post office orders in registered letters, or by Wells, Fargo & Express, at our expense.

Notes and Comments.

The Right Rev. John A. Watterson was installed as Bishop of the Columbus diocese at the city of Columbus, Ohio, on last Sunday, August 8, 1880. Right Rev. William Henry Elder acted as consecrator, assisted by Right Rev. William George McCloskey, Right Rev. J. Tuigg, and Right Rev. Edward Fitzgerald.

A Consistory will be held to-morrow at Zome, at which a large number of Bishops and Archbishops will be nominated for Italian, Spanish, and transatlantic dioceses. It is also currently reported that before the close of the year the Vatican Council, which had only well commenced its business at the time of its adjournment, will be again assembled. Decisions on matters of Faith had only been adopted. There remains the vast field of ecclesiastical discipline, the relations between Church and States, and a variety of other matters that the great changes since the Council of Trent render necessary to be taken into consideration. Recent comments of the Allts are altogether incorrect.

We learn from the Western Catholic that a company of four Sisters of the Sacred Heart will leave Chicago on the 20th of August for New Zealand, to join the branch of the Order established there last year.

The Paris Univers publishes an address of forty Irish members of Parliament to the Archbishop of Paris condoling with him on the expulsion of the Jesuits and conjuring the French Government.

The New York Catholic Review says, "We need hardly say that the Christian Brothers, that is, those of the foundation of the Venerable de la Salle with whom we are familiar in America and whose headquarters are in France, will open a novitiate in Athlone in what was formerly Sommer Hill College, the pupils of which will be transferred to Bishop Gilhooly's seminary in Sligo. There are already Christian Brothers in Ireland whose rule was not dissimilar to that of De la Salle, but the two communities were wholly distinct, one being a French and the other an Irish foundation. Brother Patrick, so well known in America, will for some time have special charge of the new branch." We believe this will prove of incalculable advantage to the cause of Catholic education in the United States. The Brothers will be thus enabled to obtain a large number of zealous and devoted subjects, which will enable them to respond to the constant and numerous demands being made on them to take charge of schools and other institutions.

The painful signs of English moral decay, pointed out by English writers, "in the bitterness of heart" are multiplying on all sides. Mr. Matthew Arnold, one of the most eminent Englishmen living, in a recent paper in the Nineteenth Century, treating of the condition of his countrymen, draws the conclusion that "The upper classes are materialistic, the middle classes are vulgar, and the lower classes are brutal."

The New York Freeman's Journal is informed by a correspondent at Panama that the abominable law enacted by the ever famous Congress of 1877, by which the Bishops of Antioquia, Cauca, Medellin and Pasto were banished from the country because they had dared to oppose the demoralizing teachings which the radical governments were trying to introduce into their Dioceses, has been repealed and those worthy Prelates can again return to the field of their labors to minister to the wants of their flocks. Monsignour Parra, Bishop of Pamplona, who for like reasons was kept out of his See, has also been left free to return to his Diocese.

In 1850 there were in the six New England States only 40,062 Catholics, 27 priests, 22 churches, and 30 other ecclesiastical buildings unfinished. Ten years later there were in four of these States, omitting Connecticut and Rhode Island, 66,136 Catholics, 30 priests, 37 churches, and 32 chapels and stations. Now there are in all 730,000 Catholics, 156 priests, 592 churches, and 154 stations.

The two "young American Jesuits," Thomas Kernan, son of Senator Kernan of New York, and Mr. Van Reusselaer, of the well known patroon family of Albany, the last-named gentleman being a converted minister, landed in New York per steamer Italy from England, whither they went two years ago to make their novitiate at Hoghampton College. They have already entered on a continuation of their studies at Woodstock College, some miles from Washington, in Maryland.

The constituency of Tipperary has received a signal compliment in the person of Mr. P. J. Smyth, M.P., their eloquent senior member. One of the most accomplished Catholic bishops of England has written a letter from Rome in the most flattering terms on the late appeal of Mr. P. J. Smyth in the House of Commons to preserve the reputation of Parliament against the assaults of Albion. On being apprized of the terms and drift of that appeal, Leo XIII. at once, as the bishop states, ordered the translation of Mr. P. J. Smyth's speech into Italian for the Pope's own study, and that it might be widely disseminated through the Italian dominion.

The London Dispatch referring to the great emigration to the United States, says: "For the present, our proletaires, and not merely our proletaires but our small capitalists, are hastening across the Atlantic in unprecedented swarms. Four hundred thousand souls, the best bone and sinew of England, Scotland, Ireland, Scandinavia, and Germany, will this year alone be landed at Castle Garden, New York; and they are admittedly the best class of emigrants that have ever set foot on the shores of America. What is the lesson taught by such an exodus? This: that the most enterprising, intelligent, and industrious of our European populations have lost all attachment to royalty, aristocracy, and "peace-with-honor" frauds, and are hastening to a land which their betters and their organs have persistently striven to persuade them is a pandemonium of injustice, peculation, lawlessness, and immorality. 'We must educate our new masters,' said Viscount Sherbrooke in despair at the enfranchisement of our artisans. True; and when they are educated they are, as his lordship opined, good citizens on the other side of the Atlantic.

In 1849, when gold was discovered in California, there was not between the Missouri river and the Pacific Ocean, or from Manitoba to Sonora, over 25,000 persons of Caucasian stock, and not 50,000 as said speaking in English as the language of their nativity. Now there are 3,000,000 persons in the same area; there are 10,000 miles of railroad and nearly twice that of telegraph; there is a property valuation of at least $2,000,000,000; are prosperous States and nine Territories, growing in wealth and population, now producing precious metals at least $85,000,000 annually, and also embracing the three largest wheat-growing States on the Union.

The London correspondent of the Cork Examiner states that it is understood the Government will, next session, introduce a bill for the extension of the franchise in Great Britain and Ireland of so sweeping and inclusive a character that it will practically and permanently disable Torpum as a rival ruling element in the State. The theory is that, while crippling Conservatism, it will develop a third party, that of Liberal Conservatism, but without altering the progress of the Government towards Republicanism.

The Secretary of the New York Parnell Land League Fund acknowledges the receipts up to July 28th of subscriptions to the amount of $277,766 90, all of which has been sent for distribution, through the proper channels, in Ireland.

A dispatch from London dated August 6th says:

Despite the activity of the English agents in the United States, whose business is to prevent the exportation of munitions of war to Great Britain, the Government is convinced from recent advices that such importations are made, and that recently there have been some heavy shipments to Ireland. The shipments are made by the Irish-American secret societies organized by the revolutionists in the States, and have become so formidable as to awake the Government to action. This is understood to be one of the reasons for the increase of the British military force in Ireland. Every effort will be made to detect and prevent further importations. Instructions will be given to the military and civil authorities to keep a sharp lookout for the landing or distribution of arms or material of war.

At a meeting of the Land League held in Dublin the constitution of the Land Commission ("consisting of four landlords and an official in the pay of the Crown") was condemned, and a resolution was passed declaring the tenants of Ireland can have no confidence in the assertion, in the Mallow Farmers' Club a resolution was unanimously passed calling on Mr. Shaw to resign his place on the Land Commission unless its constitution was altered so that it should contain as many farmers' friends as avowed partisans of the landlord.

We publish elsewhere an article from the leading English journal, the Spectator on Mr. Parnell. At first the English press sneered at him, now they fear him, and are therefore beginning to respect him. The Spectator says he knows more about law than the Attorney-General, more of the rules of the house than the speaker, and of the military than the secretary of war. He is inscrutable and almost omniscient. He is essentially a revolutionist of the most dangerous character, possesses a dry, quiet exterior, with fire smouldering beneath. He is so practical that he distains mere eloquence. He does not hate England, like the Yankee hates it, or like the Irishman, but with the intensity of the Irish-American he is. He voted on the Bradlaugh question in a manner that he knew would not be pleasing to Irish Catholics, but he voted conscientiously, and if they do not like it, he will quietly retire into private life, rather than sacrifice his opinion. This is a summary of the article which is well worth reading.

The Dublin Nation says that the proceedings in the Landed Estates Court show that the market for landed property is in a falling condition, few or no sales being affected, and, in some cases, no purchasers at all putting in an appearance. A notable event in that connection took place in Kerry. The interest in a farm near Killarney was put up for sale in the courthouse, when the tenant, against whom a decree for possession for non-payment of rent had been obtained, cautioned anyone against bidding as he had tendered the rent to the landlord. The result was that none of the numerous lookers present offered a penny, and the sale was adjourned, the tenant being made the object of public congratulation.

The following is taken from the London Correspondence of Mr. J. J. Jennings to the New York World: "After the winter," said Mr. Parnell, recently, "many landlords in Ireland will be willing and anxious to sell on fair and reasonable terms." What Mr. Parnell means by fair and reasonable terms may be left to the reader's sagacity to conjecture. The truth is that there is scarcely a landlord in all Ireland now who would not be very glad to sell his property on really fair terms, to be decided by any impartial umpire, whether drawn from New York, London, or Dublin. But what is to happen during the winter? Mr. Parnell's words are not used at random. He knows perfectly well what is going on in Ireland at the present time. Everywhere men are secretly drilling, arms are being largely imported into the country, and preparations are being made for a rising on a scale never before seen in the country. If the plans now known to be in existence are carried out, the winter will be a reign of terror for the Irish landlords. Everything is favorable to the cause represented by Mr. Parnell. The principles upon which his operations are based. The English Radicals support him, for to oppose what exists is their policy, and it matters little where the uprooting first begins. The House of Lords is the only barrier, and it is about the same kind of barrier that a sheet of brown paper would be to a hundred ton gun. It should not wonder if many landlords in England as well as Ireland were found particularly anxious to get rid of their property on "fair and reasonable terms."

At a meeting of the Mansion House Committee the Lord Mayor suggested that the body should bring its operations to a close on August 14, and a notice of motion to that effect was given. The Committee has distributed altogether close on £180,000. It had then about £5,000 in hands. The Lord Mayor and the other members of the committee expressed their astonishment and regret that the only dioceses in Ireland that had so far responded to the appeal of the committee to hold diocesan collections in aid of the fund were the two poorest—Tuam and Killala. The former had contributed £1,000 from its diocesan relief fund and the latter £50, the result of a collection.

The £1000 sent by the Archbishop of Tuam was out of the money sent to him from America for Irish relief. He said he would not make a diocesan collection. This does not look as if the Mansion House Committee had the unlimited confidence and co-operation of the whole Irish Episcopacy as had been frequently asserted.

The Orangemen, the sleuth-hounds of bigotry, seem to have been, by preconcerted arrangement, let loose against Irish Catholics, as well in Canada as in Ireland. Religious processions in honor of the Blessed Virgin, on the Feast of the Assumption, were ruthlessly attacked, and when they attempted to defend themselves were set on by the constabulary. Several lives were lost and a great number wounded. It looks as if it were intended to drive the people to desperation. If so, the result might be far different from what such designers intend.

During the discussion of the Irish Relief Bill in the House of Lords. Earl Granville with the full concurrence of the Cabinet informed Lord Beaconsfield in the strongest terms that if the Bill should be rejected by the Lords, the Government would decline to be answerable for the consequences in Ireland during the coming winter.

The letter of our Paris correspondent descriptive of the meeting of the French Communists is interesting. Their platform of principles sounds very like the teachings of the Irish-World and American Industrial Liberator. In fact, its editor seems to make common cause with them, for in the latest edition he says "The French Democracy are determined to abolish the French Senate, and here in the United States all true reformers are moving in a like direction." We suppose Rochefort or Denis Kearney would be a member of the French Senate.

Chinese competition only affected thing classes, hardly any attention was it by those who did not personally feel its results. When the small manufacturers and retail dealers found business interfered with, it became attract attention, but now that the chief princes of commerce see that their trade also are endangered, the cry for the whole country is awakened to actual various are the speculations as to result of this new movement of Christ-nolonacy. We hope the interests of Christ will not be sacrificed to placate these dragon.

Order has recently been issued at Wytion by which silver dollars to the amount of $65, or fractional currency to the amount of $70, may be sent in a registered letter the regular rate of ten cents. This will be a great convenience to persons living where postoffice orders are not issued. It is especially advantageous to lawyers and their subscribers.

We are pleased to announce that Mr. Jolivake has renewed his connection with MONITOR as canvasser and traveling agent. He has just started on a tour among the Sierra counties, and we hope he will receive that encouragement to expenses and which our subscribers always meet with in the shape of the visits of MONITOR agents, with a mob to back them, would be a blessing of good government.

Chinese competition only affected thing classes, hardly any attention was it by those who did not personally feel its results. When the small manufacturers and retail dealers found business interfered with, it became attract attention, but now that the chief princes of commerce see that their trade also are endangered, the cry for the whole country is awakened to actual various are the speculations as to result of this new movement of Christ-nolonacy. We hope the interests of Christ will not be sacrificed to placate these dragon.

Order has recently been issued at Wytion by which silver dollars to the amount of $65, or fractional currency to the amount of $70, may be sent in a registered letter the regular rate of ten cents. This will be a great convenience to persons living where postoffice orders are not issued. It is especially advantageous to lawyers and their subscribers.

We are pleased to announce that Mr. Jolivake has renewed his connection with MONITOR as canvasser and traveling agent. He has just started on a tour among the Sierra counties, and we hope he will receive that encouragement to expenses and which our subscribers always meet with in the shape of the visits of MONITOR agents, with a mob to back them, would be a blessing of good government.

Wi the People Want a Change.

But all sections of the country come the mand for a change The depression of business everywhere, the depression of industry, the stagnation of commerce, the enforced idleness of hundreds of thousands of boat artisans, all are circumstances attributed to misgovernment, and the party that fl. twenty years has held power, is necessarily regarded as responsible. The people are suffering in consequence of intoxicants and destructive misrule. The people have been painfully imposed upon in almost all that makes freedom a blessing and indeed the source of comfort and subsistence. Relief is everywhere demanded, and all are asking, what can be done? Society is divided into numerous parties, and each party declamoring to be relieved from evils it does not understand. They can do nothing separately. By uniting, they can end the existence of the party, that has caused all their troubles. But how can they unite, when so many different interests are threatened, and where there is such adversity of republican measures proposed?

There is but one remedy, and that is a right wrong direction, he has no remedy but to retrace his steps. In no other way can the people be saved. The people of the United States have been turned from the lessons of the republicanism and taught to prefer the effects of imperial authority. They have been misled into dark and dangerous paths, and they can find no relief until they return to the Democratic principles upon which the American Republic was founded.

The only party that represents the government of the people is the Democratic party. It was this party that fought in battles and achieved the victories of the American Revolution; and subsequently, for several generations, gave peace, prosperity, stability, happiness and dignity to the nation, by administering the Government of the republic according to Democratic principles.

The Democratic party has its standard of principle in its rule of action. It has a permanent system and one that the people can understand. It seeks to provide for the whole people, according to its name, and to secure equal rights to all without injustice to any. It stands upon the basis of the Constitution, and yields none of its safeguards to construction. It sustains the humblest citizen in all his rights, and the State in their just rights of local control over local affairs. It favors simplicity of life, the culture of the heart and mind, the elevation of the people, and rigid economy in the administration of Government. It acts from itself outwardly; boldly opposes all tendencies to centralization of power, and seeks to encourage and protect alike the varied interests of honest labor and capital.

Like all parties made up of men subject to the common infirmities of nature, it has had its share of errors, and it has suffered from its false and pretended friends. The same may be said of all human efforts associated to advance and elevate humanity. It is the only party that learns from experience, or that is willing to teach political wisdom to the people. The historical record of the Democratic party constitutes the glory of America. It is to be found in successful legislation and in the administration of justice. It is to be found in the names of illustrious men whose minds, in the paths of science and literature, have developed the beauties of truth and the high privileges of duty. It is to be found in the dauntless writers and orators who have been prompt to rebuke tyranny and to exalt the great cause of freedom. It may be truly said that history will confirm the assertion, that all the Democratic Presidents of the United States, since George Washington, have been distinguished for integrity and true statesmanship. Democracy in America has been honored even by illustrious opponents, thus illustrating the irresistible power of truth on honest age and experience. Of John Adams, it may be said that he was among the first in Democracy to distinguish himself in the American Revolution, and though he left the ranks for a time, it was his delight in the decline of life to commune with the great and acknowledged teacher of Democracy, Thomas Jefferson, above all other men as a teacher. Though Henry Clay left the party for a season, seduced by the allurements of those departures from principle, or from motives of haste in political advancement, it was his testimony near the close of his life that he had returned with all satisfaction to the Democratic faith, and thought it was the best political work he had ever done. The fate of Daniel Webster to be employed the most of his life as the attorney of the party arrayed against Democracy, yet it is an interesting fact to know that he lived to proclaim the death of the party that had employed him. The same may be said of Rufus Choate and Edward Everett, and of others equally eminent.

It is to the principles and methods of this ancient party of liberty, honesty, and frugality that the people want a restoration of Governmental administration. They believe they have in General Hancock, a candidate who combines Washingtonian and Jeffersonian ideas, a soldier and a statesman, conservative and cultured, brave and discreet, a patriot of the truest type, one who will have the courage and capacity to institute and consummate great and needed reforms. To him, under Providence, we believe is committed the destiny and duty of purifying and strengthening the system of this republic. Out of the Shingle of Morrison has always met with in the action of the State. This week he will in San Jose.

The English in Afghanistan.

The guns of the victorious Afghans are now directed against the English forces besieged in Candahar. The whole world is in suspense as to the result. It is impossible with the meagre intelligence afforded by the telegrams and which is so often unreliable to be able to form at once a satisfactory opinion as to current events, the mails are still necessary. Elsewhere we publish an English account of the disaster to the British arms in the Times. We will here reproduce comments of the Irish press. The Dublin Irishman says

The recent history of English campaigning has been little than a succession of blunders and disasters. Pitted against barbarians and undisciplined foes, weakened by division and unsupported by a definite patriotism, the red-coated mercenaries of British power exhibit a striking want of military qualities. Want of courage, insensibility to danger which won for their forefathers so many an unholy triumph has abandoned them, and in the higher ranks of the army there is a lack of brain power at times verging on imbecility. The loss of a column of the command of the British forces in Zululand, he would not have allowed his brother, the Prince Imperial, to go out. And half a dozen times during the inglorious Afghan campaign the English arms might have been measured to a man as they were a generation ago but for the irresistible courage and valor of their opponents. That defeat does not always favor the fatious, the news from Afghanistan which has thrilled England with pride and made vacant places by many an English home, is the best proof of the Army of Candahar has been annihilated."

The word is not cure it is that employed by the Viceroy of India, Lord Lytton, in the House Government, and by the Marquis of Harington in announcing the dread news to the House of Commons.

The Afghans are apparently at last recovering from the paralysis into which they were temporarily plunged by the sudden and unjustifiable attack of their territory. Hitherto, the Afghans have displayed that if they can help it the invaders shall leave their bones in the land which they failed to conquer. More intelligent than other enemies of England, the Afghans have learned the lesson of fighting her with her own weapons. Treachery and treachery they oppose like weapons. They lure the aggressor into a pitfall, and when he is defenceless they make him slaughter pigs. Rose, as much as courage, seems to explain the Afghan victory. Candahar was so strongly garrisoned as to offer serious obstacles to the progress of Ayoub Khan, the Afghan commander, in command of the Afghan patriots. To divide and thereby conquer the occupying force was a prime object with Ayoub Khan, and he succeeded to compass it he resorted to a stratagem quite admissible against such a foe.

The Wali Ghiet is a faithful friendship for the English and asked for reinforcements to defend his position, a hundred miles from Candahar, against the advancing army of his countrymen. When General Burrows had been entered out of the city with a force numbering between two and three thousand men, and had placed such a distance between his and his starting-point as to enable his return to be intercepted, the Wali's army passed over en masse to Ayoub Khan. The British general attempted, when too late, to retrace his steps. Here there is a blank in the record. For three days no news reached Candahar from the detachment brigade. Then came the startling intelligence that General Burrow's force had been annihilated. A few straggling survivors of what seems to have been a mere massacre are making their way to this headquarters of Gen. Primrose, but apparently they are unable to give any intelligible account of the disaster in which their comrades perished.

Candahar is panic-stricken. The Commandant has withdrawn his troops from the outposts and drawn in the outlying detached, and taken refuge in the citadel in expectation of a siege. Dismay reigns in the Council of the Viceroy of India, and pitiful appeals for help reach the Home Government. Ayoub Khan's blow has been struck home. The power of England in India reels under the shock. At home there is an indignant apprehension that another Afghan campaign will be necessary, at cost of treasure and blood, and that a day in Cabul to Candahar. Sir Donald Stewart has a great force, it is true, under his command, but the regiments are scattered over a wide extent of the most difficult kind of country, where it is almost impossible to keep up communications.

The Leaders of the Liberal Party and the Irish Land Question.

The Bright and other leaders of the liberal party are evidently far ahead of their followers in the Land reform movement. But the landlord interest has been powerful so far as it has a drag on all their efforts in favor of the claims of justice. As the details of the debate on the Compensation Bill reach us we are pleased to note language that has not hitherto been uttered in Parliament from members of the British Government. The Marquis of Hartington for instance proved himself manful not only of the interests which the landlords have in the soil, but of the rights of the occupiers, the tenants, and he contended that the bill was intended to prevent the confiscation of the latter. "In Ireland," he said, "the improvement circumstances of the tenants have taken place in the face of a bill which a weapon which the Act of 1870 never contemplated, and which has enabled the landlord to clear his estate of hundreds of tenants whom, in ordinary circumstances, he would not have been able to remove without the payment of a heavy pecuniary fine. Does not the possession of such a weapon enable the landlord absolutely to defeat the main purpose of the Act?" The bill is, therefore, according to the Marquis of Hartington, a measure to prevent, not to facilitate, confiscation. Again, the speaker acknowledged that it would be a wrong and injustice, sufficient to arrest the arm of justice in the punishment of agrarian crime if the landlords were allowed to exterminate their tenantry after the manner described. "We are prepared," he said, "to carry the law into execution, but it is impossible for any Government to do so unless it is satisfied that it is acting in obedience not only to law, but to right and justice." Now, these declarations virtually yield the whole position of the advocates of the tenantry. They involve an admission that the landlord is not absolute owner of his land—the one principle against which the landlord class most vehemently fight, and on which every just claim of the tenants may be unhesitatingly defended.

The speech of Mr. Gladstone is still more valuable, from the point of view of the advocate of tenant-right. Thus the Premier has lent the authority of the notion so assiduously propagated by landlord writers that the principles of property are as inviolable as the Ark of the Covenant are something with which the State can never interfere. "Why, sir," he said, "I should spend more than half the time which I could fairly ask from the House for all I have to say were I to enter into detail the instances in which during the last fifty years the Parliament of this country has interfered with the principles of property." "The principles of property," he went on, "are vital to the welfare of the State; they are at the very base of the social system; but notwithstanding these great and fundamental truths, it is not less true that there are occasions when not merely necessity calls upon you to modify the extreme application of these principles, but when the introduction of modifications are the best and the only means by which you can effectually preserve the principle of property itself."

Mr. Gladstone was still more outspoken when he undertook to defend the right of the government, for the public good to interpret justly the principles of property in Ireland. His argument was that in the past, legislation with respect to land in Ireland has proceeded upon the principle of "everything for the owner of the soil and nothing for the occupier," and that, therefore, there is in this matter a restitution to be made to the sufferers. "These facts, these enactments, these proceedings, this policy," said Mr. Gladstone, "although it may pass away, though the Acts may be repealed, though the temper of Parliament may be changed, are branded ineffaceably upon the memory of a country, and we are prepared to allow largely, unlogically, for those nearly ineffaceable marks, and even to exceed in some cases, perhaps, the strict letter of reason, in consideration of those monstrous, prolonged, inverterate efforts which continued so long to dishonor the proceedings of Parliament, and which have accumulated a debt to the people of Ireland which it will be difficult to redeem." Nor did Mr. Gladstone fail to bring out into strong relief the fact that so far from legislation by the British Parliament proceeded in favor of the landlord and against the interest of the tenant in Ireland, that a power of eviction exists which has not its parallel in England or Scotland. Mr. Gladstone also pointed out that, owing to the peculiar circumstances of Ireland, eviction, in most cases means for the evicted starvation; while he wound up with an expression of regret at the sad spectacle of "armies of agents and regiments of constabulary" being engaged in "conducting what ought to be peaceful operations."

These admissions coming from such a source are of the utmost importance. They cover the whole ground of the present demands of Irish tenants in the mater of Land reform and would justly not merely the miserable little relief Bill so ignominiously rejected by the Lords, but a measure as sweeping as any that has yet been proposed by Mr. Parnell or Mr. Davitt.

No Real Catholic Emancipation in Ireland.

Many people in America think that by the Act of Emancipation Catholics were restored to all their civil rights and privileges. But the facts prove the contrary. The Lord Lieutenant of Ireland must be a Protestant, according to British law, and it is the appointments made by the Castle are in the same spirit of sectarianism and bigotry.

In the British Parliament the other day, Mr. Callan, member of Parliament for South, asked the Chief Secretary for Ireland (Mr. Forster) whether it was a fact, that in the county Tyrone, with a population of 215,000, of whom 120,000 are Catholics, among the 120 magistrates of the county there is not a single Catholic included, whether it is a fact that in the county of Fermanagh, with a population of 92,000, of whom upwards of 53,000 are Catholics, there are 60 magistrates, of whom only one is a Catholic; whether complaints have not been frequently made of the persistent exclusion from the magistracy of those professing the same faith as the majority of the population, more especially in the province of Ulster; whether repeated representations, both public and private, have not been made to the Irish Executive; that there are Catholic gentlemen in those counties as Cookstown, Strabane, Omagh, Enniskillen, and other districts, fully qualified in every respect to be placed in the commission of the peace; and whether, in view of the foregoing circumstances, Mr. Forster would communicate with the Lord Chancellor of Ireland the desire of her Majesty's government that all just causes of complaint with respect to the constitution of the magisterial bench, and the exclusion of Catholics therefrom, should be forthwith removed.

Although due notice had been given of the question, and for days it had lain printed on the business paper of the House, yet the only reply vouchsafed by Mr. Forster was, that he was unable to give precise information on the subject, that he had not made particular inquiries respecting the matter of course not—and that no complaint had been made to him.

The Dublin Freeman's Journal calls attention to the fact that Catholics are treated in Ireland with Catholics. It appears by a Nation's Government return that the entire force consists of 11,296 officers and men, of whom 8,097 are Protestants and 3,199. But it so happens that the committee of 1 officers are as three to one who resemble 1 with the Catholics. The inspector-general, that is, the deputy-inspector-general, and nominally of the three assistant-inspectors the service Protestants. The county inspectors are 67 Protestants, 7 Catholics, 1 Nonconformist; of the twenty-seven Protestants and only five Catholics, and the sub-inspectors are 64 Protestants and 16 Protestants to thirty-seven Catholics. This gross and most partial favoritism—an alien creed shows that the despotic influence of Protestant ascendancy have not even passed away. Mr. Callan will bring the subject again before Parliament.

No wonder there are hard times in San Francisco. Besides the millions sent annually to China never to return, there is the constant and terrible drain for assessments on mining stocks. During the past six months $7,900,000 were paid in assessments for mines having their head quarters in this city, against $1,902,000 disbursed during the same period; but of that amount about 60 per cent. was disbursed abroad to foreign shareholders. All the separate items were published in the financial columns of the Bulletin.

The Postal Telegraph.

The British Postmaster General announced in the House of Commons that he thought that the time had come when the price of telegrams ought to be reduced. He thought the fastest way would be to charge sixpence for a telegram of twelve words, including the address, and a word rate of one half-penny for every word afterwards.

At these rates a message could be sent to any part of the United Kingdom. Are the people of these United States ever to be freed from the grasping monopoly and partisan influences of the telegraph companies? The Democratic Party complain bitterly of the manner in which the telegraphic news is manipulated, Catholics have also serious grounds for complaint. Had we a postal telegraph, Catholic newspapers could easily arrange to be provided with full and reliable intelligence on all matters of Catholic interest. Now we have to wait three or four weeks to know the real facts of a case, and those who do not read Catholic newspapers never know them. On this account alone the faith of many has been weakened.

Hancock on "Jefferson's Way."

Under the rule of the Republican Party there has developed in official circles a most unrepublican style of administering affairs, of transacting business, and of conducting ceremonies. The installation of the Chief Magistrate has become a grand pageant, and about it have grown most meretricious adjuncts. Some of our silly American writers, who writers and Washington correspondents are asinine enough to write of "Our Republican Court," as if there could be such a thing in a Democratic republic as courts and courtiers. Not long ago the late President (Grant) allowed himself to be seriously dubbed "Duke of America," by an absurd society in New Orleans. For a man of his imputed sense, this was certainly an odd acceptance. The remarkable avidity of our people for titles has long been commented upon by intelligent foreigners as inconsistent with the pride we should, entertain in simple republican methods and manners. To our notion the highest title an American can possess is the plain prefix of Mr., the one which is truly significant of the sovereignty of the citizen. Our institutions and our official ceremonies, when it is necessary to have any ceremony at all, should be characterized by simplicity and accompanied by the least possible display. All the business of "inaugurations" with "troops" and pageantry of all sorts, should be abolished. We expect to witness a reform in this with the inauguration of Hancock. In that model letter written in 1876 to General W. T. Sherman he expressed his ideas so plainly, and to us so suitably, that we cannot forbear quoting it:

"I like Jefferson's way of inauguration; it suits our system. He rode down on horseback to the Capitol, tied his horse to the railings, entered and took his oath of office, gave his address, and was away among his friends and neighbors before the fashionables, who came in their carriages, had time to get out of their way. Jefferson's way is the American way, and I am for it

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

ARMAGH.

In the Dublin Land Court, Dublin, July 16th, in the matter of the estate of John Oliver and Benjamin Oliver, owners and petitioners—part of the lands of Lenismard, Knockagelly, and Drumiar, barony of Armagh, and County of Armagh, containing 92a. 1r., 4p., held under fee-farm grant; net profit rent, £124 9s. 6d. Sold for £2,320 to Mr. M. O. Jones, in trust.

On the evening of July 13th, a band returning to Armagh from a show fight in the neighborhood played the "Boyne Water," when they were attacked by a crowd. Great disturbance ensued. Shots were fired, windows were broken, stones thrown. Great excitement prevailed for a considerable time, and ultimately the mounted police had to charge the opposing parties before order was restored.

On Tuesday night, July 13, there were renewed disturbances in Lurgan. As part of those who attended the "show" fight in Scarva were returning, instead of going up the street they went to the end of Edward street, the Catholic locality, with colors, drums and music, and making a feint as if to march that way turned up Church place, and shout Mr. Grocey's public-house some one scared the Pope. The cask was taken off him, and a free fight ensued, which at one time was rather threatening looking. Mr. Malcolm, J. P., who was taking a prisoner, was struck with a stick, and a policeman named McCrudden was knocked down. Additional police coming on the scene two arrests were made.

CARLOW.

The Queen's mare held in Carlow July 15. The judge charged the grand jury as follows:—Mr. Bruen, and gentlemen of the grand jury of the County Carlow, I collect from the list of the Crown Solicitor that bills of indictments will be submitted for your consideration in some four or five cases, which will not occupy your time for many minutes. There is one case in which the prisoner is charged with murder. From information before me I believe it will be shown that he is a lunatic. The business of the assizes is very light.

CAVAN.

A Cavan correspondent says: The Twelfth was celebrated here in a quiet manner. Fair purple and blue flags flowing from the church towers were the only display made. No annual procession being dispensed with. About thirteen lodges assembled at Garrardress, between Cavan and Killashandra, on the ground of Mr. Young, and a member of the Orange brotherhood took place at Ballield, in the Cootehill district, at both which places the usual speeches were delivered. Everything passed off peacefully.

CLARE.

INNISFAIL EXPLOITER.—A correspondent writes the following to the Clare Independent:—"DEAR SIR—I have been looking up history, and find this country used to be called Innisfail. The way I explain this is that Innis means an island, and fail means fail, and this means that everything on this island is forever doomed to fail. Comfort yourself with this."

A QUID PRO QUO.—The Clare Independent of July 17 says:—On last night, or very early this (Saturday) morning, his coach-house and stables were found on fire. A messenger from the place was despatched immediately into Ennis to acquaint the County Inspector of the matter, who lost no time in hastening to the scene. It is thought that this fire is the result of the late evictions on his supposed extensive property.

CORK.

A correspondent writes from Kanturk, County Cork, that the thunder and lightning was fearful there July 14. A man and two sons were killed.

The retreat for the Catholic clergy of the Diocese of Cork was opened on Sunday, July 11, at Sacred Heart Monastery, Cork, and conducted by the Very Rev. Father Harbison, of the Redemptorist Order.

Mr. John Deady, auctioneer, Kanturk, recently put up for sale the lands of Bloopool, which lie close to the town of Kanturk, County Cork, containing 48 acres statute measure, held by fee-farm grant, at the yearly rent of £20 10s. After some animated bidding the property was finally struck down to Mr. David Breen, Kanturk, for the sum of £1,067.

It was announced at the meeting of the Cork Land League, on July 10, that Mr. Penn Gaskell had recently arrived on his lands near Clogrie, and reminded some of the tenants lately evicted therefrom, and made provision for the rent. The League expressed their deep thankfulness to that gentleman, and expressed a hope that other landlords who had evicted tenants would follow his example. The Gaskell family are adverted on Mr. Shaw's want of activity in connection with the Irish Bills now before the House of Commons.

DONEGAL.

It is announced that Mr. Robert Russell, J. P., Salt Hill, agent for the Mountcashel estate of the Marquis of Conyngham in County Donegal, has been compelled, in consequence of declining health, to resign the agency.

DOWN.

On July 14, two young ladies—Miss Eugene McNally, daughter of J. P. McNally, of Eagar, and Miss Grace, of Dundrum—were married privately by the Most Rev. Dr. Leahy presided.

The Down Assizes were held July 16. The Judge in addressing the Jury said he was glad to say that their duties on the present occasion would be neither lengthened nor difficult. The number of district cases to go before them, so far as he could gather from the list of the Crown Solicitor, would not exceed nine. There was one case upon the calendar which was rather serious—namely, in which a woman was charged either with murder or manslaughter. The case was one of infanticide. It was a remarkable and gratifying fact that upon the calendar for the great and prosperous County of Down at the present assizes there was only one case of larceny.

DUBLIN.

The order of Knight of the United Kingdom has been conferred on George M. O'Rorke, Esq., Speaker of the House of Representatives of New Zealand.

The report of Drs. Sigerson and Kenny, who are investigating the fever epidemic in the West of Ireland, was read on July 13, at the meeting of the Mansion House Committee. These gentlemen say that there can be no doubt that the fever is famine typhus.

The number of evictions in Ireland in 1878 was 1,749; in 1879, 2,677; and in the six months ending 30th June, 1880, 1,686. There were nearly as many in the six months of the present year, as in the entire year of 1878.

At a meeting of the Home Rule League, July 10, Mr. W. J. O'Neil Daunt proposed the following resolution and delivered an able speech in its support:—"That the financial results of the Union have been highly injurious to the prosperity of this country, and by withdrawing from Ireland an inordinate amount of our income have proved a disastrous source of recurring famines."

The Recorder of Dublin in addressing the Grand Jury, July 13, expressed himself as utterly hopeless of reforming the criminal population of the city by means of the imprisonment. He believed that the low moral tone of the poorer population could never be raised until the Orchard and abominable homes they now resided in were razed to the ground.

A return recently issued shows the religion of the Irish Constabulary as follows:—The Inspector-General and his deputy are returned as Protestants, and of the three assistant-inspectors-general two are Protestant and one Roman Catholic. Of the county inspectors 26 are Protestants, and 10 Roman Catholics; and there are 183 Protestant sub-inspectors and 57 Roman Catholics. In head constables the Roman Catholics number 142 against 93 Protestants. There are 1,249 Roman Catholic constables against 930 Protestants, and 228 of the acting-constables are Roman Catholics against 130 Protestants. There are again 6,520 sub-constables who are Roman Catholic, against 2,257 Protestants. Total Protestants, 3,209; Roman Catholics, 8,109.

A meeting of representatives of the Irish Parliamentary party, the Home Rule Confederation, and other Irish political organizations, was held in London on the evening of July 14, to take steps for the release of the Irish political prisoners. Mr. Biggar, M.P., presided. It was unanimously resolved to form an association to be called the Irish Political Prisoners Complaint Association, and to request Mr. Parnell, M. P., to become president. Mr. R. A. Ryan was elected Hon. Secretary. Mr. Biggar said that nothing could be got from an English Government except by shaming it or frightening it.

At the usual monthly meeting of the Sodality of Our Lady Help of Christians, in Saint Francis Xavier, Upper Gardiner Street, July 15, the following resolution was passed:—That we, the members of the Sodality of Our Lady Help of Christians, have learned with feelings of deep regret that France, once called the eldest child of the Church, has so far forgotten herself as to put in force against the religious orders domiciled there the Draconian laws, devised by an obscure monarchy to fetter the freedom of the Church in her efforts for the good of humanity, and we desire to tender to the members of those orders, and to that of the Society of Jesus in par[illegible]ular, our warmest sympathy in this their hour of trial, and our respectful admiration of their heroic constancy in the unjust persecution now directed against them.

The "glorious, pious, and immortal" Orangemen of Dublin celebrated the "glorious" 12th of July in the Dublin Rotunda on that evening. It is said the room was crowded. Thomas F. Caldwell, J.P., Grand Master, presided. In the course of his observations, he said these were trying times for them. What had raised their country to the position it now enjoyed was their individual attachment to Protestant principles. He hopes that Queen still soon be delivered from the weak and evil designs and devices of those who now surround her throne. Mr. Thomas H. Thomson said the men who were legislating for Ireland now no more about the principles of liberty and the constitution than the Zulus of Africa. Other speakers denounced the appointment of the Marquis of Ripon, and said it might be regarded as a precedent for the appointment of a Catholic Viceroy of Ireland. A resolution was adopted that in the present revolutionary aspect of affairs immediate defensive works are needed in other parts of Ireland as the nation the Protestantism of the Crown and the maintenance of the Reformed Religion.

FERMANAGH.

The Fermanagh Reporter says:—The public generally will greatly regret the demise of Mr. Samuel Clarke, the active, popular, and successful manager of the Ulster Bank, Enniskillen, for about 30 years. He died in his own house adjoining the bank, on Sunday, July 11, surrounded by some friends. Mr. Pratt, Sub-manager, Dr. Gunning, Rev. D. O'Leary, etc. For the last four or five years Mr. Clark's health has been declining.

Says the Fermanagh Mail, July 12:—On Saturday evening, July 10, between nine and ten o'clock, the usual orange and blue flags, and orange streamer were placed on the turrets and spire of the church, where they fluttered in the breeze yesterday, and will remain until this evening. When the ceremony of putting up was completed, the bells peeled forth the usual orthodox airs. Allusion was made by the clergy in several Protestant churches yesterday to the great event commemorated to-day, and the blessings derived from it by all classes in these islands. There will be meetings of the brethren at Irvinestown, Newtownbutler, and a few other places; but here there will be no public display whatever, the brethren contenting themselves with visiting other districts, and dining together in their Lodge Rooms in the evening.

GALWAY.

On Saturday, at Ballinrobe, a widow, who, with five children, had been evicted, assisted the bailiff, said was forthwith sentenced to seven days' imprisonment. On the way to prison she was rescued by the crowd.

A Loughrea correspondent writes:—I am very sorry to have to state on good authority that the potato blight has made its appearance in this locality. No wonder. The weather is dark and oppressive, with little sunshine, and constant rain. The symptoms are the same as those that marked the previous years. Much uneasiness is felt by all in this locality.

KERRY.

Judge Lawson, in addressing the County Kerry Grand Jury, July 13, said he deplored the condition of the northern part of the county. Alluding to the case in which some peasants acted on the case of relief meal near Glenflesk, he cited the incident as an illustration of the contagious character of Communistic doctrines.

The concurrence for this diocese terminated on Saturday, July 17, with the anticipated result. The seven vacancies were filled as follows:—J. Sullivan, St. Brendan's Seminary, 1; M. Murphy, Castletown, Bere, 2; Jeremiah Maggie, Killorglin, 3; Thomas Hickey, Rathmore, 4; J. Crowley, Farranfore, 5; T. McCarthy, 6; Jeremiah Moynihan, Lettonell, 7. The synod opened with High Mass in the Cathedral, Killarney. About seventy clergymen were present.

It is proposed to build a railway from Macroom, County Cork, to Kenmare, Co. Kerry, at a cost of £40,000. At a recent meeting of the Kerry Grand Jury a scheme was approved, and the following resolution passed:—"That we the Grand Jury of the County of Kerry, hereby prove of the Cork, Macroom, and Kenmare Railway Bill, 1881, on the basis of a guarantee, having regard to present and future advantages on the baronies of Magonihy, South Dunkerron, and Glanarought, of the amount of £40,000, and of share capital, as per Bill deposited hands of Grand Jury Secretary."

MacNamara, the evicted tenant who Sexton put back in possession of his farm holding at Moyliella by a midnight body sympathizers, has been again dispossessed. At a late hour on the night of July 13, house was besieged by a party of armed men who burst in the doors front and rear, and then forced McNamara and his family leave the premises, hurling after them the road every article of bedding and furniture which in the house contained. No further violence or injury was done. A members of the constabulary, who since first occurrence have been stationed at the house of Michael Horgan, the landlord the property, for his protection, were attracted to the place by the uproar a commotion, but when they arrived on the spot the confusion had subsided. The house, however, observed McNamara and his family on the roadside. On examining the house they found three men armed with two E field rifles and a musket in possession. These men admitted having been in company with others to remove McNamara, who they considered, had no legal right or claim to the possession of the premises. All the available constabulary at Listowel and Ballybunion proceeded, half-mounted, to Moyliella, and after some hours returned bringing with them several prisoners charged with complicity in the proceedings. Amongst the prisoners is Edmund Horgan one of the landlord's brothers, who was injured on the occasion of the outrage by Mr. Nagle's party. The greatest excitement prevails.

KILKENNY.

The confraternity of St. Canice's church Kilkenny, numbers 1,000 members. 80 new members joined after the recent retreat.

LIMERICK.

The Limerick fair of Limerick last week (July 10, was 21.2 per 1,000 of the population; that of Belfast, 23.7; Waterford, 27.2; Dublin, 29.9; Londonderry, 32.3; Kilkenny, 36; Newry, 32.6, Dundalk, 38.4, and Lurgan 40.4.

The Limerick Town Council voted the freedom of the city to Mr. Parnell, July 14. The proceedings were of a lively character, being obstructed by Mr. Hall, who opposed the motion.

At the Junction, Limerick, July 14, there were three distinct thunderstorms. The telegraph connection with this station, at Killaloe, was completely stopped.

At the Kilmallock Board of Guardians on July 15, the usual legal notice was served on the Relieving Officer by Mr. Thomas Carroll, J. P., of Mitchelstown, of his intention to evict Wm. Duggan, Patrick O'Donnell, and others, of Cush, county Limerick, from their holdings in that barony.

LOUTH.

A man named Thomas Carson, aged 21 years, while working under a railway bridge at the St. Mary's Catholic Church, Drogheda, on Saturday, July 10, was buried under the embankment which gave way. He was dead when dug out.

MAYO.

The Cork Examiner says: The various steamers arriving at Queenstown from Boston bring pilgrims to the shrine of Knock. The interest of the well-to-do Irish American in the apparitions, seems to be daily increasing.

The Ballina Board of Guardians met July 10, under the Presidency of C. A. Rose, Esq., D. L. Relieving Officer J. S. Keaney reported that there were twenty cases of typhus fever and scarlatina in the district, including Ardnaree, Attymas, Kilgarvin, and Sallymount.

The Derry Journal says: Further personal differences are reported in the Irish party of action, Mr. O'Connor [illegible] giving followed of O'Donnell's action in Mr. Parnell's view the dictatorship of Mr. Parnell, whom the member for Mayo [illegible] with barme, while openly professing to be willing to place himself with Mr. Dillon in the effort to prejudice the constituency of the county against him (Mr. Dwyer).

MONAGHAN.

At a meeting of the Relief Committee of the Diocese of Monaghan, July 13, the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly presiding, it was announced that the New York Herald Relief Committee had intimated their inability to contribute any more money toward the alleviation of the distress existing in that district. The Bishop were passed unanimously thanking the several committees who assisted them in their work. The Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly has forwarded the following letter to the New York Herald Committee:—"To the Gentlemen of the New York Herald Relief Committee and their Hon. Secretary, Gentlemen: In the name of the Clogher Diocesan Relief Committee, I have to thank you most heartily for the good we have been enabled by you to effect in many destitute districts of this diocese. Whatever funds you placed at our disposal have been conscientiously distributed; and now that our labors are at an end—though, alas, we cannot say the distress has yet quite disappeared—it is our duty to offer grateful acknowledgments, first for your promptitude in deputing Messrs. Hepworth and Baldwin to make personal inquiry into our condition here, and then for your charity in sending us, as far as you reasonably could, the means to alleviate our accredited distress. We must not omit to thank you also most warmly for the generous and considerate help afforded by you, in clothing as well as in food, to the destitute children attending our schools in several localities. And here we cannot forget to make grateful mention of Mrs. Power Lalor, Miss McDermott, and the other ministering angels whose care so anxious a hand in this department of your work. In return, gentlemen, I think I can promise you the lasting gratitude of our people, and their life-long prayers for the health and happiness of yourselves and of the noble-hearted Mr. Bennett, whose name shall be henceforth a household word among the Irish race. I have the honor to be, gentlemen, with sincere respect and gratitude, your faithful servant, JAMES DONNELLY, Bishop of Clogher, Chairman of the Clogher Central Diocesan Relief Committee.

ROSCOMMON.

At the Roscommon assizes, on July 12, two men were indicted for the murder of Mr. Young, J. P., at Castlebar, two years ago, under most extraordinary circumstances. The cause of the murder has been discovered, but there is deep feeling in the country against the approver, upon whom the case for the Crown depends, that it was not considered safe to bring him to Roscommon last winter. He is constantly guarded.

Mr. Young was shot in his own avenue, near a frequented place at noon.

SLIGO.

In the House of Commons, July 16, Mr. Thomas Sexton, M. P., for Sligo county, asked the Chief Secretary for Ireland whether he (the Chief Secretary) is aware of the fact that the borough of Sligo, the population of which is three-fourths Catholic, the proportion of Catholic and Protestant burgesses stands, which was seven to nine at the time of the accession of the late Administration to power in 1874, is now only four to eleven, and whether especially in view of the fact that the burgesses of Sligo have manifested a liberal spirit by electing an equal number of Protestants and Catholics to their municipal council, the present Administration will not propose to remedy the disproportion above set forth by appointing Catholics to the three vacancies caused since 1874 by deaths of Catholic magistrates? The Chief Secretary replied:—I am not in possession of information on the subject of the hon. member's question, nor am I aware of the fact he mentions respecting the religious views of the magistrates of Sligo. I have not inquired into it, and I hardly think it would be my business to do so. As regards the appointment of certain magistrates, I can only say that so far as we have had to do with it my noble friend the Lord Lieutenant has felt that he would not allow any kind of religious opinion to influence us one way or the other. If it be the fact that the population of that religious opinion has influenced the appointment we shall endeavor to correct it."

TIPPERARY.

Very great injury has been recently done by the lightning to the telegraph wires in the counties of Limerick, Cork, Tipperary, and the King and Queen's counties. The wires have been actually melted from the effects of the lightning.

Judge O'Brien opened the Clonmel assizes July 12. He said, in addressing the Grand Jury, that with the exception of two or three cases, the bills to go before them were of an ordinary character, and the exceptions were of a formidable nature. The formidable bills were of an agrarian nature.

TYRONE.

In the Omagh assizes, July 16, Hugh McManus and Bernard McGurk were indicted charged with riot in Omagh on the 12th of July, 1879, were called, and all but five answered. They were bound in their own recognizances to come up at the next assizes on recognizance, and not to keep the peace.

A largely-attended land meeting was held near Dunmanway on Sunday, July 11, to protest against evictions which had taken place in that locality on the property of Dr. Moorehead, a gentleman residing in the county Tyrone. Resolutions were passed protesting against the injustice of these evictions under the circumstances, and resolving on the last resort of the people to take a holding from which another has been unjustly evicted.

WATERFORD.

Aftermble storm of thunder and lightning, accompanied by heavy rain and hail, passed over the city and county Waterford on July 14, lasting for two hours. It is feared that the crops in the district adjacent will suffer very much. In some places on the days was shivered, two hen houses were killed at Ballybricken, and a cow belonging to Waterford and Tramore were more or less injured.

The Waterford Citizen, June 29, says:—Typhus fever and its twin sister, relapsing fever, is prevalent in almost every part of the district. Scarcely a week passes but some fever case ragging in the Clonea district, where, during the past week, the Rev. J. Mc Cormac attended to fever cases in Clonea. Some poor families in that neighborhood are so reduced by fever that the cries of the poor are heard in the street. Fever is constantly prevalent in Dungarvan, July 10, Hugh McMahon and John Ryan were indicted for the murder of Mr. Young, J. P., at Castlebar, two years ago, under most extraordinary circumstances. The cause of the murder has been discovered, but there is deep feeling in the country against the approver, upon whom the case for the Crown depends, that it was not considered safe to bring him to Roscommon last winter. He is constantly guarded.

The Ballina Board of Guardians met July 10, under the Presidency of C. A. Rose, Esq., D. L. Relieving Officer J. S. Keaney reported that there were twenty cases of typhus fever and scarlatina in the district, including Ardnaree, Attymas, Kilgarvin, and Sallymount.

The Derry Journal says: Further personal differences are reported in the Irish party of action, Mr. O'Connor [illegible] giving followed of O'Donnell's action in Mr. Parnell's view the dictatorship of Mr. Parnell, whom the member for Mayo [illegible] with barme, while openly professing to be willing to place himself with Mr. Dillon in the effort to prejudice the constituency of the county against him (Mr. Dwyer).

MONAGHAN.

At a meeting of the Relief Committee of the Diocese of Monaghan, July 13, the Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly presiding, it was announced that the New York Herald Relief Committee had intimated their inability to contribute any more money toward the alleviation of the distress existing in that district. Resolutions were passed unanimously thanking the several committees who assisted them in their work. The Most Rev. Dr. Donnelly has forwarded the following letter to the New York Herald Committee:—"To the Gentlemen of the New York Herald Relief Committee and their Hon. Secretary. Gentlemen: In the name of the Clogher Diocesan Relief Committee, I have to thank you most heartily for the good we have been enabled by you to effect in many destitute districts of this diocese. Whatever funds you placed at our disposal have been conscientiously distributed; and now that our labors are at an end—though, alas, we cannot say the distress has yet quite disappeared—it is our duty to offer grateful acknowledgments, first for your promptitude in deputing Messrs. Hepworth and Baldwin to make personal inquiry into our condition here, and then for your charity in sending us, as far as you reasonably could, the means to alleviate our accredited distress. We must not omit to thank you also most warmly for the generous and considerate help afforded by you, in clothing as well as in food, to the destitute children attending our schools in several localities. And here we cannot forget to make grateful mention of Mrs. Power Lalor, Miss McDermott, and the other ministering angels whose care so anxious a hand in this department of your work. In return, gentlemen, I think I can promise you the lasting gratitude of our people, and their life-long prayers for the health and happiness of yourselves and of the noble-hearted Mr. Bennett, whose name shall be henceforth a household word among the Irish race. I have the honor to be, gentlemen, with sincere respect and gratitude, your faithful servant, JAMES DONNELLY, Bishop of Clogher, Chairman of the Clogher Central Diocesan Relief Committee.

ROSCOMMON.

At the Roscommon assizes, on July 12, two men were indicted for the murder of Mr. Young, J. P., at Castlebar, two years ago, under most extraordinary circumstances. The cause of the murder has been discovered, but there is deep feeling in the country against the approver, upon whom the case for the Crown depends, that it was not considered safe to bring him to Roscommon last winter. He is constantly guarded.

EDUCATIONAL.

SANTA INEZ COLLEGE,

SANTA BARBARA COUNTY, CALIFORNIA.

CONDUCTED BY THE CHRISTIAN BROTHERS.

By request of his Grace the Most Rev. Archbishop the Brothers have taken charge of the College. A limited number of boys between the age of eight and sixteen will be received as boarders.

For particulars apply to Sacred Heart College, or, Holy and Lakes Avenue, San Francisco.

Steamers make regular trips from San Francisco to Gaviota. 417

ST. ROSE'S ACADEMY,

UNDER THE DIRECTION OF THE

Sisters of St. Dominic,

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THIS INSTITUTION, BEAUTIFULLY LOCATED on Tyler Street, near Webster, affords every facility for acquiring a thorough Education.

The Academic year consists of two terms of five months each.

TERMS:

Board, Washing and English Tuition, per quarter $60 00
Entrance Fee..... 10 00

EXTRAS:

Languages, (each)..... $10 00
Piano..... 10 00
Harp..... 10 00
Use of Piano for Practice..... 1 00
Pupils will be required to be provided with bedstead, six sheets of underclothing, two morning dresses, dressing gown, slippers, toilet table, silver plated knife, fork, spoon, napkin ring, two pillows, four counterpanes, two blankets, two pillow-ties, four towels, one dozen of each, table napkins, toilet, tooth and napkin ring.

Rules strictly enforced by rule.

Pupils of any religious denomination will be received. Pupils will be required to attend the Catholic Church on Sundays and Holidays of Obligation.

All correspondence of the young ladies will be subject to the inspection of the Mother Superior.

For further particulars address

SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. GERTRUDE'S ACADEMY,

RIO VISTA, SOLANO CO., CAL.

THIS ACADEMY FOR YOUNG LADIES, UNDER the direction of the Sisters of Mercy, is beautifully situated in an extensive lawn, in the pleasant town of Rio Vista. The location is remarkably healthy and commands a view of the Sacramento River and the Sierra Nevada Mountains. The grounds are extensive and well adapted to the recreation of the Pupils of all the classes with which equally received. The course of instruction embraces all the usual branches of a solid education.

Pupils received at any time during the term, and will be charged from the date of entrance.

The scholastic year is divided into two sessions of five months, the first to commence January and ending in June.

Terms per Session, Payable in Advance

BOARDING PUPILS

Board and Tuition, with use of bedding..... $112 50
Instrumental Music..... 12 50
Use of Piano..... 10 00
Vocal Music (private lessons)..... 10 00
Drawing, Painting, French, Plain and Ornamental Needlework do not form extra charges.

DAY SCHOLARS.

(Terms per month, in advance)

Tuition in English, French, and Latin, with use of bedding..... $ 15 00
Board, Lodging, Tuition in all branches including use of bedding..... 350 00
School Stationery, medical attendance and Medicine, Baths, etc., for pupils not boarders..... 250 00

For further particulars apply to the Mother Superior, or to the Rev. President of Santa Inez College, or to St. Joseph's College, 841 Market street, San Francisco.

REV. J. PENANNI, S. J. President.

SACRAMENTO INSTITUTE.

A Select Boarding and Day School.

Conducted by the Christian Brothers,

COR. K AND TWELFTH STS., SACRAMENTO.

STUDENTS ARE RECEIVED AT ANY TIME DURING the year, and particular attention is given to the Commercial and Mechanical branches as preparatory work for business in the shortest possible time. For particulars, apply to BRO. GAUDIN, Principal.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO.

Conducted by the Christian Bros.

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in this College, our own language receives special attention. The daily exercises of the Schoolroom are so conducted that the pupils are publicly discussed and corrected in the classroom.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board, Tuition, Washing, Bed and Bedding..... $250 00
Entrance Fee..... 10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines..... 10 00
Vacation at College..... 50 00
Use of Bed..... 60 00

Music and Drawing form extra charges.

For further particulars address

BRO. BETTELIN, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION, OFFERING DE-sirable advantages to young ladies wishing to receive a solid and refined education, was opened in 1851. In 1855, it was incorporated by the State Legislature, and subsequently, the Trustees availed themselves of the original Charter so to confer all the rights and privileges of Collegiate Institutions.

It occupies large buildings, with extensive playgrounds, and possesses every thing to make refined families and attractive. The course of instruction is thorough, in all the Departments. Every facility will be afforded to students who may find it desirable to devote their whole attention to music or the study of the languages.

The scholastic year begins on the first Monday in August, and ends on the last Friday in June. Pupils are received at any period of the year.

TERMS:

For quarter, (payable in advance.)

Boarding, Tuition in English, French, and Latin, washing and use of bedding..... $ 60 00
Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges.

For further particulars address

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME

SAN JOSE, CAL.

HEALD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE

Cor. Market and Fremont Streets,

Opposite Mechanics' Institute.

(Continued from Business Guide.)

CONTINUES TO THE ENTIRE BUSINESS EDUCATION of young men and young ladies, by the most thorough system of Practical Training. Explicitness, Skill, Celerity, Accuracy, by the aid of the most improved methods, are the results of the system. Graduates, Male and Female, are in demand. Circulars free. Address HEALD'S BUSINESS COLLEGE, San Francisco, Cal. 1y17d

ACADEMY OF ST. AGNES

STOCKTON, CAL.

FOR YOUNG LADIES

Directed by the Dominican Sisters

EDUCATIONAL.

ST. CATHERINE'S ACADEMY,

FOR YOUNG LADIES.

BENICIA ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION IS CONDUCTED UNDER the care of the Sisters of Mercy, and offers all the advantages to young ladies desiring to receive a solid and refined education, as is consistent with their delicate constitution. It opens on the 16th of August, and closes on the 16th of June.

TERMS:

(Payable half yearly.)

Board and Tuition..... $425 00
Entrance Fee..... 10 00
Bed and Bedding..... 50 00

Pupils remaining at the Academy during vacation will be charged extra.

For further particulars address

SISTER SUPERIOR.

ST. VINCENT'S COLLEGE,

CORNER OF VALLEJO AND KEARNY STS., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

CHARTERED IN 1868, AND CONDUCTED BY the Lazarist Fathers, under the patronage of the Archbishop of San Francisco, this College offers every facility for a thorough education at moderate rates.

The Course of Instruction embraces all the branches necessary to the accomplishment of a solid and refined education.

Parents, in confiding their children to the care of the Fathers, may feel perfectly satisfied that every attention will be given to their intellectual and moral training, while the strictness of discipline will prevent the contagion of bad example.

The Fifteenth Annual Session will commence on July 20, 1880.

TERMS:

Per quarter session, (payable in advance.)

Board, tuition, washing, and use of bedding..... $50 00
Music, with use of instrument..... 15 00
Vocal Music..... 5 00
Drawing and Painting..... 5 00
Vacation spent at the College..... 30 00

SELECT DAY SCHOOL.

Terms per month (in advance.)

Rhetoric Classes..... $5 00
Humanities Classes..... 4 00
Preparatory Classes..... 3 00
Primary Classes..... 2 00

These pupils residing at a distance from the College, and desiring a hot luncheon, will be provided with it for the small charge of 75 cents per month. For other particulars apply to the Superior.

No extra charge for Bedding, Washing, or the simple Plain and Fancy Needlework.

Linen furnished to the College, and marked by the Sisters, in a parcel bid school, in which is imparted a good solid English education, free of charge.

Academy of the Immaculate Heart.

A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies,

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF THE MOST Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary, Santa Clara County, Cal. Pupils receive the most careful attention, and are taught to be truly polite, intellectually bright, and Christian in their deportment. Terms, Board and Tuition, per Session of Five Months, $150. Music, Drawing and Painting, $10 each. Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges. For further particulars address

SISTER SUPERIOR.

ACADEMY OF ST. JOSEPH,

CORNER OF SUTTER AND STOCKTON STS., SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THIS INSTITUTION, PLEASANTLY SITUATED in the most central portion of the City, has been established by the Sisters of Charity, and is conducted on the principles of the Mother House, in Emmitsburg, Maryland. The Course of Instruction embraces all the branches necessary to a thorough education, and the Pupils are prepared for the Graduating classes of the Academy. Music, Drawing and Painting are taught by the most competent Professors. Terms, Board and Tuition, per Session of Five Months, $150. Music, Drawing and Painting, $10 each. Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges. For further particulars address

SISTER SUPERIOR.

CITY ITEMS.

Speech of Hon. C. T. Ryland in Reply to Secretary Thompson.

On last Friday evening Union Hall was crowded to overflowing, on the occasion of the fourth grand time-meeting of the Hancock Tidal Blue and Gray Legion, General W. S. Rosecrans, president, pro tem, in the meeting with the following remarks. "In calling together this meeting of the Legion, I have but a few remarks to offer. You all read the newspapers, and are therefore prepared, it appears that the gigantic political Secretary of the Interior did not create such a great firmament in favor of the Republican Party. Not yet did that great orator of the Pacific Coast, Senator Conkling, utterly destroy the Democracy on the coast. I have the honor of introducing the Hon. C. T. Ryland of San Jose, who will address you."

Mr. Ryland was greeted with a round of applause. He said: I feel it an honor to be called on to distinguished citizen as General W. S. Rosecrans. I shall hasten to an abuse, for I am aware that abuse is not argument. I shall endeavor to convince my Democratic friends that that distinguished patriot and soldier.

GENERAL W. S. ROSECRANS,

And that honorable statesman, W. H. English, should be President and Vice-President. One of the sages of the Nile, Mr. Secretary Thompson, has been here to try and convince you that the party which he represents should be continued in power. One of the first things that he spoke of is the doctrine of citizenship. I agree with him that it is a duty to be exercised with care. The next point that he made was the charge of the Republicans leaders against our party nominees. He also let the cat out of the bag, and some time the gallant Hancock. After assuring us that he is one to be judged by his party, he then said that should the Democratic nominees be successful, he would be the last man to be considered in every way honorable and worthy of the high trust. I, for one, accept the compliment. I notice that the two distinguished gentlemen who have spoken have allowed us totally confined to abuse to the Republican party in the proceedings. The main point made by the Hon. Secretary of the Interior was that the Democratic Party to remain in power. To the indictment that the Democratic Party has been faithless, he pleaded no guilty. If

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY

is correct in the proposition that the Republican Party has not been faithless to its trust, then I think it should be continued in power. The verdict. But if he is wrong, then here that party is not worthy, under your freemen's ballots. He asked the further question, "Where, in the world, where were they faithless?" It would take me a long time, if I was here to answer, I should have to try and relate to you all in which the Republican Party has been faithless. Faithless, not to the transactions of the Republican party in the state, but to the trust reposed in that Legislature was guilty of the most flagrant abuse of power, and by his adroitness the speaker of our city lost $1,000,000. This officer had stated that this time has not been the first time that under Lincoln's administration had been guilty of such a crime. Is that in office. Is it this a breach of faith? Again go with me to the Island and tell me if this party was not guilty of being faithless to its trust. Here we have two, two years, were marched up to the pals and compelled to disgorge. Is that faithless to public official trust. Go with me, Mr. Secretary of the Interior, to the Sandwich Island Feet Traders and Indian Agents. This country, this time has been guilty of the most flagrant abuse of power. Is that faithlessness to their trust? Look into and see if the revenue had not been defrauded, and will see some of the Republican party in attempt and fraudulent contracts. But may like to know what I think of the party. I will tell you in a few words. Again, read the records of the Republican party, and see if it has been faithless to its trust. Look into the Indian Department, and you will see that it placed the Indian Bureau in the hands of men who, in the present nominee of the Republican Party for President, was the Indian Agent, and he was charged with the most flagrant abuse of power. I say that it was the originator of that year. The Democratic Party, under the Administration of Mr. Buchanan, in 1857, was guilty of some indescretions in settlers in Utah, but it was not all. The Democratic Party is a progressive party. It may have been a negative party, but it has always been opposed to sectional monopolies, to evil and shall it also be said that the Democratic Party has been faithful to the principle that an American citizen is worth more than a Chinese. The Democratic Party killed the Alien Laws, and taught the Federal that she had no right to step on our rights, and peace and harmony was restored by the Democratic Party. Look at the Democratic nominee for President is not fitted to sit in the Chair of Washington, and I will tell you why. He is not a statesman than a soldier. Yet every Democrat knows that he is a soldier, and he is no patriotic a statesman as General Hancock. I do not think he is fitted for the kind of Pale and Fancy Needlework.

THE WHISKY RING

Look at the Indian Department and ask the Sisters, in a parochial school, in which is imparted a good solid English education, free of charge.

Academy of the Immaculate Heart.

A Boarding and Day School for Young Ladies,

CONDUCTED BY THE SISTERS OF THE MOST Holy and Immaculate Heart of Mary, Santa Clara County, Cal. Pupils receive the most careful attention, and are taught to be truly polite, intellectually bright, and Christian in their deportment. Terms, Board and Tuition, per Session of Five Months, $150. Music, Drawing and Painting, $10 each. Vocal and Instrumental Music, Drawing and Painting form extra charges. For further particulars address

SISTER SUPERIOR.

SAINT MARY'S COLLEGE

SAN FRANCISCO.

Conducted by the Christian Bros.

Offers every facility for acquiring a thorough Education, whether Classical, Scientific or Commercial.

THOSE WHO COMPLETE THE CLASSICAL Course receive the degree of A. B.; the Scientific, B. S.; the Commercial, Master of Accounts.

The Commercial course has been established for the convenience of those who wish to acquire a practical education in as short a time as possible.

While proper care is bestowed on every branch taught in this College, our own language receives special attention. The daily exercises of the Schoolroom are so conducted that the pupils are publicly discussed and corrected in the classroom.

TERMS PER SCHOLASTIC YEAR.

(Payable half yearly in advance.)

Board, Tuition, Washing, Bed and Bedding..... $250 00
Entrance Fee..... 10 00
Physician's Fee and Medicines..... 10 00
Vacation at College..... 50 00
Use of Bed..... 60 00

Music and Drawing form extra charges.

For further particulars address

BRO. BETTELIN, President.

COLLEGE OF NOTRE DAME,

SAN JOSE ..... CALIFORNIA.

THIS INSTITUTION, OFFERING DE-sirable advantages to young ladies wishing to receive a solid and refined education, was opened in 1851. In 1855, it was incorporated by the State Legislature, and subsequently, the Trustees availed themselves of the original Charter so to confer all the rights and privileges of Collegiate Institutions.

It occupies large buildings, with extensive playgrounds, and possesses every thing to make refined families and attractive. The course of instruction is thorough, in all the Departments. Every facility will be afforded to students who may find it desirable to devote their whole attention to music or the study of Condition of the State.

The farmers are the busiest, and ought to be the happiest, set of men in the State. Most of them have by this time their grain all harvested, threshed and sacked, and the huge brown bins that dot the fields represent the bulk of this year's increase of the State's wealth. While it is true that the yield is generally greater than was anticipated, and the harvest will be correspondingly benefited. We notice that in Sutter county the yield of the famous "Jones" 700 cures will reach an average of about 30 bushels of wheat to the acre, and also at as good results are reported from many other parts of the State. Our foreign exchange generally agree that the farmers are not disposed to speculate to any great extent, and evince a disposition to sell as soon as anything like fair prices can be had. On the banks of the Sacramento river and all the railroad stations and switches thousands of sacks of grain are being deposited to await shipment to market. The condition of the river is such that light-draught steamers will probably be able for some weeks yet to compete with the railroad for a good share of the up-river grain trade.—Sacramento Bee.

The Harvest in Germany Destroyed.

BERLIN, August 17.—The reports from the provinces in regard to the fields are worse daily. It's only has Silesia suffered severely, but also East and West Prussia. The harvest is almost totally destroyed. Thousands are asking that the divisional manoeuvres will be put off for the year. It has rained incessantly for three weeks in some parts.

WHILE the New York journals announce that the crops in Europe generally are very promising, the London reports state that at St. Petersburg news has been received from forty-nine Prefectures stating that the harvest is poor. Poor crops in so many of the Russian divisions may, perhaps, furnish for our American grain-growers a market for their surplus, or a portion of the same, which are very large.

British Grain Market.

A Poor Crop and Discouraging Prospects for the Manufacturing Districts.

LONDON, August 16.—The "Mark Lane Express" says: The general tone of business has been of the utmost value, but wheat has been greatly in advance of yesterday's quotations for nearly all our descriptions. Barley, while all the time better crop of the season, has likewise deteriorated in value, and is now 1 to 2 shillings per qr. lower than all good barley having been more or less laid. Imports about one-half more than last week, but supplies have improved. A large part of the later large crops was got in during the past week, and will be about the only portion of the crop of 1880 which has been made in good condition. A considerable number of the weather is the one thing needful to enable the farmer to make the best of what must be a deficient harvest, at any rate for wheat. The probable early delivery of new English wheat and heavy shipments from America, have resulted in a decline at Mark Lane and the provincial markets during the week. Anticipations of future values may be shown this week, but it will be seen that the large arrival at the seaboard will be sufficient to furnish reliable grounds upon which to form an opinion. Taking everything into consideration, there is little hope for the farmers of high prices this season, as harvest prospects in Northern Europe are more promising than last year, while America has probably eclipsed all previous yields. Business has been restricted since our last, immediate wants, of which the millers obtain on rather easier terms. Maize is unaltered.

Domestic Produce Market.

FLOUR—City Mills Superfine, $3 50@$4 00; Bakers and Family, $5 12½@$5 37½; Best Family Flour, Extra, jobbing at $5 37½ ⅌ bbl; Oregon Standard extra $4 50@$5 00; choice, $5@$5 25 Oregon Superfine, $3 50@$4; Walla Walla Extra, $4 50@$5 12½; Interior extra, $4 75@$5; Interior Superfine, $3 50@$4 ⅌ bbl.

WHEAT—The feeling is one of uncertainty, and while the market is manifestly weak for shipping grades, choice milling lots continue to bring top figures. The attendance on Change this morning was unusually large, but business was very slack. Sales reported were: 1,600 ctls ship'g Oregon at $1 37½, 3,000 ctls ship'g Oregon at $1 37½; 50 tons do, $1 50; 250 ctls fair do, $1 45; 500 ctls mixed, $1 30; 250 ctls fair do, $1 45; 500 ctls mixed, $1 30; 250 ctls fair do, $1 45; 750 ctls do, $1 40; 250 ctls do, $1 35. No. 1 is quotable at $1 47½@$1 50. No. 2, at $1 40@$1 45 ⅌ ctl.

BARLEY—The demand for export continues, and it is said that large sales are being made on this account. To-day's sales were: 4,000 ctls choice feed, for export, 85c; 3,900 do do, for export, private rates, and 300 do dark and even do at 78c. Feed, 80@82c; Brewing 85@90c; bay (barley), standard weight, $1 00@$1 05; good do, $1 02½@$1 05 ⅌ ctl.

OATS—Good and choice grades, $1 25@$1 50; common kinds $1 20@$1 30; Surprise, $1 50@$1 60; Black, $1 40@$1 50; Gray, $1 40@$1 50; Oregon Surprise, $1 60@$1 70; 100 do poor do, $1 50; 500 do heavy feed, $1 45, and 200 do light do, $1 37½ ⅌ ctl.

CORN—Sale of 120 sks choice small round Calcutta, $1 65, the quotation for Yellow. This is usually nominal at $1 50@ ctl.

RYE—Market quiet at $1 00@$1 10 ⅌ ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Quoted at $3 00@$3 50 ⅌ ctl.

STRAW—$20@$25 ⅌ ton.

HAY—Receipts have been very large, and prices have ruled lower, and the demand is better. Shipments are being made to Sonora ports. Sales of Oregon at $9 ⅌ ctl for boxes and sacks. Stocks, $1 50@$1 75 ⅌ ctl.

MILLSTUFF—Quoted at $18 for Middlings and $16 ⅌ ctl for Red. Small, for jobbing, $1 25 ⅌ ctl.

MILLSTUFF—Ground Barley, from the city mills, $18 per ton; Rye Flour, $5@$6; Rye Meal, $5@$6; Buckwheat Flour, $6@$6; Feed Barley, $18; Corn Meal, $25; Cracked Corn, $1 ⅌ ctl; Middlings, $18 ⅌ ton, and Wheat Bran, $17@$18 ⅌ ton, silver; Oil Cake Meal, $30 ⅌ ton—the three latter subject to the market for account to the trade.

COMMEAL, $1 37½@$1 50 ⅌ ctl; Hominy, $3@$3 50 ⅌ ctl; Feed Corn, $1 ⅌ ctl.

BEES—We quote: Flax, 2c; Mustard Yellow, 2½@2c; Clover, 9½@9c; Alfalfa, 7½@9c; Rape, 2c ⅌ lb.

DRIED FEAS—Quotable at $1 25@$1 50 ⅌ ctl. Offerings are small, and firm.

BEESWAX—Quotable at 28c ⅌ lb.

BEANS—Sales: Bayo, $3 25@$3 50; Butter, $4; Red, $3@$3 50; Pink, $3@$3 50; Limas, $5 50@6 00; Peas, $1 25@$1 50; Buttons, $1 10@$1 15 ⅌ ctl.

BUTTER—Nothing new in the situation. Fair to good Eastern Butter, nominal, 22@25c. The general market ruler is nominally $20@$22 ⅌ ctl for Oregon and California, but sales are confined to small lots from country stock, 22@25c; new lots from country stock, 22@25c; new fresh, 25@30c; picked roll, 30@32½ ⅌ lb.

CHEESE—California 12½@14c—outside for prime; Eastern 16@18c; Western 14@16c; Oregon 12@14c.

POULTRY—We quote: Live Turkeys, 15@17c for Hens, and 13@14c ⅌ lb for Gobblers; Geese, $1 50@$2 00 ⅌ pair; Young Ducks, $4 00@5 00; Hens, $5 50@7 00; Roosters, young, $5 50@7 00; do old, $5 00@6 00; Broilers, $3 50@4 00 ⅌ doz.

GAME—Doves, 75c ⅌ dozen; Venison, 7@10c ⅌ lb; Hares, $1 75@2; Rabbits, $1@1 25 ⅌ doz. There is an order in the market for 100 dozen old Pigeons at $2 ⅌ doz, if delivered by September 1st.

Dried—Arrival to-day of 30 barrels Eastern, on which no price is yet fixed. California, 27½@30c; Apples, 7@8c; Pears, 10@12c; Plums, 7½@8c.

HONEY—New comb, 12@14½ strained, 7@8c ⅌ lb.

NUTS—California Walnuts, 12@13c; Chile Walnuts, 8@10c; Peanuts, 10@12c; Hickory Nuts, 16@18; Pecans, 16@17c; Filberts, 13@14c; Brazil Nuts, 14@15c ⅌ lb.

DOMESTIC FRUIT—Prices are rather higher. Peaches were in smaller supply and sold higher; Grapes also advanced. No Strawberries arrived. Missouri Grapes, $16@1 25; common 50@75c ⅌ box; Apricots, 75@50c ⅌ box; Watermelons, $8@12½ ⅌ 100; Cantaloupes, 75c@$1 25 ⅌ crate; Huckleberries, 12½@15c; Peaches 50c@1 ⅌ box; Plums, 50@75c; Blackberries, $2 25@3 00 ⅌ chest; Raspberries, $7 00@8 ⅌ chest; Pears 60@75c ⅌ box.

VEGETABLES—We quote: Cabbage ⅌ ctl, 50c@$1; Cauliflower, $1 25@$1 50 ⅌ dozen; Beets, 50@60c; Turnips, ⅌ ctl 50@60c; Garlic, ⅌ lb, 5@7c; Onions, ⅌ ctl, $1@1 25; Shallots, ⅌ lb, 5@7c.

HIDES AND PELTS—Heavy salted Steers, over 55 lbs, 10@10½c; medium cows and steers, 9c; Bull Hides, 30@40c; Calf Skins, 12@14c; Calf, 100@125; Dairy Calf Skins, 60@70c each; Dry Hides, sound, 40@45c; Dry Kips, 20@22c; Dry Calf, 30 prime Hair Goatskins 25c; fair and 20c lean, 20@25c; Sheepskins, Dec Shearlings, Summer 60c; medium Long Hairs, 30@35c; new Winter, 25@30c; Sheep skins: Shearlings, 25c; short wool, 40@50c; medium wool, 70@80; long wool, $1@1 25.

HOPS—Quotable at 30@35c ⅌ lb.

TALLOW—Mixed and choice rendered, 5½@6c, refined 7@7½c ⅌ lb.

WOOL—Quotations are: 17@22c for southern and San Joaquin; 26@31c for northern, and 26@32c from Humboldt and Sonoma.

MEAT—The annexed quotations are for wholesale carcasses from slaughterers to dealers: Beef—Prime, 5@6c; medium grades 4@5c; inferior, 4c ⅌ lb. Veal—Steady large Calves, 5@6c; small ones (veals) 6@7c ⅌ lb. Mutton—Wethers are quotable at 5@6c, and ewes at 5@6c. Lambs—Spring quotable at 6@7c ⅌ lb for good to choice. Pork—Live Hogs, 5@6½c for hard and 6@7c ⅌ lb; dressed do, 7@7½c ⅌ lb.

The Supreme Court has decided that the Treaty of Sitka Act is unconstitutional—that it compromises the head of special legislation. That decision, therefore, destroys all Acts passed by the last Legislature affecting cities of such towns as 100,000 inhabitants.

Rose-Colored Woman. There ought to be more of them. A very complexion, if it be natural, makes the coldest face beautiful; for with it, we find the rosiest mind, the elastic step, the elegant laugh—in a word, Health. The cure of Haldenbrand and other maladies is wrought in comparatively a few days by Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, a dispensary of all bodily ills.

New Advertisements.

THE FASHIONABLE DRESS MAKER
629 Clay street,
INFORMS THE PUBLIC, THAT SHE HAS MADE a change in her prices for cutting, and that she will be prepared to cut and fit suits for $2 each. Bedding good, 50 cents. Wrappers, 50 cents. She has attended to non-contagious midwifery for twenty years. New system of cutting and fitting beautiful bridal dresses. Ladies can be taught, etc. Daughter of John F. Plume also the inaugural ball dress of Mrs. Sam Brannan's Fashion and Opera for subscribers commences to-morrow. MADAME TEDFORD 269 Sixteenth st.

HAIR RESTORER.
Mrs. H. A. Moore's Scientific Hair Restorer.
IT PREVENTS HAIR FALLING OUT, IT CURE all scalp diseases, it promotes the growing over contains no mineral. Call at 108 Stockton street and be convinced. Forward to all parts of the country. Send for circular.

FLORAL AND PLANT DEPOT
OF THE.....
Mountain View Nursery
8 TAYLOR STREET, ... NEAR MASON
P. J. KELLER & CO., Proprietors.
BOUQUETS, CUT FLOWERS, CROSSES, AND A DESIGN of floral decorations, trees, plants, shrubs, ornamental, fruit, and shade trees. Nurseries, near cemetery, Oakland, Cal.
Catalogue and price list, mailed free

C. R. HANSEN & CO.,
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE,
626 CLAY STREET, 626
SAN FRANCISCO.
The largest establishment on Pacific Coast. Families, Hotels, Farms, Mills, and Mines supplied with Male or Female Help,
FREE OF CHARGE
Telephone Connection.
Scandinavian, German, and French spoken by the Proprietors.

All Kinds Of
FURNITURE REPAIRING & UPHOLSTERING
Neatly and Promptly Attended To
ALSO CABINET WORK OF EVERY DESCRIPTION AND SHOW CASES MADE TO ORDER
CHAS. KOEHLER, 539 Ellis St., cor. Taylor

NOTICE OF REMOVAL.
DR. J. J. CLARKE
Has removed his office from
106 Stockton Street, to 659 Clay.
Office Hours—From 8 to 10 a. m. 12 to 2 p. m. and 7 to 8 p. m. Residence 916 Sacramento St.

W. LINDSEY,
9 Geary Street.
EJECTS TENANTS FOR
$10 to $15.
DAYS AND EXPENSES. RENTS COLLECTED. Property taken full charge of.

Sewer Pipe, Chimney Tops, TERRA COTTA VASE, VASES, FLOWER POTS, ETC.
—CALL ON—
WM. E. STEVENS,
Junction of Market and Larkin Sts. S. F.

Orphan Horses—From 3 to 5 a. m. 12 m. to 2 p. m. and 7 to 8 p. m. Residence 916 Sacramento St.

EVENING DRESS SUITS FOR SPECIAL OCCASIONS,
Can be had at the Tailoring Establishment of
J. COOPER,
34 New Montgomery St., Palace Hotel Block.
ALSO BLACK CLOTH DRESS SUITS, $25.
For Funerals or other Special Occasions. Terms, Cash or Free.

J. L. NUGENT,
Cash Grocery Store,
723 Montgomery st.,
Bet. Washington and Jackson, S. F.

Woodworth, Schell & Co.
PIONEER PIANO HOUSE,
(Established 1851)
No. 105 Stockton Street, S. F.
REMOVED FROM NO. 12 POST STREET.

LESSONS GIVEN
Piano, Organ, Accordeon, Concertina, Violin and Banjo.
PIANOS FOR SALE OR HIRE.
MRS. BENNETT, 146 Fourth st., nr. Howard.

Pianos Rented, Tuned and Repaired
And for Sale on Easy Instalments.
M'DONNELL & CO.,
AUCTIONEERS
St. Ignatius Hall, Market street.
(Formerly the Jesuit Church.)
The attention of Manufacturers, Importers, Furniture Dealers, and others, is called to our large and commodious Auction Salesroom, being the most spacious and convenient one in the city, and adapted for the sale of large or small quantities of Merchandise, Furniture, Horses and Boxes, including carload lots.
Kent Estate Department.
Owners of Real Estate will do well to place their property in our hands, either for public or private sale. Our Central position and extensive frontage on Market street, afford unrivalled facilities for placing property conspicuously before the public. Particular attention is paid to the sale of Country Real Estate, Farming Lands, etc. Horses and boxes handling solicited.

MISCELLANEOUS.

A Card to the Ladies.
Madame Tedford, from Paris, makes to order suits in the highest style of fashion, at the most reasonable rates. Dresses, Cloaks and mantles made to order. Ladies' Underclothing, in sets, of our own make. Corsets, Wrappers, 50 cents. Bedding good, 50 cents. Wrappers, 50 cents. She has attended to non-contagious midwifery for twenty years. New system of cutting and fitting beautiful bridal dresses. Ladies can be taught, etc. Daughter of John F. Plume also the inaugural ball dress of Mrs. Sam Brannan's Fashion and Opera for subscribers commences to-morrow.
MADAME TEDFORD
269 Sixteenth st.

HOP BITTERS!
If you are a slave, suffering from the effects of youthful indiscretion, or are a married or single lady, in ill health from any cause, HOP BITTERS!
If your friends are drunkards, or have been so, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Biliousness, Dyspepsia, Kidney or Urinary Complaints, HOP BITTERS!
If you are a Minister, Lawyer, Merchant, or Mechanic, and find your system needing a tonic, HOP BITTERS!
If you are a Mother, Sister, Wife or Daughter, and need a medicine for her peculiarities, HOP BITTERS!
If you are young and imprudent, or middle aged and find the effects of youthful indiscretions, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Nervousness, Sleeplessness, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Dyspepsia or Indigestion, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Liver Complaint, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Kidney Complaint, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Urinary Complaint, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Nervous Prostration, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Sleeplessness, HOP BITTERS!
If you are troubled with Dyspepsia

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The Striking Weavers.

LONDON, September 3.—The "Times" says: The chances of weavers striking against reductions continued yesterday. The general opinion of operatives is in favor of striking, first of one town and then of another. The extensive migration, already so large that it has caused alarm in Burnley, by several families starting for Fall River, Mass. The employers declare that they are losing money, and will prolong the present strikes, if attempted, by a lockout, involving two hundred thousand hands.

The Scotch Strikes.

LONDON, September 4.—Advices from Scotch iron manufacturing districts say that the strike is likely to continue. Only 32 furnaces are in blast. The increase in stocks for August is 13,000 tons.

A Serious Movement to Abolish the House of Lords.

LONDON, September 2.—The resolution of Thos. P. O'Connor, Home Rule member for Galway, that it is an unjust, illegal and expensive mode of measures for the enlargement of the condition of the people of England, Ireland and Scotland should be at the mercy of a body, consisting of legislators, landowners and brewers, was moved in the House of Commons in the small house of Wednesday morning, after the passage of the Burials bill, and was seconded by Lockwood, Liberal member for Northampton. The Marquis of Hartington (Liberal) denounced the raising of a great Constitutional question at the hour of three in the morning. He said he hoped the House would proceed with as little delay as possible to the more serious business before it. The House then divided on the question, which was carried—13 ayes to 11 noes. The minority consisted of five Irish members and Bradlaugh, Rigby, Broadhurst, Anderson, Wilson, Sir Wilfred Lawson, Labouchere, Charles Macfarlane and Joseph Cowen. The majority included four Irish members. Parnell declined to have anything to do with the resolution.

Thomas Power O'Connor will preside at the Irish demonstration against the House of Lords in Hyde Park on Sunday next. A number of Irish members of the House of Commons have promised to be present. It is probable that the Board of Works has refused to give permission for the use of a platform for the meeting.

The "Times" says: "It is much to be regretted that the House of Lords should have thrown out the bill for the registration of voters in Ireland. It was a waste of their power. When struggles can be foreseen on matters of great moment, it is important to provide ill-timed and futile. The bill provided facilities for the registration of voters in Ireland, which were identical in the main with those existing in England, and the peers of Lords might wisely have assented to it in the interest of the Conservative party."

In the House of Commons, on Friday, Sexton gave notice that early in the next session he would call attention to the legislative relations of the Lords and Commons, and move a resolution on the subject. Arnold, a Liberal, will move an order for immediate consideration of the same bill, that the rejection by the House of Lords of a measure greatly promoting the welfare of Ireland, has gravely increased the difficulties of the Executive, in dealing with the present distress by the expense of the state. Parnell gave notice of a motion for taking the Registration bill out of the Appropriation bill. The Marquis of Hartington suggested that it would be better to move a resolution remonstrating against the rejection by the House of Lords of the Registration bill. To this Parnell assented.

Later in the session Lord Hartington announced that he could not accept the terms of the resolution which Parnell had framed, remonstrating against the rejection of the Registration bill by the Lords. The following is the resolution: That the action of the Lords in absolutely rejecting a measure so injurious to the interest of the Irish people, and fatal to the prosperity of Ireland, is the most lamentable of its kind in the Imperial Parliament for redress of their grievance.

LONDON, September 3.—In the House of Commons to-night Parnell introduced his amendment adding the clauses of the Registration bill to the Appropriation bill. Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland, while recognizing the amendment, blamed the Lords severely for their contemptuous treatment of the Registration bill. He said that if such proceedings were persisted in the Irish people would conclude at a time when some changes in the constitution of the House of Lords would be inevitable. The declaration was received with tremendous cheering.

Sir Stafford Northcote rose to reply. He said he he most certainly as strongly protested against the expressions used in regard to the House of Lords, which, coming from a Minister of the Crown, he had listened with amazement and regret. He hoped these sentiments were not shared by other Ministers. Those remarks made considerable sensation.

On a motion to go into Committee on the Appropriation bill, Parnell's amendment was rejected by a vote of 55 to 33. The amendment was then put and lost. The Appropriation bill, as rejected, by a vote of 65 to 16. In the Committee, Sexton moved a clause for the payment of thoroughly out the time, amounting to £20,000, for salaries to the House of Lords.

Sir William Harcourt, Home Secretary, said that Lord Cadogan had informed the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland that the action of the House of Lords had rejected the Registration bill to save the cost of a Tory meeting.

John Bright said it appeared that while the House of Commons was endeavoring to conciliate Ireland, the Lords were determined to make a declaration of war against the Irish people.

Aylmer, Conservative member for Malahide, said he thought speech was unpermissible tension against the Constitution.

The amendment was rejected by a vote of 81 to 18. The Appropriation bill was then passed in Committee.

Secretary Forster's Retirement.

LONDON, September 4.—The House of Lords passed the Burial of Suicides bill, as agreed to in the House of Commons yesterday. During the session Lord Rosebery, Liberal, moved the thanks of Forster, Chief Secretary for Ireland, in the House of Commons yesterday, in another House of Lords. Lord Granville, Foreign Secretary, said that Forster had informed him that he was only expressing his own opinion and did not assume to express the opinion of the Government or intend to convert them to any course of action.

Returning the Bill.

LONDON, September 4.—In the House of Commons this evening, James Cowan, Liberal member for Edinburgh, made a vehement attack on the Eastern policy of the Government, and remonstrated with the Government for withholding information. Sir Charles Dilke, Under Foreign Secretary, protested against Cowan's unmannered speech, and denied his assertion that England proposed to justify the Sultan and bombard Constantinople. The Appropriation Act passed its third reading, and afterwards its first reading in the House of Lords. The House of Lords meets again on Monday and the House on Tuesday, when Parliament will be prorogued.

The Times commentator on Forster's attack on the House of Lords, which that journal severely criticizes, and upon Parnell, Dillon's and T. P. O'Connor's motion and Collins' speech, says: "When things like these occur and recur, it is time for the session to come to an end, and we rejoice to think that there is now a fairly certain prospect of its prorouing on Tuesday next.

Gladstone Again on His Feet.

LONDON September 4.—Gladstone entered the House of Commons for the first time since his sickness, and was received with tremendous cheering.

Parliament Dissolved.

LONDON, September 7.—Parliament was prorogued to-day. The following was Her Majesty's speech, read by the Royal Commissioner:

My Lords and Gentlemen—It is with satisfaction that I find myself at length enabled to release you from your arduous labors. I continue to receive from all Powers the most friendly character from all foreign Powers. The failure of the Sublime Porte to accept the decision of the agreement, the plan agreed upon in April last for the determination of the Ottoman frontier has delayed the completion of the enforcement of the Treaty of Berlin, but not yet, although the Treaty of Berlin has not yet taken effect in other points of importance which remained open at the commencement of the session. The Ministers with whom were parties to that treaty have communicated to the Sublime Porte their judgment on the means of attaining a satisfactory adjustment of the Greek and Montenegrin frontier question on the basis of adjustment of the Greek and Montenegrin provinces of Turkey, and on the principal reforms required in the Asiatic provinces inhabited by Armenians for the attainment of the objects in view. I continue to place reliance on the fact that the concert of Europe has been steadily maintained in regard to the Eastern question, and that the Powers who signed the Treaty of Berlin are pressing upon the Sublime Porte, with all the authority which belongs to their united action, measures which, in their belief, are best calculated to insure tranquility in the East. I have not been unfaithful during the few months which have elapsed since I last addressed you of the considerations which would guide my policy on the northwestern frontier of my Indian Empire. Measures have already been taken for the complete military evacuation of Northern Afghanistan, and some progress has been made toward the pacification and settlement of the country. The recent of hostilities by the Afghans under Ayoub Khan has rendered necessary further military operations in Southern Afghanistan.

The important measures taken by the Government of India for the relief of the garrison of Candahar, and the conspicuous ability and energy displayed by my officers and troops in the execution of those measures, resulted in a brilliant victory gained by the gallant force under the command of Sir Frederick Roberts will, I trust, be followed by an honorable termination of the war in that division of the country. I regret that it has not Hitherto been possible to give you such information on the general state of Indian affairs and on the results of the present campaign, accounts of the military expenditure, as you would justly require before entering on a practical consideration of the subject. You may, however, rest assured that I will embrace my pledge to supply you with this information at the earliest period in my power. The measures recently been made in the project of the South African Confederation, have not yet advantage arise from endeavors to pass it forward except in proportion as a favorable movement of public opinion in that portion of my dominions. The general state of affairs in South Africa, however, is on the whole satisfactory except in Basutoland, where I trust that a moderate and conciliatory policy may aide the attainment of the enforcement of the Disarmament Act. Gentlemen of the House of Commons, I tender you my thanks for the liberal provision which you have made for the charges which I have incurred. My Lords Gentlemen, I acknowledge with thankful the aid which the Almighty the Almighty has granted during several weeks of the weather for securing the harvest of my drive, in many places reasonable promises of abundance. I am also enabled to anticipate both a further revival of trade and some addition to the revenue of the country, and look with especial pleasure upon the probable improvement of the condition of the people of Ireland. Ireland has so seriously suffered from prolonged and notoriously unfavorable weather, the period at which you began your labors, I cannot possibly anticipate, and have enabled you to add to the statute book some valuable measures, particularly to your settlement of the long contested question relating to the subject in Ireland, to the Education Act, and to the Act for better dwellings for the laboring classes, and to these I would add the Act relating to the Ecclesiastical Courts, the repeal of the malt duty, the Savings Bank Act, the Post Office Money Orders Act, and measures for Ireland, for the endowment, merchant seamen, and providing for the sale and carriage of grain cargoes, and other measures may, under Divine providence, contribute to the welfare and prosperity of my people.

During the ceremony of the prorogation of members of the Commons, about sixty were present, including Premier Gladstone. Of the members of the House of Lords, Lord Hatherley, Commissioners, only one Liberal and two Conservatives were present, representing about thirty-five ladies, some of whom were Peeresses. The usual gallery of the House of Lords was filled with spectators. The ceremony of prorogation lasted seventeen minutes. Parliament was prorogued until the meeting of Parliament.

The Afghan War.

LONDON, September 5.—A dispatch from General Roberts, dated Candahar, September 2, reads as follows: The report of the reconnaissance carried out by General Hugh Gough and Colonel Chapman, on the 31st ult., afforded all necessary information regarding the enemy's position. I found it quite practicable to turn his right and thus place myself in the rear of Baba Wali, where Ayoob Khan's main camp was. I decided on delaying my advance towards Ghazni shortly after nine o'clock yesterday morning. To cover my delay I made preparations for a short attack on Baba Wali. This last was carried to the troops at Candahar garrison under General Primrose, who also arranged for occupying advanced positions of the previous day. At the same time his cavalry brigade under Brigadier General Hugh Gough advanced upon the left, and without difficulty reached Arpaghah, where it was well placed for pursuit should the enemy break either towards Ghiznee or Kabul. The attack was made by the First and Second Brigades, under Generals McPherson and Baker respectively, with the Third Brigade, under Brigadier Macgregor, in support, the whole infantry being under command of General Ross.

AN ELEVATED VILLAGE

Within 1,200 yards of our guns it was strongly held by the enemy, and had first to be taken. This was done in the most gallant manner by the Ninety-second Highlanders and Sikhs, who advanced covered by the artillery. The two brigades then advanced through orchard and enclosures, fighting steadily, the left of the Second brigade being brought round until the village of Pirpaimal was reached. At this point the enemy was in great force and opened a most galling and continue could resist the determined advance of the British troops. Meanwhile the Sikhs from the slope of Baba Wali was reached, and the standard of Ayoob Khan became visible. All the enemy's attempts to stem the current were fruitless. By twelve o'clock noon the camp was in our possession, with twenty-seven pieces of ordnance, which include our own guns lost on the 27th of July.

LONDON, September 6.—General Roberts telegraphs from Candahar, on September 3d, that all of Ayoob Khan's guns have been found and brought in; they number thirty-two pieces. Ayoob Khan has fled in Herat without stopping. He is probably in Seemineen to day. Hashem Khan and other Redjan and Ghilzie, with two exceptions, went with him. He had no baggage and no troops, except a few Heratee horse. He is said to have announced his intention of going straight to Herat.

CANDAHAR, September 6.—The total casualties of the reconnoissance of August 31st and the battle of the 1st inst. amounted to 256, including two officers, who were slightly wounded, not before reported.

LONDON, September 6.—A correspondent at Simla telegraphs: "The Government must now decide the Candahar question. It is impossible to bolster up Wali, who is not supported by the people. We must assess Candahar or give it to the Ameer, Abdurrahman, or try to found an independent State, composed of Herat and Candahar. The second plan would be the best one. A British force might be maintained, if necessary, at Candahar in a fortified cantonment, and the railway might be completed." This correspondent, if he thought here, represents Dilkie's view. Lord Lytton, Governor General of India, if indeed, the dispatch is not directly inspired by him.

FRANCE.

The Relations with Orders.

PARIS, September 6.—The "Temps" says: Nothing has been changed since Premier De Freycinet explained his policy! Justice is none thoroughly reorganization that Chamber, except that a bill on the rights of the magistracy has been drawn. It would scarcely be permissable to discuss such enlargement of the rights of the judiciary by the Chamber. It will contain effective provisions and a special provision applicable to religious congregations. In the event of its rejection the only course would be to revert to the enforcement of the March Decree.

The French Religious Bodies.

PARIS, September 7th. The Temps says: Sixty religious congregations have signed the letter which is proposed as a substitute for the demand for authorization, but so far only two are congregations of males, namely, the Oblates and Fathers.

SPAIN.

Spanish Elections.

MADRID, September 7th.—The returns of the election to the Cortes General throughout Spain show a large majority of Ministerial candidates elected. But one-seventh of the registered electors voted.

RUSSIA.

The Attempted Blow-Up.

LONDON, September 4.—A well-informed St. Petersburg correspondent writes: A mine was discovered in the government of Ekaterinoslav on Friday last, connected to the Imperial train from Taurkoeti, Liwall, and another in the government of Tscerfas, 16 versts further on, on the railroad to Simferopoli, was found only the day before the Emperor started. The latter mine contained 100 pounds of dynamite, packed in two cases. There was a wire connected with the mine, but no battery attached. General Loris Melikoff had been exercising the greatest vigilance in view of the Emperor's intended journey. Details about the mine in Tsecrfas are from a competent source.

Russian Demand of China.

ST. PETERSBURG, September 5.—The Globe says: Russia has demanded as a guarantee from China that the proposed modification of the Livilia Treaty shall not be changed by any fresh misunderstanding.

Skobeloff's Operations.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg says: General Skobeloff has advanced his army to Tizmi, which is strongly entrenched, and will be reinforced with five companies of infantry. Gen. Skobeloff himself, with an reconnoitering column, is pushing forward towards Tizmi. He intends to form an advance post military between there and Merv. Operations will be suspended for a month, and weeks during the present hot season. General Skobeloff will then establish himself at this post, where he will remain all Winter.

TURKEY AND THE POWERS.

LONDON, September 5.—In the House of Commons, tonight, Sir Wilfred Lawson called attention to the forcible interference with the affairs of a foreign country, and asked the Government what was the object of the Mediterranean Mobilization, which, he said, if not a sham, was the first step toward war.

Lord Hartington replied that he (Lord Hartington) earnestly hoped no necessity for coercion would arise. Their object was to render the existence of the Turkish Government possible, and the fulfilment of the difficulties which now threatened it. The assembling of the fleet at the Turkish Powers, with whom the Government is acting in perfect concert, proved that Europe was determined that not all its decisions should be evaded. Attempts to draw a sword were made declaration from the Government would rather tend to lead to the necessity for coercion.

Sir Charles Dilke, Under Foreign Secretary, stated that the arrangements between the Powers were not quite complete, but the Admiral was not in possession of the full extent of the powers and the same instructions. It was apprehended that Senior Admiral Seymour would consult the other Admirals on political questions only. The Government had every reason to believe that this attempt to settle the Montenegrin question would be successful, that Dulcigno would be evacuated in a very short time, and that no coercion would be necessary.

A dispatch from Rome says: As the Porte's answer to the last note on the Montenegrin question was unsatisfactory, the Powers have ordered their fleets to the Albanian coast. The French division arrives at Corfu on the 8th, and will be held, under the presidency of Admiral Seymour, to decide upon the character of coercion. Admiral Cremer, commander the Russian fleet, has gone to Cettinje.

Chile and Peru Negotiating.

ROME, September 7.—In consequence of the mediation of Italy, France and Spain, the Governments of Chile and Peru have opened negotiations.

LONDON, September 8.—The "Daily Telegraph" reports that a preliminary treaty of peace has been signed at Lima, and that the following are its principle articles: Peru surrenders unconditionally Tarapaca, Chile retains the fortifications of Chiffaca, surrenders all the artillery of Callao, engages to not construct forts for thirty years, and will reimburse to Chile the cost of the war. Chile engages to pay half of the exterior debt of Peru.

EASTERN.

Gold for America.

LONDON, September 3.—The steamer Lake Ontario, which sailed from Havre on Saturday for New York, took £21,000 of gold. The shipments of gold from England, for the week ending to day, are about £500,000.

The Democrats Carry Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Sunday, September 5.—Information received from all parts of the State, indicates that at the election for all State and county officers and members of the Legislature, held yesterday, the Democrats carried the State by the usual majority. The election here passed off quietly. The Republicans claim the election of N. D. Oliver as Sheriff of Pulaski County. There was considerable fighting in the field in this county—the Democratic, Republican and Greenback—and no official count will be necessary. The majority gave 2,000 majority against republicanism, and it is probably defeated nineteen.

The Atlantic Cyclone.

NEW YORK, September 6—At the Maritime Exchange this afternoon the probable arrival of the steamship San Salvador, with all on board, was reported. She left Tenville on August 7th for Havana, where she was due on the 11th, and has not since been heard from. Her owners received a Havana telegraph that they fear she was lost in the cyclone on the 9th. She was an American steamer of 971 tons, built at Wilmington, owned by London merchants and engaged in the coasting trade. Her captain is named Parke, a Hondurean gentleman. Her first mate and engineer are white men and shipped from this port. The others are black men.

The Fearful Cyclone.

SAVANNAH (Ga.) September 6.—A special to the Morning News from Jacksonville, Fla., says: Twelve weeks by the same cyclone that struck the Vera Cruz have been reported—two steamers and five sailing vessels. The fate of the crew of a Norwegian bark got ashore yesterday near St. John's bar. The coast, for 100 miles is strewn with geeks of all descriptions from the wreck. A large schooner bottom up was found seven miles south of Matanzas inlet. The survivors of the Vera Cruz are expected here on the City Point to-morrow, on route to New York.

General Torbert's Death.

PARIS, September 6.—The announcement of General Torbert's death, who was lost on the Vera Cruz, has been received here with great regret. He and his amiable wife were socially very popular here. General Torbert's military bearing was conspicuous in the subject to the commission, who never retired until they had him removed, but there was a great deal of exagger-tion and gross injustice in many of the charges preferred against him.

NEW YORK.—The "Star and Herald" of Panama, just received, has the story of the disastrous hurricane which swept Jamaica on the night of August 19th. The windrayed with such fury at the beginning that street cars had to cease running. Vessels have been sunk and driven ashore, wharves destroyed, roofs blown off, trees uprooted and a catalogue of other damages sustained, which it is impossible to enumerate. In a single quarter in Kingston harbor rode out the gale in safety. Twenty-seven vessels, brigs, barkets, were driven ashore, or went to piece at the shore. Every wharf but one was blown away in beach was strewn with the carcass of vessels (wrecked) many seamen are missing, and they is supposed to have perished. All the railway lines in Jamaica, and the one at Port Royal sustained considerable damage. The damage land is estimated at £500,000. Cannot there all snapped in pieces. The Government House, Queen's Hotel, Constitution Hall, Smith's Village and Fletcher's Land suffered very much. Houses were blown and churches, chapels and synagogues unroofed. The Jesuit Church lost its spire in the gale. The banana crop is destroyed, and trees of all kinds have vanished. The seventh wheel of earthquake was felt during thirteen. Communication with the country is cut off. The wires were all stripped and no could not pass, the Rio Cobre bridge contained 100 pounds of dynamite, packed in two cases. There was a wire connected with the mine, but no battery attached. General Loris Melikoff had been exercising the greatest vigilance in view of the Emperor's intended journey. Details about the mine in Tsecrfas are from a competent source.

Russian Demand of China.

ST. PETERSBURG, September 5.—The Globe says: Russia has demanded as a guarantee from China that the proposed modification of the Livilia Treaty shall not be changed by any fresh misunderstanding.

Skobeloff's Operations.

A dispatch from St. Petersburg says: General Skobeloff has advanced his army to Tizmi, which is strongly entrenched, and will be reinforced with five companies of infantry. Gen. Skobeloff himself, with an reconnoitering column, is pushing forward towards Tizmi. He intends to form an advance post military between there and Merv. Operations will be suspended for a month, and weeks during the present hot season. General Skobeloff will then establish himself at this post, where he will remain all Winter.

TURKEY AND THE POWERS.

LONDON, September 5.—In the House of Commons, tonight, Sir Wilfred Lawson called attention to the forcible interference with the affairs of a foreign country, and asked the Government what was the object of the Mediterranean Mobilization, which, he said, if not a sham, was the first step toward war.

Lord Hartington replied that he (Lord Hartington) earnestly hoped no necessity for coercion would arise. Their object was to render the existence of the Turkish Government possible, and the fulfilment of the difficulties which now threatened it. The assembling of the fleet at the Turkish Powers, with whom the Government is acting in perfect concert, proved that Europe was determined that not all its decisions should be evaded. Attempts to draw a sword were made declaration from the Government would rather tend to lead to the necessity for coercion.

Sir Charles Dilke, Under Foreign Secretary, stated that the arrangements between the Powers were not quite complete, but the Admiral was not in possession of the full extent of the powers and the same instructions. It was apprehended that Senior Admiral Seymour would consult the other Admirals on political questions only. The Government had every reason to believe that this attempt to settle the Montenegrin question would be successful, that Dulcigno would be evacuated in a very short time, and that no coercion would be necessary.

A dispatch from Rome says: As the Porte's answer to the last note on the Montenegrin question was unsatisfactory, the Powers have ordered their fleets to the Albanian coast. The French division arrives at Corfu on the 8th, and will be held, under the presidency of Admiral Seymour, to decide upon the character of coercion. Admiral Cremer, commander the Russian fleet, has gone to Cettinje.

Chile and Peru Negotiating.

ROME, September 7.—In consequence of the mediation of Italy, France and Spain, the Governments of Chile and Peru have opened negotiations.

LONDON, September 8.—The "Daily Telegraph" reports that a preliminary treaty of peace has been signed at Lima, and that the following are its principle articles: Peru surrenders unconditionally Tarapaca, Chile retains the fortifications of Chiffaca, surrenders all the artillery of Callao, engages to not construct forts for thirty years, and will reimburse to Chile the cost of the war. Chile engages to pay half of the exterior debt of Peru.

EASTERN.

Gold for America.

LONDON, September 3.—The steamer Lake Ontario, which sailed from Havre on Saturday for New York, took £21,000 of gold. The shipments of gold from England, for the week ending to day, are about £500,000.

The Democrats Carry Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK, Sunday, September 5.—Information received from all parts of the State, indicates that at the election for all State and county officers and members of the Legislature, held yesterday, the Democrats carried the State by the usual majority. The election here passed off quietly. The Republicans claim the election of N. D. Oliver as Sheriff of Pulaski County. There was considerable fighting in the field in this county—the Democratic, Republican and Greenback—and no official count will be necessary. The majority gave 2,000 majority against republicanism, and it is probably defeated nineteen.

The Atlantic Cyclone.

NEW YORK, September 6—At the Maritime Exchange this afternoon the probable arrival of the steamship San Salvador, with all on board, was reported. She left Tenville on August 7th for Havana, where she was due on the 11th, and has not since been heard from. Her owners received a Havana telegraph that they fear she was lost in the cyclone on the 9th. She was an American steamer of 971 tons, built at Wilmington, owned by London merchants and engaged in the coasting trade. Her captain is named Parke, a Hondurean gentleman. Her first mate and engineer are white men and shipped from this port. The others are black men.

The Fearful Cyclone.

SAVANNAH (Ga.) September 6.—A special to the Morning News from Jacksonville, Fla., says: Twelve wrecks by the same cyclone that struck the Vera Cruz have been reported—two steamers and five sailing vessels. The fate of the crew of a Norwegian bark got ashore yesterday near St. John's bar. The coast, for 100 miles is strewn with geeks of all descriptions from the wreck. A large schooner bottom up was found seven miles south of Matanzas inlet. The survivors of the Vera Cruz are expected here on the City Point to-morrow, on route to New York.

General Torbert's Death.

PARIS, September 6.—The announcement of General Torbert's death, who was lost on the Vera Cruz, has been received here with great regret. He and his amiable wife were socially very popular here. General Torbert's military bearing was conspicuous in the subject to the commission, who never retired until they had him removed, but there was a great deal of exaggeration

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY..... SEPTEMBER 9.

It is agreeable, interesting, and assuredly conducive to deliver our faith, by read sound Catholic journalism in which the struggles and triumphs of the Church throughout the world are brought to our notice, the lives of religious events are recorded, the voice of the ancient defenders of the faith is heard, and the Allocutions of the Father of the faithful reach us for our edification. Hence, even of the laymen or professions possess a Catholic journal, preferably their organ of use or more Bishops, which, as a true friend periodically visits the various homes, and is entitled to a corresponding friendly welcome. Instead of reading a number of such sheets, we should rather encourage such Catholic journals as greatly contributing to the cause of truth. We do not mean to state that what we oppose in them is emanating from the Prelates, or that any statement in them should be charged on the Church, even when they be the official organs of Bishops, who are responsible only for what appears under their signatures, yet we take pleasure in echoing here the wise words of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, who say on this subject. We cheerfully acknowledge the services the Catholic Press has rendered to religion, as also the disinterestedness with which, in most instances, it has been conducted, although priestless in publication, and without a very institutional aid to fit their labors. We exhort the Catholic community to extend to these publications a more liberal support, in order that they may be enabled to become more worthy the great cause they advocate. It is our duty to avail ourselves of this mode of spreading knowledge of our religion, and rendering the opportunities which so generally present itself in regard to them."—Lateran Council.

To Our Subscribers.

Those who are in arrears to THE MONITOR are urgently requested to settle their accounts at their earliest convenience. The date on the paper or wrapper shows the time to which each subscriber has paid up. All who have not paid to some time in 1881 are in arrears. Money may be sent in Registered Letters, by Express, or by Postal Money orders.

NEWS DEALERS AND CARRIERS will in future be supplied with THE MONITOR by the "San Francisco News Company," opposite the Postoffice. No papers will be sold at the Publication Office.

Notes and Comments.

A CABLE dispatch from Rome, special to the New York Freeman's Journal, announces the following disposals by the Holy Father, on the recommendations of the Sacred Congregation de Propaganda Fide:

I. The Rev. P. A. Feehan, now Bishop of Nashville, is promoted to be the first Archbishop of Chicago. Chicago having been raised to the dignity of a Metropolitan See, with Alton and Peoria as its Suffragan Sees.

II. The Right Rev. Dr. Duggan, formerly Bishop of Chicago, having been permanently disabled to officiate, by an afflictive illness, is retiring on a pension of two thousand dollars per annum.

III. Kansas City, hitherto in the Archdiocese of St. Louis, is made an Episcopal See, and the Right Rev. Dr. Hogan, now Bishop of St. Joseph, Missouri, is named its first Bishop. Father Lootz, Administrator of the bereaved Diocese of St. Joseph.

There remain a number of See still vacant in the United States. Natchez, still mourning the loss of the Apostolic Bishop Elder, Administrator of the Archdiocese of Cincinnati. Nachitoches, bereft of its admirable Bishop Le Blay—the dear friend and companion of Bishop Elder, taken away to be Administrator of the Archdiocese of New Orleans. In all the broad domain of Texas, there is but one Bishop, the devoted, eloquent, and learned Vicar Apostolic of Brownsville, (president at Corpus Christi,) Rt. Rev. Dr. Manucy, Bishop of Dulma, in part. The See of Galveston is vacant by the resignation of both the late Bishop, and his coadjutor, who have returned to their native country. The See of San Antonio mourns the loss of Bishop Pellicer, taken away by death from a field in which he was doing so much good. There are either no few fields left of, as to be soon created; and there are called out most important Sees, for which Coadjutors are supposed to be sought.

A letter from Rome says that the Pope continues in the enjoyment of excellent health, and he is continually giving audience to distinguished personages, who flock to the Eternal City from all parts of Europe. It is stated that the next Consistory is fixed for the 18th or 20th of September. The arrival of the Bishop of Malta in Rome has given rise to a number of ridiculous rumors, to the effect that the object of his journey was to make arrangements for the resumption of the last council in the island over which he has episcopal jurisdiction, but the real purport of his mission is the foundation in Malta of an establishment for the conversion and instruction of the Arab population. On the 16th of September her Serene Highness the Archduchess Marie Antoinette will be solemnly installed as Abbess of the Convent of Noble Ladies at Prague.

It is announced from Rome that the Consistory to be held on the 20th inst., the Pope will appoint two Bishops for England and four for America.

Nearly five hundred Catholic pilgrims started from Manchester and Salford, England, for the shrine of Our Lady of Knock, in Ireland.

THE London correspondent of the Liverpool Courier says: "I hear that close on 500 of the Catholic faithful have given in their names as intending pilgrims to the shrine of our Lady at Lourdes. The pilgrimage expedition, under the leadership of the Duke of Norfolk, will leave London on the 7th September next. Many distinguished converts will be amongst the pilgrims, and one of the most distinguished, Cardinal Manning, who is now in Scotland trying to get rid of a fever he caught in Rome, will head the pilgrimage should his health enable him. This aristocratic and money-giving descent upon Lourdes says little for the sympathy of the Poorer Catholics with Ireland. There is as good a miraculous apparition of our Lady at Knock, in Ireland, as ever France or any other country produced."

THE London Universe says: A most remarkable occurrence has taken place in the city of York within the past few days. A spring of pious celebrity named our Lady's Well, almost in the heart of the city, and which has been completely dry for over 15 years, suddenly burst forth on Sunday last—Lady Day. Great excitement has been caused by the rumor that an apparition of the Blessed Virgin appeared there at the same moment. Crowds of the faithful are already flocking round it and drinking of the water, which has been credited with healing properties, and which has been flowing copiously since.

The Dublin Freeman publishes a dispatch from its Limerick correspondent saying that the children of the Mount St. Vincent Orphanage, of that city had a miraculous vision of the Virgin and Child on Sunday and Monday evenings. Last evening the Convent was visited by thousands of the Limerick people, who were expecting to witness a renewal of the miraculous manifestations. One of the nuns in the convent, it is stated, also saw the apparition, which was seen from the grounds of the convent on Sunday evening and in the chapel on the following evening.

THE Killeany Journal says: We learn from a trustworthy correspondent that a number of people of very age and condition have been favored with the most wonderful visions of our Blessed Lady during the past fortnight in the parish church of Ballygarrett. No apparitions are accompanied with spiritual consolations granted to those who beheld them. In addition to the figure of the Mother of God, the crucifixion, and the figures of a Bishop and a nun, supposed to be Salina Patrick, and Brigid, are occasionally seen. Many cures are also reported. Crowds assemble every evening round the church and remain there during the entire night, reciting the Rosary and other prayers.

THE London Universe says: We notice by the Irish northern papers that an attempt is being made in Ulster by a Protestant preacher, who is styled Bishop of the Valley of Mexico, to collect funds in aid of what is called the "Protestant Episcopal Church in Mexico and Spain." The articles in the papers of Belfast and other towns tell how the preacher was appointed to argue in Mexico with a Dominican friar, but that before the controversy came on one of his works "opened the eyes of the friar," who immediately began "to preach the Gospel to adorate an open Bible." Our old friend Gavazzi all over again! It will be found more difficult than those people suppose to turn Mexican and Spanish into Protestants, though some may leave the Catholic Church for infidelity.

John Bright says that for every heathen converted in Africa there is opportunity to convert five in England.

THE Belgian Catholics have proposed the nomination of a delegate to represent them near the Vatican. He will be named by the Catholic deputies and paid by the Bureau of Pontifical Works.

WE learn from the Liverpool Catholic Times that a grand monument to Pius IX., in the form of his statue, little less than twice the size of life, was by private subscription erected in Milan Cathedral.

Seventy millions of dollars, Mr. Redpath estimates, in his letters from Ireland, have been contributed by America during the Irish famine—sixty five millions between the years '48 to '64, and five millions in the present year.

England finds that her raid on Afghanistan cost £90,000,000. And all she has to show for it is the enmity of a once friendly power, which is sure to improve the first opportunity to strike back, the loss of ten thousand men, and national dishonor.

The Catholic Mirror says that there is only one power in the world to stay the tide of infidelity which is pouring through France, Germany, Russia, and Sweden, and is threatening the whole world. She beckons to one mind amidst all the ages of human philosophy, mental research, and intellectual power, as the master intelligence whose vastness and splendor excelled that of all mankind, and that was the majestic genius of her son and servant, St. Thomas of Aquin. She sits quietly amidst the ruins of centuries. She saw the rise and fall of the Roman Emperors from the first to last. She confronted Mohamet and watched the rise of the Crescent above the Cross, and she watched it still when it has waned before her emblem. The empires and kingdoms of centuries are but in babyhood compared to her. She spoke with the pagan philosopher and he is gone for over a thousand years. She speaks to the infidel to day, in her eyes than the lost Plato, and Seneca and their following, and he is nil, too, vanish before intellects which she trains to combat him. The temples of Jupiter and Brahma and Vishnu are falling, or have been swept away since she first rose. The Nestorian, the Eutychian, the Manichean have all vanished before her anathema. Her existence in the world has been like the influence of God's early proclaim, "Let there be light and there was light," and brighter than the stars and the moons and the suns of the wide universe she lires, the light of the world.

Death of Miss Mary Agnes Oliver.

The Catholics of this city were taken by surprise at the announcement of the death of Miss Oliver, daughter of D. J. Oliver, Esq. The sad intelligence evoked heartfelt sympathy for the bereavement of her father and relatives, so widely known and appreciated for all the qualities that endear worth and genuine Christian piety inspire. But not alone in California will this sympathetic sorrow be experienced, but also in the Atlantic States, in Ireland, England, and in Rome, for the Oliver family, by their many good and generous actions have merited the appreciation of the Hierarchy of these countries, and of the late and present Supreme Pontiffs at Rome, both of whom conferred on them special and extraordinary privileges." Miss Oliver was born in San Francisco, and was baptized by the Rev. H. P. Gallagher, her Godfather being the Most Rev. Archbishop Alemany. She spent several years in Rome while being educated at the Convent of Trinita del Monte, and received her First Communion from the hands of the saintly Pius IX. She finished her education in the Atlantic States, at the establishment of the Ladies of the Sacred Heart. Her sickness was not of long duration, being unwell but a few days. The cause of death was serious apoplexy. She died on Saturday last, about 7 o'clock. The beautiful little oratory which, by a special privilege of the Pope, the family were permitted to have dedicated for domestic use, and which has a little while ago was used for the nuptial Mass of another daughter of Mr. Oliver, was now, for the first time, converted into a mortuary chapel in which the deceased was laid out, and prayers were continually being offered by the large number of sympathizing friends who came to pay their last tribute of esteem and appreciation.

On Monday morning at 10 A. M. the remains were brought to St. Mary's Cathedral. The pall-bearers were J. A. Buckley, D. J. Murphy, Jr., D. J. Buckley, A. Touchard, F. J. Sullivan, J. W. A. Gilmore, F. Harrison, V. Buckley, W. D. O'Sullivan and R. Wallace.

The Solemn Pontifical Requiem Mass was then celebrated by Most Rev. Archbishop Alemany, assisted by Rev. Fathers Mc-Sweeney, deacon; Cummins, sub-deacon; Logan, assistant priest, and Montgomery, master of ceremonies. The following clergymen were also present in the sanctuary, and accompanied the remains to Calvary Cemetery: H. P. Gallagher, M. King, J. F. Harrington, Spreckles, Coyle, Cullen, Cumberford, D. Nugent, J. Nugent, Casey, Messia, S. J., McKenna, S. J., and Brother Bettelin.

The funeral sermon was preached by Very Rev. J. Prendergast, and was an eloquent and affecting tribute to the commanding power of religion in presence of death, which, though conquered by Christ, has still the power to wound the tenderest feelings of the human heart, for which sympathy, religion cannot reproduce the sermon in full.

Referring to Miss Oliver personally, he spoke substantially as follows:

"For all who know her, even imperfectly, the conviction is irresistible that she made good in her own regard the divine promises, and that she lived and died engrafted into the eternal vine. The happy child of truly Christian parents, and occupant of a delightful home; esteemed by all her friends; possessing the affection of her sisters and brother, the confidence of her devoted father; endowed with no little intellectual wealth, and able, if she chose, to make her life one of varied enjoyment, she was free, in a marked degree, from the weaknesses and errors of her social station. She was neither proud, nor vain, nor wanton, nor selfish, nor worldly. Her good sense saved her from ostentation and conceit, her living faith from enslavement to the world. Deeds, like all generous souls, to do more for God than the letter of His law requires, and striving to do well whatever she set herself to do, she was accustomed to rise at an early hour every morning in order to hear Mass, and she heard it with angelic devotion. Nor was her piety bounded by her own wants and hopes. With much intelligence for a person of her years, and always with deep interest she watched the course of events in all civilized lands, especially in their bearing on the churches. And zeal is born of living faith. She was anxious to defend and propagate truth, and for some time before she died, her absorbing thought was for the instruction of the young. Her days were few but full; her immaculate life was old age. She fulfilled the injunction of her blessed Saviour who said to her what He says to all, "Be ye always prepared, for ye know not the day, nor the hour." But though I have said but little in just appreciation of Miss Oliver's noble qualities and edifying example, I seem to myself to hear her reproving voice. She detested praise. Some few months ago, as if with some presentiment of her approaching end, she expressed to her sister her disapproval of funeral eulogies, not from cynicism, nor from lack of human sympathies, but from a consciousness of man's unworthiness before God, and almost exacted a promise that when she died those who loved her would remember her to pray for her, not to praise."

Father Prendergast then dwelt at length on the consolation holy faith offered to the family of Miss Oliver, enlarging on the assurance, justified by Sacred Scripture, and by the Fathers, that after the short night of this transitory life, they would meet her again, and know her among the blessed, and be known by her, and be with her for endless ages.

Thurlurier and Cemeteries.

Archbisp Alemany Raises his voice Against the Proposed Desecration of the Resti Pieces of the Dead.

The loving circular addressed to the differentiation, was read in all the churches on last today

HAVE YOUR SIN: Since I was required to take charge of this diocese, and I may add since I has ordained priest, I made it my duty tabulain from political affairs. Now I have address you on a subject, which at straight may appear to be of a political nature, which in reality, is to me of a religious character. I allude to the religious respecibus the remains of Christians in the relstic to the new city charter.

In a country where the exercise of religion is free I also free to consecrate the graves of deceased Christians, after which it is a religio prohibanus to be fear with them. My beer, as a bishop, and the honor of me or by its original grant, are pledged to the ling and the dead, to the effect that Calvia Cemetery shall not be desecrated.

Therefore, whereas the new charter allowed to bested on, notwithstanding its many wise provisions, empowers the City Council to use portation at any time for daniter ring dead and removing the same out of the cemetery, thus interfering with the inalienable right of the living, and, I mighadd, of the dead, I deem it my duty to insert you to warn the people under your charge against a measure, evidently not dictated against religion, but which, in point of fact, would be an irreligious act. certain of our consecrated cemeteries. Your devoted brother in Christ.

JOSEPH ALEMANY, Abp. S. F.

SAN FRANCISCO, September 2, 1880.

The Result of the Charter Election

The total vote cast at the election yesterday as over 23,000. The exact figures cannot be given, as the returns from a few of the smaller far outlying precincts could not be obtained last night. Their absence, however, would make but a slight difference in the totals.

THE VOTE.

Wards.	Aperinal.	Fox.
First	860	56
Second	1241	178
Third	962	66
Fourth	989	79
Fifth	203	76
Sixth	1141	212
Seventh	1056	93
Eighth	1666	626
Ninth	1567	166
Tenth	2040	90
Eleventh	1467	790
Twelth	1267	1426
Total	13,673	3837

Majority against the Charter, 14,618.

Davitt's Reception.

The Davitt Reception Committee met again, Tuesday evening, in Irish American Hall, for the purpose of completing arrangements for the Patriot's reception in San Francisco, and of receiving replies to invitations extended to organizations and prominent citizens to join in the parade and literary exercises for the occasion, when letters of acceptance were read by the secretary and al! preliminary arrangements were found to be satisfactory. As the exact day of Mr. Davitt's arrival in the city was not known, the committee, in view of his recent illness and the consequent impossibility of his being here on the day previously announced, the committee adjourned to meet again at the chairman's call. Whenever Mr. Davitt does come, however, he will receive here a reception such as would do honor to a king, and this not alone by his countrymen, but by American born as well. And if ever upon a mortal man deserved to be honored for its own sake, if ever lofty, unselfish devotion to country commanded the universal respect of men, that honor and that respect will be cheerfully accorded by the citizens of San Francisco and are eminently due to Michael Davitt, the Sennola of modern times. Ireland's sons, surely, has had her share of patriots, of men as devoted in her cause as any patriots of ancient or modern times, and had this, at least, some redeeming circumstance for her lost rank among the nations; but for heroes in that ground, catalogue few deserving of more honor than his, the son of the evicted farmer of Mayo. And looking back through the vista of only eighty years, that is, since its parliament was wrenched from Ireland through the combined forces of fraud, corruption and intimidation, how peculiar have been the phases of agitation through which and by means of which the nation has since been kept aglow, its aspirations uplifted and its hopes directed with undeviating aim to the end of ultimate independence. And not more diversified have been the modes of agitation than the character of the agitators and the means pursued for the accomplishment of national regeneration. Those means have been as the preparations by the husbandman reclaiming a soil run to barrenness and waste, when draining, subsoiling and seed-sowing are the indispensable pre-requisites to an expected crop. To the philosophic student of history those various methods each lessons of wisdom, perseverance, and patience, while to the general reader they are just now of more than passing interest.

Let us take a retrospective glance at the times and events, at the men and their methods. From the Treaty of Limerick—the violated treaty—in 1691 to the Rebellion of 1798, Ireland, as a nation, seemed to be dead, "dead as a corpse on the dissecting table," nor did the ray of Parliamentary freedom which dawned on the land with the advent of the American war of Independence serve to dispel the gastly darkness in which it was shrouded, for the Irish Parliament, as its best, was not the mouthpiece of the people but only the mere symbol of national life, not a representative but an oligarchic Assembly, in which a privileged class made laws to suit themselves, and oppress their fellow-countrymen. But bad as that Parliament was, it might in time have reformed itself, as similar assemblies have done, had not the rebellion been precipitated by the wickedness of government for the direct and special purpose of sweeping it out of existence. Then began that series of agitations alluded to, when Grattan thundered in the Irish senate with all the force of Demosthenic eloquence that its power of parth had the right to make laws for his country save "the King, Lords and Commons of Ireland." This was something, it was, at least, indicating the doctrine of the nation's sovereignity; it was the first gallant to ch upliftings of the mutilated country after lying in a state of coma for more than a hundred years; it was flattering to the national pride or rather to the Protestant Ascendency which thought that its rights, forsooth, were identical, in all respects, with Ireland's rights, but it was not providing bread for the people, for the millions of Catholics who were represented, or rather unrepresented, in Parliament, and who were for long ages cauping for the commonest necessaries of life. Then, after the rebellion, came the State Trials, when Curran, with forensic eloquence never equalled, told in strains now pathetic and now denunciatory all the wrongs and woes of the Irish people, and how, goaded to madness, they rose up against their oppressors. That was another phase of Irish agitation, and it was also something, for a people, informed of their wrongs, cherish the hope of sooner or later righting them. And now arose the National Poet, whose nationhood was as sweet as Anacreon's, and as burning as Sappho's—he sang of Erin and the pride of other days, when the nation, moribund no longer, was thrilled from its centre to circumference, and lived. This was the best yet, for a people possessed of enthusiasm and love of fatherland are equal to any sacrifice their country demands, while without such high attributes they are but the fit material for slaves. O'Connell appeared, and the Catholic millions who had been enslaved threw off their chains, they who had neither religious nor political status in their own country, were commanded to arise and look up, when by the magic of his words the Catholic nation breathed more freely than it did for three hundred years before. Emancipation taught the people self-respect, implied the duty of asserting that self-respect, and O'Connell's glorious work was consummated. But bread, bread! This was still as scarce as ever before. And Fenianism springs into being, and Fenianism too does its work by showing the enemy that the fighting spirit of Ireland was not departed, that the national courage was not defunct, that Irishmen would fight for the country which Moore taught them to love. Behold the phases of Irish agitation and see how every one of them was a necessary preparation for the harvest which now ripens apace! Of the gallant man who went before, some ploughed and some seeded, though the ploughing and the seeding was often more sentimental than practical, yet none the less useful and necessary to the correlative social and political conditions of Ireland, and for this reason the sentimental part of the work should be neither decried nor ignored. It, then, to the farmer's son of Mayo, and to his compatriot, Parnell, is reserved the glory of reaping the harvest, it must be admitted the soil was well prepared before them.

There is poetical justice in the fact that the whole Irish race the son of an evicted farmer should be the scourge of that system and of that class which sent millions of hardy, mature graves, and sent him and his out homeless in the world, should be the avenger of his order and the emancipator of his people. The one inaugurated by Michael Davitt is the latest and the best phase of Irish agitation, and may we not hope that it is the last and the most successful, as it is undoubtedly the most practical. "Agitate, agitate!" cried O'Connell. "Hold the crops," says Davitt; "you have ploughed and harrowed and seeded, and you have therefore the God-given right to eat and drink of your industry, to clothe and lodge yourselves in reasonable comfort, live as honest, industrious people ought to live, and when you have done all this you may then hand over the surplus in payment for the use of the land." There is not the least particle of sentiment in this, and there is in it so much of plain common sense that one wonders why nobody thought of it before.

But while it would be madness to think of civil war while Ireland is without commissariat and arms and only emerging from the throes of famine, there are, nevertheless, great difficulties lying along the path which Mr. Davitt has chosen. The landlords are vindictive, and will apply all the machinery and power English law allows them for evicting their tenants. To oppose law to law, to dispute the arrogant pretensions of landlords, in short, to keep families in their homes, it is very manifest Mr. Davitt of the Land League in Ireland, and his compatriots must have money, or their efforts will have been all in vain. The League needs money, then, to aid the suffering and to proceed to explain the constitutional struggle for their rights, Mr. Davitt comes here with the hopes of enlisting sympathizers in the cause. If ever, therefore, the people of this Coast responded to the call of necessity, and that they have their characteristic generosity but too nobly attests it, Ireland's Patriot will take his departure from this Coast, with abundant proofs of California's generous sympathy. Every dollar to the Land League will save hundreds to the oppressed and rent racked peasantry of Ireland and will remove the necessity of this continual begging for bread from the charity of the whole world.

OUR zealous canvassing agent, Mr. John Cooke, will visit Gilroy, Watsonville, Castroville, Hollister and Santa Cruz during the next two weeks.

The Land League Agitation Pronounced Legal and Constitutional by the Government Officials.

On the night of the 20th August, Lords Dunsany and Browne wanted to know in the House of Lords whether the Government had taken legal opinion on the constitutional standing of the Land League, whether they would lay such opinion on the table of the House, and whether they ought, or not, to consider, instituting the doctrine of the nation's sovereignity; it was the first gallant to ch upliftings of the mutilated country after lying in a state of coma for more than a hundred years; it was flattering to the national pride or rather to the Protestant Ascendency which thought that its rights, forsooth, were identical, in all respects, with Ireland's rights, but it was not providing bread for the people, for the millions of Catholics who were represented, or rather unrepresented, in Parliament, and who were for long ages cauping for the commonest necessaries of life. Then, after the rebellion, came the State Trials, when Curran, with forensic eloquence never equalled, told in strains now pathetic and now denunciatory all the wrongs and woes of the Irish people, and how, goaded to madness, they rose up against their oppressors. That was another phase of Irish agitation, and it was also something, for a people, informed of their wrongs, cherish the hope of sooner or later righting them. And now arose the National Poet, whose nationhood was as sweet as Anacreon's, and as burning as Sappho's—he sang of Erin and the pride of other days, when the nation, moribund no longer, was thrilled from its centre to circumference, and lived. This was the best yet, for a people possessed of enthusiasm and love of fatherland are equal to any sacrifice their country demands, while without such high attributes they are but the fit material for slaves. O'Connell appeared, and the Catholic millions who had been enslaved threw off their chains, they who had neither religious nor political status in their own country, were commanded to arise and look up, when by the magic of his words the Catholic nation breathed more freely than it did for three hundred years before. Emancipation taught the people self-respect, implied the duty of asserting that self-respect, and O'Connell's glorious work was consummated. But bread, bread! This was still as scarce as ever before. And Fenianism springs into being, and Fenianism too does its work by showing the enemy that the fighting spirit of Ireland was not departed, that the national courage was not defunct, that Irishmen would fight for the country which Moore taught them to love. Behold the phases of Irish agitation and see how every one of them was a necessary preparation for the harvest which now ripens apace! Of the gallant man who went before, some ploughed and some seeded, though the ploughing and the seeding was often more sentimental than practical, yet none the less useful and necessary to the correlative social and political conditions of Ireland, and for this reason the sentimental part of the work should be neither decried nor ignored. It, then, to the farmer's son of Mayo, and to his compatriot, Parnell, is reserved the glory of reaping the harvest, it must be admitted the soil was well prepared before them.

There is poetical justice in the fact that the whole Irish race the son of an evicted farmer should be the scourge of that system and of that class which sent millions of hardy, mature graves, and sent him and his out homeless in the world, should be the avenger of his order and the emancipator of his people. The one inaugurated by Michael Davitt is the latest and the best phase of Irish agitation, and may we not hope that it is the last and the most successful, as it is undoubtedly the most practical. "Agitate, agitate!" cried O'Connell. "Hold the crops," says Davitt; "you have ploughed and harrowed and seeded, and you have therefore the God-given right to eat and drink of your industry, to clothe and lodge yourselves in reasonable comfort, live as honest, industrious people ought to live, and when you have done all this you may then hand over the surplus in payment for the use of the land." There is not the least particle of sentiment in this, and there is in it so much of plain common sense that one wonders why nobody thought of it before.

But while it would be madness to think of civil war while Ireland is without commissariat and arms and only emerging from the throes of famine, there are, nevertheless, great difficulties lying along the path which Mr. Davitt has chosen. The landlords are vindictive, and will apply all the machinery and power English law allows them for evicting their tenants. To oppose law to law, to dispute the arrogant pretensions of landlords, in short, to keep families in their homes, it is very manifest Mr. Davitt of the Land League in Ireland, and his compatriots must have money, or their efforts will have been all in vain. The League needs money, then, to aid the suffering and to proceed to explain the constitutional struggle for their rights, Mr. Davitt comes here with the hopes of enlisting sympathizers in the cause. If ever, therefore, the people of this Coast responded to the call of necessity, and that they have their characteristic generosity but too nobly attests it, Ireland's Patriot will take his departure from this Coast, with abundant proofs of California's generous sympathy. Every dollar to the Land League will save hundreds to the oppressed and rent racked peasantry of Ireland and will remove the necessity of this continual begging for bread from the charity of the whole world.

OUR zealous canvassing agent, Mr. John Cooke, will visit Gilroy, Watsonville, Castroville, Hollister and Santa Cruz during the next two weeks.

...ock and Nikolayevsk on the North Pacific. If any aggressive acts are committed against British commerce, we are not in a condition to resist effectually. We are almost helplessly off as in 1878, when a combat of Russia threatened, and there were but one or two men of all in the Pacific, off Vancouver's Columbia, while no less than thirty Russian ironclads fluttered in the harbor of San Francisco.

Russia is the calculating, the far-sighted, the implacable, and, as it would appear, the unprincipled rival of Merry England.

This is the perilous time when the Premier has to quit the helm of State through illness. Who can fill his place if he is carried away? We sincerely hope he may recover. Sir William Stuart alone, in the face of his many faults, is great man, a man of undoubted genius, has rendered real service to Ireland. He is mortal, and, should he die at this critical moment, we know not where to look for a successor. Him, and Lord Beaconsfield, and English promises, like pie-crust, are made to be broken. Russia began, as do we now, by a verity, this is a perilous time for England.—London Universe.

THE EXTINCTION OF THE OTTOMAN POWER.

The Downfall of England—Prophecies Interpreted.

A reverend correspondent sends us the following, translated from a French work, "Le Siècle de la Fin du Monde, ou Histoire de Sainte Vie Dabreyenne, of the Order of the Trappe, and published in Paris in the year 1851:

The empire of Mahomed commenced in 622, according to Daniel, ch. vii, it was a modern for a thousand years, and one at times that is to say, three years and a half, or 42 months, which in prophetic language means months of years. This, then, amounts, altogether, to 1,260 years, and terminated in 1862.

In the midst of the ten horns of the fourth beast sprung up a small one (horn), having eyes of a man, which signified (indicated or prefigured) the false prophet Mahomed. These eyes were merely those of a man, and his prophetic powers were only the man, not the inspiration of God. The small horn (the only one mentioned in whole of Scripture as containing eyes) appeared in dimensions, and broke down one of the other ten—that is to say, the Moslem in Asia, the Visigoths in Spain and Greeks in Constantinople. The ten horns represent ten barbarian kings, who, in the 5th and sixth centuries, distributed among the Roman provinces. These were the Suevi, the Sarmatians, the Alans, the Huns, the Visigoths, the Franks, the Alans, Burgundians, the Huns, and the Astrogoths.

However, this horn with the eyes believed itself capable of changing times and laws, and the institution of the Hegira, the new era of orientating times and epochs, the year, and the cycle of thirty years; the division of Friday, instead of Sunday or Monday, as with the Christians and Jews, the abolition of the Koran for Christianity and Islam.

It must finally remark that the two witnesses Enoch and Elias of whom St. John speaks in his Apocalypse, will preach penance 1,260 days, which is precisely the number of years that Christianity has been in a state of backsliding that Jesus Christ, year had on 33, or, in other words, they will preach 42 lunar months, that is, as many months as constitutions will have existed, months, years.

We know very well to-day how the Turkish power is shattered and verging towards decomposition. Mahomedanism itself seems to decrease and decrepitude; it is losing and extends its hands towards Catholicism. The Superior of the Lazarists, Mr. Boré, wrote from Pekin first in 1840: "Soon the vast Empire, that colossal structure, will inspired our fathers with such dread, now shaken to its very foundations. On all sides it crumbles beneath its own weight, and immediate fall is impending. (Robrbacker Hist. de l'Eglise.)

Mr. Boré regard to the downfall of England, "should England, as in former times, wish to be the mistress of other upon the new possession against Irish Catholics, she will easily by that means fall into the snare of her iniquity and draw down upon her head the just punishment of Heaven."

We might be permitted to express our opinion in this regard, we would ask if the 42 London months of Revelation are not precisely prefigured in the 18th ch. of the Apocalypse. No doubt the Apostle St. John was at the same time an Evangelist and Jew, and according to the common rules principally in view pagan Rome, which so vividly depicts under the name of the Babylon, just as the prophets Isaiah, Jeremiah and Ezekiel had in view Babylon, Ninive, and the magnificent Jerusalem. Nevertheless, it appears to us certain that the whole picture of the Apocalypse contains many features which could only refer to modern Babylon, the immense city of London, which, since ancient idolatrous times, has not been equalled by any other of the world for the power and greatness of wickedness. It is lawful then to consider this St. John, enlightened by the prophetic spirit, as well the Jerusalem which God reserved for a nation which, with inordinate brilliant for the propagation of the Christian faith, has rather scattered the seeds of its all parts of the globe.

Here are the principal traits of the admirable picture of the Apocalypse, which agree plainly, if not to say exclusively, with city of London.

"Because all nations have drunk of wine of the wrath of her fornication, and kings of the earth have committed fornication with her; and the merchants of the earth have been made rich by the power of her delicacies."

She does not know that all the peoples of the earth have tasted of the enchantment of her fornication and that all, more or less, received and imbibed the errors of Protestantism and social material.

"And the merchants of the earth shall weep and mourn over her, for no man shall buy her merchandise any more." This needs no comment. The entire earth is inundated with English merchandise, which the nations no longer willing to purchase, even at the lowest price.

"For in one hour are such great riches come to naught, and every shipmaster, and all the company in ships, and sailors, and as many as work in the sea stood afar off."

Yet to say, that London, which is the Babylon of the earth, and the seat of the world's commerce, will be abandoned by all merchants that traffic on the sea.

"And cried, seeing the place of her burning, saying: "What city is like to this the city?"

"Alas! alas! that great city, wherein were made rich that had ships at sea, by reason of her prices, for in one hour she is made desolate."

"And no craftsman of any craftsmanship shall be found any more at all in thee, and the sound of the mill shall be heard no more at all in thee." There is the designation of all the factories, the shops, workmen, the trades and the immense manufactories of England, and particularly of London. If this will be swept away from it. "The sound of the mill shall be heard no more at all in thee."

23 v. ..... "Thy merchants were the great men of the earth, for all nations have been deceived by thy enchantment." Commercial England dominoers over, destroys and corrupts all by the power of its gold and riches; all the nations of the earth have been seduced and fascinated by the enchantments of Protestant, mammon worshipping England.

The Magdalen Asylum.

It may not be generally known that the new Constitution has cut off the Magdalen Asylum from all share in the aid rendered by the State to our various charities. In consequence of this, the duty of upholding that large establishment devolves entirely on the Sisters of Mercy, who, even with their best exertions, find it well nigh impossible to keep the institution going. A large proportion of the women are incapable of much application to work, owing to their youth, ignorance, from previous habits and present disorders, are averse to anything like constant labor. It follows from this that the amounts realized by the industries carried on fall far short of the requirements. On these grounds it has become necessary to work up the Magdalen Society, organized many years ago by His Grace Archbishop Alemany, but which with the exception of a few steady friends who never flagged had dwindled to almost nothing. His Grace has recently appointed a new collector, Mr. James Garlin, who, it is hoped, will meet with a hearty response from all on whom he may call. Among the many worthy objects of charity in this city there is no greater than the Magdalen Asylum. It recommends itself to all classes. Its doors are open to every poor penitent, without question of creed or nationality. We feel the hope that the appeal made to the generous people of San Francisco will not be in vain.

It may be well here to remove a mistake made by some persons who imagine that the city pays for all the inmates. This is not so. The city provides only for the girls of the Industrial School, who cannot remain after five, while there are in the Asylum proper, at the present time, 122 females for whom neither city nor State make any provision.

Mr. Garlin has the following letter of authorization from the Most Rev. Archbishop:

By these presents I certify that bearer, Mr. James Garlin, is regularly appointed collector for the Magdalen Asylum Society, and one in whom both the Sisters of Mercy and myself have much confidence for integrity and efficiency. And as the Sisters of Mercy devote themselves with so much zeal and self-sacrifice to the good penitents, I earnestly recommend the Society to the charity of all in their behalf by the above newly appointed collector.

San Francisco, August 26, 1880.

✠ J. S. ALEMANY,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

The Nature of Our Political Institutions.

In a recent number of the Fortnightly, an English magazine, we find an able article upon the topic "State Education: a Help or Hindrance." It is not our purpose now to discuss that article, because it is obvious to all the thought of educated thinkers is tending towards our own views upon the education question. It is not a question of "sectarianism," as many perverse ernonously assert, because men holding religious tenets widely variant come to agreement when they do solid thinking upon this educational question. Mr. Herbert Spencer, the "Prince of Thought," not the Hon. Auberon Herbert who, in the Fortnightly, concurs in his conclusion that State education is rather a hindrance than a help. The truth is that the whole error arises from a misapprehension of the functions of government. In this country particularly do many of those even who are "native and to the manner born" misunderstand the nature of their institutions. We are now in the heat of a political contest, the result of which may imperil those institutions. It will certainly largely affect their nature.

Now, what is the nature of our political institutions as placed in peril? When a century ago, one of the revolutionary sects became the thirteen colonies as independent States, the expediency, if not the necessity, for a bond of union was apparent to the statesmen who saw in the union the assurance of perpetual independence and security from foreign aggression. Acting upon the assumption that such a union of political interests was desirable and necessary, after much deliberation and years of earnest agitation, in 1789 was finally consummated the constitutional union of the thirteen States, which previously had been in all things separate and independent sovereignties, co-equal commonwealths, without any paramount authority on this continent. Voluntarily each relinquished so much of its individuality as was essential to the general welfare and to the better security of what was reserved. In all thing not granted away in and by that Constitution, the States were independent of Federal authority and completely sovereign within their own domain.

This was the idea which the people entertained when they consented to the compact evidenced by the Federal Constitution. Subsequently and during the Administration of President Washington, there sprang up asserting the doctrine that the States were in all things subordinate, that the "nation" was supreme everywhere, that it was a consolidation not a union of States. This party was called the Federal. Its originator and leaders had no faith in the people. They believed in a strong, centralized government, modeled upon the British Constitution. They were essentially aristocratic. Alexander Hamilton, the elder Adams, and their associates were the exponents of this idea. It found its most vigorous, sagacious, persistent and successful opponent in Thomas Jefferson, who brought the mighty powers of his intellect, the fruit of his culture, the result of his extensive observation and profound reflections, to the service of popular government and the creation of this Democratic party. He had a hard battle against the Hamiltonians, but his weapons were those of truth and reason which finally prevailed and so firmly planted the government of the United States upon the basis of Democracy, given a constitution to the Federal Constitution consistent with limited functions of the General Government, reserved rights of the States, the largest liberty to the individual, and the amplest protection of every right of life, liberty and property, without undue interference from the government. Based on the eternal principles formulated in the Declaration of Independence guaranteed by the Constitution, the Democratic party has survived the storms and tempests of ninety years of political history and it still lives cherishing those principles and fighting for them now as it did when its immortal founder triumphed over the forces of Federalism and the advocates of consolidated and centralized power. We have still practically the same old contest. The party in opposition at this time is the lineal successor of the Federalists, not so respectable or honest in personal, but equally detestable in principle, equally concerned in transmuting popular into paternal government and changing the essence of Democracy into aristocratic and autocratic rule. Whatever of miracle, dishonesty, corruption, disgrace, prevails at this period in American politics, the Democratic party is not, in first cause, in the violation of the fundamental principles of our Constitutional system, and until we return to the true idea, no enduring reform will be possible.

The Democratic party contends that, in itself, adequate protection against the evils of administration under which we are now suffering. That principle which formulated the maxim, "

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

ANTRIM.

On August 8th, the new church of St. Joseph, Belfast, was solemnly consecrated by the Most Rev. Dr. Dorrian. The High Mass was sung by the Most Rev. Dr. McCormick, and his Grace, the Most Rev. Dr. McGettigan, Primate of all Ireland, preached. In the evening there was Pontifical Vespers, at which the Most Rev. Dr. Logue preached.

ARMAGH.

The clergy of the archdiocese of Armagh have been in a spiritual retreat during the last week, ending July 31, in St. Patrick's College, Armagh. The retreat was conducted by the Rev. Mr. Gaffney, S. J., of Gardiner street, Dublin.

CARLOW.

On July 21st, the annual exhibition and distribution of prizes took place at St. Brigid's Convent, Tullow, County Carlow. The Most Rev. Dr. Lynch and a large number of clergy were present. After the apologue the Most Rev. Dr. Lynch distributed the prizes, and crowned with floral wreaths five young pupils who had distinguished themselves for good conduct during the year.

CLARE.

Mr. Robert Smith, cashier in the Number Bank, Ennis, was drowned while boating near Cronrad Bridge, near Ennis, on the 1st of August.

CORK.

Four thousand people were present at a meeting in Milltreet, Sunday, August 1st, the object being to start a branch of the Land League there. The Very Rev. M. Mahakon, P. P., of Boree, occupied the chair. The usual land resolutions were adopted and a banquet was given in the evening.

The Glare Independent, August 7th, says: A battalion, 800 strong, will, by orders of the government, sail from England this morning for Cork harbor. It being feared that the fate of the Lords having thrown out the Disturbance Bill will occasion some hot work in this country; but we think there is no necessity. The Irish people are too well used to disappointment of the kind to lose their heads over this fresh one.

Says the Cork Herald, August 7th:—Reports of intended evictions were never more rife in this quarter than at the present moment. These are, unfortunately, but too plentifully true in most instances. It is distressing to remark that Captain Bowen has just cleared off the entire townland of Farahly through the instrumentality of eviction.

DOWN.

Mr. Andrew Gallagher, of Newcastle, County Down, has been appointed a magistrate.

At the weekly meeting of the Newry Guardians, July 31st, Mr. Synnott, D.L., stated that the commissioners appointed for the distribution of seeds have made a report from which it appeared that 337 tons of potatoes had been distributed at a cost of £9,637, and 184 tons of oats had been given out at a cost of £1,000. The amount of the loan received from the Board of Works was £4,485, which left a balance in the hands of the treasurer of £147. The report was adopted.

DUBLIN.

At a meeting of the Mansion House Relief Committee, July 31st, a letter was received from Lieutenant Whately of the Kurram Valley Military Station, Afghanistan, dated 21st June, forwarding a check for £20 for the relief fund, as the proceeds of a concert given there by the united bands of the 8th, 58th and 21st regiments.

At a meeting of the Dublin Land League, August 1, Mr. Parnell, Honorary secretary, stated that since the last meeting there had been received from America for the distress fund £426 9s. 10d. For the Land League there had been received £264 9s. 1d., which included considerable remittances from America and several subscriptions from local branches of the League. Mr. Brennan announced the establishment of a new branch of twelve new branches of the League in Sligo, Mayo and Cork. He wished to mention that letters had been received from several branches of the League complaining of police interference. Near Foxford constables had been engaged in making minute inquiries as to who are the president, treasurer, and secretary of the League, and a few days since they wanted a list of those who had joined the League. In another case the police wanted to inspect the books of the League.

A London telegram to the Dublin Freeman's Journal, August 3, said: "We understand, as announced this morning, that the government are in receipt of information to the effect that in view of enforced evictions in some of the distressed districts in Ireland, a secret distribution of arms amongst the peasantry has taken place, supposed to have been landed on the Western coast from America, and that confidential reports from the police represent attempts at drilling to have taken place in some districts. There can be no doubt that the situation in Ireland, consequent on the adverse vote of the House of Lords on the Irish Disturbance Bill, is a grave one." In the House of Commons same day, in reply to a question put by O'Connor Power to the Irish Chief Secretary, Mr. Forster said any statement that the government feared a rising in Ireland, was entirely untrue. There had in many cases been outrages on individuals in Mayo and parts of Connaught, and to afford a sense of security, small detachments of troops from Plymouth had been ordered to be quartered in those localities.

Mr. William Shaw, who is a member of the Land Commission appointed by the late government, writing to the Dublin Freeman's Journal recently, throws some light on the work to be done by that committee. He says:—The work of the commission will be twofold—1st, to collect evidence as to the working of the Land Act; 2nd, to make suggestions as to future legislation. Evidently the former is much the more important function. The commissioners may not report, or they may differ and present several reports; or the report agreed on may be of a very general character, not touching important controverted questions, but in either case the report will only express the deduction and opinion of the gentlemen whose names are attached to it. But the really important work of the commission—and its importance cannot be exaggerated—is the collecting and reporting evidence as to the relationship existing in the country between landlord and tenant; how that relationship has been affected by the Land Act of 1870, and what are the points requiring amendments; how have the Bright Clauses worked; how they can be rendered more simple and effective in their action. I believe it is the intention of the commission to sit in several central places in Ireland, in order that full facilities may be afforded to all classes to place their views before it. It will, therefore, now depend entirely on the tenant-farmers and those who sympathize with and represent them whether this inquiry will be full and complete, or whether it will be imperfect and unsatisfactory as far as their case is concerned. The Ulster farmers and the landlords, though both have objections to the compensation of the commission, are taking practical measures to collect and present evidence. I hope most earnestly that the farmers of the South and West will not let the case seemingly go against them by carelessness. The evidence taken before the commission will be presented to Parliament, and will form the groundwork on which the government will frame its measure, and from which members of Parliament will derive facts and arguments to guide their decision.

FERMANAGH.

An order has been issued dispensing with the calling out of the Fermanagh militia this year.

There were 288 persons in the Enniskillen workhouse on August 5th. About 60 cents ahead, each week, is expended for their support and clothing.

GALWAY.

The distress in Connemara has not abated materially, as the following will show: At a meeting of the Mas sion House Committee in Dublin, July 31, Sir John Gray read a letter from the Rev. Mr. Flannery, of Errisnanore, Connemara, stating that the prospects of the potato crop there were not encouraging. The tubers were very much diseased, in some cases not one in five being fit for food. The Government were showing great apathy as regarded the employment of the people, and unless something were done the consequences would be very distressing. The letter concluded with an appeal for aid.

KERRY.

An official return recently issued, shows that during the quarter ending June 30, 560 families were evicted in Ireland for non-payment of rent, and 60 for other causes. Of the former class, 66 were in Kerry, 45 in Donegal, 41 in Roscommon, and 42 in Mayo.

KILKENNY.

The annual retreat for St. Mary's branch of the Confraternity of the Holy Family was opened Sunday evening, August 1, by the Rev. Father Kelly, P.P., in the Cathedral. Night after night the noble edifice was thronged, throughout nave and aisles, with a devout congregation. At five o'clock in the morning and afternoon there was Mass and instruction; and even at that early hour the church was crowded. A large number of new members gave in their names since the religious exercises began. The retreat closed with a renewal of baptismal vows.

LEITRIM.

The Rev. Bernard Sheridan, P. P. of Kinlough, Bandoran, county Leitrim, wrote the Dublin Freeman's Journal of August 2, as follows: "Some evictions having taken place on the property of Captain Barton, of the Waterfort, Pettigo, at Bunduff, in this parish, a false rumor was maliciously circulated that the officers of the law would meet with popular opposition in the discharge of their duty. They accordingly took the precaution of having a posse of police to guard them. Now, I feel it my duty to say that no such precaution was necessary, owing to the peaceful disposition of the people. The poor tenants surrendered peacefully, notwithstanding their dreary prospects, and are since sheltered by their kindly neighbors.

On August 1, an imposing, stalwart body of young men came to Aghavas from Cloone, Ballinamore, Carrigallen, Bawnboy, Newtowngore, etc. The weather was extremely fine. The vast concourse could not count less than 4,000 men. Banners and bannerets, bearing such mottoes as "Ireland's Nation," "Faith and Fatherland," etc., were to be seen; also fife and drum bands. A profound expression of gratefulness was manifest in the four tenants evicted for the sympathy the young men declared by their visit to them, and their features became aglow with delight as they listened to words of encouragement uttered by noble among those present. The advice, "Keep a firm hold of your homesteads and your harvest, and fear not the land-grabbers," was received with immense applause. Three cheers for Parnell and the Land League were given; after which the party set out for their respective homes in a most orderly manner.

LIMERICK.

The Cork Constitution says the present state of the western part of Limerick is very disturbed; that illegal drilling is extensively carried on, and Fenianism is again beginning to let its way. A large number of well known Fenian emissaries are working up the government and exciting the peasantry to rebellion.

At a meeting of the Mansion House Committee in Dublin, July 31, a letter was read from the Castlecomall Relief Committee saying that the distress which prevailed in that district was nearly at an end, and that the laboring population, who were principally the recipients of relief, are now able to get employment saving hay and turf; the only parties getting relief are the old and those incapable of working.

LONGFORD.

On Aug. 6, the second anniversary of the late Bishop of Armagh and Clonmacnoise took place in the Cathedral, Longford. The Most Rev. Monsignor Woodock, Bishop of the Diocese, was present. The Chapter of the Diocese also assisted, in their canonical robes. The new altar of the Sacred Heart, intended as a memorial of the late Bishop, has been erected in the Cathedral, and is almost completed. The memorial cross has also been raised at the head of the grave in the new cemetery. It stands out very prominently, and is seen from all principal roads. There are inscriptions in Latin and English, which tell the life and death of one of Ireland's most distinguished Bishops, who was known in the two hemispheres for his eloquence and learning and gentle virtues; who was entrusted with a delegation which extended over a great part of the American Continent, and died at the early age of forty-five.

LOUTH.

At a recent meeting of the Drogheda Corporation it was decided that one weekly market was not sufficient for Drogheda, and that a second weekly market be held each Wednesday.

On August 3, the Grand Jury at the Central Criminal Court, London, returned a true bill against Mr. Philip Callan, M.P., or Ballina, Mr. A. M. Sullivan, M.P. Mr. Callan has made an application to have the case removed to the Queen's Bench.

MAYO.

Religious Persecution.—Miss Casey, of Fermoy, was professed in the Convent of Mercy, Ballina, Aug. 2. She took the name in religion of Sister Camillus.

A pilgrimage to Knock from Lancashire, England, was announced to take place Aug. 9, under the direction of Rev. M. J. O'Callaghan and Rev. T. Walsh of Manchester, England.

ROSCOMMON.

At Hallanaslee, on August 4, a constable, named Delap, was on trial before the magistrates. It appeared that on the night of the 10th of July an effigy of Lancelot Clarke, the principal witness on the occasion of the recent trial at the Roscommon Assizes of McHugh and Weldon, for the murder of Mr. Young, near Castlerea, was carried throughout the town. The effigy was preceded by way of rejoicing at the acquittal of McHugh and Weldon. It was carried through the streets lighted, and when it came near the police barracks Constable Delap came out and struck the effigy, and told those carrying it to put out the light. Delap then assaulted John Cleran and John Kennedy, and was prosecuted by them for assaulting, and also for presenting a revolver at them. The magistrates were of opinion that Delap "might have acted more prudently," and although it was proved that he struck the man with a stick, they dismissed the case.

TIPPERARY.

At a land meeting in Clonmel, Aug. 11th, a letter was read from the Archbishop of Cashel denouncing the House of Lords for rejecting the compensation bill.

A meeting of the Slievenamon branch of the Land League was held at Clonoula, August 1, in the vicinity of the Kilbeyvicion scene. There was a large and representative attendance. The chair was occupied by Rev. W. Meagher, P.P., who read a letter from a farmer in the district, of which the following is a copy: "If the people are true to each other, and will not take the land over each other's heads where men have been unjustly put out, or give their support on any farm in such a case, the tenants will gain their rights." The venerable Archdeacon Kinane, P. P., Fethard, proposed the first resolution—"That we to-day solemnly reaffirm our protest against the system of landlordism which permits of such circumstances as have occurred in eviction cases." The Archbishop delivered a stirring speech in support of the resolution. Mr. Boyton, of the Land League, next addressed the meeting. He said it was only six weeks ago he joined in a demonstration at Kilbeyvicion, which exceeded in enthusiasm and not in determination or courage—two qualities they had a right to respect and sustain. They had 20,000 present on that occasion, but they had the manhood of Tipperary present to-day. On that occasion a distinguished patriot, whose hairs had been whitened in the service of his country, repeated in verse the terms of the public placards. Then a man with a sash on him got up to explain their absence. He was shouted at, and a cow was dragged upon the platform, which had the effect of upset ting him and several others. Horseplay followed; chairs were thrown away and broken up, and a bottle was flung into the air, falling back into the people. Having demonstrated in this fashion, the processions, at three o'clock, faced for Belfast, and reached town safely. Their numbers were much more imposing than their departure. About half-past five the police in High street became uneasy and nervous. They marched and countermarched, rifle in hand, they cleared Donegall place, and the treaties were had to close their shops. Whenever a group of people were standing together they were ordered to disperse, and finally a barrier of two lines of men was drawn across the mouth of every street opening into High street. Then the Orangemen came, amid the strains of "O'Donnell Aboo" and a corpse crowd was seen advancing, horse and foot, and a few horse pushed to their right, being about twenty constables and Sub-Inspector Townsend. Towards the police, across the green, from the Protestant side, advanced a rabble of men, women and boys. They appeared to be stooping continuously, and flinging something, and the lively movements of the police from one side to the other showed that they were under fire and subject to a volley of stones. The horses of the mounted men commenced to plunge and use their heels, and the Protestant mob now streamed into large proportions, cheered lustily and pelted vigorously. The police charged with their batons and vigorously drove back their coffin in the common green, and the word was given to charge. Away went the horses right at the stone-throwing rabble, and wheeling their swords in the air, and away went the stone-throwers, tumbling one over the other, flinging their hats and caps in scattering over the green on all sides. The scene was very exciting. Yells and screams rose on the air, and bricks and stones came from the houses into which the rioters had fled. The police retired with their prisoners, a young man and a little boy, while the rattle of the hoofs of the cavalry was heard changing along the distant streets. Two constables, with the young men they had captured, retired in good order on the Falls road. Theatre-throwing again commenced, and some windows were broken. The police rushed hither and thither, but every house was a place of escape for the stone-throwers. Doors were slammed in the faces of the constables, and they were roundly abused by the women, who in most cases led the assaults. This sort of thing lasted a long time—a charge on the part of the police, a retreat on the part of the mob, followed by a rally, and the police then retired to their original position. A few captures were made now and again. By half-past seven the brickfields were entirely bare, save for a few spectators on one side. The Catholics still maintained their position on the Falls road, and the Protestants squared in scattered groups on the other side.

About half-past nine o'clock a well-organized attack was made on the police from Northumberland street, and on charging into it the police say they were fired on from some of the houses, four or five shots being fired. Head-Constable Mooney, King's county, was cut on the face with a stone; Sub-Constable McCabe, Dromlin road, was hurt in the side, and Constable Alfred, of Belfast, was badly beaten. Nine persons are lodged in the Falls road station-house, about twelve others in different police barracks through the town. In Ardilloe street the Orangemen, taking advantage of the absence of the male population at the procession, appeared in force and wrecked the houses of sixteen Catholics, finishing with the house of a publican named McAleesy, whose liquor they spilled over the street. The house of a Protestant named Harbison was also wrecked. The constables who were on duty had to take refuge in a house from the violence of the mob, but, the house having been surrounded, they were dragged out and beaten. They ran to the Crumlin road barracks, got their rifles, and, reinforced by two other constables, returned to the scene of destruction and put the Orangemen to flight. The police remained on duty all night in the disturbed districts.

Lurgan.

At an early hour on Monday morning the procession, which numbered about 1,000, with seven flags, turned out of the Pound, and marched to the country, not traversing the road along by Lord Lurgan's demesne wall, as they had done for the past three or four years, that portion being only traversed by one single band, playing the "Dead March." The procession entered the town at two o'clock, passing through William street, Church place, Edward street, etc., to join the other contingent. The local Orange authorities, at a special meeting, passed a resolution calling upon all within their jurisdiction to keep away from the line of the procession. On Saturday night the Catholics attempted to erect two arches in Edward street, but the opposing party in the adjoining streets assembled and continued shouting on the roofs of the houses until they got them up until five o'clock on Sunday morning.

Downpatrick—A Policeman Shot.

A large assemblage from Killinkel, Crossgar, and other places met on Sunday morning in Downpatrick on Monday morning for Castlewellan, with bands, green banners, etc. They had a very large number of Orange flags with them. Some rioting took place, and shots were interchanged. One of the police, a constable named McHugh, was shot, but not fatally. There is a rumor that another constable was shot.

Outrages by Orangemen.

A party of Orangemen on Saturday, from Ballinaclelly, wrecked several houses, and burned one belonging to the Catholics. A party of police following the Orangemen were attacked by them, and five constables received serious injuries.

The Riot in Dungannon.

[From Special Reporter of Dublin Freeman.]

The battue at Dungannon, in the course of which the police, assisted by the local Orange mob, killed one man, wounded 25, and injured many others, is surrounded with circumstances that call for a most searching inquiry. It is one of the gravest strong popular indignation. On all sides are heard allegations that the police were the aggressors, but it is the blood of the Catholics which still stains the pavement in spots at the town. At the corner of Thomas street a big, dull, red patch marks where O'Rourke's life blood flowed. Nearly the whole of the ground down the flags of Irish street and Ann street indicates the flight of the wounded Catholics from the Orange mob to the Constabulary. No constable has been so much injured as to be obliged to go to hospital. Sergeant Hamilton is supposed to have fired four or five rounds into a dead mass of unarmed people. About twenty people were treated for wounds in hospital, but many of the processionists who, in the May and Cookstown week went home for treatment, so that thirty is probably under the correct number of the injured. The proceedings of the Orangemen, which degraded and of the injured Catholics, "Protestant fanatics" in the country to excite in manner for a few days to expose names have been ascertained. There—O'Rourke, dead; Dwyer, three wounds in breast; Doolin, one wound; Gillespie, wounded in arm; Little, similar wound; Mulligan, wounded in leg and arm; Tavaghy, two wounds in neck; Lennon, shot in the places, foot will have to be amputated, brother, William Lennon, shot through the lungs and dying; Keogh, shot in the groin; Gartlan, shot in leg; Cush, Cory, Mulgrew, and M'Cann shot in different places. Bitter complaint is made of the practice of sending Southern magistrates, who don't understand the temper of the people, to deal with these Northern disturbances. The trouble started before a limited extent. We give them now to the wide circuit of the Times.

It will be remembered that the trial was a very long one, occupying more than two months of the hottest period of that year. Our pages had been very severely cut-edited as were so in the court room, which was in the old Arsenal building, formerly the Washington Hotel, about a mile from ten in the morning until six o'clock at night, without any intermission for the crowded condition of the small room, and the heat.

Compelled to produce our own witnesses, from the Catholic portion of the town, we had to be satisfied with remote points of the adjoining counties, and the Catholic population of the city would have an inaccurate and most beautiful idea of the Orange mob in the world. Hence we had to be satisfied with a small number of men made last month was 150, of the total number, 1,000.

The reissues still keep ahead of the mortgages: the total issues in August to the savings bank to the end of the month were $1,000,000. The business done in August in the savings bank in the city of Boston was very light; the Hibernian Bank only let $113,209 on city real-estate; the Provident Institution for Savings, $44,700, and the French Bank but $10,000. The Hibernian Bank advanced on city real-estate, with a very small demand, and that not for choice loans. Dalton's Savings Bank let $25,000 on city real-estate. Rates of interest at the German Bank tend downward; 5 per cent is the prevailing rate, and the Bank manager intimated that the outlook is encouraging. The Institution for Savings let $75,000 on city real-estate, and the Provident Institution for Savings let $100,000 on city real-estate. Some mortgage-elsewhere, and who are seeking to take advantage of the present low rate of interest. There are in last every few new borrowers. The total amount of the Institution's loans of mortgages of the value of $164,604, and the total value of the mortgages of August was $497,119; the reissues amounted to $714,-[illegible]

Improvements in Savings Banks.

The Board of Equalization has given notice of its intention to take the rate of assessment upon the savings banks of the state, and shall do so, we aim at fear a rate may occur. The rate of assessment for the last year was 1 per cent. of the cash value. It is somewhat less than 1 per cent. in the state, and in many adjoining counties. The tax rate in present year is 1 per cent. in Massachusetts, and the Investment Commissioner of Massachusetts, Mr. Hall, has stated that the rate of taxation in the state of Massachusetts is Foreign Crop Prospects.

LONDON, September 3—The French agricultural authorities estimate that the French harvest will be a good average, that of upper Italy will be thirty per cent above the average, those of Roumelia and upper and lower Bavaria twenty-five per cent, of Podovia and Swabia twenty per cent, South Italy and Wurtemburg fifteen per cent, Bessarabia ten per cent, and Hungary, Poland and Belgium five per cent above the average. The Harvests of Prussia, the Palatinate, Baden, Switzerland, Denmark, Sweden, Norway, central Italy, Holland south Russia, Servia and Egypt will be up to the average, and those of Austria and Mecklenburg five per cent below. Great Bettian, Ireland and Saxony ten per cent, Courland twenty per cent, Gahland twenty-five per cent, and central Russia forty per cent below the average.

Domestic Produce Market.

FLOUR—City Mills Superfine, $3 50@$4 00; Bakers and Family, $5 00@$5 12½; Best Family Flour, Extra, jobbing at $5 12½ @ bbl; Oregon Standard extra $4 50@$4 75; choice, $4@4 50; Oregon Superfine, $3 50@$4; Walla Walla Extra, $4 00@$4 75; Interior extra, $4 50@$4 75; Interior Superfine, $3 50@$4 00.

WHEAT—Continues very quiet, with but little inquiry from shippers, although 20,000 ctls choice shipping sold to-day, private rates. Other sales were small, as follows: 84 cents fair milling, $1 26; 500 and 600 ctls No. 2, $1 22½; 200 ctls choice, $1 24, and 300 ctls do, $1 25; 200 ctls No. 1 is quotable at $1 27½@$1 42½, and No. 1 at $1 27½@$1 35 p ctl.

BARLEY—Sales to-day were, 200 ctls off grade Feeding, 65c; 900 ctls fair brewing, 82½; 700 and 800 ctls good feed, 77½c, and 400 ctls, 75c. Feed, 73½@80c; brewing, 82½@ $1 00; shipping Barley, $1 37½@$1 42½; good, $1@$1 20 p ctl.

OATS—Good and choice grades, $1 35@1 50; common kinds $1 20@$1 30; Surprise, $1 50@ $1 60 p ctl. The only sale to-day was 1,000 ctls feed at $1 22½.

CORN—Sales of 200 ctls large White, $1 60; 100 ctls small round Yellow, $1 62½; 200 ctls large do, $1 60, and 300 ctls do, $1 62½ p ctl.

RYE—Market quiet at $0 90@$1 10 p ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—New is quotable at $2 p ctl.

STRAW—$20@$24 p ton.

POTATOES—Receipts to-day were 1,242 sks and prices nearly were at 60@65c p ctl for Issue and mock. Sweets, $1 12½ p ctl.

ONIONS—Quotable at $1 75 for Silverskins, and 60@65c p ctl for Red. Small, for pickling, $1 25 p ctl.

MILLSTUFF—Ground Barley from the city mills, $13 50 p ton; Rye Flour, $24@26; Rye Meal, $19@22; Buckwheat Flour, $30@40; Feed Barley, $19 50 p ton; Middlings, $26@28; Oatmeal, $4@5; Crushed Wheat, 8c p lb; Cracked Corn, $26@28; Middlings, from the mills, $17; Wheat Bran, from the mills, $16; Old Cake Meal, $20 ton—the above latter subject to the usual discount at the trade.

CORNMEAL, ETC—Table Meal, 1½@2½c p lb; Feed meal, $25 @$26 p ton; Hominy, $3 @4 p lb.

SEEDS—Flax, 92c; Mustard, yellow, 2½@3c; Mustard, brown, nominal; Canary, 3@4c; Alfalfa, 7@8c; Timothy, 5@6c.

DRIED PEAS—Quotable at $1 25@1 50 p ctl for Blackeyes, and $1 10@$1 25 for Green.

BEESWAX—Quotable at 20@22½c p lb.

HONEY—Extra, 12@13c; Choice, 11 ctls, Red, 8@9; 61, Pale, 9@10; 60, Amber, 7@8; 27 gal, 7@8c p lb.

HOPS—Quotable at 30@35c p lb.

BRANDY—Quotable at $1 50@$2 p gal.

WINE—Quotable at $1 50@$2 p gal.

WOOL—Quotations are: 17@24c for southern San Joaquin and Sonoma; 25@28c for Contra Costa and Napa; 28@30c for Sacramento; 28@32c for Shasta, Tehama, Butte, Colusa, Yolo, Solano, Alameda, Santa Cruz, Monterey, Santa Clara, San Mateo, San Benito, Mendocino, Humboldt and Sonoma.

NOTE—The annual spring sales, and for which purpose from shearers to dealers, are now in full operation in Sacramento, Marysville, Yuba City, Vacaville, Tuolumne, Calaveras, Santa Clara, Santa Cruz, Monterey, Napa, Sonoma, Mendocino, Humboldt, Shasta, Tehama, Butte, Colusa, Yolo, Solano, Alameda, San Mateo, San Benito, San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Merced, Mariposa, Tulare, Kern, Los Angeles, San Diego, Santa Barbara, San Luis Obispo, San Bernardino, San Luis Rey

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

Parnell's Plan.

DUBLIN, September 17.—Parnell addressed a great meeting of tenant farmers at Ennis to-day, and set forth the line of policy he wished to see carried out in order to secure a satisfactory settlement of the land question. The main features of the programme are unanimity of action among the Irish members, independence of English political parties, refusal to pay more than what the tenant considers a fair rent, and the social ostracism of any person taking a farm from which another has been evicted for non-payment of rent.

Affairs in Afghanistan.

CABINDAR, September 16.—A Court of Inquiry in Kandahar, Ayakbar, has been ordered. News has been received here that, on the 12th instant, Ayub Khan, with three hundred infantry, five hundred cavalry and one gun, crossed the Helmond River safely, and took the road to Herat.

LONDON, September 19.—The viceroy of India telegraphs that Ayoob Khan has arrived in Beyond Girishk, on the road to Herat. It is rumored that the Zemindar newspaper, which is anti-Ameer, but be refused.

The telegraph line from Candahar to India has been restored.

SIMLA, September 20.—The Cabul district is quiet. In Cabulia it seems clear that the Ameer has resolved to abandon Khyber pass. Mohamed Jan has written a letter offering his services unsuccessfully to the Ameer, but he is still over all at Wardak. His brother, who has been with the Ameer at Cabul, has been sent back with considerable presents. The Ameer has paid four months' arrears of pay to the troops in Cabul. The Army in Turkestan has acknowledged the Ameer.

EASTERN.

More Fighting in South Africa.

CAPE TOWN, September 20.—Captain Gardiner, while working a rear-guardsmen with seventy men of the Cape mounted rifles was surprised by a Kafir force of 1,200 Basutos. A Lieutenant and two men were killed. The whole enfilood great loss. Captain Warrington is being relieved.

Germany's Bad Prose.

BERLIN, September 18.—The "Nash German Gazette," in referring to the recent, newspaper controversy between Count Von Alsaschwitz, administrator in Alsace Lorraine, says the German Prose is serving half the interests of the country and general peace by the unfettered controversy over the Germanization of the imperial provinces at a moment when Frenchmen are reconsidering whether they should cease to make their revanche the central policy of the French people.

Good Advice from a Russian Paper.

St. Petersburg, September 19.—The Journal, referring to the secrecy maintained in regard to the objects of the Teklin expedition, says: In view of Russia's change of policy, the retrocession of Russia's interests in regard to Merv is no longer necessary. It will only be necessary to keep part of the Steppe as a warning to Teklin in the future. The Gazette concludes as follows: "Enough of victories and annexations; let Russia devote herself to internal improvement."

The Relations in Turkey.

CONSTANTINOPLE, September 16.—The late Cabinet visited Turkey to yield on the Montenegro question, and the Italian convoyed. Thereupon Said Pasha, by means of his great influence in the Palace, frightened the Sultan into resistance to Europe. The Sultan is now surrounded by a circle who are utterly ignorant of European politics. Hiss Pasha has resigned, having refused to play a double game. This difficulty, when first war, was occasioned by the Ottoman Porte. "Political Correspondence" says the Powers, before beginning action on the Montenegro question, signed a protocol, which Turkey refuses not to act for the furtherance of their individual interests.

At a conference of the Admirals to-day it was decided unanimously to warn the foreign Consuls at Scutari and Dulcigno to remove their families to a place of safety. When this is done the officers under which the combined squadron are acting will be carried out.

New York, September 22.—A London special says: The situation in the East is regarded here as most critical, and the developments of the next few days are awaited with the intense interest. The united Powers are fully determined to enforce the will of Europe on Turkey, as expressed in the treaty of Berlin. The fleets, it is officially announced, will not bombard the town of Dulcigno, but if it is not surrendered to the Montenegrins, the united Powers will adopt the same policy as was adopted in the case of Egypt, and fleets will immediately proceed to blockade the Dardanelles, and the Sultan will be deposed. The British fleet in the Mediterranean will be at once reinforced by several more vessels from England. The Grand Ministerial has been organized and is ready for active service. A Ragusa dispatch says that anarchy reigns in Dulcigno. The Montenegrins have issued a stirring proclamation to his troops.

Naval Demonstration Postponed.

RAGUSA, September 19.—The naval demonstration has been postponed until the Christians can leave Dulcigno, as a massacre is feared. The vessels will be unable to keep their station as soon as the Albanians see landing, which will be in a fortnight.

Admiral Seymour, in a dispatch to Hits Pasha, informs him he will be held responsible for lives of Christians in his jurisdiction.

GRAVESA, Sept. 20.—After a conference of the representatives of the Powers elected the British man-of-war Alexandra on the 16th instant, an English capsize left with instructions to inform the Prince of Montenegro, and afterwards go to Scutari and present to Hiss Pasha, the Turkish commander, a demand for the surrender of Dulcigno within four days. This probably will mean, as the Albanians are numerous and resolute. Many Mohammedan Albanians of the Dulcigno district, who are anxious for a reconciliation to Montenegro, openly advocate the deposition of the Sultan. Meanwhile, nothing can be done until the consular families are removed to a place of safety.

The British Captain sent to Montenegro and Scutari has arrived at Scutari, and, at least his dispatches and submitted the Consular body to remove their families to places of safety. The weather is hot and sultry and the shower is coming on.

THE TROUBLE IN FRANCE.

Cambetta Established at the Bottom of Its The New Ministry.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—At the Cabinet Council held on Saturday last to consider the resignation of Constans, Caret and Farre, Premier De Freycinet said: "If the only difficulty was the embarrassment in which the suspension of the decrees place Constans because the latter had already issued instructions to the Prefects which would now have to be countermanded, that could be smoothed over by Constans substituting to the Cabinet the list of religious establishments that he proposed to close, without awaiting the decision of the Council of Ministers, and the Cabinet could discuss and decide on such proposal. As some of the congregations, such as the Passionists, for instance, are not recognized by the Vatican, the decree might be enforced against them without difficulty." Constans accepted this proposal, and the resignations were withdrawn. An hour later De Freycinet learned of a note emanating from the Ministry of the Interior, which had been sent through Havas' agency, stating that De Freycinet had capitulated, leaving Cabinet to be decide on the opportune enforcement of the decrees. De Freycinet decided that a denial be published in the Journal Officiel. Constans and Cazot objected, and De Freycinet then informed President Grevy that his (the Premier's) resignation would be the best way of solving the crisis. The difference with Constans was the immediate reason of De Freycinet's resignation. The real reason evidently was that De Freycinet had not any choice between submission and resignation.

The Situation in Turkey.

CONSTANTINOPLE, September 16.—The late Cabinet visited Turkey to yield on the Montenegro question, and the Italian convoyed. Thereupon Said Pasha, by means of his great influence in the Palace, frightened the Sultan into resistance to Europe. The Sultan is now surrounded by a circle who are utterly ignorant of European politics. Hiss Pasha has resigned, having refused to play a double game. This difficulty, when first war, was occasioned by the Ottoman Porte.

The "Political Correspondence" says: The Powers, before beginning action on the Montenegro question, signed a protocol, which Turkey refuses not to act for the furtherance of their individual interests.

At a conference of the Admirals to-day it was decided unanimously to warn the foreign Consuls at Scutari and Dulcigno to remove their families to a place of safety. When this is done the officers under which the combined squadron are acting will be carried out.

New York, September 22.—A London special says: The situation in the East is regarded here as most critical, and the developments of the next few days are awaited with intense interest. The united Powers are fully determined to enforce the will of Europe on Turkey, as expressed in the treaty of Berlin. The fleets, it is officially announced, will not bombard the town of Dulcigno, but if it is not surrendered to the Montenegrins, the united Powers will adopt the same policy as was adopted in the case of Egypt, and fleets will immediately proceed to blockade the Dardanelles, and the Sultan will be deposed. The British fleet in the Mediterranean will be at once reinforced by several more vessels from England. The Grand Ministerial has been organized and is ready for active service. A Ragusa dispatch says that anarchy reigns in Dulcigno. The Montenegrins have issued a stirring proclamation to his troops.

Naval Demonstration Postponed.

RAGUSA, September 19.—The naval demonstration has been postponed until the Christians can leave Dulcigno, as a massacre is feared. The vessels will be unable to keep their station as soon as the Albanians see landing, which will be in a fortnight.

Admiral Seymour, in a dispatch to Hiss Pasha, informs him he will be held responsible for lives of Christians in his jurisdiction.

GRAVESA, Sept. 20.—After a conference of the representatives of the Powers elected the British man-of-war Alexandra on the 16th instant, an English capsize left with instructions to inform the Prince of Montenegro, and afterwards go to Scutari and present to Hiss Pasha, the Turkish commander, a demand for the surrender of Dulcigno within four days. This probably will mean, as the Albanians are numerous and resolute. Many Mohammedan Albanians of the Dulcigno district, who are anxious for a reconciliation to Montenegro, openly advocate the deposition of the Sultan. Meanwhile, nothing can be done until the consular families are removed to a place of safety.

The British Captain sent to Montenegro and Scutari has arrived at Scutari, and, at least his dispatches and submitted the Consular body to remove their families to places of safety. The weather is hot and sultry and the shower is coming on.

THE TROUBLE IN FRANCE.

Cambetta Established at the Bottom of Its The New Ministry.

PARIS, Sept. 20.—At the Cabinet Council held on Saturday last to consider the resignation of Constans, Caret and Farre, Premier De Freycinet said: "If the only difficulty was the embarrassment in which the suspension of the decrees place Constans because the latter had already issued instructions to the Prefects which would now have to be countermanded, that could be smoothed over by Constans substituting to the Cabinet the list of religious establishments that he proposed to close, without awaiting the decision of the Council of Ministers, and the Cabinet could discuss and decide on such proposal. As some of the congregations, such as the Passionists, for instance, are not recognized by the Vatican, the decree might be enforced against them without difficulty." Constans accepted this proposal, and the resignations were withdrawn. An hour later De Freycinet learned of a note emanating from the Ministry of the Interior, which had been sent through Havas' agency, stating that De Freycinet had capitulated, leaving Cabinet to be decide on the opportune enforcement of the decrees. De Freycinet decided that a denial be published in the Journal Officiel. Constans and Cazot objected, and De Freycinet then informed President Grevy that his (the Premier's) resignation would be the best way of solving the crisis. The difference with Constans was the immediate reason of De Freycinet's resignation. The real reason evidently was that De Freycinet had not any choice between submission and resignation.

Gambetta returned to Paris on Friday evening. He and Constans had a long interview immediately after. The universal opinion is that Constans has been acting under Gambetta's advice, and that De Freycinet's Montauban speech was the beginning of the conflict between him and Gambetta, which had no chance of compromise, but must result in De Freycinet's surrender, or resignation, unless he proved stronger than Gambetta. The latter's friends express the belief that he Freycinet wishes to be elected a life Senator, and then retire as the leadership of the anti-Gambettist Republicans, Jules Ferry (Affiliation) and publishes a letter from President Grevy to his friends, in which the aged Senator says: "I regret that you have persisted in your determination to resign, and shall not forget the service you have rendered the Republic. You will always retain my confidence."

The crisis regarding the formation of the following Ministry: Foreign Affairs, Waddington; Interior and Minister Foreign Affairs; Ministers of Marine, and Finance and Minister of Public Works. The other Ministers remain unchanged. The new Ministry's term is destined to await the meeting of the Chambers.

The Republique Francaise commenting on the letter to President Grevy, in which the Premier tenders his resignation, declares that questions of foreign policy have not caused the resignation of the numerous councils held. None of the Ministry's colleagues expressed any departure from a pacific, prudent and reserved policy. The differences of the Cabinet were solely attributable to the question of the enforcement of the religious decrees.

BERLIN, September 21.—The chief subject of discussion in the German papers is the Ministerial crisis in Paris. Journals of all shades of opinion are fairly unanimous in expressing surprised and dismay at Gambetta's overthrow of his policy of revenge, while the "Reichsbote" (conservative) considers his action is "in language:" "In summoning this Ministry, President Grevy is digging his own grave." Gambetta will before long have filled all ministerial and diplomatic posts with his creatures, and then replace Grevy. Gambetta's name signifies war to the death against the Church, and revenge against Germany.

EASTERN.

The Maine Result in Doubt.

PORTLAND (Me.), September 19.—An August dispatch says: The election returns so far give Governor Davis a plurality of about 200 votes. There are still several towns and plantations to hear from, and there are many contested. The returns received by telegraph, which make it difficult to ascertain the exact result of the election. It is evident, however, that the vote is very close, and it is quite probable that official canvass of the returns will decide who is elected.

The official canvass cannot be made, or even opened, until the meeting of the Legislature, in January.

THE REPUBLICANS WIN IN MAINE.

PORTLAND, Sept. 21.—The errors in the telegraphic returns amounts to two-thirds of one per cent. Copies of the official returns have been carefully checked to compare with the first reports received from Agents. An error is found of 100 in feeding up Freeborn County. The seven lacking towns are added and the final results are, Davis, 70,66; Plaisted, 70,834. Plaisted's plurality, 174. The scattering were not on the ballots received here, but the Agents footing of 670 is probably correct. The total change of polling, therefore, in those towns are still not official, and the Democratic State Committee although their addresses are not complete, agree that they will come out very near this. Although these figures are from the official returns, the official canvass of them is not made until the Legislature meets, and it is possible only that lodge nonfinance of errors in them. The constitutional plurality amendment carried by a large majority.

FUSION WITH THE DEMOCRATS.

PORTLAND, Sept. 21.—Republicans from Cumberland to nominate Electors put this of arrison at Congress Hall, Portland, for September 16, the delegates being present. Charles A. White presided. He denounced General Butler and said as understanding was entered into to divide the Electoral ticket, and urged the carrying of it out. D. D. Hobson presented resolutions endorsing action of the State Committee and recommending a fusion with the Democrats. Ex-Gov. Allan Shepard, F. M. Plaisted and others addressed meeting, after which the resolutions were carried, and the resolution to fuse was adopted, although there was considerable opposition.

THE FUSION ARRANGEMENT.

Following is the resolution of the Democratic Convention of Maine, adopted in the history of the State, and the re-election of our representatives in Congress, recommended by the government of our principles by the State of Maine. We feel assured that when party lines shall no longer control our Republican freedom, that we shall show an overwhelming majority in favor of a national Democratic, which will be responded to by every State in the Union. That the action of the State Committee, recommended in an arrangement with the Democratic party for State and Presidential electors, was approved, and the National Greenback party of the State of Maine, in Convention assembled, hereby endorse that action, and agree to support at the Presidential election Solon Chase (Gr) and Samuel Wallace Dunn (for electors at large, and John Turner (Gr), Benjamin Barker (Dem.), Chas. B. Whitten (Gr), Wm. A. Cromwell (Dem.) and John P. Dunworth (Dem.) as candidates for district electors, as recommended by the committee."

Talmage Says, "Let the Chinese Come."

NEW YORK, September 19.—Talmage delivered an address on the Chinese question to-night, saying: "Let the Chinaman at his work, and I tell you it is bad enough, but not as bad as the night side of New York. There is not a shelter that heaven may more indigestious, sober, honest, courteous, generous industrious, obliging people. Let us, my friends, were treated half as badly in Brooklyn as the Chinaman are treated in Frisco, we'd want to be buried three thousand miles from this city. If this Government is to stand, liberty and protection must be given alike to Chinese and Hottentots. Catholic cathedral, Jewish Meeting House and Presbyterian Church. Let the Chinese come; they will make glorious Christians. When I saw the Republican Party, by a place in the platform, denying to the yellow man the liberty claimed for the Indian, I felt as if the entire were not departing. Talmage promises to talk next Sunday about the Mormons.

OUR PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM.

A Notable Indictment.

The following very remarkable article, by Mr. Richard Grant White, which we reproduce from the Interest and Chicago Tribune, one of America, is a notable indictment of that hollow sham, the American public school system, of which Ireland, and Americans are proud because it is intended to accomplish what observant Americans, such as Mr. White, know it has utterly failed to do. Nothing can be more emphatic and decided than Mr. White's trenchant exposition of the complete failure of our American common schools, to make good citizens, honest workingmen, or job employers. We have all these in the country, but it is not in consequence of our schools but in spite of them. The spirit of Christianity, sharply weakened by three centuries of Protestantism, cannot be wholly obliterated even by an entire generation of Godless schools. Therefore we shall not see great changes in our day the real product of these schools, made more crafty but not more moral by the three "Hs." But what a fiasco we are laying up for posterity! Already we can see some of it and those Catholic parents who think that their children will be the joys and support of their old age, if they are educated in public schools, are invited to ponder what Mr. Richard Grant White, an American publicist of reputation and one very unlikely to sympathize with Catholic views, has to say to the American experience of American common schools.

"My recent mention of our public school system was not in terms of respect; for could I have been so without wholly falsifying my opinion and my feeling. This may seem strange to some, perhaps to many, who are accustomed to hear our public schools spoken of as if they were at once the Palladium of our liberties, the foundation and the crown, of our political system. They may possibly hold such a position with regard to that system as it at present exists, but the connection of religious teaching and effect between the two has never been attributed only shown, to my knowledge, and the burden of proof lies with those who hold the affirmative, but they exert any wholesale influence upon our society, either morally or intellectually, that or better citizens, or that they fit them for the duties and the business of life, I for one, am hesitate to deny. With the system of systems of instruction pursued in Orna I do not at the present time concern myself. Those systems have been changed from time to time, they are not the same in all public schools; they are liable to change further; but the values of public schools, that is, the plan of providing education for all children at the public expense, has been long established in this country, and with no great modification in any essential, and, extent the recent attempt at compulsory education; and it is consistent with truth and with fairness to judge of that system by the results in this way: to determine the real worth of an institution that is so costly and so highly vaunted. I appeal at once to practical men, and women of common intelligence who are in the position of employers. For they alone are they whose opinion is of any real value on this question. As to working politicians, it is to them a matter of business and of patronage, and the theoretical politicians it is a matter of theory. Teachers are, as some of them call themselves

THEY MAKE THEIR PUPILS BETTER MEN AND WOMEN.

EDUCATORS, EDUCATIONISTS, AND EVEN EDUCATIONALISTS, may claim to be based on experience, but the very fact that they are experts is against them. Their partiality qualifies them to speak with more or less authority on the question whether, or how far, or strictly within the limits of their profession, but they are not competent to form a sound opinion upon the practical application and the intrinsic worth of their specialty, particularly as regards, in this case, the practical question in compulsory education. And the result is that their opinion and position of more or less dignity and importance. Philanthropists must be regarded as experts in the question in the category of theoretical politicians, and ministers of religion are, as a class, men whose opinion is to be received with deference by all, in their specialty. It is to be regretted, however, that this popular school, as at present conducted in the State of New York, for example, does by no means secure the results of

THE MAJORITY OF ALL MINISTERS OF ALL RELIGIONS;

and to this remark it may be added, unless I greatly err, that an inquiry into the reasons of the adverse opinions among this class would disclose less dissatisfaction because the results of the schools were not felt to be good citizens and honest, efficient men and women than because they were led away from the tenets, the practices, and the influence of a certain religious sect, than which there could be no better reason for ruling out clerical opinion on the subject entirely. The proof of the pudding is in the eating; the proof of the value of our public school system is in the quality of the young men and the young women that it produces. What is their actual worth in practical life? How much better are they morally and intellectually than young men and young women who have never been to public schools? To this question there will be but one answer from those who are qualified to speak upon it, unless my observation and information are both very erroneous, and the over will be against the usefulness of our public schools in fitting their pupils for the duties and the business of life.

CONTINUAL DISCOMFORT,

the mistress of which has had to pay twenty fees in pretence of her position, and ask if any employment she may have to offer, whether it be cooking, skill and intelligence or mere faithful obedience to orders, she would prefer a girl who has not been so educated, whether, at the age of twelve, she will brought up in respectable, orderly, humble, family, and you will be astonished, if you have not been so astonished before, at the opinions and the expressions of the doubt against the product of the public school. The young woman has, after a few years of education at the public expense, seek situations, are with very rare and notable exceptions) unsuited to the place, and, and, only so, but incapable of doing the work for the wages given in the kindest manner. They are ignorant, obstinate, and, in the slightest measure, in the place of a well-ordered household. Their "education" has simply filled their heads with novels and cheap newspapers, to convert them altogether unsuited to their position, and to fit the theatre or on excursions with a "young man." Their view of the requirements of their position is that they are to do as little work as will give them the right to demand the money that will enable them to indulge the aforesaid enjoyments, and that they are to do no more of interest in their work, of a desire to learn it thoroughly, of thinking it worth learning, which insets respect, they age as innocent as Hottentots or Yahoos. As to their morals, they are generally in every respect somewhat inferior to young women who have had no public school education and who can hardly read and cannot write. No nonsense of experience doesn't to take a public school pupil into her service in any capacity. Nor are the boys any better for the public schools much more substantial products of the system. A small minority, I am sure, of them have been benefited by it, have been fitted for intellectual labor, and is inclined to lift by a resistless inward force, some, of course more than the average mental ability, of sober, reserved, and almost cold disposition, and these rise to a certain degree by their education, although it is doubtful whether the benefit resulting to them, or to society justifies the means and the expenditure by which it is attained. But as to the great majority of the boys who come from our public schools, and those who employ them, whose memory goes back to a time when apprentices came only with the instruction and the training received at home, or in a trade school. The answer, unless I am much in error, is sure to be that, although the public school may be more gifted of tongue, and knows superficially a little about everything and about nothing, the proficiency was inferior, he is generally inferior in all that makes a good apprentice a good workman, a thrifty, substantial respectable man. He is less reverent, less docile, less in earnest about his work, and, on the whole, inferior in principle, in faithfulness, and even in manners to the lad who had been taught at home to read and write, to fear God and to honor his father and his mother.

OF NOTIONS OF DUTY,

AND THE WASTED MECHANICS,

FOR DO THE RECORDS OF CRIME

justify the general assumption that public schools are a conservative moral force in society. And indeed he must be a heedless observer of human life who regards intelligence of any kind or degree of education as a moral safeguard. Intelligence and education may teach rascals, but they do not inspire principle and not unfrequently natural gifts of mind and acquired knowledge are made merely the effective engines and promoters of crime. It would be interesting to know what proportion of our native criminals have been pupils of our public schools, and have accumulated any statistics upon this subject; but judging by my observation I was loro to say that the proportion is very large, so large that if it were authentically ascertained the publication of it would arouse a

A PROFOUND AND PAINFUL SENSATION.

It is to be remarked before the further examination of one subject that, beyond question, there is a very considerable number of the pupils, in both sexes, of our public schools who do profit by their instruction there, and who do become good citizens, estimable men and women, and efficient workers in various departments of the business of the world. But these, it will be found, are, with comparatively few exceptions, young persons who, if our public school system did not exist, would receive in other ways all instruction necessary to fit them for their positions in life. But as the public school system exists in its present state, and as the fathers of these young people are taxed to support it, taxed not only directly if they have property of any kind, however little, taxed indirectly, if they have property or not, on every superfluous they make—this being the case, it would be strange indeed, most unjust and most unfitting, if parents of moderate means did not send their children to take advantage of the elaborate and expensive system of public instruction which year by year they are heavily

MISCELLANEOUS.

Dealers of small local names have been exploiting directly. The Pioneer has selected from the mass, the best thing cheaper, not over $30 in washed. A cook stove attached is supplied. (Exclusive July 26, 1880.

ZIMMERMAN'S

IMPROVED

Galvanized Iron Portable Combined

FRUIT DRYER AND BAKER

Combines the advantages of the Garden, Cellar and Farm. It is a perfect Dryer, makes a baked loaf in one hour, and is successfully as an oven. It is fire, durable, economical, requiring but little fuel. Is recommended and highly endorsed by nearly all who have purchased it. Its capacity is unlimited. Dry fruit and the good speed of all who have used it now in use.

Prices: $47 50, $63, & $130

Over 12,000 Now In Use!

Send for Illustrated Catalogue and Testimonials to

ZIMMERMAN, LINFORTH, RICHARDS,

GENERAL AGENTS FOR PACIFIC COAST,

Nos. 323 and 325 Market St., San Francisco, Cal.

LOCAL AGENTS WANTED.

PRIVATE LESSONS.

IN

Elocution and English Branches,

BY A GENTLEMAN WITH HIGHEST TESTIMONIALS, and who has the reputation of being the best elocutionist in the United States. For both sexes and ages. Letter-writing and copying of all descriptions neatly and accurately done. Apply by or address

CRAGIER, room 15, second floor, over Kohler & Brother's store, 115 Kearny street.

SOMETHING NEW.

Making Made Easy, by a Successful Method.

FLOWERS, BIRDS, ETC.

NO PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE OF THE ART REQUISITE. Ladies can make from 50 to 100 per cent on materials, full instructions, $5. Mrs Mitchell st. The art acquired in a few lessons.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.

JOHN M. BURNETT,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW
Rooms 12 and 13, Law Building,
Bet. Washington & Merchant...San Francisco.

M. COONEY,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
465 Kearny street, cor. Pine,
Room 3 and 4, Second floor, San Francisco

J. F. SULLIVAN,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
607 Kearny Street.
Bet. Sacramento & Commercial...San Francisco

WILLIAM A. PLUNKETT,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
530 California Street,
ROOM 15 and 16
Bet. Kearny and Montgomery....San Francisco

B. H. McDONALD. J. W. McDONALD. O. O. MARSHALL.

Pacific Bank,

Cor. Pine and Sansome Sts.

SAN FRANCISCO, CALIFORNIA, July 1, 1880.

Established in 1868.

Capital Stock (paid up) - $1,000,000.00

Surplus. - 422,832.53

We desire to call your attention to the annexed STATEMENT of this bank and offer our services to the public as a Safe Depositary for Money.

From our long experience in Banking we are enabled to offer to the public a Safe Place with Good Interest, and to render those services accorded, or the business with an every advantage appertaining to such interest.

ASSETS.

Real Estate (Bank Building)	$50,000.00
Bills Receivable (Notes)	1,212,301.21
Overdrafts (Notes)	93,516.06
Bonds and Stocks	1,237.00
Bond and Stock Loans	1,237.00
Loans Bankers & Bankers	706,963.94
Cash (coin in our vault)	243,267.67
	$3,136,946.14

LIABILITIES.

Capital Stock	$1,000,000.00
Reserve Fund	127,832.53
Due Depositors	1,516,890.26
Due Bankers	1,000,000.00
Due Dividends	3,837.50
	$3,136,946.14

We give advice in detail of all credits, and acknowledge promptly all letters, and will furnish a certificate of deposit, payable to order on demand, when required.

Interest Notes of Gold and Silver Bullion will have special care and prompt returns.

Being connected by Telephone with all the principal merchants of San Francisco, we can be kept thoroughly posted in the Wheat, Grain and Stock markets, and are prepared at all times to make loans on Flour, Wheat and Barley, and other approved Merchandise. We prepare Investments made on Commission, upon Mortgage Security, and Interest Notes, Gold and Silver Bullion, and our experience and connections are at your disposal.

We Buy and Sell Bills of Exchange on the principal Cities of the United States, Europe and Germany.

Letters of Credit issued and prompt returns made of market rates of exchange.

Every Facility for Transacting Business with New York, Boston, Chicago and principal cities of the U. S.; also cable transfers to Europe.

Letters of Credit and Commercial Drafts issued on Boston, New York and Chicago.

Loans made on good Collateral, or approved Notes, payable on demand, and Interest allowed at lowest market rate.

Special Attention is Paid to Check Without notice.

Interest on State, City and County Bonds and Warrants, and other Securities, bought and sold.

We respectfully call attention to our Safe Deposit Vaults, Burglar Proof, Fire Proof, Time Lock, Chronometer Lock.

Banking is a business that should be respected, and we hope to merit a share of your patronage.

Favor and Reservations are not the slightest consideration, but we hope to merit the performance of contracts as the proper foundation.

Our Interest is identical with that of our other people, and we hope to share the same.

Our Rule of Business and Success Course is one of the first principles of successful Banking, this will be our Motto, Yours, very respectfully,

B. H. McDONALD, President. J. W. McDONALD, Cashier.

(Room 1 and 2 Barbier Block)

NB—Interest allowed on Deposits.

FREE LABOR EXCHANGE,

330 Pacific St., bet. Dupont and Stockton.

Help of all kind furnished.

LESSONS GIVEN,

ON

Piano, Organ, Accordeon, Concertina, Violin and Banjo.

PIANOS FOR SALE OR RENT.

MRS. BENNETT, 10 Fourth st., nr. Howard.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH INSTITUTE.

NEW BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL.

X MEFRET, Professor du College Saint Mandrier Nantes, et de Commerce de Paris, Author of Elements of Commerce, Commercial Correspondence, Commercial Arithmetic, Commercial Law, Principles of Book-keeping, Diplomas prize Exhibitions.

ANTHONY, Professor de Calligraphie, Diplomas Exhibitions de France, Diplomas prize Exhibitions.

No. 1250 Mason Street.

Pacific Coast Agency

GENUINE

J. H. CUTTER WHISKIES

A. P. ROTALING & CO.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

PHILADELPHIA BREWERY.

JOHN WIELAND - - - PROPRIETOR

SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM,

SAN FRANCISCO.

Amount of Beer sold in 1877, 41,601 barrels.

UNDERTAKERS.

O'CONNOR & SHEEHY,

UNDERTAKERS,

Every requisite furnished for Funerals at short notice.

1034 MARKET ST.

MASSEY & YUNG

UNDERTAKERS

PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKERS. Hearse and Burial Caskets always on hand, and Agents for Fisk's Metallic Burial Cases.

Everything necessary for funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

Office—651 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb.

THAT PLANING MILL

FLANAGAN & CALLAGHER,

UNDERTAKERS,

(Late of No. 634 Market Street)

HAVE REMOVED TO

No. 29 FIFTH STREET, Opposite the Lincoln School.

EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR FUNERALS kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

WINES, LIQUORS, ETC.

F. & P. J. CASSIN,

IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS

IN

WINES AND LIQUORS,

12 & 14 California St., cor. Drumm.

Heidsieck & Co., and Dry Monopole Champagne; also, for O. K. Golden Plantation Whisky.

Sole agents for the Pacific Coast for the celebrated Kentucky Whiskies, viz: Ancient Age, Ancient Age Rye, Ancient Age Bourbon, Ancient Age Sour Mash, Ancient Age Bourbon Sour Mash, Ancient Age Rye

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY..... SEPTEMBER 23

It is actionable, interesting, and generally conducive to amusement—for both, to read about Sabbath-periodicals in which that struggles and triumphs of the Church throughout the world are brought to view, notwithstanding religious crants are recorded, the voice of the ministerial defenders of the faith is heard, and the Allocutions of the Tabernacle of the Infinite Jehovah are promulgated. Home, and the Dioceses or provinces of Christendom, the Catholic Journal, generally the organ of one or more Bishops, aims, as a true friend periodically visits the various families, and is welcomed to a corresponding fitter, by welcome, instead of reading unwritious stories, we should rather encourage such Catholic journals as greatly contributing to the cause of Church. We do not deem to state that what appears in Books is emanating from the Prelates, or that any statement in them should be charged on the Church, even when they be the official organs of Bishops, who are responsible only for what appears under their signatures, yet we hold a pleasure in editing here the wise words of the Fathers of the second Plenary Council, who say on this subject: We cheerfully acknowledge the services the Catholic Press has rendered to religion, as also the fine, conscientious with, rich, in most instances, if not without exception, although yielding to politicians and editors a very handsome fee; to their labors, we owe much of the prosperity of the Church in this Republic, yet we think it opportune to enter the lists when we thought it necessary to defend the cause of God. We are not ashamed to be called a mere organ of the Bishops, we are not ashamed to be called a mere organ of the Bishops, we are not ashamed to be called a mere organ of the Bishops, we

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

ANTRIM.

The Catholics of Belfast celebrated Lady Day by a monster procession to Hannahstown, five miles from Belfast. Four hundred extra police, the 16th Regiment, and some companies of the 24 Dragoons, were stationed to keep order; but no serious skirmishes took place between the processionists and the Orangemen. At Springfields a house was wrecked; a constable had his eye knocked out; a processionist was stabbed in the groin; another received a bayonet wound on his knee; and a man named M'Neill had his lip and chin split with a kick. At Hannahstown there was no one to address the meeting, so the procession returned. The greatest precautions to preserve order were taken on their return, every band and banner having a strong escort. They dispersed quietly. At seven o'clock the Orangemen attacked the police with stones; repeated charges of cavalry and police were made, only sufficing to disperse them for a minute or two. Shots were fired, and some of the police were badly cut with stones. The rioting was renewed later.

ARMAGH.

Lady Day was celebrated in Lurgan on Monday, Aug. 16. The processions, which numbered about 1,000, with seven flags, turned out of the Pound, and marched to the country, not traversing the road along by Lord Lurgan's demesne wall, the scene of so many disturbances, but that position being only traversed by one single band, playing the "Dead March." The engine procession entered the town at two o'clock, passing through William Street, Church place, Edward Street, etc., to join the other procession. The local Orange authorities, at a special meeting, passed a resolution calling upon all within their jurisdiction to keep away from the line of the procession. On Saturday night the Ribbonites attempted to wreck a church in Edward Street, but the opposing party in the adjoining streets assembled and continued shooting on the crowd, who were unable to get them up until five o'clock on Sunday morning.

CAVAN.

At a meeting of the Cavan Guardians, Aug. 18, a resolution was passed requesting the Local Government Board not to seek for the repayment of the first instalment of the loan for seeds this season.

CLARE.

A report from County Clare says:—A farmer, named O'Brien, having taken possession of a farm at Kilnahan, in the County Clare, from which another tenant had been evicted, a number of men and women beat him and his sons severely, trampled down the meadow, and to prevent seeds being sown, ploughed the land with large stones. A farmer, at Craggatoolaghy, was threatened by men with blackened faces, with instant death unless he gave up his land.

A farmer was evicted recently at Killnahoen, County Clare. The Clare Land League promptly set up a new from bidding for or taking possession of the farm. Shortly after, however, three brothers and their father, from another district, took the farm, and were attacked by the people, for so doing, on returning from Mass Aug. 25. The police were called out to protect the present tenants. Much excitement exists in the neighborhood.

CORK.

A Land meeting composed of 5,000 persons was held at Knocknagree, County Cork, on Sunday, Aug. 15. Rev. J. O'Leary occupied the chair. Resolutions pledging those present to hold the land and crops, and supporting the Land League programme were adopted.

The six persons who were arrested on the morning of the robbery of arms at Passage, on suspicion of being engaged in the affair, were brought up handcuffed at Petty Sessions, on Aug. 17, and remanded indefinitely. They were admitted to bail. The case was dismissed at Sub-Inspector Mayne, on which the remand was granted, stated that he believed he would be able to procure further evidence against the accused.

At a meeting of the Cork Land League, August 14, a resolution was passed expressing regret at the recent robbery of arms, and condemning such acts of lawlessness. Several members expressed their opinions that the late robbery was promoted by persons who were antagonistic to the interests of the country, and who wished to give good value for secret service money. Mr. C. P. O'Sullivan proposed an amendment, and declared his belief that nothing could be got from England except by means such as that referred to. The amendment was negatived by a majority of eight to five.

The following letter printed in the Cork Herald, explains away another arms scare. It is as follows: "Sir,—Permit me to call your attention to a paragraph which appeared in this day's Herald, headed 'Arrival of another case of arms,' in which you state that a 'larger case' of arms consigned to some one in the Grand Parade, has been 'found' on one of the Channel steamers, bag to say that I am the consignee of this case, and that it contained one part gun which is used for the purpose of shooting wild fowl from a boat, and which I shall be happy to show to your reporter or correspondent, who seems intent on creating false alarm. With respect to your statement that the case lies unclaimed at the Packet Office, I beg to say I claimed and took possession of it. I am, sir, yours truly, P. R. Rohu, Naturalist, Grand Parade, Cork, August 18, 1880.

On Aug. 16, the sheriff and his assistants went to the lands of the Island, about a mile from Clonakilty, the property of Miss Mary Hungerford, and evicted a farmer named John M'Carthy, for non-payment of rent. It was really a most distressing case. The poor man has a delicate wife and six young children. He held fourteen acres of poor, bare land, at 33s. an acre. There was but one year's rent due 25th of March last. Proceedings were taken in the superior courts, and a writ of habere obtained. It is stated that M'Carthy got possession of this farm in May, 1879, and the rent charged from the March previous, and for that reason was over evicted; also that a half year's rent was offered, and to pay the remaining half after the harvest, and which would not be accepted.

On August 16, a violent scene occurred on a farm at a place called Lisparoe, in the county Cork. The tenants of two farms had failed to pay their rent, and the landlord sent a bailiff to distrain for the purpose of seizing the cattle. When the sheriff's men arrived it was found the cattle had been driven off, and the men, afraid to remain in charge of the crops, went away. The landlord, Captain Warren, then went to the farm with the sheriff's bailiffs for the purpose of seizing the crops. A large crowd of the neighboring farmers and men assembled for the purpose of resisting any seizure. Some amicable arrangement was arrived at, but the people did not appear satisfied with the terms of the landlord, and crowded round him in a menacing manner. Captain Warren, who was seated on a car, suddenly drew a revolver and fired in the air. At that moment a stone was thrown from behind the hedge, which struck Captain Warren on the side of the head, almost rendering him insensible. Men and women clamored round him, caught him by the hair, and gave him rough treatment. Some of the sheriff's men, fearing violence, rushed away. It was with considerable difficulty the landlord finally got away without being seriously injured.

DONEGAL.

On August 20, Mr. A. M. Sullivan forwarded to the Rev. James McFadden, the P. P. of Gweedore, a first remittance of £100, received by Mr. Sullivan within twenty-four hours in sums of £1 and upwards, in response to his letter in the Times on behalf of the victims of the recent disaster.

DOWN.

A large meeting was held at Castlewellan, county Down, on Sunday, August 15. Mr. Keenan, a tenant-farmer, occupied the chair. The following resolutions were passed unanimously: "That we hail with feelings of the utmost satisfaction the last disparaging efforts of the Lords to override the will of the people, believing as we do that they have thereby contributed more than years of agitation could to the speedy removal of those hereditary incumbrances, parliamentary and territorial, under which our country has too long groaned and wasted." "That no adjournment of the land question will be considered satisfactory which does not include the abolition of the feudal system of landlording, and the immediate establishment of a peasant proprietary, and that nothing else than the sacred ownership of the farmers of Ireland to meet the increasing foreign competition and secure for themselves the fine fruits of their labor." "That this movement is not a one-sided agitation, but equally beneficial to persons of all religious denominations."

DUBLIN.

At a meeting of the Land League recently a motion of Mr. Kettle's, that the tenant-farmers of Ireland should be called upon to refuse to give evidence before the Land Commission was carried after considerable discussion. The composition of the commission is the cause assigned.

In the House of Commons, August 17, Lord Randolph Churchill gave notice that to-morrow he would ask the Government if they intended to propose fresh coercion laws for Ireland. Lord Churchill is son of the Duchess of Marlborough, and was a member of her relief committee. He desired to sell

Domestic Produce Market.

FLOUR—City Mills Superfine, $3 50@$4 00; Bakers and Family, $6 00@$6 12½; Best Family Flour, Extra, Jobbing at $5 12½ ⅌ bbl; Oregon Standard extra $4 50@$4 75; choice, $4@$4 00; Oregon Superfine, $3 50@$4; Mills Valle Mihet, $4 50@$4 75; interior extra, $4 00@$4 75; Interior Superfine, $3 50@$4 ⅌ bbl.

WHEAT—Quotes nix light and fair, although one transaction of 1,000 tons fair No. at $1 30 is reported. Other sales reported to-day from 700 and 800 ctls choice milling, $1 40; 600 ctls No. 1, at 37½; 200 ctls superfine, $1 35, and 45 tons and 100 ctls do, $1 37½. No. 1 is quotable at $1 37½@$1 40, outside figure for choice milling, and No. 2 at $1 30@$1 35 ⅌ ctl.

BARLEY—Exhibits but little animation. Chevalier is freely offered on Change every morning, but buyers are rather coaxes and trade is very dull. Sales to-day of 1,000 ctls new brewing, 1,700 ctls fair Bks, and 150 ctls coast Bks, 75c. Feed, 72½@75c; brewing, 80@82½; standard Chevalier, $1 30@$1 37½; coast do, 85c@$1 10 ⅌ ctl.

OATS—Good and choice grades, $1 35@1 45; common White $1 20@$1 30; Surprise, $1 30@$1 35 ⅌ ctl. Sales were as follows: 400 ctls feed at $1 20 and 200 ctls do at $1 25.

CORN—Continues stagnant. Sale of 400 ctls Mixed at $1 05; Yellow, $1 05@$1 08; White, $1 05@$1 07½ ⅌ ctl.

RYE—Market quiet at $1 20@$1 22 ⅌ ctl.

RYE—Firmly held advance. Sale of 200 ctls good at $1 50 ⅌ ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Quiet, at $2 12½ ⅌ ctl for choice lots.

HAY—$18@$19 ⅌ ton.

POTATOES—The market is well cleaned up. River Mars, 60c; Rosts Rose, Mohks, and Brown, 70c ⅌ ctl.

ONIONS—Quotable prices $1 for Silverskins and 90@95c ⅌ ctl for Reds. Small, for pickling $1 ⅌ ctl.

BUTTER—Ground Barley from the city $5 ⅌ ton; Rye Flour, $4@$5; Rye Meal, $4@$4 50; Middlings, $26@$27; Corn Meal, $28@$29; Chicago Flour, $3@$3 50; Graham Flour, $3@$3 50; Buckwheat Flour, $4 50@$5; Oatmeal, $5@$5 50; Cracked do, $5@$5 50; Hominy, $5@$5 50; Pearl do, $5@$5 50; Rice Flour, $7@$7 50; Cracked Wheat, $5@$5 50; Rye Meal, $4@$4 50; Rye Flour, $4@$4 50; Rye

TELEGRAPHIC SUMMARY.

FOREIGN.

GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

The Land Troubles.

DUBLIN, Oct. 7.—The Lord-Lieutenant to-day received fifty members of the Land League association, who impressed upon the Government the urgent necessity of immediate steps for protection of life and property. The Lord Lieutenant promised every attention to the subject.

The Government have ordered the barracks at Athlone, Carlow, Silos and other places in West Ireland to be placed for the complement of troops they are capable of accommodating.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—The Freeman's London special says: Mr. Parnell talks of another tour to the United States to explain his exchequer for the agitation. He wants to start a League newspaper. If the landlords perform their threats to refuse to discharge their public duties, and turn men on whom they can rely, Irish cheer will be rapidly increased, and the Government will be compelled to interfere.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The Dublin Mail says: Right Hon. W. E. Forster, Secretary for Ireland, has informed a deputation of landlords who waited on him, that he would regret if he should be obliged to suspend the writ of habeas corpus, but that the Government would do so if it became absolutely necessary.

DUBLIN, Oct. 11.—At a large meeting held yesterday, under the auspices of the Land League, at Ballyduff, the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. During a speech in which the Government was denounced on account of its existence and continuance of the land system, some Government reporters were detected upon the platform. The jury of "Irish them off" was at once raised, and the intruders were hustled out of the stand. A number of men left under the structure seized the reporters and threw them violently to the ground. Attempts were made by their friends to rescue them, and a riot ensued in which all participants were soundly thrashed. Revolvers were fired, but it is not ascertained that any person was killed. The constabulary finally rescued the reporters from the hands of the people, and formed a ring around them with bitter bayonets, in the centre of which they continued to take notes. The members of the League who were present deny that the assault was prearranged.

A landowning war bold at Roscommon on Sunday, Parnell was unexpectedly absent. Mr. Duffy, in his remarks, bitterly denounced the landlord's secret conference lately held in Dublin. At a meeting held at Templemore, Dillon made other inflammatory speeches.

DUBLIN, October 12.—The military authorities in the west of Ireland are making extensive preparations in view of apprehended disturbances. Houses being fitted up for the troops at Ballinrobe, Galway, and in Bailey in Mayo for immediate occupation by the military. Detachments of troops will also leave quarters in Curragh of Kildare and Newbridge for duty in Mayo.

TURKEY AND THE POWERS.

LONDON, Oct. 9.—The "Pall Mall Gazette" gives special prominence to the following announcement: We understand that the proposed naval operations in the Ionian Sea, by which it is hoped to induce the Porte to yield to the Sultan, are approved by all the Powers. The operation of the decision of the Ionian Sea concert will be entrusted to at least three Powers, and will also be mandatory of force.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Oct. 9.—The Sultan has declared that he would rather abdicate than yield to the demands of the Powers. He had a protracted interview with Hobart Pasha to-day.

The Italian Yields.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The Cabinet Council which was summoned for to-day, is postponed in consequence of information from Constantinople that the Sultan is once more in a promising mood. It is stated that the Porte will probably decide to cede Indigrine immediately, but will maintain its previous demands in regard to the naval demonstration.

PARIS, Oct. 11.—A telegram from Constantinople confirms the report that a Council of Ministers decided upon the immediate cession of Indigrine, Scutari and Dulcigno. It is rumored on the Bourse that the Turks have already evacuated Indigrine, and that the Italians have now occupied the place.

LONDON, Oct. 11.—The Foreign Office received from Malta late hour last night, a telegram from Admiral Seymour.

Dubigno Surrendered.

LONDON, Oct. 12.—A correspondent of the "Times," at Paris, reports that the Turkish Ambassador has notified the Government of the cession of Dulcigno. A dispatch to the same paper from Berlin says: The Porte resolved to give Dulcigno, owing to urgent representations from the French and German Ambassadors.

Labor Troubles in Russia.

ST. PETERSBURG, Oct. 7.—The Government has issued a conference of the Russian cotton manufacturers at Moscow to discuss the threatening strike in the factory at Ivanovo and other mills. The wages of operatives have been reduced fifteen per cent. The operatives in prison at Kielsoff, Czarist mill at Smalensk produced a four days strike and riot there. Similar outbreaks are apprehended elsewhere if wages are reduced, as the failure of the harvest has doubled the price of Socialist Menace in Germany.

BERLIN, Oct. 7.—From the semi-official notice that appeared in Prince Bismarck's paper relative to the rumored extension of the minor state of siege in Socialist cities at Leipsic and Hamburg, it appears that the Government has seriously taken to heart the words of Count Von Eulenburg, Minister of the Interior, at the debate in the Reichstag on the ordonnance of the Emperor in laws, when he hinted out that there were hotbeds of Socialism apart from Berlin, and that the time for action in those places might be no remedy there but a state of siege. It also appears that the demeanor and menace of the Socialists at a late meeting at Zittau, have caused the Prussian Government to consider the question afresh, and have made it draw the serious attention of the Saxon Government and Hamburg State to the necessity of taking measures to guarantee the public safety, though it indicates all intending or anticipating the pressure on any Federal members, as to the certain than to indulge in straight by declaring certain cities in a state of siege.

France Wants to be Over and Out.

LONDON, October 16.—Paris correspondent learns, on undeniable authority, that the Cabinet has come to the above conclusion that France would not, under any circumstances, participate in the complaint of any Turkish port, and the French Admiral has been instructed to communicate the decision to Lord Granville.

The French Jesuit Decree.

PARIS, Oct. 8.—At a Cabinet Council to-day, it was unanimously resolved to take decisive steps against the unauthorized confraternities. The decree of the decree will commence next week, but the debates of the proceedings of the Council are at present secret.

EASTERN.

Twelfth Fatal Railroad Slaughter.

PITTSBURG (Pa), October 10.—The fatalities collision occurred last night at midnight on the Pennsylvania Railroad, near Twenty-eighth street crossing, was more disastrous than at first reported. Nine people were killed outright, and eleven more have died since, making in all twenty deaths, while as many more are dangerously hurt, whose death may yet cause the number. In addition to these, there are a large number who are but slightly injured. As stated last night, the first section of the Wells accommodation train going East left the Union depot at 11:31 P.M., having a large crowd of passengers, who had been to the city participating in the closing exercises of the Exposition and to witness the Democratic demonstrations. The back platform was so crowded that the hand-light on the second section following could not be seen. The first section stopped at the regular station, Twenty-eighth street, where they were delayed on account of another train which was in the next block. The second section came along at good speed, but going to the crowds on the back platform of the first section the signal lights were hidden from view, and consequently the engineer of the second section did not see the train ahead of him until he was so near it that the best could not be checked in time to arrest the collision, and the engine went crashing into the rear coach of the first section, packed as it was with human beings. Among these unfortunates the engine plunged itself in the rear window, among the screaming, suffering men, women and children, mangling all who were in its course. The leader head of the engine was buried off by the shock, and scalding water and steam poured over the components of the car so if beat on completing the terrible scene. The following is the list of the fearful scene that followed. The moans of the dying and wounded and the shrieks of those who had lost their friends were frightful. Word was immediately telegraphed to the Mayor's office for assistance, and twenty-five policemen, with a full corps of physicians and in wagons were dispatched at once to the scene of the disaster, where they were soon busily employed in alleviating the sufferings of the victims and clearing the wreck. The wounded were soon mailed to carry for the dead were carried to the Soldiers' Hospital, located but a short distance from the accident.

The name of the engineer of the second locomotive is Phillips Hoey, and that of the fireman, Rambo. Both are residents of Pittsburg, and enjoyed injury, notwithstanding their stick to the engine when it plowed through the rear car of the other train. Up to the present time (P. M.) 24 deaths have occurred.

Another Serious Railroad Accident.

ST. LOUIS, October 10.—The west-bound passenger train on the Indianapolis and St. Louis Railroad, ran through an open switch at Mokena, Illinois, 42 miles east of here, at 6 o'clock this morning, and collided with the rear coach of a freight train standing on the side track. Next to the caboose—which was demolished, was an oil car, which was also demolished, and took fire, and the wrecked car and the entire passenger train, consisting of a baggage and express, two coaches and one sleeper, were entirely consumed. Conductor Brown, and the engineer of the passenger train are seriously injured, but no passengers are hurt. After the collision the freight train, saw the oil car and caboose, pulled out and escaped further damage. The loss is probably from $60,000 to $70,000.

Force Wants to be Over.

CINCINNATI, October 10.—The Democratic closed the ratification last night by 70 guns and bonfires in all the principal cities, and local meetings in nearly every precinct in the State. The campaign has been a grand one, and grandly closed. The great demonstration here was the most magnificent political display ever witnessed in the city. Fifteen thousand torches were lighted, bonfires in line—three times as many as participated in the Republican demonstration. The streets were crowded along the entire line of march, and the most enthusiastic enthusiasm prevailed, presenting a striking contrast to the Republican's display. Sangoine Democrats now claim the State, but the indications are that it will be very close.

Indiana Certain for the Democracy.

CINCINNATI, October 16.—The Indiana canvass closed on Saturday night with grand demonstrations in every city. There is little doubt but that the State is Democratic by from 5,000 to 10,000. A private dispatch to the Commercial from Indianapolis politicians says that a million dollars could not now buy Indiana. The only possible hope of the Republicans is in the successful working of the Repeater. Confidence is final which they have inaugurated. The Democrats, however, are so sure that they are sound in the recovery, and will defeat the villainous plans of the enemy.

Hancock's Health All Right.

WASHINGTON, October 10.—General Hancock says of the latest Republican lie—that he is subject to epileptic fits—has no foundation of truth. He says: "I never have had any apoplectic symptoms, and am enjoying excellent health."

Hancock's Letter Fully Indorsed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Every Governor of the Southern States and many Senators have letters heartily indorsing Hancock's Rebel Claims letter, implying that it is universally accepted throughout the South, and there is not the slightest disposition to prevent such claims. The only exception is that it is generally accepted throughout the Republicans.

The Glorious Empire City.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—John Kelly says that New York City will give at least 60,000 majority for Hancock, and that with Long Island and Staten Island in addition, the Democracy will, in November, next the Empire State for Kelly. Bribes with between 80,000 and 90,000 majority in effect, and the majority will be cast for the State, and will win by a majority of from 30,000 to 40,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Father Nugent, chaplain of the Liverpool Borough Prison, who has been settling a Colony of Convicts in Minnesota, is here, on route to England. He brings a highly favorable report of the condition of the colonists, many of whom left Ireland last Spring destitute. Each family has 160 acres, a house and one, say. The Irish Protestant Land Nugent believes there is to be a largely increased immigration to Minnesota from Ireland, England and the Continent. Numbers of English officers are purchasing farms in Minnesota, and he states that there is soon to be a large immigration of Catholics from Belgium.

Hancock's Letter Fully Indorsed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Bradstreet's Journal of Trade to-day publishes from wheat growers returns to the 25th of September, that this year the total crop of American wheat will not exceed 450,000,000 bushels, and probably will prove 10,000,000 bushels less. The California and Oregon returns is estimated at 38,500,000 bushels. The requirements for home consumption from the season crop is placed at 261,000,000 bushels, leaving 189,000,000 bushels surplus. California and Oregon are credited with 20,000,000 bushels for export.

A Democratic Victory in West Virginia.

WASHINGTON, October 11.—Amid the jubilery and rejoicings of the Republicans in Indiana and Ohio, which has always been the station of the greater part of the public throughout West Virginia also voted "democrat," and the best majority in the history of the State, and will win by a majority of from 30,000 to 40,000.

NEW YORK, Oct. 5.—Father Nugent, chaplain of the Liverpool Borough Prison, who has been settling a Colony of Convicts in Minnesota, is here, on route to England. He brings a highly favorable report of the condition of the colonists, many of whom left Ireland last Spring destitute. Each family has 160 acres, a house and one, say. The Irish Protestant Land Nugent believes there is to be a largely increased immigration to Minnesota from Ireland, England and the Continent. Numbers of English officers are purchasing farms in Minnesota, and he states that there is soon to be a large immigration of Catholics from Belgium.

Hancock's Letter Fully Indorsed.

NEW YORK, Oct. 9.—Bradstreet's Journal of Trade to-day publishes from wheat growers returns to the 25th of September, that this year the total crop of American wheat will not exceed 450,000,000 bushels, and probably will prove 10,000,000 bushels less. The California and Oregon returns is estimated at 38,500,000 bushels. The requirements for home consumption from the season crop is placed at 261,000,000 bushels, leaving 189,000,000 bushels surplus. California and Oregon are credited with 20,000,000 bushels for export.

Democratic Victory in West Virginia.

WASHINGTON, October 11.—Amid the jubilery and rejoicings of the Republicans in Indiana and Ohio, which has always been the station of the greater part of the public throughout West Virginia also voted "democrat," and the best majority in the history of the State, and will win by a majority of from 30,000 to 40,000.

Hancock's Health All Right.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—General Hancock says of the latest Republican lie—that he is subject to epileptic fits—has no foundation of truth. He says: "I never have had any apoplectic symptoms, and am enjoying excellent health."

Hancock's Letter Fully Indorsed.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 10.—Every Governor of the Southern States and many Senators have letters heartily indorsing Hancock's Rebel Claims letter, implying that it is universally accepted throughout the South, and there is not the slightest disposition to prevent such claims. The only exception is that it is generally accepted throughout the Republicans.

The Glorious Empire City.

NEW YORK, Oct. 10.—John Kelly says that New York City will give at least 60,000 majority for Hancock, and that with Long Island and Staten Island in addition, the Democracy will, in November, next the Empire State for Kelly. Bribes with between 80,000 and 90,000 majority in effect, and the majority will be cast for

THE MONITOR.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY..... OCTOBER 14.

It is agreeable, interesting, and generally conducive to virtue and faith, to read sound Catholic periodicals in which the struggles and triumphs of the Church throughout the world are brought to our notice; the lives of religious events are recorded, the valor of the real defenders of the faith is heard, and the Allocutions of the Father of the faithful reach us by our cold, doubting, Hence, most of the dioceses of protestant possess a Catholic Journal, generally the organ of one or more Bishops, who, as a true friend personally visits the various dioceses, and is instituted to a corresponding friendly welcome. Instead of raising unfortunate phrases, we should rather encourage such Catholic journals as greatly contributing to the cause of truth. We do not mean to state that what our opponents in thought is emanating from the Pulpits, or that any statement in them should be charged on the Pulpit, even when they be the official organs of Bishops, who are responsible only for what appears under their signature, yet we make reparation in adding, here the exact wording of the Pastoral of the second Plenary Council, which may on this subject. We cheerfully acknowledge the services the Catholic Press has rendered to religion, as also the disinterestedness with which, in most instances, it has been conducted, although yielding to politicians and editors a very insufficient rent, for the their labors. We exhort the Clergy concerning to extend to these publications a more liberal support, in order that they may be enabled to become more worthy the great cause they advocate. It is our duty to avail ourselves of this mode of making known the wishes of our religion, and evincing the mile appreciations which we generally prevail in regard to them."—Archbishop Alemany.

The Monitor Commences its Jubilee Year.

With this number, the first of the twenty-fourth volume, THE MONITOR commences its Jubilee year. During the period of its existence many have been the attempts to set up a rival in opposition, but all failed after a brief struggle for existence. THE MONITOR has always endeavored to be the faithful ally of the Church, of whose principles it has strive to be the defender and exponent in its proper sphere. And it has been rewarded for its fidelity by receiving the support and encouragement of the Catholic clergy and people of California. We are pleased to be able to announce that arrangements have been just completed by which its permanence is ensured, and the services of an able and experienced journalist secured for its future direction. We feel assured we need only mention his name to convince our readers that the selection has been such as will give general satisfaction—Mr. F. L. McCormack, the recent editor and manager of the Boston Pilot, Sentinel, Oregon. The lamentable illness and death of Messrs. Lynes & O'Donovan gradually compelled the proprietor of the Pilot to take almost entire charge of that journal, although burdened with other business to a large parish. Such an arrangement could of course only be temporary, and we are glad to be relieved of the duties of such an onerous and responsible position. Mr. McCormack's well-known literary ability and life-long experience in journalism, will, we believe, soon make itself felt in the management of THE MONITOR. We trust that the clergy and people of the Pacific Coast will lend their every co-operation to make THE MONITOR all that it should be as the official organ of such a diocese, and as the central body of editors of the Catholic of California.

St. Francis' Church Fair.

The ladies of St. Francis parish are holding a fair in the basement of the church to raise funds for the building of a parochial residence for the clergy attached to St. Francis' church. The new building is already in course of erection, and adjoins the church on Montgomery avenue. It will be much more convenient both for priests and people than the present one on Green st., which had to be tolerated so long on account of the great debt with which the church was burdened.

Hitherto the attendance at the fair has been such as the ladies expected, which is to be attributed chiefly to the political excitement and the greater attraction of the various meetings that are being nightly held, but the ladies hope before the close of the fair that the absentees will atone for their seeming forgetfulness and make up by their generous donations even at the last hour, for the encouragement they have hitherto failed to exhibit.

The State of Affairs in Ireland.

The Government has at last struck its blow against the new policy adopted by the Irish tenantry for the attainment of their rights, and fort he defence of their lives and of their property against the action of landlordism. They have issued a circular to the county inspectors of police, stating that persons "have assembled for the purpose of preventing the execution of legal processes, the sale of farm produce, and letting of land, or otherwise deterring the owners of property from exercising their rights." The constabulary are informed that such assemblies are illegal, even though no riots may result from them, and that persons attending them are liable to fine and imprisonment; and orders are given that their names shall be obtained for the purpose of prosecuting them. Inquiries are also to be made as to whether they are members of the Land League or local leaders. The Dublin Nation commencing on this action of the Government says:

All this may be very good news for the lawyers, but we doubt that it will do any good for the landlords. It is simply a weak attempt to terrorize the people; and truly if the people could be terrorized by such paltry means they would not be worth fighting for. The aim of the present land movement is to keep them upon the soil of Ireland, but it goes upon the understanding that they are a people worth preserving—a people who have the spirit to do something for themselves—a people who are able to face some risk, and, if need be, endure some suffering in a good cause. Now, if the issue of a "Whereas" from Dublin Castle is regarded by them as the pronouncement of Fate—if, without any proof of its legality, it suffices to drive them from every position they may take up, and to rob them of every shred of liberty which they have hitherto retained—then their cause is hopeless. But if, on the other hand, they take these threatenings at no more than their true value—if they do not bend and break before every breath of anger blown from Dublin Castle—if they stand upon their right to assemble peacefully in free public meeting, and for lawful purposes—the Government and its minions may be in store for them, victory will be theirs at last.

The aim of this constabulary circular is perfectly clear. A public opinion has been created in Ireland against the excessive competition for land which has hitherto worked so much mischief in the country. To prevent that public opinion from having any practical effect is the object the Government have in view. To strengthen and sustain that public opinion should be the desire of every Irish patriot. It was that competition that taught the landlords to exact the present enormous rents for their lands. The tenants bid up to those rents, leaving themselves no reasonable margin to live upon. By hard and continuous labor they drew abundance from the soil only to turn it over in a shower of gold to the laps of their landlords, living themselves in penury and wretchedness all the time, starving in the midst of plenty. Whenever any of them broke down in the struggle for existence, others eagerly pressed forward to take the vacant place, and to offer the same or even a higher rent for it. Whenever the landlord called an auction of the crops or goods or chattels of his ruined tenant, bidders were always ready to buy them. There were the landlord emissaries to go on in their course of extortion and oppression, and thus did the tenant-farmers of Ireland prey on each other, degrade, impoverish, and enslave their own class all over the face of the land. Now at last they are awaking to the shame and folly of their conduct; now at last they are beginning to perceive that in their own hands it rests to bring down the rents of Ireland to a reasonable standard; now at last the word has gone out amongst them that, no matter what temporary hardship the working of the scheme may cause to some tenant families, there must be an end to all bidding for farms from which tenants have been evicted, for the non-payment of an exorbitant rent. This resolution of theirs is simply excellent. If they set up to it the rack-rents must come tumbling down. The landlords know it. Upon some of the worst of them the screw is pressing even now. Feeling the pinch acutely, they are crying out in the press and clamoring for help at the doors of Dublin Castle. It is to their importunities we view this new constabulary circular. In the face of it, we tell the people to hold their resolution against bidding for the evicted farms of Purchasers, on stock that is quite belongs to the dispossessed tenants. We tell them to regard with contempt and aversion anyone who may be base enough to set himself against the popular feeling in this important matter. If they work their programme rightly the constabulary circular cannot touch them.

For violence or illegality on their part there is no occasion. It is indeed quite possible that in some cases the law may be strained against them. But in that case it must be satisfied to take their chance. A great, a just, and a necessary national movement is not to be arrested by so pretentious an empty a bulletin as that which has just been launched up on the country:

Dublin Castle,
Oct. 1, 1880.

"Whereas, it has been represented to the Government that in certain districts in Ireland the ordinary course of law is obstructed by persons who have combined together for the purpose of preventing the execution of legal processes, the sale of farm produce, and letting of land, or otherwise deterring the owners of property from exercising their rights." The constabulary are informed that such assemblies are illegal, even though no riots may result from them, and that persons attending them are liable to fine and imprisonment; and orders are given that their names shall be obtained for the purpose of prosecuting them. Inquiries are also to be made as to whether they are members of the Land League or local leaders. The Dublin Nation commencing on this action of the Government says:

All this may be very good news for the lawyers, but we doubt that it will do any good for the landlords. It is simply a weak attempt to terrorize the people; and truly if the people could be terrorized by such paltry means they would not be worth fighting for. The aim of the present land movement is to keep them upon the soil of Ireland, but it goes upon the understanding that they are a people worth preserving—a people who have the spirit to do something for themselves—a people who are able to face some risk, and, if need be, endure some suffering in a good cause. Now, if the issue of a "Whereas" from Dublin Castle is served, as to what a tenant may think he can spare; for, as we all know, a tenant may easily persuade himself that he could spare little or nothing; but the question has reference to a tenant who honestly delivers up to the landlord all that he can afford to give him, and I desire to know whether the Daily Telegraph really believes it to be a mischievous "theory" that such a case has, in so far, thoroughly done his duty.

Again, does the Daily Telegraph dissent from St. Paul, who, in his Epistle (2nd) to Timothy, clearly said that "the husbandman who labours on the soil has a first claim to the fruits?" And if St. Paul's teachings be correct, how can a "theory" tending to be mischievous?—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

T. W. Croke, Archbishop of Cashel.

"The Palace, Thurles, Sept. 19.

English Catholic Opinion on the Land Agitation in Ireland.

Contrasted with the Tory and Landlord organs the London Tablet, the London Register treats of Irish questions in a far more generous and liberal spirit. In the latest number that has reached us it says:

It was a foregone conclusion that the agitation of last year would be renewed during the present recess. Nothing, unfortunately, has ever been given to Ireland in the shape of concession or reform that has not been preceded by more or less agitation. If the people are now disappointed by the conviction that the only hope of obtaining redress for their grievances lies in such proceedings we must in some extent alarm the country and embarrass the Government, there is enough in the history of the past to account for it and to justify the persuasion. At the first blush the sober-minded reader of the public journals is disposed to unqualified condemnation of the extravagances, the exaggerations, and the violence of tone and language which characterise the popular agitation of an important reform. We do not undertake to defend such excesses, and if such that has been said on the platforms of the Land League meetings we do not hesitate to express our entire disapproval. Let we cannot help doubting the entire truth of the assertions by which the world is fed, that the cause of land reform is injured and not advanced by the rude and boisterous expression of generous interest called forth at these popular assemblies. Captain it is that the gross and palpable proofs of widespread dissatisfaction, repeated and multiplied in every part of the country, cannot fail to stimulate those who are responsible for the government of her Majesty's subjects to search out and remove all just and legitimate grounds for discontent. It may well be that the conclusions of the statesman will differ widely from those of the orator, both as to the real nature of the evil, and as to the just and practical remedies which it may be possible to apply. But such is the course of modern political action that it is impossible for a Government to volunteer reforms. The demand must come from below, and so be effective it must be loud in its tone and far-reaching in its scope. The general public, it is immediately interested in the subject, is apt to be averse to the risk and trouble of change. The Minister must have a strong case of necessity to point to before he can overcome the reluctance of the House of Commons to entertain the idea of a change. The more, especially in an Irish matter. Hence, the statesman who desires to effect a wise and moderate reform is in reality placed in a sorely perplexed position. He is asked to take up his position upon the vantage point of grievance, calls aloud for fantastic and impossible measures of relief. Though differing so widely from everything the statesman and popular orator agree that something is wrong, and must be put right; and their united testimony bears down opposition and makes action possible.

Viewed in this light, the agitation which was re-commenced in Ireland may, perhaps, be not altogether so mischievous as its critics in the English Press profess to believe it.

The Liverpool Catholic "Times" says of Mr Parnell, "He has got, in his character, amongst other remarkable traits, that of perseverance. Now that his Parliamentary labors are for the moment concluded, he resumes, with singular activity, his efforts to disseminate amongst the entire people of Ireland, the principles of the Land League. At Ennis, on Sunday, he addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting, and it must be said that, on the whole his words contained a considerable amount of wisdom. He indulged in no merely wild or rapid declamation, which is not unfrequently a besetting sin of popular orators. The gist of his speech was that the Irish Land Question should be fully for a satisfactory settlement, and that it was not the duty of the people to rest satisfied with what he was accidentally to lay down the present terms of that settlement, and that it rests with the Irish agricultural classes to secure, by the attitude which they assume, the redresses of their grievances. In touching on this last phase of his subject Mr. Parnell gave his hearers the excellent counsel to avoid intoxicating drink and all forms of violence. He relied upon more diplomatic means of producing a thorough change in the land laws. He asked the peasantry of Ireland to shun the man who takes a farm from which a tenant has been evicted—to isolate him "as if he were the leper of old" —and he intimated that if this advice is followed, the landlords will be quite as anxious as their tenantry to save the land difficulty solved in an equitable way. In a word, Mr. Parnell wishes to create amongst the tenant-farmers of Ireland a solidarity as perfect as that which has long existed amongst the landlords, and there can scarcely be a question as to the expediency of the policy he adopts in order to draw the attention of the world to the relations which subsist between landlor and tenant in Ireland.

The "Dublin Freeman" on Mr. Parnell's Policy.

The flippancy of the criticism, English and Irish, upon the evening speech of the Recess—Mr. Parnell's—is not a good omen. It indicates that the ruling classes forget nothing, and yet learn nothing. "What does Mr. Parnell want?" asks the Times. "What terms would he accept, and what would his hearers to accept, as a final settlement of the Question? Does the Times forget that a bill has formulated in the House of Commons a Land Bill, which side by side with that credited to Mr. Parnell's imagination would—be accounted moderation itself? What good did it do Butt or the Irish tenant to say what they wanted, and to put it down in formal letterpress? Mr. Parnell has learned something. He knows his business. In this case he is the strong party, and it is not for him to propose terms of acceptance, but they, who have been tried and found wanting, to propose terms of surrender. The secret of Mr. Parnell's success (which the recognition of the Third Party has now placed beyond a cavil) is that he throws the onus upon the Government. They are responsible for the observance of the law, but they are also concerned where in the law is unjust. The injustice of the Land Tenure of Ireland is admitted all along the line from the Premier to the peasant. It Mr. Parnell sore in the Cabinet, he is, perhaps, the only member of it capable of himself and to elucidate his programme. But since he is only an Irish member, whose tenure is not in danger from the action of the Government, to which he sits in opposition, it is an unfair mode of criticism to convert his speech into a "bill of fare." If Mr. Parnell has not said exactly what he wanted in Ennis, he never said it into very circumscribed grounds by declaring very sincerely what he did not want. He said that he did not want police at his meetings. And he has begun without them. There were none at Ennis. He says he does not want anybody shot. He wants the Irish landlord to be just as anxious to have the Land Question settled as is the Irish tenant. He wants the feudal system, which has been given up everywhere else, given up also on Ireland. He wants landlordism, as it is, blotted out, even if the cost of the police and soldiery at present upholding it were to be paid to the landlords as compensation. The Government—the Government—is not in a very powerful position, and very powerful kind. The Liberal organ cautions the epithet "fool." We fear that he who calls the man a fool is more fool than the fool of folly. It is just as reasonable to make Mr. Parnell responsible for the words of Mr. Bright as for those of Mr. P. J. Smyth. It is to be for the Daily News to bind Mr. Gladstone by the tenets of Mr. Broadhurst or Mr. Brassey? The people cannot be with the wants and works of the people of Ireland, we confess that Mr. Parnell's speech at Ennis contained little that was new, but this rather arises from the fact that Mr. Parnell's programme has been so often enunciated or outlined than that Mr. Parnell had nothing to propose. He or say Irishmen. Is his position has an enhanced value of projects to propose—but what chance is there of any being accepted? Does even the Premier propose a programme in every speech he makes? Did Mr. Gladstone not, though many years in office, in Midlothian, with which aft., his election he is in no hurry to grapple. Mr. Parnell has opened the Recess with spirit, though with caution. If he showed his hand, every dog in the whole pack of politicians would yelp and bay at the stern. He has not opened the ball, and yet protected himself from persistent criticism. The fairishness of the orator, both as to the real nature of the Land Question and its just and practical remedies which it may be possible to apply. But such is the course of modern political action that it is impossible for a Government to volunteer reforms. The demand must come from below, and so be effective it must be loud in its tone and far-reaching in its scope. The general public, it is immediately interested in the subject, is apt to be averse to the risk and trouble of change. The Minister must have a strong case of necessity to point to before he can overcome the reluctance of the House of Commons to entertain the idea of a change. The more, especially in an Irish matter. Hence, the statesman who desires to effect a wise and moderate reform is in reality placed in a sorely perplexed position. He is asked to take up his position upon the vantage point of grievance, calls aloud for fantastic and impossible measures of relief. Though differing so widely from everything the statesman and popular orator agree that something is wrong, and must be put right; and their united testimony bears down opposition and makes action possible.

Viewed in this light, the agitation which was re-commenced in Ireland may, perhaps, be not altogether so mischievous as its critics in the English Press profess to believe it.

The Liverpool Catholic "Times" says of Mr Parnell, "He has got, in his character, amongst other remarkable traits, that of perseverance. Now that his Parliamentary labors are for the moment concluded, he resumes, with singular activity, his efforts to disseminate amongst the entire people of Ireland, the principles of the Land League. At Ennis, on Sunday, he addressed a large and enthusiastic meeting, and it must be said that, on the whole his words contained a considerable amount of wisdom. He indulged in no merely wild or rapid declamation, which is not unfrequently a besetting sin of popular orators. The gist of his speech was that the Irish Land Question should be fully for a satisfactory settlement, and that it was not the duty of the people to rest satisfied with what he was accidentally to lay down the present terms of that settlement, and that it rests with the Irish agricultural classes to secure, by the attitude which they assume, the redresses of their grievances. In touching on this last phase of his subject Mr. Parnell gave his hearers the excellent counsel to avoid intoxicating drink and all forms of violence. He relied upon more diplomatic means of producing a thorough change in the land laws. He asked the peasantry of Ireland to shun the man who takes a farm from which a tenant has been evicted—to isolate him "as if he were the leper of old" —and he intimated that if this advice is followed, the landlords will be quite as anxious as their tenantry to save the land difficulty solved in an equitable way. In a word, Mr. Parnell wishes to create amongst the tenant-farmers of Ireland a solidarity as perfect as that which has long existed amongst the landlords, and there can scarcely be a question as to the expediency of the policy he adopts in order to draw the attention of the world to the relations which subsist between landlor and tenant in Ireland.

The "Rumored State Prosecutions.

The following telegram in reference to the rumored State prosecutions have been supplied by the Central News to the "Dublin Freeman":

"London, Sept. 24th.

"Mr. Forster's departure for Ireland was hastened by a few days through the circumstances telegraphed last night. He has been very reserved on the subject of the probable action ultimately, but the only expressions he has let fall before his departure, one or the other of which he seems to point to an almost irrevocable repugnance to the course urged by the Lords Justices in Dublin Castle. A friend, certain to be well informed, assures me that during the past week or twelve days letters reached the Irish Executive from certain gentlemen owning vast estates in Ireland threatening that an immediate prosecution, or at all events, by arraignment of the Government if they abandoned the country to the Land League, as they were doing. The rumors of impending action, or, to speak more accurately, the fact that the Government is considering the expediency or inexpediency of political prosecutions, has caused considerable excitement among the Irish population in London, Liverpool, Glasgow, and other large towns in which telegrams were received last night from the Irish leaders of an important character.

"The rumored impending prosecution of members of Parliament, and the announcement at private meeting of the Irish members of Parliament held in Dublin to-day, at which Messrs. John Dillon, Sexton, and T. P. O'Connor were present, together with the principal leaders of the Irish organization. It was decided if a prosecution were attempted or arrests made that the entire active members of the Parliamentary party should be called over to Ireland to co-operate still more vigorously with the local leaders, and meet the Government's action point by point. Communications were addressed to the leaders of the Irish opinion in the large towns throughout England to take such action as the circumstances require. Mr. Parnell returns from England to-morrow, when a consultation is arranged to take place between himself and the gentlemen above-mentioned, and a pronouncement from him is expected at the demonstration at New Ross on Sunday next, at which Messrs. Barry, Foley, and Byrne will be present."

"Our Dublin correspondent understands that over a dozen Irish M. P.'s were present at the meeting hastily summoned in Dublin yesterday to discuss the reported intention of the Government to arrest the prominent agitators. The meeting had the concurrence of Mr. Parnell, though he was unable to attend. It is rumored in Dublin that fifty names of Land League speakers are before the authorities. The New Ross meeting on Sunday, which Mr. Parnell will address, will be attended by Government spies in large numbers, but our correspondent says it is believed Mr. Parnell has practically lost the control of the operation of the Land Leagues, whose leaders are much in advance of him."

Bells.

Burnt Bells for Cathedrals, Schools and Fire Alarms. Silver medal awarded by the Mechanics' Institute at San Francisco, September, 1883. Read what the Jurors say of them in their Report. "These bells are made of a patented composite metal, partly of steel, and salle that in any other bells used. The highest encomiums are passed upon them for their clear tones and enhanced sound; and it is said they can be furnished for less than half the cost of the made from bell metal." Send for illustrated catalogue to the general agents for the Pacific Coast, Lindroth, Blue & Co., 323 and 325 Market Street San Francisco, Cal.

The Clergy with the People.

Elsewhere we publish the letter of the patriotic Archbishop of Cashel, and we find from off latest Irish exchanges that the clergy are attending in a very larger numbers than before the various land meetings held all over the country. They are there for two reasons—First, to encourage the people in their demand for their just rights, and, second, to restrain, by their presence and advice, those who would perhaps, by rash and impulsive speech or action, occasion some disturbance of the peace. All the efforts of the clergy and the leaders of the Land Leagues will be directed to keep the agitation within due bounds. The Rev. Canon Heany, the venerable parish priest of Dowpatrick, in a letter excusing himself from being present at a land meeting in Galway, says: "At this great crisis of our country, when the most important and urgent question of the day, the land question, is occupying the attention of the Ministry, and will be matter for Imperial legislation, it is do and proper, nay, more, a bounden duty for the people of Ireland to express in clear and no vague language their wants and wishes upon that subject, and to proclaim to the civilized world their firm resolve to live and labor and be fed in the land that gave them birth. A proprietor no doubt has rights which must be respected and preserved. Individual property is in the order and nature of things established by God, and forms an essential element of human society, but the tenant too has his rights, derived from a source equally high and holy. The laborer is worthy of his hire. Were the landlord himself to farm and cultivate his estate, and were the tenant or tenants thereon to sill it in the capacity or condition of laborers, he or they would not be deprived of the fruit of their toil, nor dooms l to starvation. What the Indian planter even does for the negro should be done for the free tenant of the British Empire."

Letter From the Archbishop of Cashel.

St. Paul and the Irish Question.

The following appeared in the London Telegraph:

Sir, In yesterday's issue of your paper you refer to me and say that I was "ready to put forth a mischievous letter, giving the sanction of Scripture to the theory that a landlord is only entitled to what a tenant can spare."

Am I, then, to understand it to be the teaching of the Daily Telegraph that, when a tenant has handed over to his landlord all that he can possibly spare, after his reasonable support, he is still to be held indebted to him for something more?

There is not here question, let it be observed, as to what a tenant may think he can spare; for, as we all know, a tenant may easily persuade himself that he could spare little or nothing; but the question has reference to a tenant who honestly delivers up to the landlord all that he can afford to give him, and I desire to know whether the Daily Telegraph really believes it to be a mischievous "theory" that such a case has, in so far, thoroughly done his duty.

Again, does the Daily Telegraph dissent from St. Paul, who, in his Epistle (2nd) to Timothy, clearly said that "the husbandman who labours on the soil has a first claim to the fruits?" And if St. Paul's teachings be correct, how can a "theory" tending to be mischievous?—I am, sir, your obedient servant,

T. W. Croke, Archbishop of Cashel.

"The Palace, Thurles, Sept. 19.

"Catholic Papers" and Politics.

Rev. T. F. Mahar, D. D., in the Cleveland Catholic Universe.

There seems to be a singular confusion of ideas on this subject. Only a short time ago the Catholic press defended the position against strictures of a non-Catholic contemporary. The reason that justify such a course seems to us singularly strange that any Catholic journal should enter the lists of those who wish politics excluded from what are called "Catholic papers." We can understand the desirableness of excluding political discussions from a devotional publication such as for instance, The Messenger of the Sacred Heart, or the Ave Maria. The wisdom of this world is foolishness with God, for it is written, The Lord knoweth that the thoughts of the wise are vain. Time after time, he said, had the truth of those words been confirmed by experience. If we looked back on man's history—it mattered not whether it be before the dawn of Christianity or since the coming of our Blessed Lord—history proves, and at the same fact—viz., the shallowness of the wisdom of the world when it attempted to fathom and explain away the workings of His Providence. The tendency of man's mind had ever been but still more so, recently in the present century only to accept whatever man's reason could grasp, have a supreme contempt for all else, and if anything was beyond its search, whatever could not be perfectly measured and explain, that at once was treated, not as above reason, but as contrary to reason, and rejected as the apparent contradiction it found that whenever there was any marked interposition on the part of Providence in the affairs of men, it was by means the most any supernatural manifestations, straightway the worldly wise tried to explain away the miracle, and if that failed they scouted it and treated it as the more credulous of the superstitious victims of delusions of devotees. Such, then, being the case, we need not be surprised that the supernatural order of things fared no better with like treatment. The rev. gentleman described the position of the church, its dissociation, and, we might add, the impulse that it should never forget the impression produced on him by the scene he had witnessed. There were some 200 people of his class and rank on the spot, kneeling on the wet, muddy earth, adjoining in a manner such as he had never before witnessed—praying with increasing fervor and unflagging faith. Neither the drizzle nor the mire was fast falling nor the cold rain which swept in from the neighboring hills produced the slightest effect upon them. The sight assessed the fervor of their devotion. These visitors were not confined to the district or country itself, but it would seem that well nigh every district in which the name of this marvel of the age had been heard had sent forth its representatives to honor her whom God had so lored to honor, and to bless her children. In the course of the Catholic religion, had its representatives, and so, too, many other countries in England had sent pilgrims, and he was glad to have

IRISH COUNTY NEWS.

ANTRIM.

In the linen trade of Belfast and of Ulster generally matters continue dull. Any moderate reduction in prices does not lead to increased business, and manufacturers find that no improvement need be looked for until a good healthy demand manifests itself. Occasional inquiries are made, but buyers refrain from committing themselves to any engagements of importance.

ARMAGH.

About half-past nine o'clock, on Thursday evening, Sept. 9, a party of soldiers (Catholics), who returning to the barracks, were set upon by an Orange mob, at the Jail Square, and stoned until they arrived at the barracks. Some of them were struck with the stones.

CARLOW.

At a meeting of the Carlow Guardians, Sept. 9, a letter was read from the Local Government Board, urging the Guardians to at once close accounts under the seeds supply act. The Guardians adopted a resolution asking the Board to postpone payment. The Government Board is forcing the repayment of this loan; they seem to think that if it is not collected out of the present crop, it will not be collected at all. The value of seed supplied to the farmers in this Union district was £1,253.

CAVAN.

A public meeting was held in the courthouse of Ballyjamesduff, September 6, for the purpose of promoting the establishment of railway communication between Oldcastle, Ballyjamesduff, and Kinaleck. The Hon. Deps. Maxwell was in the chair. A resolution was adopted appointing a deputation to carry out the objects of the meeting.

CLARE.

A land meeting was held at Milltown Malbay on Sunday, Sept. 5. A galleried platform was erected in the square in front of Magrath's inn. The attendance was large, there being between 5,000 and 6,000 present. The day was very fine, and contingents came from Lahinch, Ennistymon, Kilmanona, and other places around. A handsome green flag was displayed on the platform, having on one side a harp, and the words, "God save Ireland" and "Kilmacud." Rev. Father White, P.P., filled the chair. Letters of sympathy were read from Mr. Parnell, O'Gorman Mahon, J. Enright Finigan, and others. The chairman, in the course of his speech, severely condemned the House of Lords for their rejection of the Compensation Bill, and advised the tenants to pay only what they considered fair rents for the land. Rev. P. M. O'Kelly and Captain O'Shea, M. P., delivered patriotic addresses. The following resolutions was carried:—"That the humiliating spectacle of Ireland as a periodical beggar at the doors of the nations, and many of her worst miseries are due to the present condition of the land laws, and call loudly for a immediate energetic remedy."

CORK.

The leading Fenians have met in Cork, says the Dublin Freeman, of Sept. 6, and declared the letter which recently appeared in the New York Herald on the subject of Fenianism to be a fabrication in most of its salient points.

A tenantal Kingwilliamstown was reinstated on the night of Sept. 7 by a body of armed men, who removed her furniture from the roadside to her house, lit a good fire, placed new locks on the doors, and bade her good-night.

At a meeting of the Cork Land League, Sept. 4, the Secretary (Mr. Cropin) said that in three or four weeks Mr. Parnell would be coming to Cork, and the committee of the League intended to prepare a grand reception for him. Mr. Heffernan said that when Mr. Parnell would come the League would be established on a new and better basis, and for the first purpose a great demonstration would be held in Cork on the first Sunday in October, at which Mr. Parnell and some of his friends in Parliament would attend. The several branches of the League in the county would be invited to send delegates. It was decided to send invitations to the trades and bands of the city to join the demonstration.

One of the best attended land meetings yet held in the County Cork since the opening of the present agitation took place at Castletown on Sunday, Sept. 5. People attended from several of the neighboring parishes. Altogether there were about 8,000 persons present. The parish priest of Castletown, the Rev. Father Farrar, presided. Mr. Hennessy and the Rev. Mr. P. McDonald were also present, together with a large number of farmers. A large body of armed police was drawn up some distance from where the meeting took place. A government shorthand writer was in attendance and took his notes some distance away from the platform, protected by four policemen. No attempt was made to molest or interfere with him. The usual land resolutions were adopted.

Says the Dublin Freeman, Sept. 10: "The intelligence that the bailiffs on tenants were forcibly reinstated in their holdings on Wednesday morning by a body of armed men was confirmed this morning. On the place being visited to-day the tenants were found in complete possession of their holdings. They state that the hedging house where they were living since the eviction about two months ago was entered by a large body of men with their faces colored and armed with guns; that they were suddenly awakened from their sleep, and gently removed to their respective houses, where they were greeted with large turf fires newly lit. In addition looks were placed on the doors. The party then left. Before going, however, they warned the tenants to remain in the house, and that the first who ought leave would be murdered. Sub-Inspector Kerin, police officer of Kanturk, in charge of the district, visited the locality to-day."

DONEGAL

The following is a late report of the crops in Donegal:—Wheat—good crop, fair weight and yield over an average, but much smut in it; not much sown here. Barley—little grown; fair crop. Oats—rather slight crop and thin, last season's manured lands light and weedy; grain plump and good in color and quality. Potatoes—very large crop and fine for table use; disease sitting in very much in early lands but ten days if dry weather continues until about due of a large number will be sound. Root crops—the few sowed; hopes that the frost of 10th June left will be good; turnips look fairly well, but are suffering from the present drought. Hay—Valued very poor and badly saved; no foland in the neighborhood. Flax—very good crop and largely saved. Probable commencement of harvest—early lands mostly cut should be secured by middle of September on all lands.

DOWN.

It is reported that the government intends to take notice of the inflammatory speech delivered by Rev. H. R. Kane, at Donaghmore, and reported in our last issue. The meeting mentioned to take place Sept. 8, in reference to the speech, was not held.

DUBLIN.

Messrs. Cassell, Petter & Co., promise to have ready shortly, C. Gavan Duffy's book on "Young Ireland."

At a meeting of the South Dublin Guardians, Sept. 9, it was decided to place the sick in the Workhouse Hospital under the charge of the Sisters of Charity.

The 20th of Sept. was fixed for beginning the examination of students seeking degrees of the Queen's University. As on the last occasion, the Exhibition Palace was selected as the place for holding the examinations, which will conclude on the 11th of October. The applicants for degrees are more numerous than usual this year, which is believed will be the last of the existence of the Queens University in Ireland.

The Dublin Freeman of Sept. 10 says:—Mr. Thos. Leetch, of Dame Street, a few days since received a letter, of which the following is a copy:—"New York, Aug. 20, 1880. Sir—Enclosed you will find a draft for £8, being amount due you by me when doing business in Cashel, County Tipperary in 1864." Here follows the honest writer's signature, which we have not his authority to publish. The letter certainly does not go to confirm the favorite English theory that the Irish are men who, whenever they can, will evade their just debts.

Says the Dublin Freeman's Journal, Sept. 10:—"Mr. Parnell has left London for Ireland, but he will be able to take part only in a small proportion of the meetings in the country which he has invited to address. His first public appearance will be in Cork amongst his constituents. He will then proceed to Limerick, in order to reserve the freedom of the city which was recently conferred upon him. He will afterwards address a meeting at Ballina, and his further movements are undecided. Mr. Parnell is not looking at all as well as his friends would wish him to be, and too much physical exertion at present might interfere with his participation in popular meetings for the remainder of the year."

Mr. John Dillon presided at a meeting of the Dublin Land League, Sept. 7, and in reference to a false accusation, made the following statement: He said: I just wish to say a few words in reference to the accusation brought against me lately—that is the statement that I encouraged the practice of houghing or maiming cattle. I regret very much to say there was a sentence in the report of my speech in Kildare, which was open to that interpretation. All I can say in explanation is, that I will go as far as any other man in England or Ireland, to discourage or put a stop to that practice, or the inflicting of any suffering on brute animals. I very deeply regret having used a sentence which was open to such an interpretation, and uncertain that on any opportunity when I was in power, I will use my influence in my power with the people, to put an end to that practice in Ireland, or to the infliction of suffering on the brute part of creation. He urged the League to be active during the coming autumn, and felt sure that the power derived by the people through the League, would produce a radical change in the land laws.

FERMANAGH.

The Enniskillen Rifle Association held its first competition, September 8, for cups and prizes at the Brookborough range, near Lisnaskea. The first contest was for the Club Challenge Cup. The competition was open to members only, and the distances were seven shots each at 200, 500, and 600 yards, Martini-Henry rifles to be used. The cup to be won thrice in succession. The cup was won by the Honorable Col. Crichton, who made the 16 points out of a possible 105. Mr. C. R. Hearn followed with 72, and Mr. A. Moreton and Mr. Dane with, 60 and 64 respectively. Mr. James Lemon making 61. Eight competed. The next competition was for a silver cup. Conditions, five shots each at 200, 400, and 600 yards; open to members only. Martini-Henry rifles. Mr. Hearon won the cup with 63.

GALWAY.

At Moneen, near Loughrea, in Connemara, an old man, his wife, and his five children were evicted last week. Eighty policemen were present, with the landlord, who told the evicted tenant to go to the Land League for assistance. A large crowd was also present. The evicted family were removed to the workhouse.

On Sept. 6, a man named Joyce, living at Craughwell, Loughrea, county Galway, was employed cutting hay on a farm from which a tenant had lately been evicted, on the property of J. Langan, Esq. Scarcely had he begun, when two strange men sprang from behind a ditch, and placing two revolvers to his head, threatened to fire. He screamed "murder," and was granted his life on giving a solemn promise never to work there again.

On Sunday, Sept 5, a large meeting of the tenant-farmers of the parish of Donaghpatrick was held at the cross roads of Cahirlistrane, about half a mile from the new chapel, for the purpose of initiating in that parish a branch of the Irish National Land League. Contingents were present from the adjoining parishes, headed for the most part by mounted men, with green caps and initiation sweeds. Those from Tuam and Killacra were led by the Tuam Brass Band. The Land League was represented by R. D. Walsh, Mr. Matthew Hugh, tenant farmer, occupied the chair. The object of the meeting was carnicdout, and amongst others the following pertinent resolution was adopted. "That considering the extreme probability of the landlords seizing the harvest in the coming season in lieu of exorbitant rents, we hereby solemnly pledge ourselves to use every lawful exertion to secure the fruits of our labors for ourselves and our families, and to hold the harvest."

A placard was recently pasted around Cappagh, a thinly populated district, about ten miles from Loughrea. It said, "on the ground of justice and political expediency, the cowardly practice of the—those who till it." The placard also called on the tenant-farmers of Galway to be united in Conjunction to uphold the principles advocated in the placards. Contingents were present from Loughrea, Craughwell, Kilthulla, Gurteen, Kinvarra, and many other places. Large numbers of the peasantry marched to the place of meeting, with green leaves in their hats and mantelpieces. The day was beautifully fine. Several splendid banners were borne in the crowd with such mottoes as "Accursed are we in our cursed land; yet will we still, and toil till the stranger reaps the harvest," "To protection be true;" "Galway to the front;" "Down with Mitchell Henry;" "Ireland's opportunity at hand," etc. Previous to holding the meeting a splendid body of young men, numbering two hundred, marched from Gurteen in military array, with a green silk banner, besides which was borne the stars and stripes. The appearance of this met elicited loud cheering for the Irish American Republic. These were about fifty police present, under the command of W. J. Peel, R. M., Ballinasloe, and Sub-Inspector Hall, of Athenry. These Government note takers were denied admittance to the platform. Mr. Lafley, tenant farmer of Cloucak, presided. The proceedings were of the usual character of land meetings.

KILDARE.

A draft of recruits arrived recently at the Camp to join the 3d Battalion Rifle Brigade. Drafts of recruits are rarely heard of now a-days in Ireland. Irishmen seem to care less than formerly for fighting John Bull's battles.

KERRY.

The intelligence reached Cork, Sept. 8, that the evicted tenants on Archdeacon Leland's estate at Scrahan, near Kilfinane, were the previous night reinstated in possession, with the assistance of an armed force of men. Some time ago a number of families were evicted on the Archdeacon's estate for non-payment of rent. Since then attempts to sell the growing crops were frustrated, and endeavors to effect a compromise resulted in failure, except in two case where the tenants were restored to possession with the consent of the landlord.

KILKENNY.

The usual meeting of the Kilkenny Tenant-Farmers' Association, was held in the Town Hall, Kilkenny, September 9, at which the senior county member, E. M. Marum, Esq., M. P., was present. The meeting was a private one, the Press being excluded. A committee was appointed to make arrangements for the land meeting in the city of Kilkenny, which will be held at the end of this month, the date to be fixed by Mr. Parnell. Arrangements were also made in reference to giving such evidence as is available before the Land Commission, which will shortly sit in Kilkenny."

The Kilkenny sanitary Board met Sept. 9, the Mayor, Alderman Dowling, in the chair. Several reports were read from the medical officers of health concerning the sanitary state of the drainage in the houses in the city. It was ordered that a copy of the doctor's report should be sent to the owner of the several houses. The doctors recommended that the sewers should be opened immediately and cleansed, and that the cesspits should be cleaned also. Syphon traps or ventilating flues, to carry off the offensive effluvia, are to be erected.

KING'S COUNTY.

At the monthly meeting of the Edenderry Home Rule Club, Sept. 5, the following resolution was passed: "That the experience of the session of Parliament which is about to close clearly demonstrates the wisdom of the selection made by the Irish Parliamentary party in choosing Mr. Parnell to be their sessional Chairman, that gentleman having displayed all the qualities which are essential to qualify for the position."

An enthusiastic large meeting, attended by thousands of people, was held on Sunday, Sept. 5, at Clonaslee, where stand the historic ruins of the seven churches. On the day was also observed as the anniversary of a pattern, or country carnival. There were contingents present from Allisten, Ballinakill, Tullamore, Banagher, Clara, Ferbane, Birr, County Sligo, and other localities. A few appropriate banners were displayed, with the mottoes—"Erin, the Ballinasloe, the Temperance, and the Clara Bands were present on the platform, which was erected outside the chancel gable wall, in view of the lordly Shannon. Mr. Thomas Brennan attended as the representative of the Irish National Land League. Rev. Joseph O'Reilly, P.P., of Clonmacnoise, presided. Speeches were made by the Rev. Chairman, Mr. Thomas Brennan, Mr. M. Harris, Mr. Lyran and Rev. Joseph Kaly, C.C., of Ballinasloe. Amongst the resolutions passed was the following: "That knowing as we do that it should be impossible for the Parliament of the King's County to rule, repress, and extermainate the tenant farmers in the manner they have done for the last 100 years, in preparation of a section of the tenantry, we hereby declare that the man who would take a farm from which a tenant has, or shall have been evicted is a public enemy, one who deserves the reprobation of all good men."

LEITRIM.

The month's memory for the repose of the soul of Francis Gratton, the fifth daughter of the late Henry Gratton of Grove House, Dublin, and granddaughter of the famous Irish patriot, Henry Grattan, took place on Tuesday, Aug. 31, in the Franciscan Convent of the Perpetual Adoration, Drumshanbo, county Leitrim. The Most Rev. Dr. Woodlock officiated, followed by a large body of clergy. The sisters of the deceased, Mrs. Grattan Bellew, Mrs. Edmund Doase, and the Rev. Mother of the convent, and other members of the family were present.

A largely attended meeting under the auspices of the land League was held at Ballinaglera, Co. Leitrim, on Sunday, Sept. 5. There were contingents present from Drumkeeran, Drumshanbo, Dowra, Ballinamore, Carrick and other places. Several bands also attended. The Chair was occupied by James McGovern. The usual resolutions were adopted. Mr. Walsh who represented the Land League compared the low of money from Ireland through the means of absenteeism as like the flow of a man's life blood through an unstanched wound, and passed to the advice given by the Land League. In conclusion he said if a man was ejected in their neighborhood in the way alluded to before, the tenants on that estate should go manfully to the landlord and tell him they would not pay a penny rent till that tenant had been reinstated.

LOUTH.

At a meeting of the Drogheda Corporation Sept. 6, Mr. Robert May called attention to the subject recently advocated by Father John Boylan, P. P., of a railway from Oldcastle to Mountnugent, and moved the following resolution in reference, which was carried:—"That observing the exertions being made by Fr. Boylan towards the making of a railway from Oldcastle to Kinaleck, we now upon the peopled Ground to give their best exertions to encourage the line to their town, and that the people of Drogheda would willingly give them their best support to the project.

LONDONDERRY

The Salvation Army are on the rampage in Derry. They preach in the Shipping Hall, and may do some good amongst the Orangemen.

LIMERICK.

Notices were recently posted up on the gate leading to a Catholic church near Ballikeala, asking certain persons who are alleged to have taken possession of a holding in the neighborhood to permit the former tenant to be reinstated on his lands on pain of the lives of the present occupants being taken.

It was recently stated in Limerick on good authority, although the police were reticent on the point, that two cases of rescues were delivered up at one of the local consabulary stations. In one case, been consigned from Limerick to Galway, but on the way entirely fled the officials to discover the nature of the contents. When the fact was known the stationmaster at one of the stations on the line deemed it his duty to obtain authority for the retransfer of the fire arms to Limerick with the object already stated.

A report from Limerick, September 7, says Late last night what threatened to be a serious affair between the military and a portion of the populace was near occurring. Some soldiers of the 1st Battalion 9th Regiment had a row with a number of civilians, in which the soldiers got the worst of it. The military then went to the barracks and induced a number of their comrades to come down town with a view to renewing the fight. Fortunately the police were informed of the matter, and they arrived just in time, as a large crowd had collected, to prevent a very serious disturbance.

MAYO.

The Cork Examiner of Sept. 11, printed the following: Wonderful aspirations are said to be seen at the chapel, Knockmore, near Ballina, since Sunday last. They are alleged to be much the same as those seen at the now celebrated Knock, 16 miles distant. Great excitement prevails. Thousands of people throng the approaches to the chapel. The priest cannot control the crowd, and it is scarcely possible to enter the chapel.

Ballycroy is perched in the midst of the rugged mountains, and is approached by singularly beautiful—mountains 'clothed from base to peak with evergreen and heather of varied hues—lakes, rivers, and in the distance is seen the broad Atlantic. Ballycroy is about 40 miles distant some twenty-five miles from Westport, was the scene of an enthusiastic land meeting on Sunday, September 5. Five thousand persons assembled from the surrounding districts to give expression to their views on the land question. Mr. James Conway, tenant farmer presided. The following resolutions were enthusiastically adopted:—That the existing land system of Ireland, being founded upon confiscation and conquest, being glaringly antagonistic to the welfare, peace, and contentment of the Irish people, having as its fruits poverty, degradation, and bloodshed, we hereby demand its abolition, and the substitution for it of a system founded upon the hereditary and inalienable right of man to ahare of the land of his birth. Mr. Patrick Moran, Newport, proposed, That we hereby pledge ourselves to use our utmost energies to carry on the land movement with increased vigor until our object shall be accomplished, and with a view to that end resolved that we hereby pledge ourselves to support the branch of the Irish National Land League that has been established in this locality. That we hereby pledge ourselves not to take a farm from which another has been evicted, or which has been surrounded on grounds of excessive rents, or on a refusal to pay a just rent; and, furthermore, that we deem it as a traitor to his countrymen and their sacred cause the person who, forgetful of duty to his fatherland, violates this pledge.

MEATH.

The guardians of the Kells Union recently requested the Local Government Board to postpone the payment of the seed loans, payable by the farmers after the harvest. The request was refused. One of the arguments of those gentlemen was that if the payment was postponed for another year the small farmers would never be able to pay. Another, that next year a great many of these small farmers under £15 valuation would probably be out of their land, and that eventually a large portion of this money would fall on the ordinary ratepayers. A correspondent, writing to the Dublin Freeman's Journal, says it is absolutely impossible for the small farmers to pay these loans out of this year's harvests—but as the government board seems to have no confidence in the farmers, it is feared the repayment will be exacted.

QUEEN'S COUNTY.

The Guardians of the Mountmellick Union recently requested the Local Government Board to postpone for a year the payment of the first instalment of the seeds loans, and although the Board had no power to do so—the Board refused. The Guardians decided to submit the matter to the Government as they did not believe in exceptional legislation in hard times like the present.

ROSCOMMON

At a meeting of the Land League, held Sept. 7, the Treasurer, Mr. Rogan, said he had received a letter from Roscommon informing him that Mrs. Farrell had for the past some been imprisoned for a year, and not leaving the outhouse where she and her eight children had taken refuge after being evicted. Her husband on going into Roscommon had paid half a year's rent in advance, and was evicted for owing a year's rent. The husband went to Scotland and sent home £10, which his wife handed to the agent believing she would be reinstated. The agent took the money, but did not give her possession, though it her husband was given credit for the half year's rent the rest now of money from Ireland through the means of absenteeism as like the flow of a man's life blood through an unstanched wound, and passed to the advice given by the Land League. In conclusion he said if a man was ejected in their neighborhood in the way alluded to before, the tenants on that estate should go manfully to the landlord and tell him they would not pay a penny rent till that tenant had been reinstated.

LOUTH.

At a meeting of the Drogheda Corporation Sept. 6, Mr. Robert May called attention to the subject recently advocated by Father John Boylan, P. P., of a railroad from Oldcastle to Mountnugent, and moved the following resolution in reference, which was carried:—"That observing the exertions being made by Fr. Boylan towards the making of a railway from Oldcastle to Kinaleck, we now upon the peopled Ground to give their best exertions to encourage the line to their town, and that the people of Drogheda would willingly give them their best support to the project.

LONDONDERRY

The Salvation Army are on the rampage in Derry. They preach in the Shipping Hall, and may do some good amongst the Orangemen.

LIMERICK.

Notices were recently posted up on the gate leading to a Catholic church near Ballikeala, asking certain persons who are alleged to have taken possession of a holding in the neighborhood to permit the former tenant to be reinstated on his lands on pain of the lives of the present occupants being taken.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FORTY YEARS BEFORE THE PUBLIC.

DR. C. McLANE'S CELEBRATED LIVER PILLS, FOR THE CURE OF Hepatitis or Liver Complaint, DYSPEPSIA AND SICK HEADACHE.

Symptoms of a Diseased Liver. PAIN in the right side, under the edge of the ribs, increase on pressure; sometimes the pain is in the left side; the patient is rarely able to lie on the left side; sometimes the pain is felt under the shoulder-blade, and it frequently extends to the top of the shoulder, and is sometimes mistaken for a rheumatism in the arm. The stomach is affected with loss of appetite and sickness; the bowels in general are costive, sometimes alternative with lax; the head is troubled with pain, accompanied with a dull, heavy sensation in the back part. There is generally a considerable loss of memory, accompanied with a painful sensation of having left undone something which ought to have been done. A slight, dry cough is sometimes an attendant. The patient complains of weariness and debility; he is easily startled, his feet are cold or burning, and he complains of a prickly sensation of the skin; his spirits are low; and although he is satisfied that exercise would be beneficial to him, yet he can scarcely summon up fortitude enough to set out. This is the case with every remedy. Several of the above symptoms attend the disease, but cases have occurred where all were experienced, yet examination of the body, after death, has shown the LIVER to have been extensively deranged.

AGUE AND FEVER. DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, IN CASES OF AGUE AND FEVER, when taken with Quinine, are productive of the most happy results. No better cathartic can be used, preparatory to, or after taking Quinine. We would advise all who are afflicted with this disease to give them a FAIR TRIAL.

For all Bilious derangements, and as a simple purgative, they are unequaled.

BEWARE OF IMITATIONS. The genuine DR. C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS are never sugar coated.

Every box has a red wax seal on the lid, with the impression DR. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS.

The genuine McLANE'S LIVER PILLS bear the signatures of C. McLANE and CHAS. ONDERDONK in the wrapper.

Insist on your druggist or storekeeper giving you the genuine DR. "C. McLANE'S LIVER PILLS, prepared by Fleming Bros, Pittsburgh, Pa.

Sold by all respectable druggists and country storekeepers generally.

Wholesale Agents: HOWARD & RUTLEDGE, Cincinnati, O.; MCKESSON & ROBBINS, New York; SELLERS & HUGHES, Philadelphia; LOGAN & BERRY, Chicago; GEO. C. GOODWIN & CO., Boston; SAML. STEWART, Baltimore; AUSTIN & LYONS, New Orleans; SEXTON, HUMPHREYS & CO., Montreal, Canada; LYMAN, KNOX & CO., Toronto, Canada; R. S. WILLIAMS, New York; HENRY E. SAWYER, New York; WEDEKIND & CO., New York; FLEMING BROS., Pittsburgh, Pa.

J. & F. KESSELER,

ONYX AND MARBLE WORKS.

WAREROOMS: No. 7 Taylor street, near Market, opp. Sixth.

STEAM WORKS: Brannan street, between Fifth and Sixth, SAN FRANCISCO.

ALTARS, MANTELS, PEDESTALS, TABLES, ETC. IN ONYX. Very Rare and Beautiful. Also, Mantels in Colored and Statuary Marble. With Open Fire-places, Grates, of Newest Designs.

SWEET Chewing JACKSON'S BEST NAVY Tobacco

A perfect Relish, free of Unmanlike Deceptions. Ex-Soldiers, Sailors, and Patriots, will find it a source of enjoyment and thanking. The best tobacco in the market for the money. Ask for Jackson's Best, and take no other. Sold by dealers. Beware of imitations. Manufactured only by the proprietors, S. G. WADE & BRO., Richmond, Va.

L. & E. Werthemer, Agents, San Francisco.

DOWN! DOWN! DOWN!

E. MAIN, 315 Folsom St., makes to order best French Calf Boots, from $6 to $7; Calf Shoes, $3; Ladies' Calf Shoes, $3; Ladies' Kid, $2.50; Children's, $2. Measure for boots, $1. Repairing done neatly and cheaply. Boots warranted to wear six months. Country orders solicited. Send for rules for self-measurement. Boots and shoes sent C. O. D. if the price suits.

14 STOP ORGANS, SUB BASS & Oct. Coupler, & Set Reeds, 100 Pl. mous, $125 a quarter, rent on trial. Catalogue free. Address Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N. J.

CITY ITEMS.

Irish Land League.

Two New Branches Organized Sunday in St. Joseph's Hall.

The Irish National Land and Industrial League met Sunday, Sept. 12, at Howard and Tenth streets, President D. J. Tooby in the chair. In the absence of Thaddeus Flanagan, the Secretary, who has gone to New York to attend the League Convention in that city, James McKeogue was elected temporary Secretary, and John Kavanagh appointed. It was announced by Judge Tooby that £300 had just been sent to the League office in Dublin. Eloquent and stirring addresses were made by R. A. Hoech, M. County, D. J. Tooby, Hy. O'Brien, J. A. Adam, John Kavanagh, Jas. McKeogue and others, portraying in graphic style the wrongs inflicted upon Ireland, and the unequaled suffering endured by those born upon that unfortunate island during the past 700 years. The following were, on motion, appointed committee on organization: J. Kavanagh, M. Gunner, John M. Sweeney, Jas. McKeogue and J. A. Adam.

M. Gunner moved that those present agree to organize a Branch League in this district, to be called the San Francisco Branch No. 2, which was carried unanimously.

P. A. Roach moved that a Branch League be established at North Beach. This was carried unanimously, it being determined that the parent League should call a meeting, to be held on Sunday afternoon, the 24th instant.

VOTERS OBSERVATIONS BEING EFFECTED.

Judge Tooby said an organization numbering about sixty was on the eve of being effected. P. A. Roach thought this an excellent plan. The ladies would do more good in advancing the cause by raising money and supplies than any number of men, however able and zealous. Kavanagh recited a case where $200 had been subscribed to organize a League, and Judge Tooby informed the meeting that active and prosperous League organizations were forwarding the same with encouraging results from Los Angeles, Gilroy, Valejo, Stockton, Napa, Virginia City and elsewhere. Hoech stated that the British were engaged in sending to Africa Irishmen by the thousands, and that the whole world, the object of prejudice American against the Russians. He was sorry to say that the Land Leagues is being supported by the plutocracy, Republicans, and Democrats, and that the Irish American Republican party, is the only thing with the movement. The former assert that in order to keep the Irish vote, they must kick Tilghman no matter may be it living symptoms of life in the state of San Quentin, for the Pope, we all know that if he desired to remove Mr. Gallagher, he would be at once relieved, by infallibles.

The meeting then adjourned in order to allow the Branch Leagues to organize, which was done to the selection of the following officers for the ensuing year: John M. Gunner, President; J. A. Adam, Vice President; John Kavanagh, Secretary, and J. Kavanagh, Treasurer. After the signing of the roll by a large number, the meeting adjourned to Sunday, Sept. 26, at half-past Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock.

THE LADIES INTERESTED

The ladies interested in the organization of a Ladies' Branch of the Irish Land Leagues met last evening at the residence of Mrs. Jas. Lynch. The chair was occupied by Mrs. Jerome Dussy, who received a large number of sympathizers among the ladies, not only of the Eleventh Ward, but the entire city. Words of encouragement were spoken by Mrs. J. Gunner and Mrs. M. A. Begg, who stated that the ladies of Ireland had formed Daughters of Land Leagues, and that the ladies were desirous of fully organizations in San Francisco. Mrs. Begg was elected temporary officers and Committee on Organization, as follows: President, Mrs. Jerome Dussy; Vice President, Mrs. M. J. Gunner, Secretary, and Mrs. M. A. Begg, Treasurer. After some further discussion and several on Irish interests, the meeting adjourned till next Sunday, afternoon at the same place.

The Real Estate Market.

Renewed confidence has infused an unwonted activity into real estate transactions and building operations, calling into prominence the fact that a demand for laborers and mechanics, such as has not been experienced in San Francisco for many years, is now upon us, and that it will be well to sell at present prices, are building for rents. Property along the line of Market street, and in the vicinity of the Mint, is rapidly advancing. Auctions of real estate continued fair prices, for additional rental values. It is confidently expected that arrangements will be made for the erection of a large manufactory, on the Alvarado grain, known as the Lagunas survey, which will be of great advantage to the property and upon upon broad thoroughfares to the south side of the city. Property, at this point, in the vicinity of Mingo Wharf, some years ago, sold for a few hundred dollars, will be in condition to put upon the market. Holders—as the First Tract are concerned—by reasonable prices can realize from $400 per lot, satisfactory figures, when it is remembered that this property is the only available property left of the market. The Hight street table road will be put through as soon as property owners have perfected the gradings of property along the line. The Supervisors are in the hands of Hampton, Hopkins & Co., of a triangular lot on the northeast corner of Sansome and Pacific, 34 x 100 feet, for $65,000, and the purchase of the block bounded by Fillmore, Masonic, Sutter and Post streets. It intended to build terra-cotta on the street. Since the 1st of January the amount loaned on real estate on city property foots up $5,429,113, distributed as follows: California Bank, $1,000; Farmers' Association, $13,000; French, $83,200; German, $785,850; Humboldt, $160,225; Hibernia, $1,000; Mechanics', $1,000; Pacific, $2,000; Savings and Loan, $181,100; Security, $403; Private individuals, $2,400,335; Total, $5,429,113.

The Hibernia Bank.

Bank Commissioner Evans J. Coleman has reported to his Excellency, Governor Perkins, the examination of the financial affairs of the Hibernia Savings and Loan Society, made at the close of business, September 1, which we are satisfactory condition. The following is a statement of the condition of the Hibernia Savings Bank, loans and bd., $214,930 85; other real estate, $206,876 44; loans on real estate, $16,400,699 22; United States bonds, $1,517,405 95; other stocks and bonds, $1,000; furniture and fixtures, $2,866 25; interest accrued, $164,127 11; cash assets, $18,507,905 73; other assets, $242,07 44; total, $18,575,877 25. Liabilities—Reserve fund, $1,227,000; deposits, $17,348,877 25; interest collected, $230,905 65; other liabilities, $385—total, $18,575,877 25.

The Montreal True Witness on the Irish Vote in the States.

Speaking generally, the Irish in the United States vote the Democratic ticket, though why one is at a loss to imagine, except it is that the party called Democrat has a grown for Irish ears. But what's in a name? Not much in the present instance, for it happens to be paradoxically enough, that the Democrats of the great Republic are the aristocracy, and the Republicans are the Democrats. The Democracy would never think of electing a man like Abraham Lincoln to the Presidency, even if there was the question of slavery agitating the minds of the nation in 1861. Of the two candidates in the present contest General Hancock is an unmistakable aristocrat, while Garfield, like Lincoln, is a man without a name except that he has risen from the ranks, and, as such they more thoroughly represent what we might term the great nameless people. Again, the Irish fought enthusiastically for the Union, and against slavery, and found their enemies in the southern and some of the northern Democracy so called. They were in enthusiastically for the Union, for they recognized that a divided republic would give strength to their natural and hereditary foes, the English oligarchy, but, nevertheless, they voted the Democratic ticket all the while, a course of proceeding which showed plainly that, though they vitalized their entity compelled them to assist the Republicans in the field, their sympathies lay with the Democrats at the polls. Nor was this conduct as inconsistent as it may appear. The Irish held the belief that the north would ultimately win, but they had intelligence enough to understand that it would never do to let the extreme Radical, or black Republicans, who cared for no front and pressed the war to its close, work their will on the country. In this their wisdom they were made manifest when, after the struggle, the radical carpet-baggers tried to grind the south with the aid of the ignorant but emancipated negro.

The war all over, the Irish went back to their old allegiance, though not all of them, for, despite assertions to the contrary, a great many Western Irishmen have thrown in their lot with the Republicans. But it may be asked why it is that the Irish are attached to the Democracy, or, at least, why they have been so for years, if not can scarcely be supposed that those who the name has a charm it is strong enough to make them forgetter their suffering. We must fall back upon American history to discover the reason of the sympathy of the Irish element with the Democrats. When the French revolutionary war broke out one of the American parties—the Democrats—sympathized with Republican France, while the Whigs (now the Republicans) sympathized with England, and they had the feeling grew that it required all the efforts of the best statesmen to prevent there being a war between the great republican and Kingdom. Democrats and American war vessels collided, owing to the directorial tone assumed by the French Republic, and it was apprehended that the war of 1812-14 against England was as much through sympathy with France as against the Tyrant Napoleon, as against England. It was during those times the Irish rebellion broke out, and that after its suppression the second Napoleon, the Napoleon, Rufus King, nominee of the Whig Government, was sent to England as minister in Ireland, and, to his disgrace be it said, he took the side of the oppressors against the people. It was the party of the party the enmity of the Irish at home and abroad who are anti-British by nature. In Catholic and Protestant Ireland alike, and flowed across the Atlantic from Ireland, the same party flourished the Know Nothing Bigots, and Republicans, and Know Nothing Catholics hold, and hardly any of all the "church members" have ever the least of fort to do what their poorer Catholic neighbors are doing in the interest of religion. In the country we witnessed a few days ago a concordant uprising of the ministers of as Eastern city against a Catholic priest who wished to have Catholic children in Catholic children.—T. F. Mahar, D. D., in Catholic Universe.

IRELAND.

Our Lady of Knock.

While famine stalked through the naked land, While the people died and the rubbles band of mine despite—and now still worse, While tempest the lady, the soul to curse, Thy people were present to suffer and die, Till the old and aging in the churchyard lay Far under the sod, the young, the gay, For centuries seran our Island Green!

But the darkest hour to the dawn is nigh—The glow of hope in the golden sky, Of faith and love—and the simple trust, Which guards as a treasure the dust, which The Saints and the lives of a saintly race, And angels watch by their resting place, Thou wilt not be forgotten by the Lord, The verdant glades of our Island Green!

Was it the flower of Archangels came? Was it a people in the land to save (Or be the physician) or from the sky Was it the angels like to the land to sky? Was it Elias, the prophet? rent Your sod and land in her behalf, Or Father Patrick, or Brigitian, Or the mystic Bridget, our Island Green?

As the mystic light of the chanting fell, With its tender glow, or the lonely dell, Did the angels hover, or Saints, or Elias, Or the busy haunts of the peasant and gay, For the only science remembered there, Was the simple theatrics of faith and prayer? To the sorrow-stricken with mind recent, "Cause the mind of God is our Island Green!

For the glory of God in the Trinity—Of Parody, Patience and Love we see Which the virtues are of our Island Green, Blood bright in our land, without blight or stain! Cause the "Lamb without spot"—for, the lily's bloom Drew His Heart, by the spell of its sweet perfume! Came Joseph and John and the Virgin Queen, To have and to succour our Island Green!

They came to bless—and they stayed to pray—In the holy sav of Ascension Day! When the winter was dreary and cold, They came—and the incense and myrrh and gold of our grateful Island—and the angel band Shine forth, in the gleaming of starry hee! And the mount, and the valley, and hill and vale, Where Mary smiled in our Island Green!

Oh! glory to God! for the cross we bore! For the bread and the lost ones gone before! For the faith and the martyrs' blood! For the cross of Ireland's Island Green! For the myriad graves upon foreign plains—For the dead in the death of the ocean wave—For our hearts best blood shed in vain to save Our race from a sorrow no land has seen, Like "the Mary of Nations," or our Island Green!

As now—in the anthem of Mary's smile, Hath blessed fed from our own dear isle! Or if sorrows remain—in the "chastening rod," "Balm of our tribe" the shed of God—Or Saints Reina! full well you know The tender love of our hearts for you, For we welcomed the rack with its torments keen, Where we died for your sake, in our Island Green!

And we love the cross, as you brought the crown! Dear Mother of God! in your sweet handedown! Down from high heaven, so bright and fair, To our people sore stricken with want and care—For you have kept the light of your radiant face Would help us to suffer in faith and grace—Till crowned in the light of your love, dear Through eternity's joy shines our Island Green!

MISCELLANEOUS.

DRESSMAKING.

LADIES' WOOLEN SUITS, $7.50 AND UPWARD; Silk suit, $25 and upward, perfect fit guaranteed, Ladies' Kid Gloves, 75 cents. Call at 779 Mission street, near Third. Country orders punctually attended to.

W. H. Richards' EASTERN DENTAL ROOMS (REMOVED TO) 1020 MARKET STREET.

MISCELLANEOUS.

JOHN A. LENNON. Wholesale Grocer, AND IMPORTER OF Japan

Our Wheat Crop.

California farmers have no cause this year to complain of a poverty of wheat. Conservative estimates place the surplus of the crop of 1880 at from 800,000 tons to 1,000,000 tons, and in all probability it will reach the latter figure. In other words, after satisfying home consumption, California will have 1,000,000 tons, more or less, to sell to other countries, which are only too glad to buy it. This surplus wheat is to-day worth about $20,000,000 in round figures, calling the average price for good wheat $1 45 per cental, which is about the market price. But those figures are by no means stationary. They are i. ble to wide fluctuations before the crop of 1881 is harvested. For instance, only a few days ago, the average price of of wheat was $1 30 per cental, which represent'ed $26,000,000, or a slice of $3,000,000 cut off from the revenue of the State. At that time, the condition of the market was barely as satisfactory as could have been wished, but the foreign demand has rapidly increased within the past ten days, and a steady and by no means slow rise in wheat has been going on, and bids fair to continue, but may be checked at any moment. This gradual rise in the price of wheat, which is known only to the farmers and the handful of men in the cities who are interested in the trade, and about which the artisan or mechanic gives himself little or no concern, is, however, of the greatest importance to this latter class. Every additional fraction of a cent per pound paid by Europe to California wheat, distributes just so much more wealth for the farmers, who spend just so much more in the city for the necessaries and luxuries of life.

Twenty-eight millions of dollars is a vast sum to be spread throughout California in a single year for only one article of agricultural produce. It is more than many of our sister Republics in Central and South America have in their national treasuries. The railroads and river boats, ocean steamers and coasting craft, are just now busily engaged in bringing this golden wealth to the various shipping points on the Bay of San Francisco where the ships are waiting to carry it off. In the country, the sheds and storehouses are full of wheat in the fields, even at this late day in the season, thousands and thousands of tons are not yet threshed, for the sun has been so busy that the machines have been inefficient to harvest it all so far. In and about San Francisco, the wharves, storage, grain sheds and warehouses are filled to their utmost capacity with wheat, and the great difficulty is to find places to store the daily receipts. And so the snowball of wealth is rolling on, slowly, but surely, every day, right under the noses of hundreds of thousands of people who work and play all unconscious of the fact that away off, thousands of miles across the sea, Europe is calling for our breadstuffs, and that the California farmer is rejoicing in that greatest of blessings known as "a run in wheat."

The Demand for Wine in France.

According to the latest authorities the phylloxera has completely triumphed over the French vineyards. All remedies have failed, and the present estimate is that in a few years the yield of the French vines will cease altogether, and the country will be dependent upon importation for its entire supply of wine. It is true that when American vines have been planted they have resisted the phylloxera successfully, and proved healthy, but the substitution of American vines is necessarily a work of time, and it must take many years to bring up the new grapes to the standard of the old ones. In the meantime this is the opportunity of America, and especially of California. The value of imported wines in France has risen from $1,000,000 to $54,000,000. Italy, Spain, Algeria and Hungary are our rivals, and none of them can produce good vintages. The California wines are now bought largely for mixing, by European vintners, and a considerable market of this kind exists. There, however, to be pressed for what they are on their merits, and it cannot be doubted that if this is judiciously done the great improvements which have been effected during the last five years in the quality of our wines will secure them a ready sale in the French market. France must go abroad for her wine henceforth, for at least a generation, and perhaps for half a century or more, and California ought to be able to supply the 7 per cent of this demand, and thus establish a permanent and extensive viticultural industry.

Domestic Produce Market.

FLOUR—City Mills Superfine, $3 75@$4 25; Bakers and Family, $5 12½@$5 25; Best Family Floor, Extra, jobbing at $6 12½ ₱ bbl; Oregon Standard extra, $5 75@$5 00; choice, $5 12½; Oregon Superfine, $5 75@$4 12½; Walla Walla Extra, $4 75@$5 00; interior extra, $4 75@$5 00; Interior Superfine, $3 75@$4 12½ ₱ bbl.

WHEAT—Uncertainty characterized to-day's market, owing to the break in the overland telegraph, which prevented the receipt of advices from the Eastern and European markets. Under the circumstances, business naturally dragged, although the following free sales were reported: 40 sacks picked milling, $1 55; 120 sacks do, $1 52½; 100 and 50 sacks, $1 50; 200 sacks do, $1 50; 150 and 25 tons No. 1, $1 47½; 800 tons and 400, 200 and 400 sacks do, $1 45; 1,100 and 200 sacks shipping, $1 40; 150 sks Chinese, $1 30; 475 sks of, $1 30, and 500 sks do, $1 27½. Late yesterday afternoon the following sales were made: 115 tons fair shipping, $1 41½; 1,000 sks do, 1 41½; 1,100 sks do, 1 42½; 60 tons do shipping, $1 42½; 115 tons do, $1 42½; 170 tons do, $1 42½; 35 tons do, $1 42½; 600 tons do, $1 42½, and 300 sks do, $1 42½. No. 1 is quotable at $1 50@1 52½, with $1 55 for choice milling, and No. 2 at $1 47½@1 47½ ctl.

BARLEY—There was very little doing to-day, the only sales being 400 sks east Chevalier at 85c, and 1,000 and 300 sks coast feed, 77½c ₱ ctl. Feed is nominal, 82½@85c; standard Chevalier, $1 17½@1 25; coast do, 85c@$1 00 ₱ ctl.

OATS—Good and choice grades, $1 12½@1 20; common lots, $1 07½@1 10; Surprise, $1 12½@1 25 ₱ ctl. Sales reported to-day were: 200 sks milling, $1 20; 300 sks good feed, $1 15; 700 sks common do, $1 10, and 400 sks do, $1 07½.

CORN—Quiet and nominally firm. Sales of 200 sks small round Yellow at $1 05, and 700 sks large Yellow at $1. White is quotable at 1060 ₱ ctl.

RYE—Market quiet. Sales of 300 sks at 90 ₱ ton.

RYE—Quotable at $1 20@1 22½ per ctl.

BUCKWHEAT—Quotable at $2 10 ₱ ctl.

STRAW—Quotable at 40@50c ₱ ton.

POTATOES—Cattle Cows are quotable at $16@1 05; Tomatoes, 80@90c; River Reds, 60c; Early Rose, 60c; Sweets, 65@75c ₱ ctl.

ONIONS—Quotable at $1 12½ for Silverskins, and 65c ₱ ctl for Red. Red Onions, 50c ₱ ctl.

MILLSTUFF—Ground Barley from the city bills, $19 00 ₱ ton; Rye Flour, 2c; Rye Meal, 2½c; Buckwheat Flour, 3½c; Year Barley, 5c; Graham Flour, 3½c; Oatmeal, 4½c; Cracked Wheat, 5c ₱ lb; Cracked Corn, 3½c; Middlings, from the mills, $18; Wheat Bran, from the mills, $13; Old Cake Meal, $30 ₱ ton—the three latter at the usual discount to the trade.

CHICORY, ETC—Table Meal, 11½@12c ₱ lb; Food Corn, 823 00@$24 ₱ ton; Ground Barley, $24 ₱ ton.

SEEDS—Flax, 2½c; Mustard, yellow, 12½@15c; Mustard, brown, 12½@15c; Canary, 3½@4½c; Alfalfa, 7½@9c; Timothy, 8@9c ₱ lb.

DRIED PEAS—Quotable at $1 25@1 50 ₱ ctl for Black-eye, and $1 00@$1 15 for Green.

BEESWAX—Quotable at 30@32½c ₱ lb.

BEANS—White, $1 90@2 00; Pinks, $2 00; Red, 90@$1 00; Pink, 90@1 00; Limas, $5 50@6 87 00; Pea, $1 25@1 30; Butter, $1 20@$1 25 per ctl.

BUTTER—No change. Fancy dairy, 42½c; choice California roll, 37½c; fair and good do, 32@35c; mixed lots from country stores, 25@30; pickled roll, 30c; firkin, 27½@30 ₱ lb.

CHEESE—California, 19@20c; quotable figures for jobbing lots; Eastern 18@20c; Western, 15@16c ₱ lb.

POULTRY—We quote: Live Turkeys, 15@18c; Gobblers, 12c; young do, $1 75@2 00; Ducks, per doz, $4 50@5 00; Hens, $3 50@5 50; Roosters, young, $4 50@5 50; do old, $4 50@$5 00; Broilers, $3 50@$4 00.

GAME—Venison, Snipe and Quail are lower. Mallards, $3 50@3 50; Teal, $1 75@2 00; Teal, $1 75@2; Widgeon, $1 25@1 50; English Snipe, $2@2 50; common, 75c@$1; Quail, $1; Doves, 75c ₱ dozen; Venison, 5@7c ₱ lb; Hares, $1 75@$2 25; Rabbits, $1@1 25 ₱ doz.

EGGS—The market was unchanged to-day, choice California selling at 35@37½c, although poorer lots go for 30@32½c; Eastern, 30@37½c; Eastern Duck, 20c; Hen, 25c; Turkey, 25@27½c.

HONEY—New comb, 11@13; strained, 7@9 ₱ lb.

NUTS—Green Almonds, 30@40; Almond, soft shell, 16@18c; do hard shell, 8@10; Chile Walnuts, 8@10c; Peanuts, 8@8c; Black-berry Nuts, 8@10; Pecan, 16@17c; Filberts, 15@16c; Brazil Nuts, 14@15c ₱ lb.

DOMESTIC FRUIT—Strawberries came in to-day and sold at $10 00 ₱ chest. Muscat Grapes, 75c@$1 00; Rose of Peru, 60@80c; Sweetwater, 50@75c ₱ box; Apples, $1; Watermelons, $7@$14 ₱ 100; Cantaloupes, 25@50c ₱ crate; Crabapples, 50c ₱ basket; Peaches, $1@$1 25 ₱ box; Plums, 50@65c; Blackberries, 5@6c; Figs, $1 50 ₱ chest; Raspberries, $10@$12 ₱ chest; Pears 40@50c ₱ box; Quinces, 50c ₱ box; Figs, $1@$1 50 ₱ box.

VEGETABLES—We quote: Cabbage ₱ ctl, 75c; Cauliflower, ₱ doz, 40@50c; Corn, Carrots, 40c; Turnips, ₱ ctl, 40c; Beets, 40c; Squash, 15@25c; Beets, ₱ ctl, $1; Marrowfat Squash, $10 ₱ ton; Green Peas, 2@3c ₱ lb; Stringless Beans, 6@7c; Summer Squash, 25@30c; Asparagus, 50c ₱ box; Cucumbers, 12½@25c ₱ box.

HIDES AND PELTS—Heavy salted Steers, over 55 lbs, 10@11½c; medium, cows and steers, 10c; Brite Hides, 30c@—; Salted Kips, 10c; calfskins, 12½c; Dairy Calf Skins, 50@70c each; Dry Hides, usual selection, 19@19c; Dry Kips, 20@22c; Dry Calf, 30 prime Hair Goatskins 25c; fair and medium, 15@17½c; poor do, 15c; Deer Skins, 25@30c per pound; Deer Skins, 30@40c ₱ pound; Wolves, 20@25c; Sheep Skins: Shearlings, 10@15c; short wool, 25@35c; medium wool, 50@75c; long wool, $1@$1 25.

Correspondents.

We take much pleasure in commending our enterprising druggist, H. R. Staver, upon the results of Staver's Famous Yosemite Cologne, Harmless Vermifuge Pain Powder, and California Pine and Eucalyptus Porous Plasters. We call particular attention to the Porous Plaster, which is taking the lead of all others. The Yosemite Cologne has already become a household word, and all the ladies recommend the Pain Powder.

New Advertisements.

T. J. BRODERICK'S
112 Third Street,
Bet. Mission and Minna ... San Francisco.
SOLE AGENT FOR THE UNITED WORKINGMEN'S
Custom-Made Boots & Shoes,
Children's School Shoes a Specialty.
REPAIRING NEATLY and PROMPTLY DONE.

LEAKY ROOFS
Repaired & Guaranteed
FROM THREE TO TEN YEARS,
As Per Agreement.
141 FIFTH STREET.

LADIES!
MME. SOUTINIR
MAKES THE OLD LOOK YOUNG AND BEAUTIFUL by the use of French Enamel and other preparations. Always to be found at 1140 Mission street.

Mrs. Hein's
FLORAL DEPOT,
39 Geary st., near Dupont,
SAN FRANCISCO.
BOUQUETS, BASKETS, ETC.,
Furnished cheaper than at any other place in the city.
Funeral Work a Specialty.
Crosses, Wreaths and all other Funeral Decorations fully arranged at short notice and cheaper than at any other place in the city.

Stylish Dressmaking.
Country Orders Promptly Attended to.
103 O'Farrell st.

W. A SHING
PRICES REDUCED.
La Grande Laundry.
LAUNDRY:
Thirteenth St., bet. Folsom and Howard, S. F
BRANCH OFFICE, 1107 MISSION STREET.
PRINCIPAL OFFICE:
646 MARKET STREET,
Open From 7 a. m. to 10 p. m. (Saturdays, 11 P. M.)

WINES, LIQUORS, etc.

F. & P. J. CASSIN,
IMPORTERS AND WHOLESALE DEALERS
WINES AND LIQUORS,
12 & 14 Co... nia St., cor. Drumm.
AGENTS FOR
Heidsieck & Co., and Dry Monopole Champagne; also, for O. K. Golden Plantation Whisky.

Pacifio Coast Agency
GENUINE
J. H. CUTTER WHISKIES
A. P. ROTALING & CO.,
San Francisco, Cal.
m r21

PHILADELPHIA
BREWERY.
JOHN WIELAND - - PROPRIETOR
SECOND STREET, NEAR FOLSOM,
SAN FRANCISCO.
Amount of Beer sold in 1877, 41,601 barrels.
m726

New Advertisements.

O'Connor & Kearney,
PLUMBERS, GAS AND STEAM FITTERS,
AND IMPORTERS OF PLUMBERS GOODS,
5 TAYLOR STREET,
Near Market ... SAN FRANCISCO
Brass Cocks and Valves, Iron and Lead Pipe, Zinc, Boilers, Basins, Baths, Sanitary Traps and Closets, Cast Iron Pipe and Fittings.

PIANOS
We will now Place as low as $200. We keep only the BEST—nothing old or cheap. We buy for cash, sell at low rates, and save purchasers. Our business is the largest and oldest Music House in the city. We guarantee all we sell. Organs retailed at wholesale prices.
SOLD FOR $10
PER MONTH.
Kohler & Chase.
Post St., near Dupont

Chickering Pianos.
L. K. HAMMER, Agent,
22 Dupont street.

Mrs. Laird's
DRESSMAKING PARLORS
HAVE REMOVED TO
27 ELLIS STREET.
Baldwin Hotel.

MRS. J. S. SHOLES,
DRESS MAKER
CUTTING AND FITTING
S. T. Taylor's System,
1217 Buchanan St. ... Bet. Geary and Post.

FURNITURE
ON THE INSTALMENT PLAN
550 Mission Street.

RAZORS!
For $1,000
I WILL MAKE A BETTER RAZOR AND MORE OF them in the same time than any man IN THE WORLD.
My own make (warranted) ... $2 50
My Genuine Razors warranted not to cut the flesh while shaving ... 1 75
Good English Razors ... 1 00
Best English Razors ... 1 50
Sent C. O. D. or by mail.
M. PRICE,
416 Kearny Street.
Grinding and Repairing.

MRS. T. B. BUTLER,
126 Kearny Street, Room 55.
(Formerly under Palace Hotel.)
Cutting and Fitting a Specialty.
Patterns Cut to Order. Tube Rooser.

FALL STYLES!
ELEGANT MILLINERY
LOVELY HATS AND BONNETS
Direct from Paris, at
MRS. SKIDMORE'S,
1114 MARKET STREET.
Nearly Opposite Grand Opera House.

CULVER'S CANDY STORE,
1014 MARKET STREET.
[Under the "COLONNADE."]
Caramels and Old Fashioned Molasses Candy, a Specialty.

PRIVATE LESSONS.
IN
Elocution and English Branches.
BY A GENTLEMAN WITH HIGHEST TESTIMONIALS, and who has the reputation of being the best elocutionist in the United States. For both sexes and all ages. Letter-writing and copying of all descriptions neatly and accurately done. Apply to or address TEACHER, room 16, second floor, over Kenny & Brother's store, 115 Kearny street.

SOMETHING NEW.
Painting Made Easy, by a Successful Method.
FLOWERS, BIRDS, ETC.
NO PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE OF THE ART REQUIRED; beautiful and profitable; children taught readily, full instruction, $5. 929 Market st. The art acquired in a few lessons.

LESSONS GIVEN
ON
Piano, Organ, Accordeon, Concertina, Violin and Banjo.
PIANOS FOR SALE OR HIRE.
MRS. BENNETT, 105 Fourth st., nr. Howard.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH INSTITUTE.
NEW BUSINESS AND PROFESSIONAL SCHOOL,
CORNER OF
X. MEFRET, Professeur du College Saint-Stanislas, Nantes, et de l'Ecole politique de Paperie, Talloires (Institution diplome pour l'Enseignement, primaire) And TH. GAY, Professeur aux Ecoles Normales (Institutions de France) (Diplome pour l'Enseignement supérieur.)
PRIVATE LESSONS. TERMS MODERATE
N. B.—The Direction of the Boarding is entirely under the charge of Mrs. Mefret.
No. 1338 Mason Street.

C. R. HANSEN & CO.,
EMPLOYMENT OFFICE,
624 CLAY STREET, 624
Rooms 6 and 7. SAN FRANCISCO. Rooms 6 and 7.
The largest establishment on the coast. Families, Hotels, Farms, Mills, and Mines supplied with Male or Female Help,
FREE OF CHARGE
Telephone Connected.
Scandinavian, German, and French spoken by the Proprietors.

DR. A. H. VOORHIES,
OCULIST AND AURIST.
22 Geary Street.

LAND FOR SALE
IN SONOMA COUNTY.
40 acres of well watered land with small house in Sonoma county, for sale Cheap.
APPLY TO
E. REILEY, 296 Howard St., S. F.

MME. BIBER
Has Removed to 132 Geary St.
HAS REDUCED HER PRICES.
Full Silk Suit, $15. Full Woolen SUit, $10

J. L. NUGENT,
723 Montgomery street,
Dealer in
GROCERIES AND COUNTRY PRODUCE,
Receive Eggs and Butter Every Day.
Is in Constant Receipt of Cases of San Diego Extracted and Comb Honey.

MRS. M. E. CERRISH,
WAX FLORIST,
Leader in Wax and Hair Flowers, Feather Work, Pencil Painting and Point Lace Work.
Funeral Wreaths and Bouquets Made to Order.
REDUCTION TO CLASSES.
13 Powell Street. Opposite Baldwin's, S. F

R. B. LEARN,
DENTIST
906 Market Street,
St. James Building, nr. Ellis and Market

BELLS, ETC.
BLYMYER M'F'G CO.
BELLS.
Church, School, Fire Alarm, Factory, Farm and Chime Bells, Warranted of Superior Quality. Catalogues sent free.
LINFORTH, RICE & CO.,
Sole Agents for Pacific Coast, 632 Market St., San Francisco.

MENEELY'S BELLS.
WEST TROY, NEW YORK.
Established in 1826.
CHURCH, ACADEMY, FACTORY AND other Bells, made of copper and tin, warranted satisfactory. For price and catalogue apply to MENEELY & COMPANY,
West Troy, New York.

BUCKEYE BELL FOUNDRY
Manufacture Superior Bells of Pure Copper and Best Tin, for Churches, Academies, etc. Price List and Circulars sent free.
E. W. VANDUZEN & CO.,
Cincinnati, O.

McSHANE BELL FOUNDRY
MANUFACTURE THREE CELEBRATED BELLS, Church, Academy, Factory, etc. Price List and Circulars sent free.
HENRY McSHANE & CO.,
Baltimore, Md.

Church & School Bells.
SIZES AND PRICES.
Diam. of Bell. Weight. Cost of Bell.
Inches. Lbs. Dollars.
No. 1, 10 in 250 lbs $ 75 00
No. 2, 12 in 350 lbs 100 00
No. 3, 36 in 400 lbs 150 00
No. 4, 42 in 700 lbs 250 00
No. 5, 54 in 1,200 lbs 400 00
No. 6, 64 in 2,000 lbs 600 00
No. 7, 72 in 2,800 lbs 800 00
M. C. Bawley & Co., Agents, S. F.

The Original and Genuine
MENEELY & BELL COMPANY
Established 1826. Bells for all purposes. Warranted satisfactory and durable.
MENEELY & CO., WEST TROY, N. Y

$5 to $20 ... Outfit free. Address Stinson & Co. Portland, Maine.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly Outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Maine.

JONAS J. MORRISON,
LUMBER DEALER,
Co ner Mission and Spear Streets, SAN FRANCISCO.
A Choice Assortment of Sugar Pine, Spruce' Cedar, Redwood, Puget Sound and Oregon Lumber Constantly on Hand.
Also Laths, Shingles, Shakes, Etc.

MISCELLANEOUS.
While I Live I'll Crow!
J. O'CONNELL,
House, Sign and Ornamental Painting
761 FOLSOM STREET, NEAR FOURTH,
And 503 FOURTH ST., NEAR BRANNAN ... San Francisco.
WHITEWASHING, TINTING, PAPER-HANGING, GLASSWING, etc. All orders promptly executed. Estimates given on glass and specifications.

GARFIELD vs HANCOCK.
T. C. W. B. S.
IT IS EXPECTED THAT ALL PATRIOTIC CITIZENS will be an opportunity to choose from several good candidates for President in the approaching contest, but in the main at hand.
"THOMAS' COAL WATER BLEACHING SOAP" stands alone, peerless, unrivalled and unapproachable. Its name has become a household word, its virtues have down on the wings of the wind. Its remarkable properties have established a LEGION OF RARE INITATIONS, of which it is the duty of the public to beware that does not bear the imprint of the Brazilian Bear. We are the manufacturers the most extensive assortment of Fancy and Toilet Soaps made in the United. If your grocer or druggist does not keep our goods, order directly from us."
STANDARD SOAP CO.,
204 Sacramento St., S. F.

SPECTACLE WEARERS
Should call and have their eyes tested by the
Johnston & Conrath Patent Eye Tester,
And wear the
Easy Fitting EYE GLASS and Economical Spectacles, for sale by
A. SPAULDING,
Watchmaker and Optician.
122 FOURTH STREET ... San Francisco
Engraving a Specialty.

Woodworth, Schell & Co.,
PIONEER PIANO HOUSE
(Established 1857.)
No. 105 Stockton Street, S. F.
REMOVED FROM NO. 22 POST STREET.

WATCHES CLEANED, $1.
CLASSES, 10 cts.
Established in San Francisco for the last 15 years.
HAMMOND, 6 Sixth st.

DAY AND EVENING CLASSES
—OF—
FRENCH & SPANISH,
$3 50 MONTHLY.
ALSO PRIVATE LESSONS, BY A. BURCHE
Professor in Heald's Business College.
Address: 801 Mason street.

CARD.
To those Suffering from Burns or Scalds.
THE UNDERSIGNED WAS SEVERELY SCALDED; while undergoing from one month to three months, and after several weeks of treatment by several able Doctors without a prospect of cure, I was recommended to Mr. MICHAEL CRONNAN, of 121 Sansome st., S. F., who made a perfect cure. JAMES IRWIN, 416 Natoma street.

BANKING HOUSES.
HIBERNIA SAVINGS
AND LOAN SOCIETY
Office—Northeast corner of Montgomery and Market streets.
OFFICERS.
President ... M. D. SWEEN
Vice-President ... C. D. O'SULLIVAN
DIRECTORS:
H. B. SWEENY, M. J. O'CONNOR
C. D. O'SULLIVAN, J. J. O'BRIEN
JOHN SULLIVAN, D. TOUCHARD
J. TOBIN, J. C. DONAHUE
PETER DONOHOE
Treasurer ... EDWARD MARTIN
Attorney ... RICHARD TOBIN.
Remittances from the country may be sent through Wells, Fargo & Co.'s office, or any other banking house, but the money will always be paid to the person who has deposited the book. A proper pass book will be delivered to the depositor. Deposits received from $1 to $5 and upwards.
Office open from 9 a. m. to 4 p. m.
Jos. A. Donohoe, San Francisco. | Robert Kelly, New York.
DONOHOE, KELLY & CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
EUGENE, KELLY & CO,
NEW YORK.
BANKERS.
EXCHANGE ON
NEW YORK, LONDON, AND HANK IRELAND ... Ireland.
Payable at all the Branches
And in Every Country Town in Ireland.

INSURANCE.
FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE
UNION
INSURANCE COMPANY
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
THE CALIFORNIA LLOYDS,
ESTABLISHED IN 1861.
Nos. 416 and 418 California Street.
CAPITAL ... $700,000 GOLD.
PAID SEAT.
PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF LOSSES,
SOLID SECURITY.
DIRECTORS:
SAN FRANCISCO.
J. Mora Moss, Nicholas Luning,
R. B. Floyd, John Parrott,
Henry Meiggs, James Moffitt,
N. U. Kittle, J. Basse,
M. J. O'Connor, M. D. Sweeny,
J. Berkhahn, Joseph Brusie,
Daniel Meyer, Gustave Touchard,
Adam Grant, U. Decoppet,
Antonio Borel, Geo. U. Hickox,
Charles Kohler, J. H. Saxe,
Joseph Seller, Charles Haun,
Bartlett Doe, W. M. Hoag,
James M. Gaveney, William Scholle,
A. Moreno, John Conly,
J. Mills Hayes, J. G. Eckinger,
J. Mora Moss, A. B. Phipps.
SECRETARY—Edward Calvalier. L. A. Booth.
MARYSVILLE—L. Cunningham.
New York—J. G. Kittle, Benj. Brewster.
GUSTAVE TOUCHARD, President.
N. G. KITTLE, Vice-President.
CHAS. HAVEN, Secretary.
ERIC TIMBERLAKE, Surveyor.

THE MONITOR,
A CATHOLIC FAMILY JOURNAL
DEVOTED TO THE PROPAGATION AND DEFENCE OF CATHOLIC PRINCIPLES.
Published by The Monitor Publishing Co. Office: 622 Clay street, San Francisco, California.
TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:
Single Copies ... 10c
Per Year by Mail ... $4 00
Six months ... 2 50
Three ... 1 50
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces ... 5 00
All subscriptions are payable in advance.
Address all communications, remittances, checks and postal orders to P. J. McGinn, Editorial Manager.
Monitor Office, Box 2033 P. O., San Francisco, Cal.

The Monitor.

For thy Soul be not ashamed to say the Truth ... Strive for Justice for thy God, and even unto Death fight for Justice, and God will overthrow thy enemies for Thee. (Ecclesiastes, iv. 34.)

THE MONITOR
is now in the twenty-fourth year of publication, and is well established reputation as a staunch and reliable Religious Journal, and as a family paper it is a wide circulation and an influence which makes The Monitor a valuable medium for advertisers.
Advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

To Correspondents.
Communications, to secure insertion, should be hand in not later than Tuesday of each week.
No communications will be published unless accompanied by the author's real name. This is required as a private guarantee of good faith.
Communications will be gladly received but if unavailable in the shape they may be sent to this Journal. Correspondents will write as briefly as possible, and should avoid making long delays in the hands of editors. We cannot undertake to return the rejected articles.
All communications, whether on business or otherwise, are to be addressed to the Manager.

VOL. XXIV. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, MARCH 17, 1881. NO. 23.

Poetry.

MICHAEL DAVITT.

What has he done? That feeble, crippled man
The Saxon Empire filments and Lords;
What is his secret and unheard of plan
That such wild terror to the State affords?
Through each free heart is sent the spirit like lightning rung:
Answer it quick; say, answer if you can.

Has he raised up his poor remaining arm
Against the might of England's Isles?
Stiff through the Saxon sound the loud alarm,
Double the guards, proclaim domestic sign.
Is this what he has done—that strikes man?
Answer it quick; say, answer if you can.

Ah, no! but yesterday, in open hall,
You gave the verdict of his innocence,
And testified before the face of all
No act of his had caused the law offence.
Was it not so? Thy recent utterance scan.
Answer it quick; say answer if you can.

No matter; take him off. There is no need
To trouble magistrate with charge of crime.
Is he the man? Ay, he the man indeed!
Take him away; don't waste his worship's time.

Live we 'neath British rule or Austrian?
Answer it quick; say, answer if you can.

Paris and London are by no means cheap;
And that, I think, was the Council's plan?
Answer me quick; say, answer if you can.

What has he done? What, no one to reply?
All mum and meek; whipp'd tenants close in school,
Hast thou no syllable for liberty,
Who once didst pour thy floods o'er Bombs's rule?

Was this the meaning of Mollothian?
Answer me quick; say, answer if you can.

Thou who didst warn us of a civil war
And leave the lords to work their reckless will,
Why wrought obstruction then to Justice—say?
Who needed then so stern "Coercion" bill?
Who drew so short the "measurable" span?
Answer me quick; say, answer if you can.

What has he done? Again I bid thee speak.
Speak though in faltering tones, if speak you dare.
It is a crime to aid the poor and weak
To lay the ulcers of his country bare!
To form a league against Oppression's clan?
Answer me this; say, answer if you can.

To keep a roof above the starving poor,
To shield the dying from the Winter's sharp,
To save one blanket for the benighted boor,
One meal of meat-food from the landlord's grasp;
Is this the path that needs a prison run?
Answer me quick; say, answer if you can.

Go with eyes wide open count your fate,
The free Press prohibiting equitie form
Shall be accuse to a bleeding State,
Know ye not the issue of your fatal course?
Not sealed Tyranny stamp Force begun?
Answer me quick; say, answer if you can.

Is who add field to field, and turn to waste
The smiling homes where once a nation joy'd,
Prime Minister, is thy heart breathing chaste?
You no dread, though every hearth be void.
Know ye the curse of God shall be your fate?
Answer me this; say, answer if you can.

Say—has that Method whom ten people love
Will yet not hate some little of your pride?
Rest ye that this one drop your measure prove,
And the full vengeance flow in Sodom's tide?
Will ye enchain an unfledging man?
Answer me this; say, answer if you can.

MAGNIFICENT RESULTS OF THE MISSION AT ST. IGNATIUS CHURCH.

The Mission under charge of the Jesuit Fathers Maguire and O'Connor, at St. Ignatius Church, has come to a close, and it is gratifying to say that it was such a spiritual success as to gladden the hearts not only of the zealous Missionaries themselves but also of every Catholic who had the happiness of participating in the regenerating influence of the Mission. The Mission opened during the Mission fully twenty thousand persons attended the Mission on Sunday—a fact that is familiar to everybody who arrive at the beneficial results of such religious exercises. Seventeen of the Jesuit Fathers were in attendance with the ordinarily from 5 o'clock in the morning until 11 o'clock at night, and they kept up the unremitting exercises of penitents, many of whom had been detained in their religious duties for years.

Sunday, the last day of the Mission, the church was crowded at all the Masses, and many had to turn back to return home from the late Mass and the vespers in the evening, being unable to get a standing room. At 10:30 o'clock Grand High Mass was celebrated, and after the Gospel the church was packed from the altar-railing to the vestibule. Rev. Father Maguire, assisted by Father Mesmer, the First Deacon; Rev. Father Bouchard, the Second Deacon; Rev. Father Prendergast, as Master of Ceremonies, Mr. Crowley, S. J., as Master of Novices, and Mr. Gallagher, S. J., as Subdeacon, sang the Mass, which was rendered very impressive. The Rev. Father Maguire, his subject being, "The Sacrifice of the Mass." At 2 o'clock in the afternoon about 1,000 children assembled in the church, and after the Catechism had been delivered by Father Maguire they were made the recipients of the Holy Scapular. At 7 o'clock the members of the sodalities united with the Church congregation and sang Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, and renewed the promises they made when they were made seven years ago.

As early as six o'clock Sunday evening, vast crowds of persons could be seen making their way toward the church, and half an hour later Mass street was one mass of people, all bent on the same place. The Hayes Valley cars were crowded to their utmost capacity, and the cars on both sides, for every block was lined with hacks and private carriages. At seven o'clock, every available seat in the vast church, with very numerous exceptions, was taken, and in a few minutes the aisles, stairs, vestibule, and even the sidewalk was filled with people who kneeled. Hundreds who came later were obliged to get near the door, and some were assembled to return to their homes, disappointed. The Rev. Father Maguire preached a most powerful sermon upon the importance of the salvation of souls, and the necessity of the Mission. He exhorted them in the first place to be sincere in their repentance, and to make restitution that formerly led them into sin. Secondly, for instance, should avoid the occasion of the Devil's temptations, and not return to his sin. Thirdly, he exhorted the impure to fly from the dens of iniquity as they would from a venomous serpent. In a word, all should guard against any person, place or thing that might lead them into sin. He explained the Mass very greatly gratified at the fervor displayed by the Catholics of the Mission, and exhorted the laborers of the vineyard to continue in the path of the most arduous character, as they have been, and two sermons a day, and sometimes at night, it requires a very powerful voice to fill the church. Usually Father Maguire has assistants, but the distance to this court prevented him from listening them. In case he will institute a mission in St. Mary's, New York City, where he will have seven assistants. On Monday the Fathers made a brief tour through the Mission Districts, and then left for the Eastern States.

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

Erin go Bragh.

Monster Procession in the City.

SPLENDID DISPLAY OF GREEN AND GOLD.

MAGNIFICENT MUSICAL AND LITERARY EXERCISES.

Full Reports of Orations, Poems and Addresses.

THE DAY IN OAKLAND, PETALUMA AND ELSEWHERE.

Scenes and Incidents of the Occasion—Cheerful Tidings for the Irish People.

A burst of sunshine and the boom of cannon opened the day for the Irish people of Ireland throughout the world. Business had been laid aside, so far as possible, to give the Nationists an opportunity to celebrate, and so from early morning stalwart wearers of the green rosette thronged the streets. At 9 o'clock High Mass was held at St. Patrick's Church, at which were present Grand Marshal of the Day, Andrew J. Donnelly and his Aids, with many friends. This solemn service concluded, arrangements for the parade were immediately begun.

The Procession.

The societies to form the procession began to assemble at the appointed rendezvous early in the morning. At six a. m. the St. Patrick Cadet Battery fired a salute of 21 guns on the New City Hall, cannon lost, and at 9:30 the Grand Marshal and his aids started from the corner of Patrick's Church. Shortly after 11 o'clock the Marshal and his aids, accompanied by the Fire Marshal, Hartman, and the Fire Commissioners, started along Fifth to Market, thence down Market, to Montgomery, to Montgomery avenue, to Market, to Eighth, to Grove, countermarched by the left on Market to Fourth, to Mission, and thence along Fifth to Market, to Third, to Poetry.

[FOR THE MONITOR.]

WHEN ERIN SHALL BE FREE.

Dedicated to the Irish National Land Leaguers of California.

[BY REV. PERSEVER FENN.]

Over Erin's troubled bosom
Bursts the angry waves of wrong,
Prostrate in the dust her banner,
Fled away the bird of song.

You have seen the sullen tyrant
Crush her form with despot heel,
You have seen her stripped and bleeding
For her life—from Albion's steel.

You have drank the cup beside her,
Shared in all her cruel wrongs,
And once more to see her ransomed
Your true hearts impatient long.

By the light of history's torches,
Gleaming long her troubled way,
The world may read Hibernia's story
Of her glory passed away.

Once by Patrick's hands made Christian,
Honor, virtue, woman, women—
Now, by faith, she hopes for freedom,
From oppression's maddening pain.

Yes! thank God! cheer up, proud Erin,
Humbled tho' thou art in dust,
Never conquered! then art rising
Up to live, for "God is just."

Yes, behold the lines of vengeance
Gleaming o'er Britannia's head!
"Tears or treasure," justice hasten,
To place the Green above the Red!

Forever float proud Erin's banner
Over every land and sea;
Let brave Emmet's name be cherished
By her sons who love they be.

Glory to God! through clouds of sorrow,
The Sunburst's new of Liberty;
Fast the glorious day is souring,
When Hibernia shall be free.

Literary Miscellany.

Romance of a Pocket-book.

I was just twenty-five when I first met Alice Thorne, the daughter and heiress of George Thorne, the great banker.

I fell desperately in love with the charming girl, knowing well that such love was utter madness.

Her father was reported to be a very proud, ambitious man, who would look high for a son-in-law; I felt that he would not so much as give a hearing to my suit, and, as to winning her without his consent, that would that bring to her but misery! I had nothing with which to repay or compensate her for the sacrifice of a marriage with my poverty.

So we made good-bye without a word of explanation, though I knew she read the anguish in my heart, and tears were in the soft, eyes raised from me, as I turned, trembling hand she laid in mine, and turned away and bade farewell to her and her hope forever.

Scarcely had I got back to town, and was striving earnestly to drown my regret in the bustle and interest of business when a terrible misfortune fell upon me. Mr. Overton had given me a check for $20,000, desiring me to go to the bank and get it cashed. Having executed the commission and returned, I imagine my horror on discovering that the pocketbook containing the money was gone.

Whether stolen by villains or lost by my own carelessness, what mattered it! It was gone, and I utterly ruined.

Mr. Overton waited the next few hours God only know; and when after being dismissed, I returned to my own room, I was nearly delirious; not only had I lost a lucrative position, but my future appeared to be irretrievably blasted, for there are suspicions which are as fatal to a man morally as would be physically the wound of a rifle ball.

But I was young and of a hopeful nature, and I began to realize that I had been singularly dealt with. On recalling all that had happened after my leaving the bank, and the utter impossibility of the pocket-book being taken from my breast pocket of my coat, I came to the conclusion that I must have dropped it, and thereupon resolved to have recourse to all means in my power to recover this money.

I had saved during the past few years a considerable portion of my salary, and determined to devote it to the purpose I had in view. I advertised liberally in all the prominent journals, not offering the customary reward, but described my unfortunate position, my honor lost, and my future blasted.

For two weeks I kept my loss before the public, and had almost began to despair of any favorable results when, one morning, a stranger came to me—a tall, dark, stern looking man, who regarded me with a pair of kindly brown eyes that had something familiar about them.

The stranger declined the seat I offered him, and began at once speaking brusquely and to the point. "I have heard of your loss," he said. "I have read your advertisement in the papers, and I feel deeply interested in and for you. Tell me just how your loss employed, and after the satisfactory manner in which all my questions were answered, I became your surety for the $20,000."

"What!"

I sprang towards him in the wildest excitement.

"Oh, sir," I began, but he soon stopped me.

"Let me finish, said he. "I've done this because I am convinced that you are an upright, honest man, and the greatest proof of my confidence I can give you is that I am about to offer you the position of cashier in my banking house. My name, sir, is George Thorne."

George Thorne, the father of Alice, the girl I loved! Ah, the mystery was solved; it was of her his eyes had reminded me; it was to her I was indebted for this blessed position.

Fifteen years had flown since I had lost the pocketbook. I had now become a prosperous man, surrounded by all the luxuries which wealth affords. I had found in Mr. Thorne more than a patron; I found a friend. Under a brusque manner he had a heart of gold. From the first day of our acquaintance he had evinced towards me the tirilest interest and affection.

I was soon made partner, and when, on a certain blessed day I became the husband of Alice and his son-in-law, he presented me with a receipt for the $20,000 that he had paid to the Messrs. Overton for my loss.

So time went on. The banking house known as the firm of Thorne & Walleve, was then in a thriving condition.

I had a beautiful wife and two lovely children, and yet, with all these sources of happiness, I was not quite contented; there was a crease in the rose leaf.

For some time past I had been vainly endeavoring to account for the extraordinary interest which my father-in-law had taken in me, because I deserved, as I grew older and saw more of this selfish, egotistical world, that very few such generous actions were performed without a motive, and the solution of this, to me, difficult problem frequently occupied my thoughts.

At first I had attributed it all to Alice's influence, but I knew now that it had been as great a surprise to her as to myself.

About this time Dr. Ponard, one of Mr. Thorne's most intimate friends, arrived in New York, and one morning while sitting at breakfast expressed great surprise at the numerous advertisements in the papers relating to money loss and found.

"Well" said he, "I have not the least sympathy for those who lose money. They are generally careless, stupid people, not fit to be trusted: although I remember having heard of a young man who lost a pocketbook some years ago containing $20,000, and I declare when I read his piteous appeals, which were in all the papers, my heart fairly ached for him. But," continued he, addressing my father-in-law, who had become very pale, "you ought to remember the circumstances, for it occurred just at the time of the great failure in Philadelphia by which you were so heavy a loser."

"Yes, I recollect the affair," replied Mr. Thorne, who appeared to be suffering.

"I never heard," continued the doctor, "what became of the poor devil, and yet I should like to know."

"Should you!" said I, laughing, "then let me gratify your curiosity. I, Arthur Walleve, am that poor devil, doctor; saved from ruin and despair by my benefactor here—my father-in-law, who had related all the events of the last fifteen years.

The doctor sprang to his feet and grasped his old friend's hand.

"Well and generously done!" said he, but Mr. Thorbe interrupted him.

"I am not well," he said faintly. "I suffer greatly—let me go to my room."

The next day he sent for me to his private. I found him looking pale and haggard.

"Sit down, my dear Arthur," said he, in a low voice, "and listen to me. For a long time I have had a confession to make to you, one that weighs on me so heavily that I must ease my conscience of its load.

"I am not well," he said faintly, "I suffer greatly—let me go to my room."

The next day he sent for me to his private. I found him looking pale and haggard.

"Sit down, my dear Arthur," said he, in a low voice, "and listen to me. For a long time I have had a confession to make to you, one that weighs on me so heavily that I must ease my conscience of its load.

I can better bear to do so now, that I have in a measure made some amends for the trouble I once caused you."

"The trouble you once caused me!" cried I. "You have been the most generous of men to me. It is through your kindness I occupy my present position; it is to you I owe my happiness, and more than all my honor."

Mr. Thorne opened his desk and took from it a pocketbook.

"Do you remember this?" said he, as he placed it in my hand.

"Yes," replied I, "it is the one I lost; but how—"

I could not finish my question. The truth stared me in the face. I sprang to my feet in dismay.

"Great Heavens!" I cried, "you found the money."

"Aye! and kept it," he groaned, with anguish in his voice. "But, oh! do not condemn without hearing me. Yesterday you heard Dr. Ponard allude to the great losses I had sustained by the failure in Philadelphia! I did not dare to make my embarrassments known, as that would have hastened my ruin—my ruin! I had hoped to be able to make good that I cared, but for Alice, my darling child. It was on the 14th of December that you lost the money. Oh! I shall never forget the date. It was on that day that I meditated suicide. I was short $20,000 to meet my liabilities, then maturing on the 15th. I was overwhelmed with despair, the air of the office seemed to stifle me and I rushed into the street. I had hardly gone ten yards when my foot struck something. It was your pocketbook. I opened it and the sight turned me giddy and faint. Their commenced within my breast one of those moral struggles, which, even to conquer, is fearful, but in which, alas! I was miserably vanquished. The next day I satisfied all claims upon me. To the world I was George Thorne, an honest, upright man; to myself I was nothing better than a malefactor. You know the rest. Through my guilt you passed two weeks of indescribable anguish. I have since endeavored to make reparation for this money I caused: but I also suffered. Moral atonements are the most hard, because they are self-inflicted, and bear known and yet feel the bitterness of expiation. Say, my son, can you forgive my crime?"

Could I forgive! I looked at the pallid face, anguished eyes. What were my feelings of those two terrible weeks compared to the secret pain and shame this man had borne for years!—this man, the victim of one solitary deviation from rectitude, so upright in all else, and whose life since had been one long atonement. I grasped his hand, tears filled my eyes.

"Father," I cried, "Alice's father and mine, all is forgiven, forgotten. Do I not owe all the happiness of my life to that same lost pocketbook?"

Secrets of a Marriage.

The bridegroom of a Washington wedding was a Baptist and the bride a Methodist. They had agreed that immediately after the ceremony they would decide by chance which should embrace the other's religion. The officiating clergyman declined to toss up a cent, partly because he would not countenance such a proceeding, and partly because, being a Methodist, he might be accused of fraud if the bride won. The bride herself finally threw the coin and lost. When she went to the Baptists, however, they rejected her because she did not believe in close communion, and he went over with her to the Methodists.

—COUNT EYAN, of England, a millionaire 50,000 to his son, Father Eyre, a Jesuit. To another son, the Catholic Archbishop of Glasgow, he bequeathed £100,000. There pleased the bridegroom, and he went over with her to the Methodists.

—COUNT EYAN, of England, a millionaire £50,000 to his son, Father Eyre, a Jesuit. To another son, the Catholic Archbishop of Glasgow, he bequeathed £100,000. There is one son, married to the daughter of the Countess of Wicklow, who also receives £50,000. Count Eyre was made a Count by the Pope in the days of the temporal power.

THE LOST CHILD.

Scarcely had the flowers faded over the grave of little Dermot O'Connor, by the Mass Rock, when a more bitter and lasting grief than that of his early death crushed the heart of his good young mother, Kathleen O'Connor, of the Big House. At this time in Ireland's history not only was there a price set on the head of every priest and every Catholic teacher, but an infamous system of kidnapping Catholic children and shipping them off to Barbadoes and the Tobacco Islands, as white slaves, was carried on, contrary to all laws, human and divine: to this infamous and unjust system Eily, the eldest daughter of Mrs. O'Connor, fell a victim, and by it the heart of the already afflicted mother was crushed. About a month after the death of Dermot, on a lovely day in September, Mrs. O'Connor took her three little ones who now remained—Charles, Eily and Mary—to give them a holiday by the seashore at Old Head, it was the first time they were out since the death of their dear brother; there appeared to be no danger to fear; all knew and respected Mrs. O'Connor of the Big House, and they loved her dear little children. They knew that at the risk of her property and her life she was harboring in her house their persecuted sirvent, and they were ready, therefore, to die in her defense. Thoughtless of danger, the good mother sat on the seashore listening to the "voice of the Great Creator" in every wave that broke at her feet, while her children gathered shells upon the shore, or flowers in the neighboring field. Eily, the elder of the two little girls, strayed away out of sight and hearing of the children, just round a point of land that concealed that part of the shore where they were sitting counting their shells. As soon as they had counted them, they looked round for their little sister, but she was not there. "Eily! Eily" exclaimed the frightened children together, but no answer was heard; then they ran to their frightened mother, now aroused from her reverie by their cries, and a most heart-rending scene took place. The afflicted mother, clasping in her arms the younger child, Mary, and taking the other by the hand, ran distractedly along the shore, round the point where the child was last seen, while every rock and every crevice re-echoed her piercing cry, "Eily! Eily! Eily!" Several persons who had heard the cry did not know for a long time whence it came; for Old Head, though a lovely, is a lonely shore, scarcely ever marked but by the print of the barefooted Mayo fishermen. The waves were already closing in on Mrs. O'Connor and her two little children, when her pitiful cries brought some neighboring peasants to her assistance. Five minutes more and all would have been lost; already the wild waves which but half an hour ago were breaking so gently at their feet, now, in their madness, were now dashing, unmeasured fury against the rock on which the trembling mother, with her screaming children were standing; three sturdy peasants in their bare feet scambled down the steep cliff; two of them carried off the children in safety, while the third assisted the mother to reach another rock, and thence by degrees to the top of the cliff. Less than an hour they were all safe together again; but where was Eily! The kind-hearted people with tears in their eyes and sympathy in their hearts, gathered round their benefactress to hear the story of her lost child. Strong men sobbed and cried, and mingled their tears with those of the afflicted mother, for on the face of the broad earth there are no more grateful or generous hearts than those of the Irish peasant when treated with justice and kindness, and Mrs. O'Connor had always been kind to them. Several conjectures were made as to what had happened the missing child; some thought that she had been overtaken by a wave and borne out to sea; others said they had seen suspicious-looking strangers in the neighborhood for the last few days, and that several children were missing; while a dark, suspicious-looking vessel was seen anchored out in the bay. The poor persecuted people were afraid to inquire further; they were living as it were, by stealth, and practicing their religion at the risk of their lives. Every search had been made, and given up as useless, they conducted the sorrowing mother and her trembling children to their desolate home. Dark clouds than hung over Creagh Patrick, but darker still the shroud of sorrow that shrouded the heart of every individual at the Big House when the sad tidings reached it that Eily, the joy and brightness of that home, was lost. There was one heart more than all others, after that of her poor mother, which felt the loss of the dear little angel child, and that was the kind paternal heart of the holy priest, Father Mulligan, who was stopping with them. He remained up all night, praying for strength and consolation, and the breaking heart of her who, more than all others, felt the loss of her beloved child, now was his prayer in vain; just as the clock struck twelve, she who was kneeling in silent sorrow before the altar of the domestic chapel, bathed in tears, a sweet voice whispered in her ear: "Mother, weep no more—Eily is safe." O God, what a flood of joy entered that young mother's heart, as, looking round, she saw, surrounded by the light of glory, her own loved 'Dermot! With the instinct of maternal love, she rushed to embrace him, but the beautiful soul withdrew from her embrace, and, smiling said: "Mother, I'm sent to console you, and tell you that Eily is safe; taken by the enemies of our country and our religion, she is now with other Irish children on her way to the dark vessel in the distance; there they will be sold as slaves, and borne to a foreign land, but God will protect Eily; repinings would be useless, and fretting injurious, you will see her again on earth, and you will meet her in heaven." As he said these words a flood of light filled the little chapel, and a flood of joy the heart of Kathleen O'Connor. According to the measure of her sorrow, joy now entered her soul; her joy was increased immeasurably when she heard the parting voice of her beloved child, now joined by a choir of angels, singing the consoling anthem:

"Mother, I do not forget you:
Seated on my heavenly throne
My fondest thoughts are ever with you,—
Never feel yourself alone.

"When your heart feels sad and lonely,
Raise that heart to heaven and me,
Think what glory there awaits you
In the bright eternity.

"Then when mother, when your present
Slips and sorrows pass away
Think O think, what joys await you
On that happy festive day.

"When with angels I shall meet you
Filled with gratitude and love,
For the glory we're procured me
In this sagad world above.

"Then, forever, dearest mother,
In this bright and happy land,
You shall see God's ways and wisdom,
Now so hard to understand.

"Wisdom which, through present trials,
Leads you safe to future bliss,
A future here procured by glory,
Purchased by your pains in this.

A Good Wife.

An English Jesuit, the Rev. Father Christie, recently preached on the subject, "A Good Wife," and his words were so fine and generous, and so original that we commend them to the attention of our readers. We learn from the London Universe that he said:

If we study the ways of God we will see how graciously He treats us His poor children, and from His treatment of us we may learn how to behave to those whom Providence has placed under our charge. The last four petitions of the "Lord's Prayer," while they teach us what we stand in need of from Almighty God, also bring home to us our duty to those dependent on us. Thus the petition, "Give us this day our daily bread," while it causes us to realize that we are depending on Almighty God for our daily sustenance, also brings home to such as are fathers of families the lesson that it is their duty to provide for their offspring, and that if they neglect that duty they incur a terrible responsibility in the sight of Almighty God.

The father is the one on whom devolves the duty of providing for the family. He is the bread-winner on whom rests the obligation of providing the other members of his household with their daily sustenance, the sweat of his brow and the labor of his hands, if need be; by intellectual work, if circumstances be his calling; or else by the fruits of patrimony inherited from his forefathers, he is bound to maintain the children whom God has given him. Yet how many are there who neglect this duty as completely as though they were entirely ignorant of its existence! How many fathers are there who can in no sense be regarded as bread-winners of their families! The poor man ruins his family by drunkenness—the rich man squanders his wealth in gaming, and, alas! it may be in drunkenness, too! Woe be to those over whom this terrible vice has gained a mastery! Few of us know the extent of its ravages. Even since our infancy, how many of our circle have disappeared! Let out a great deal too much of the truth Ireland. Facts were too much for Irish landlords, though it must be admitted they did their best to hide them. The Land League followed up the advantage—light was let in where darkness had reigned supreme. Irish landlords began to fear, that, after all, they would be obliged to keep the law, and that law would be made, perhaps, which would do some little justice to their miserable tenant slaves, there was only one way to meet the danger. It was to lie and to lie boldly. If they could only persuade the English public that the Irish were in a state of rebellion, that they would rise up and murder every one, that it was no use to pass new laws for their benefit, for nothing would content them—then they had a chance to keep up the old system. So a grand systematic course of lying was arranged and carried out, while the English people, thoroughly befooled, were got to imagine that the whole of Ireland would be in rebellion, and the half of England blown into space if Parliament did not at once pass Coercion Act.

You will observe

THE CHARMING CONSISTENCY

Of the whole proceeding, and you will, no doubt, do justice to that high moral tone which England always takes when she is delivering lectures on the general, moral character of the Irish people.

The English people admit a grievous wrong done to Ireland. But we look in vain for the high honor, nay, even for the common sense, that would lead them to say, we have done wrong, pardon us; we will at once proceed to do you every justice, generously proceed to lavish upon you the wealth of our anxiety to repair the past, hasten to do even more than justice would strictly demand.

But it must be admitted, in justice to England, that she always consistent in her form of government. If the subject were not so grave and did not involve the well-being of millions, it would be amusing to read the candid admissions of indignation so often made, and the threats uttered against those who dare to ask redress in India, and in South Africa.

AS WELL AS IN IRELAND.

The Times sneeps over the Transvaal. "No secrecy," it says, "however serious, suffered by our army will weaken the resolution of the English people to enforce obedience to the Queen's authority in the Transvaal."

The Daily Telegraph and Standard both admit that grave injustice has been done by the English Government in South Africa, but declare that before "any remedial measures are discussed the rebellion must be put down." English people fancy that this is standing on their dignity; others may call it pig-headed obstinacy—or actual cowardice, but, be that as you may, you must bow the child well before you will undo the wrong you have done. God is just, if man is not; and there can be only one way seen in this world, if we would avert national injustice, England has her hands full of "calamities" just now, brought on by her own unjust government. The national history of England is one succession of failures, of concessions granted, not from justice, but from fear. Canada would not have obtained self-government in 1837 if England had not remembered how it lost the United States. Australia would long since have of England's bondage. Ireland is shackle her freedom. While British rule lasted, slavery, discontent and Moonlighting were the order of the day. Irish Parliaments were united to Greece, there was peace, Afghanistan and Jamaica are proof positive of the fearful misery caused by this wooden-headed, or, it would be more correct to say inhuman system of government. The cause of England's prosperity is setting fast in the lurid clouds of the blood and misery of her dependencies, but so long as she prefers Coercion Acts to justice, and admits with one breath that she has wrought ruin in her dependencies, and with the next inflicts more wrongs, what hope is there for her? Ireland is to be just, forever, a sore to our eyes. It is possible that it may not be England's injustice that caused so much misery. The Irish people are so incurably impulsive, so fond of fighting, so ready to die in defense of their country, that they are always in a state of rebellion against the laws, and, of course, a number of landlords, came before the Commissioners and said what they had to say. It was simply the old story over again. I have just published a work called the "Chase of Ireland stated," and, as it is now being republished in New York by Mr. Kennedy, I will refer the reader to it for particulars of this remarkable Commission and for a good many other things; and I would earnestly ask every reader of this letter to order a copy of the work, and to get their American friends to read it; you have facts which cannot be contradicted, facts which the English Government and people do not deny.

SECURED THE INDEPENDENCE

AND CANNOT DENY.

But there is one fact to which I wish to call your special attention in this letter because it bears on the subject of coercion. The only excuse the English Government has for passing this Coercion Act is that we have been law breakers. Will it be believed that it was proved before this Commission, and obliged to be admitted by the English gentlemen and noblemen composing it, that the English themselves were the real law breakers in Ireland!

Such is the fact. In the year 1870 Mr. Gladstone got a Land Act passed for the purpose of doing some trifling justice to Irish tenants. Will it be believed in America, will it be believed by the civilized world, that the Earl of Cork, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Duke of Leinster, and all in fact, all the English-Irish landlords required their unhappy tenants to sign agreements or leases by which they bound themselves not to avail themselves of the benefit of this Act. These very gentlemen, I suppose I must

CALL THEM GENTLEMEN,

Who voted for the passing of this Act in England, must have laughed to themselves when they thought how very easily they could evade it in Ireland. And yet we are never done hearing of Irish duplicity, of the high honor of the English people! Such a fine piece of legal chicanery I do not think the world has ever seen. What was the poor tenant-farmer to do? He had no resources only—submission to any mandate from his landlord, or the workhouse. Can by wonder that he chose the former alternative!

The Land League gave Ireland such courage as it has never yet had. Men began to dare to call their souls their own, and to lay claim to the honest rights of honest labor. We all woke up with a shout for justice, and the terrified men who had thought their victims secure for centuries, uttered a wild howl for Coercion. They could not deny the truth; there was only one resource now—to gag the mouths of the men who dared to tell it.

But England has reckoned without a new power. She reckoned without the Hierarchy of the Irish Catholic Church. The bishops of Ireland and the President of St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, ran the risk of pecuniary loss by

DENOUNCING THE INIQUITOUS CLAUSE

In the Duke of Leinster's leases, by which the most noble Duke has compelled them, as well as his other tenants, to deprive themselves of the benefit of English law. A fine example certainly to the Irish people—a fine specimen of that morality which is being preached to us so repeatedly. English laws are to be broken by English-Irish landlords, broken or observed as they please, but when the law gives even the most trifling protection to the Irish tenant, he is to be deprived of it. And yet there are English people who wonder that we are so ungrateful to England.

When Lord Coles' agent was charged with this law-breaking, for the benefit of the lord to the loss of the slave, I was about to say, he pleaded that he was ignorant of the law. He was a Protestant and an Orangeman, and, of course, he could not know there was such a clause in the leases. Did not know! And was it not his business to know, and does any one suppose for one moment that if the clause had been the other way that he would not have known!

The Nun of Kenmare

— ON THE —

IRISH QUESTION.

SECOND LETTER.

Coercion, Who is Coerced, and Why?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE MONITOR.

DEAR SIR:—In my last letter I said that I would bring the witnesses for the defence from the ranks of our accusers. I gave extracts from a Commission held last year by English gentlemen, and showed from their own words that they fully admit all that we claim. But this has not been the only Commission. There has been besides this a Land Commission, the object of which was to ascertain what every one knew perfectly well. There was an impression amongst our people, at first, that the Land League would rather the farmers did not give evidence before this Commission. And the English people were very angry. It was intolerable after they had taken all this trouble, and actually condescended to ask what we wanted, that we would not come humbly on our bended knees and tell them. But this solemn farce of holding commissions of inquiry has been professed so often. On this earth there never has been, and there never will be, such a trusting, patient people as the Irish race. However, a good many were anxious to leave the English Government no excuse, and so many prisons and tortures, and, of course, a number of landlords, came before the Commissioners and said what they had to say. It was simply the old story over again. I have just published a work called the "Chase of Ireland stated," and, as it is now being republished in New York by Mr. Kennedy, I will refer the reader to it for particulars of this remarkable Commission and for a good many other things; and I would earnestly ask every reader of this letter to order a copy of the work, and to get their American friends to read it; you have facts which cannot be contradicted, facts which the English Government and people do not deny.

AND CANNOT DENY.

But there is one fact to which I wish to call your special attention in this letter because it bears on the subject of coercion. The only excuse the English Government has for passing this Coercion Act is that we have been law breakers. Will it be believed that it was proved before this Commission, and obliged to be admitted by the English gentlemen and noblemen composing it, that the English themselves were the real law breakers in Ireland!

Such is the fact. In the year 1870 Mr. Gladstone got a Land Act passed for the purpose of doing some trifling justice to Irish tenants. Will it be believed in America, will it be believed by the civilized world, that the Earl of Cork, the Marquis of Lansdowne, the Duke of Leinster, and all in fact, all the English-Irish landlords required their unhappy tenants to sign agreements or leases by which they bound themselves not to avail themselves of the benefit of this Act. These very gentlemen, I suppose I must

CALL THEM GENTLEMEN,

Who voted for the passing of this Act in England, must have laughed to themselves when they thought how very easily they could evade it in Ireland. And yet we are never done hearing of Irish duplicity, of the high honor of the English people! Such a fine piece of legal chicanery I do not think the world has ever seen. What was the poor tenant-farmer to do? He had no resources only—submission to any mandate from his landlord, or the workhouse. Can by wonder that he chose the former alternative!

The Land League gave Ireland such courage as it has never yet had. Men began to dare to call their souls their own, and to lay claim to the honest rights of honest labor. We all woke up with a shout for justice, and the terrified men who had thought their victims secure for centuries, uttered a wild howl for Coercion. They could not deny the truth; there was only one resource now—to gag the mouths of the men who dared to tell it.

But England has reckoned without a new power. She reckoned without the Hierarchy of the Irish Catholic Church. The bishops of Ireland and the President of St. Patrick's College, Maynooth, ran the risk of pecuniary loss by

DENOUNCING THE INIQUITOUS CLAUSE

In the Duke of Leinster's leases, by which the most noble Duke has compelled them, as well as his other tenants, to deprive themselves of the benefit of English law. A fine example certainly to the Irish people—a fine specimen of that morality which is being preached to us so repeatedly. English laws are to be broken by English-Irish landlords, broken or observed as they please, but when the law gives even the most trifling protection to the Irish tenant, he is to be deprived of it. And yet there are English people who wonder that we are so ungrateful to England.

When Lord Coles' agent was charged with this law-breaking, for the benefit of the lord to the loss of the slave, I was about to say, he pleaded that he was ignorant of the law. He was a Protestant and an Orangeman, and, of course, he could not know there was such a clause in the leases. Did not know! And was it not his business to know, and does any one suppose for one moment that if the clause had been the other way that he would not have known!

LATEST NEWS

—FROM—

IRELAND

WHOLESALE ARRESTS UNDER THE COERCION ACT.

All Ireland in a Blaze of Excitement.

OLD PIKES UNEARTHED BY THE PEELERS.

PARNELL'S PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

England Endeavoring to Precipitate Rebellion in Ireland.

Arrests of Prominent Irishmen, Etc., Etc.

Caught by the Coercion Act.

DUBLIN, March 10.—The Coercion net is hauling in its victims from the south and west at a rate which must be highly satisfactory to Dublin Castle. The most notable arrest is that of the celebrated Sarah Nally, one of the defendants in the State trials, who was taken in his father's house in Bella. Nally recently went to London, intending to go to the Arctic seas in search of the Boers, but he changed his mind and is now assured comfortable quarters for eighteen months. Those who reached Dublin by the 7 o'clock were Martin O'Hallaran, President and Joseph Balson of Belmullet, County Ballinamorris, charged with inciting a mob to attack a police hut; Patrick Kearney, farmer, Thurlough more; Patrick Facey, President of Annaghdown League, County Galway, and four other prisoners came in from County Leitrim, all charged with taking part in a riotous assembly. They are Charles Nelson, farmer, Drumshine; Matthew Malley, Drumkirian; Patrick McManus, Drumshambro; J. McMarrow, national schoolmaster from Down. Michael Ginley and Michael Flynn were brought from Ennis, County Clare, Edward Hussey from Castle Island, P. D. Kenny from Ballymacken, Kerry, and another from Doola, County Limerick. In addition to these two arrests are reported from Castle, County Clare. There are also three more arrests in the County of Limerick.

STILL MORE VICTIMS.

Nally reached Dublin last night by the 10 o'clock train from the west. The platform was crowded when he was being put into the cab. He shouted, "for every man arrested let one be laid prostrate!" At jail he cried out, "An eye for an eye! A tooth for a tooth!" Both exclamations were loudly cheered. The latest arrests reported are three at Claremorris, namely J. P. Quinn, J. Gordon and D. A. Hern, all members of the Local League Branch.

There are four more political prisoners in the Kilmainham jail.

Boynton has telegraphed to Minister Lowell, who has asked the authorities for particulars of the arrest, charging, etc.

RENEWAL OF DESTITUTION.

NEW YORK, March 10.—Parnell has promised to attend the great tenant-rights demonstration in Madison Square Garden. The Ulster Land League is making great preparations for the meeting. Preparations are being made at armories and magazines. The volunteers are gradually relaxing, and rifle-shooting is beginning. Twenty warrants for arrest in the County Westmeath were issued yesterday.

ENDING THE SMALL PAY.

New York Herald cabled says: Mr. Forster's drag-net is still at work, and it is expected that fully 10 prisoners will be in Kilmainham by Saturday night. None of the prominent men have been seized, and the friends of the Government are letting them escape, and bagging only the least branch members, in a merely criminal way. Mr. Forster and his colleagues claim, the peace of the country demands the suppression of the League agitation, yet they do not arrest the leaders of the movement first, and then look after their followers! This question is being asked by everybody on this side of the Irish channel, but no satisfactory answer as yet has been put forward, either in Parliament or in the Liberal press.

SEIZURE OF RUSTY PIKES.

To-day the cohabitantly at Kanturk, County Cork, unearthed 100 old pikes, hidden under an archway close by the hospital. They were of what is known as the "croppy" pattern—somewhat old fashioned manufacture—and had probably lain there for half a century. However, the police made the most of the discovery, and sent the rusty implements to Bridewell, whence they were forwarded to Cork.

SEARCHING FOR SPIDER RIFLES.

The people in Connaught and Munster have more formidable weapons than pikes, large quantities of Sniders, old Enfields having been sold in those provinces during the past year, besides pistols and revolvers. They are hidden in bogs and mountain sides. The police have been scouring the Ballinrobe, Ballis and the Claremorris districts, in Mayo for arms, it having been reported that a consignment, landed by a sailing vessel on Achill island, had been distributed there, but their search has been in vain, and even when the Arms bill becomes a law, and they are empowered to search domicile, it is doubtful if they will have any better luck. In fact, the Arms bill has been discounted and the weapons have been hidden. It is alleged that the House Rule League in Birmingham has been buying rifles there and shipping them to Kilmallock, Timoleague, Bantry and other seaport towns in County Cork for a year past.

BOYTON AS AMERICAN CITIZEN.

LONDON, March 10.—The American Consul has had an interview with Boyton and forwarded the particulars regarding his citizenship to Minister Lowell, with a strong letter written by Boyton claiming the intervention of the American Government. Lowell has made no representation.

A BOYCOTTED PARSON.

A relief party, consisting of seventeen Orange laborers engaged by the Emergency Committee, left for Galway en route for Ballinskill, Connemara, to assist a Protestant rector, Canon Fleming, who was recently fired at and for a long time boycotted on account of sectarian animosity. Each laborer was armed with a rifle and revolver. They will be conveyed from Galway round the coast by the frigate Valorous.

A LIBERAL LAND BILL EXPECTED.

LONDON, March 11.—A few more arrests were made to-day in Ireland, but the excitement has subsided and the proclaimed districts are unusually quiet. The mass meetings to be held on Sunday will be largely attended, but the speakers have been advised by the Executive Council of the League to moderation, and there will be no fiery scenes as marked the meetings a year ago. The prisoners in Kilmainham have made up their minds to at least eighteen months' imprisonment, but it is highly probable that they will be released before the end of the year, if the quietness which now prevails continues. Much depends on the nature of the provisions of the new Land bill. If the three F's are recognised, even to a limited extent, the country will gladly accept it, and the Land League agitation will be killed. It is said by those who are in a position to know, that Mr. Gladstone has gone further in dealing with this question than the Radicals expected, and that there may be some difficulty in conciliating the Whig landlords.

APPEARANCE OF ARRESTED AGITATORS.

NEW YORK, March 13.—Altogether about sixty warrants have been made out for the arrest of prominent men in the proclaimed districts, and what is the net result. Kilmainham jail is a scene of jovial living and congenial social intercourse. It holds tonight only twenty-six of Forster's prisoners. As the party arrived at various railway stations I had an opportunity of seeing and conversing with several of the prisoners. A great majority hold office in some capacity or other in the local Land League branches. They belong entirely to the farming classes. Without exception, they are men of inoffensive appearance, quite unlike a class who would commit murder in the midnight outrages. Many appear to be men of little pretence to education, whose existence has been a constant struggle with hard unfeeling stations.

Matthew Kelly was quite unable to understand the charge on which he was arrested. He declared, in confidence, that he had not so much as known the Land League existed, and that, as they had nothing against him, they must liberate him in a few days. He was scarcely clad, and apparently never fared sumptuously on the good things of this life.

Patrick McDonagh, a young school-teacher, seemed to feel his position keenly. He declared that he had never willingly offended the law. How a lad of eighteen winters could be so dangerous as to come within the scope of the severe Coercion Act, he fails to see.

Patrick Kearney, Joseph Fury and Daniel Keenan belong to the same district. The last named had, perhaps, the most wrathful appearance. All the prisoners were handcuffed and conveyed in cabs. They had a frightened, puzzled look at the files of police and spectators that filled the Kingsbridge station. Evidences of government and pity were expressed.

NORTHCOTE AND BRADLAUGH.

LONDON, March 13.—Stafford Northcote, in a letter to his constituents, in regard to the urgency for a Committee of Safety, points out that Bradlaugh's conduct in threatens to subvert the rights and liberties of the House of Commons in regard to contempt of court.

Bradlaugh has resigned his seat in Parliament, in order to test the Speaker's power.

PROCEEDINGS IN PARLIAMENT.

LONDON, March 15.—In the House of Commons, yesterday, when a division was called for on Sexton's motion for a grant of Supply bill, more than fifty members quitted the House, including the majority of the Irish members. Some Home Rulers abstained from voting, and those who voted were divided. After some hesitation the Supply, on vote for £9,600 for criminal prosecutions in Ireland, Parnell moved a reduction of £100 in the salary of Twoney, for warrants for arrest in the County Westmeath were issued yesterday.

ENDING THE SMALL PAY.

New York Herald cabled says: Mr. Forster's drag-net is still at work, and it is expected that fully 10 prisoners will be in Kilmainham by Saturday night. None of the prominent men have been seized, and the friends of the Government are letting them escape, and bagging only the least branch members, in a merely criminal way. Mr. Forster and his colleagues claim, the peace of the country demands the suppression of the League agitation, yet they do not arrest the leaders of the movement first, and then look after their followers! This question is being asked by everybody on this side of the Irish channel, but no satisfactory answer as yet has been put forward, either in Parliament or in the Liberal press.

SEIZURE OF RUSTY PIKES.

To-day the cohabitantly at Kanturk, County Cork, unearthed 100 old pikes, hidden under an archway close by the hospital. They were of what is known as the "croppy" pattern—somewhat old fashioned manufacture—and had probably lain there for half a century. However, the police made the most of the discovery, and sent the rusty implements to Bridewell, whence they were forwarded to Cork.

SEARCHING FOR SPIDER RIFLES.

The people in Connaught and Munster have more formidable weapons than pikes, large quantities of Sniders, old Enfields having been sold in those provinces during the past year, besides pistols and revolvers. They are hidden in bogs and mountain sides. The police have been scouring the Ballinrobe, Ballis and the Claremorris districts, in Mayo for arms, it having been reported that a consignment, landed by a sailing vessel on Achill island, had been distributed there, but their search has been in vain, and even when the Arms bill becomes a law, and they are empowered to search domicile, it is doubtful if they will have any better luck. In fact, the Arms bill has been discounted and the weapons have been hidden. It is alleged that the House Rule League in Birmingham has been buying rifles there and shipping them to Kilmallock, Timoleague, Bantry and other seaport towns in County Cork for a year past.

BOYTON AS AMERICAN CITIZEN.

LONDON, March 10.—The American Consul has had an interview with Boyton and forwarded the particulars regarding his citizenship to Minister Lowell, with a strong letter written by Boyton claiming the intervention of the American Government. Lowell has made no representation.

A BOYCOTTED PARSON.

A relief party, consisting of seventeen Orange laborers engaged by the Emergency Committee, left for Galway en route for Ballinskill, Connemara, to assist a Protestant rector, Canon Fleming, who was recently fired at and for a long time boycotted on account of sectarian animosity. Each la-

TOPIC

—The rep
Vatican is, in endowed with pending quest in Ireland; an will have been every survey
Malandof, who will be thanks
net of St. Pete

—The follo conditions of peace dictated to Peru by the victorious Chilians: "Peru must cede Tarapaca to Chili; the surrender of the allied fleet and the payment of an indemnity of $20,000,000 whereof Peru shall assume $20,000,000 and Bolivia $10,000,000; Chili to occupy Callao and work the guano deposits and copper and saltpetre mines until a full payment of the indemnity is made.

—In the united number of Catholic churches and chapels, St. Louis ranks third, of all the cities in the United States, being outnumbered only by those of New York and Philadelphia. In institutions she comes next to New York, and in proportion to her Catholic population, she stands at the head of all the cities of the Union in the number of both churches and institutions. The debts of the Church there are less than those of any of the great cities of the country. Measures are now being adopted to pay the indebtedness of the Catholic protect ste at Glencoe. When the debt shall have been paid, there is a secure footing, it is expected the new Cathedral of St. Louis will be begun.

A funeral procession of six or eight carriages in Buff

THE MONITOR.

TWENTY-FOURTH YEAR OF PUBLICATION.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL.

THURSDAY.....MARCH 17.

IMPORTANT NOTICE.

In consequence of the length of St. Patrick's Day proceedings and orations, as well as the importance of the telegrams which we publish on our eighth page, we are compelled to omit all local news from this week's issue.

St. Patrick's Day.

We present our readers this week with a complete account of the proceedings on St. Patrick's Day, and congratulate ourselves that the MONITOR will convey to the homes of many thousands of its readers the patriotic sentiments of many of its sons in this great religious festival. At this time, when Ireland is attracting the attention of the world, and its sufferings are spoken of in every land, our readers will peruse with more than usual interest the orations which we present in this issue, as well as the very full account of the magnificent celebrations in this city and other places from which reports have reached us.

Michael Davitt.

We also present our readers with a very correct portrait of Ireland's suffering patriot —MICHAEL DAVITT—a sketch of whose life we have hitherto given in these columns, and whose labors and sufferings in behalf of poor prostrate Erin are well known to, and appreciated by, every lover of liberty throughout the world. Davitt's career has been unmarked by a single act that might detract from his character as a patriot of the purest principles. Outspoken in his condemnation of British tyranny towards his suffering countrymen, yet he never transcended the bonds of legitimate agitation nor resorted to cruel vengeance whereby to right the wrongs of his country. Impressed with the justice of the cause he advocated, Davitt relied solely upon the moral rectitude of public opinion to lift from the tenants of Ireland the heavy load of landlord oppression, and in incarcerating him for his opinion, the English Government was guilty of one of the most despicable acts which ever disgraced a despotic government.

Not satisfied, however, with one victim on whom to vent the venom of their hatred of holy Ireland, the Gladstone Government have commenced a series of wholesale imprisonment against the Irish people. Yet, with all their cruelty and coercion, they can never crush out the patriotic principles implanted in the Irish heart by the founder of the Land League, and the trusted and idolized man in whose hands he has left the work for which he at present pines in a British prison.

The "Bulletin" and the Bull of Pope Adrian IV.

In one of the issues of the Evening Bulletin last week, we find an article in which it is stated, as a positive historical fact, that Henry II. of England received a grant of Ireland, by means of what the Bulletin calls "the famous, or rather the infamous, bull of Pope Adrian IV., upon which England based its authority to invade and subjugate the kingdom of Ireland."

Pope Adrian's Bull is one of the "vexed questions" which have attracted the attention of both English and Irish historical writers for several centuries, and, buried as it is in the mist of obscurity, it seems to be so far from settlement as the answer to the query: Who was JUNIUS? Except in the eyes of antiquarians, the matter has little historical value, because Henry II. did not intimate to the Irish people that it was by virtue of any such Vatican document he coveted a portion of Ireland under the English sway. Strongbow, Fitzstephen, and other usurpers, were the bulls who represented Henry's authority in Ireland, and the manner in which they proved the people of Ireland was peculiarly English!

Some of the most eminent writers on the subject—among them Dr. Moran, the learned Bishop of Ossory, in Ireland, asserts positively that the Bull never existed, and among other reasons for his belief, sets forth these facts:

"Indeed, the Irish nation at all times, as if instinctively, shrank from accepting it as genuine, and substantially pronounced it an Anglo-Norman forgery. We have already seen how even Giraldus Cambrensis refers to the doubts which had arisen regarding the Bull of Pope Alexander, but we have at hand still more conclusive evidence that Adrian's Bull was universally rejected by our people. There is happily preserved in the Barberini archives at Rome, a memorial of the Irish Catholics addressed to the Papal Legate connected with the Pontificate of John XXIII., and amongst them is a letter from the Lord Justiciary and the Royal Council of Ireland, forwarded to Rome under the Royal seal, and presented to his Holiness by William of Nottingham, Canon and Precentor of St. Patrick's Cathedral, Dublin, about the year 1323. In this important, but hitherto unnoticed document, the Irish are accused of very many crimes, among which is institutionally formulated the rejection of the supposed Bulls: 'Moreover, they assert that the King of England, under false pretences, and by false Bulls, obtained the dominion of Ireland, and this opinion is commonly held by them.' This national tradition was preserved unbroken throughout the turmoil of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, and on the revival of our historical literature in the beginning of the seventeenth century was registered in the pages of Lynch, Stephen White, and other writers.

"It will be well, also, shortly to consign our judgment concerning this supposed Bull of Adrian, to hold in mind the disturbed state of society, especially in Italy, at the time to which it refers. At the present day, it would be so easy matter, indeed, for such a forgery to survive more than a few weeks. But at the close of the twelfth century it was far otherwise. Owing to the constant revolutions and disturbances that then prevailed, the Pontiff was oftentimes obliged to fly from city to city; frequently his papers were seized and burned, and he himself detained as a hostage or prisoner by his enemies. Hence it is that several forged Bulls, examples of which are given in Cambrensis Eversus, date from these times. More than one (if the grants made to the Norman families are now believed to rest on such forgeries) and that the Anglo-Norman adventurers in Ireland were not strangers to such deeds of darkness is evident from the fact that a matter, forging the Papal seal of such Bulls, was preserved in the Royal Irish Academy, was found a few years ago, in the ruins of one of the earliest Anglo-Norman monasteries, founded by DeCourcy."

"The circumstances of the publication of the Bull by Henry were surely not calculated to allay suspicion. Our opponents do not seem to feel that it was made known in Ireland till the year 1175, and mark, though publicly promulgated with solemn invective, as 'John of Salisbury's testimony would imply, and though its record was deposited in the public archives of the kingdom, this Bull, so vital to the interests of the Irish Church, should have remained dormant for twenty years, unnoticed in Rome, unnoticed by Henry's successor, still more, unnoticed by the Irish Bishops, and, I will add, unnoticed by the Continental sovereigns, so jealous of the power and the preponderance of the English monarch—for such supposition there is indeed no parallel in the whole history of literature."

We think it is not necessary to add much additional testimony to that of the learned Bishop whose evidence we have quoted, as he has adduced facts and circumstantial evidence sufficient to prove the so-called Bull of Adrian to be a forgery.

The next witness we desire to introduce is one who is well known to all students of Irish history—the Abbe MacGeoghegan—and we intend to prove from his history that forgery was one of the most innocent crimes Henry II. could be suspected of. A bad monarch he was the disolute and inhuman wretch depicted by McGeoghegan, would not scruple to forge any document in order to possess himself of the lands of his neighbors. It will be borne in mind that Henry II. was caught in the flagrant act of presenting a supposed Bull of Pope Alexander III., which he had forged, before a council of Irish Bishops assembled at Cashel. This is the monarch to whom our witness gives this character:

The Abbe MacGeoghegan, in proving those Bulls forgeries, asks: "Is it likely any Pope would select such a monster as Henry II. to effect a reformation of a nation? Would he then draw the character from Giraldus Cambrensis? Is such a character, such a man, such a wretch, fit to be the instrument of a holy Pontiff? Would he, in preference to all others,

Farm and Home.

Testing Her Innocence.

A Babe of Eleven Months Causes the Acquittal of Its Mother.

A poor, pale seamstress was arraigned for theft. She appeared at the bar with her baby of 11 months in her arms. She went to get some work one day, and stole three gold coins of 10 francs each. The money was missed soon after she left her employer and a servant was sent to her room to claim it. The servant found her about to quit the room with the three gold coins in her hand. She said to the servant, "I am going to carry them back to you." Nevertheless she was carried to the Commissioner of Police, and he ordered her to be sent to the Police Court for trial. She was too poor to engage a lawyer and when asked by the Judge what she had to say for herself, she answered: "The day I went to my employer's I carried my child with me. It was in my arms as it is now. I wasn't paying attention to it. There were several gold coins on the mantelpiece, and, unknown to me, it stretched out its little hand and seized three pieces, which I did not observe until I got home. I at once put my scarf over it and was going back to my employer to return them, when I was arrested. This is the solemn truth, as I hope for Heaven's mercy." The Court could not believe this story. They upbraided the mother for her impudence in endeavoring to palm off such a manifest lie for the truth. They brought her, for her own sake, to retract so absurd a tale, for it could have no effect but to oblige the Court to sentence her to a much severer punishment than they were disposed to inflict upon one so young and evidently so deep in poverty. The appeals had no effect, except to strengthen the poor mother's pertinacious adherence to her original story. As this firmness was sustained by that look of innocence which the most adroit criminal can never counterfeit, the Court was at some loss to discover what decision justice demanded. To relieve their embarrassment one of the Judges proposed to renew the scene described by the mother. Three gold coins were placed on the clerk's table. The mother was requested to assume the position in which she stood at her employer's house. There was a breathless pause in the Court. The baby soon discovered the bright coins, eyed them for a moment, smiled and then stretched forth its tiny hand, and clutched them in its fingers with a miser's eagerness. The mother was at once acquitted.—Hartford Times.

To Young Farmers.

To accomplish anything in life, it will be found necessary to go to work in earnest. No man ever made anything by not making an effort. Thousands of young men come to California with good resolutions, but they spend their time trying to find an easy way to make money, and the result is, they fail. What is necessary is to go to work in earnest. Make up your mind when you come to California, that you will at once go to work, that success comes only from diligent application, keep out of debt as far as possible, and if you have made a wise selection as to location, you are all right. We would impress upon the minds of all a few facts gathered from experience.

First—You must have good land, and not pay too high a price for it.

Second—You must be sure of a good market for all you can raise.

Third—You will be required to select such crops for cultivation as will yield the greatest profit.

Fourth—Don't try experiments until you reach a point when a failure will not embarrass you.

Fifth—See to it that your expenses are kept at the very lowest point, and be sure not to spend money before you have made it. By far the larger number of failures come from wrong estimates. Your crops may look fine, and you may have an idea that your corn will yield close to a 100 bushels to the acre, but owing to something that you do not quite understand, it only turns out 50. Your wheat may look very fine, and all your neighbors may give it as their opinion that you will harvest not less than 3,000 bushels, but when the threshing time comes you only measure up one thousand five hundred.

Now, if you have run in debt, expecting 100 bushels of corn to the acre and 1500 more bushels of wheat than you get, the chances are that you will find yourself in a position quite uncomfortable; but if you keep out of debt, your care all right. Learn to do without that which you have not the money to pay for, and success will come of itself.—The New Home.

Our Young Folks.

Grammar in a Nutshell.

Three little words you often see
Are articles—a, an, and the.

A noun's the name of any thing;
As school or garden, hoop or swing.

Adjectives show the kind of noun;
As great, small pretty white or brown.

Instead of noun the pronouns stand—
Her hand, his face, your arm, my hand.

Verbs tell us something to be done—
To read, count, laugh, sing, jump or run.

How things are done the adverbs tell;
As slowly, quickly, ill or well.

Conjunctions join like words together,
As men and women, wind and weather.

The Preposition stands before
A noun—as in or through the door.

The Interjection shows surprise;
As oh! how pretty! ah! how wise!

The whole are called nine parts of speech,
Which reading, writing, spelling, teach.

Keep the Life Pure.

Once upon a time an Arabian prisoner was presented by her teacher with an ivory casket, exquisitely wrought, with the injunction not to open it until the year rolled round. Many were the speculations as to the casket's contents, and the time impatiently waited for when the jeweled key should disclose the mysterious contents. It came at last and the maiden went away alone, and with trembling hate unlocked the treasure, and lo! rapping on the delicate satin lining, lay nothing but a shroud of rust; the form of something beautiful could be discerned, but the beauty had gone forever. Tearful with disappointment, she did not at first see a slip of parchment containing these words: "Dear pupil—May you learn from this a lesson for your life. This trinket, when enclosed, had upon it a single spot of rust; by neglect it has become the useless thing you now behold, only a blot on its pure surroundings. So a little stain on your character will, by inattention and neglect, mar a bright and useful life, and in time will leave only the dark record of what might have been. If you now place within a jewel of gold, and after many years seek the result, you will find it still as sparkling as ever. So with yourself; treasure up only the pure, the good, and you will ever be an ornament to society, and a source of true pleasure to yourself and your friends."

Clever Shepherd Dogs.

The great sagacity and intelligence of the sheep-dogs must have been noticed by many. I have seen one of them run over the backs of the sheep in a crowded street to get at the further end of them, in order to turn them, and this on the slightest signal from his master.

The instinct of a well-trained shepherd dog is marvelous. In the time of sheep-shearing the dog will fetch any sheep that is needed from the flock, and bring it to the feet of the shepherds. It will do more, it will skilfully throw the sheep on its back without injuring it, and then look up at the shearer as much as to say: "Ready for the shears, sir." On the shearer taking hold of the sheep, the dog scampers up the mountain-side and brings down another.

The Worth of a Good Companion.

A companion that is cheerful, and free from scurrilous discourse and free from swearing, is worth gold. I love such mirth as does not make friends ashamed to look upon one another the next morning; nor men that cannot well bear it to repent the money they spent when they be warmed without such times and conference, that make yourselves merry for a little, than a great deal of money, for 'tis the company and not the change that makes the feast.

—This is the way a Vassar girl tells a joke: "O girls! I heard just the best thing to-day. It was just too funny. I can't remember how it came about, but one of the girls said to Professor Mitchell—oh dear, I can't remember just what she said; but Professor Mitchell's answer was just too funny for any use. I forgot just exactly what he said, but it was too good for anything."

Regulations for Lent.

The following regulations for the observance of Lent were read in all the churches throughout the Archdiocese on Sunday last:

All the week days of Lent, from Ash Wednesday to Easter Sunday, are fast days of precept on one meal, with the allowance of a moderate collation.

The precept of fasting implies also that of abstinence from the use of flesh meat. But by dispensation the use of lard is allowed in the Diocese during Lent, except on the following days, to wit: The Wednesdays and Fridays, the Embar-days, the Thursday and Saturday of Holy Week and the Eve of the Assumption, on which days there is no leave to use flesh meat except by dispensation from the respective pastors, which they are hereby authorized to grant in cases of necessity. All fast days are also days of abstinence, but not of collation.

The precept of the use of fish and flesh meat at the same meal is forbidden in Lent, even on Sundays.

It should be carefully observed that according to an answer of the Sacred Congregation of the Holy Office, to the Bishops of England in 1801, and to the Bishops of Ireland in 1817, the Holy See has never consented to have introduced the use of milk, butter, and still less of cheese, at the evening collation on fast days; but owing to the peculiar condition of this Diocese of Quebec, the Holy See has kindly consented to tolerate in it the use of milk, butter and cheese in a small quantity, eggs, however, excepted. But persons not bound to fast are not subject to the above prohibition.

The use of lard or other fat condiment is forbidden in Lent and other fast days during the year, except when meat is allowed, and on Good Friday eggs and all inoffensive substances are forbidden throughout the day.

Some prayers at option are recommended during Lent, particularly on those days in which flesh meat is used.

Lent being a penitential time the pastors are requested to lay before the faithful the importance of Christian mortification and also the grave obligation of complying with their Easter duty, which may be fulfilled from the first Sunday of Lent; they will frequently also impress upon their respective flocks the necessity of attending, before all other things, to the salvation of their souls, and they will exhort them to the faithful discharge of their Christian duties, the only thing that can secure to us the everlasting happiness of heaven. For this purpose they will hold religious exercises in the churches several times a week, according to what their produce may afford of spiritual food.

+JOSEPH S. ALEMANY,
Archbishop of San Francisco.

What Shall We do with Our Daughters?

Don't teach them self-reliance. It is so much easier for them to rely on some one else.

Don't let them learn how to make bread. Their beaux might think they were not well bred.

Don't allow them to learn how to make shirts. It is better they should not know. Then, when they are married, their husbands can work twenty hours a day to get money with which to buy ready-made ones, while they knit red dogs.

Above all things, do not fail to teach them how to wear false hair, and if your daughter objects to bang her hair bang her over the head.

Do not allow them to learn how to make their own dresses. It is fashionable to have a dress maker.

Teach them that a dollar is only one hundred cents and does not amount to much.

Do not let them learn how to cook. Should they understand the culinary art and know what is needed in a family, the servant could not supply all her relatives with edibles.

Teach them to darn their neighbors, but not stockings.

Don't allow them to learn to sew on buttons. They might get needles in their fingers.

Teach them to regard the money and not the morals of their suitors.

Teach them none of the mysteries of the kitchen, the dining-room and the parlor.

Teach them that the more one lives beyond his income the more he will save.

Urge them to go with intemperate young young men. It is convenient to have a drunken husband, and the wife is enabled to take pin money from his pocket while he is taking a drunken snooze.

—The fair in aid of the new Church of St. Francis Xavier, in the city of New York, carried by the Jesuit Fathers, netted $36,000, the chief object of interest being a splendid golden chalice, the gift of his Holiness Leo XIII, an exact copy of one of the most famous chalices of the Vatican, eighteen inches high and of solid gold.

Family Fun.

Cutting a Boy's Hair.

There is no use in fooling around about it. When a boy's hair has become long and bleached and scraggy and full of burrs and feathers it is time to cut it and the inevitable must be faced. The boy doesn't want it out of course. No one ever had a speaking acquaintance with a boy who thought the time had arrived when he could part with enough hair to stuff a sofa pillow. They must be coerced, but kind words and broad promises are thrown away. Coercion is the only method.

I let my boys run about as long and then when I gets a spare half day I play barber. There is no appeal from my decision. When I come out flourished I carry my point or die trying.

"Young man, you can get ready to have your hair cut."

"Next week!"

"No, sir—now!"

"With a hoss saw!"

"Yes, if the shears won't do it."

"Won't you do it,"

"I may have to."

"If you won't cut my hair, I'll bring in a load of wood and coal to last all the winter, and I wont ask for a light when I go to bed."

"Come out here and make ready."

I never take any chances on a boy. I have an old chair bolted to the floor and then I bolt the boy to the chair. I fix him so that he can move neither hand nor foot, poke a soft rag in his mouth to prevent a neighborhood alarm, and begin work. The first step toward cutting a boy's hair is to put in a minimum amount of a scary bomb. If he hasn't been running loose loose over two or three years this tool will be found sufficient to take out the warts, buttons and articles previously mentioned. A basket is placed behind the chair for them to drop into, and when the job is finished with fancy pictures and made to serve as parlor ornaments.

When a boy's hair is ready for the shears brace your feet and shear away. Shear front, back, top and sides without mercy or lines or angles. The object is to remove the hair. There is no use of any conversation, not even when the shears find a piece of wire and refuse to cut it. The boy wouldn't know how it got there if you asked him. He has had his head in alleys, collars, garrets, barns, fence corners, barrels, boxes and all sorts of nooks, and such extra attachments are no surprise to him.

No one should be less than half an hour robbing an average boy of his capillary substance. Any attempt to hurry the job will result in overlooking a lot of shingle nails, the missing screw-driver, or something which may damage his Sunday hat. My average is thirty-five minutes, and I have only two minutes left after being able to see that he has a scalp. It then takes an additional ten minutes to lock him over and identify him as the same boy I began on. His neck has grown longer, the size of his ears increased, and the whole shape of his head is altered. When I feel sure that it is my boy, and not the son of some neighbor who stalked in on me, I brush him off with an old broom, crack his head three or four times, draw the bolts and remove the gag, and then hold the door open for him to shoot into the back yard. I am a loving father on all cides, but when I get a boy's hair I'm a stern old Roman of the first water.—Detroit Free Press.

No Avoiding Fate.

Two men, the one a philosopher and the other a fool, were in the service of the same master, and both slept in the same bed. The philosopher lay on the outside. One morning, they having overslept themselves, the master, coming with a whip, flogged the philosopher, who happened to be the nearest to his entrance to the room. "This I will avoid another time," said the philosopher to himself. On the next night, therefore, he changed place with the fool. In the morning they again transgressed, and the master came to chastise them; but reflecting that he had before whipped the man that was nearest, he thought it was but just the other should feel the lash of pleasure. He went to the other side of the bed, and the blows fell upon the poor philosopher, thus confirming the general truth, "The wisest cannot avoid their fate."

Economy.

A tradesman in Wakefield was reading, a short time ago, to his wife from an old newspaper, when he accidently stumbled on the word "economy." "Economy!" said the lady. "I have heard that word often. What does it mean, pray?" "Mean, my lass!" said the husband, scratching his whiskers, and looking as though he had been suddenly puzzled. "Why, let me see. Suppose I was to make thee have sweet porridge and treacle for thy breakfast to-morrow, instead of buttered toast and coffee, why, that would be a economy." "Well, then," replied the wife, "if that be economy, I want to hear no more about it."

—It was remarked to "Hath" by a senator at Washington, the other day, that the Irish element was getting to be very strong in the Senate. "There is Jones, of Florida," he said, "a native Irishman; Fair, of Nevada, a native Irishman; Sewell, of New Jersey, the same; and Oliver, of Pennsylvania, if he is elected, will be a native Irishman, too; while Hoek is a Scotchman."

A Pin in a Girl's Tongue for Eleven years.

Miss Harvey, of Candor, when eleven or twelve years of age, was one evening making hurried preparations to attend a party. She had a pin between her lips, which passed into her mouth, and was supposed to be swallowed. Dr. Miller assumed such to be the fact, but the girl insisted that it was under her tongue. The physician made search for it there, but failed to discover it, and treated her protestations as the work of imagination. Recently Miss Harvey had a large bunch or swelling come upon one side of her tongue, increasing in painfulness. Dr. L. D. Farnham opened the swelling. The next day, after eleven years of hiding, the pin came out of the opening. It was two-thirds covered with a lime formation and was much corroded.

—The Rev. M. Abbelous, Curee of Duffel, has been appointed by the Holy See coadjutor to the Cardinal-Archbishop of Malines, with right of succession.

Protestantism in Rome.

There is so much rubbish written by people who probably do not, but who certainly ought to know better, concerning Protestant progress in Rome, that the following extract from the letter of a New York priest written in Rome on Christmas morning will be read with profit "Whoever imagines (if any one imagines) that the Romans have any inclination for Protestantism, should see the Catholic Churches on any Sunday. A glance, also, into the Protestant churches (of which there is a fair sprinkling), would help to remove the notion. I visited Gavazzi's church during a week-day evening service, and on counting the congregation, found them to number thirty or forty at the utmost. But it was very manifest that at least half of this number were, like myself, curiosity seekers, and had not part or lot in what was going on. The reverend preacher was comparing the morality, or rather contrasting the morality, of Catholic with Protestant nations. I did not understand which Catholic nation he had across his knee, but, laugh or not, the Protestant city which he held up for admiration was Glasgow. The following Sunday I visited another of these places, and, as before, counted the congregation. Strange to say, just thirty again, an., also as before, not half of them worshipers. These facts may be of interest to you should you fall in with Van Meter." The allusion to our old friend Van Meter is refreshing; we had almost forgotten him, so fleeting even in greatness. No one who is free from direct interest in "evangelization," as it is called, has any hopes of planting Protestantism in Rome. The Italian mind resents it, and all the missionaries in Christendom cannot alter the verdict.

Queer Industries in New York.

The investigation of the census men have led to some queer developments in the manufactories of New York and adjoining cities. The largest single industry in New York is that of custom made clothes. The making of paper patterns employs hundreds of hands, and, ten large houses being employed in it, uses tons of paper. There are factories for making dried blood, the dumpings that milliners use to show dresses on, theatrical armor and jewelards. The use of adulterating substances is getting to be general. "Castile soap" is made of grease and terra alba, or white earth, and which earth is used largely in candy making. Glucose, which is corn starch, is used heavily by the sugar refiners. There is a firm engaged in making human hair honey comb. The honey comb is made by machinery of paraffine wax, and is an exact imitation of the regular thing, except that the bees fashion their cells of walls only 1 120th of an inch wide, while machinery makes them not yet become that definite. The cells are filled with glucose, which is the sweet syrup of commo-corn, and looks and tastes like honey. The cells once filled, are closed by smearing a hot iron plate over the wax tops, and the product is sold as the "best clover honey." It is the great business of the rainelle the regular honey. Gallons and gallons of the best tomato catsup are made from the tomato skins which are purchased from the great tomato canning establishments.

LORD BUTE offers to build, and also to maintain, a small hospital at Aberdare, which will be placed under the direction of Sisters of Mercy.

New Advertisements.

RETIRING FROM BUSINESS.

HAVING RESOLVED, TO RETIRE FROM BUSINESS, I take this opportunity to inform my former patrons and the public that I will dispose of my large and well selected stock of goods, IMPORTED DIRECT FROM THE BEST MANUFACTORIES OF EUROPE. These goods have been selected by me with the greatest care and with special reference to the WANTS OF THIS MARKET, to which I have so long, and I may add, so successfully ministered.

EVERYTHING IN THIS STORE, WILL BE SOLD WITHOUT RESERVE, but the sale will be continued from day to day until the entire stock is disposed of.

PARTIES are assured that these goods will be made up to order in the LATEST AND MOST FASHIONABLE STYLES, and by the SAME FIRST CLASS WORKMEN employed by me at the old rates.

A rare opportunity is thus offered to all who wish to make desirable selections from the most elegant and FASHIONABLE CLOTHS, CASSIMERES AND SUITINGS OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, at prices which will SUIT THE VERY CLOSEST OF ALL AND ABOVE ALL, THE prices within the reach of all. The following quotations will show the great reduction in former prices and RAISE THE MOST SKEPTICAL:

Dress Suits	from $60 to $70
Business Suits	" " 50	55
Overcoats	" " 50	55
Pants	" " 5	6
Pants	from $3 to $4	and $5

This sale will commence MONDAY, January 17, 1881, and will continue from day to day until the entire stock is disposed of.

J. H. TOBIN,
MERCHANT TAILOR,
No. 114 Montgomery street,
Under Occidental Hotel, San Francisco

BROADWAY HOTEL,
212 Broadway street.
JOHN HIGGINS, Proprietor.
(Late of Western Hotel.)

MISCELLANEOUS.

COLUMBIA HOTEL,
741 Market Street,
Bet. Third and Fourth Sts. SAN FRANCISCO.
This House is centrally located, 2 lines of Street Cars passing the Door every Minute.
☞ Mechanics and Laborers of any Branch can be found here at short NOTICE, by enquiring at the Office.
The Tables will be Supplied with the Best the Market affords.
Board and Lodging, per week ..... $4 50 to $5 00
Eleven Meal Tickets 8 00
Single Meals 25
Finest Brands of Wines, Liquors & Cigars.
OWEN BRESLIN, Proprietor.

Mrs. Eliza Newton Walsh,
Dramatic Art, Elocution and Voice Culture.
ENGAGEMENTS ACCEPTED FOR CONCERTS AND DRAMATIC ENTERTAINMENTS.
24 Varennes Place, Corner of Third Street.

REDUCTION IN COAL.
I AM NOW SELLING
Southport Cove Boxy Coal at ..... $ 9 00 a ton
Beatrix Coal at ..... 10 00 a ton and Wellington Coal at ..... 12 00 a ton
Coke at the House Rates. Delivered Free.
J. FLYNN,
1113 and 1115 Mission Street.

SOMETHING NEW.
Painting Made Easy, by a Successful Method.
FLOWERS, BIRDS, ETC.
NO PREVIOUS KNOWLEDGE OF THE ART REQUIRED; beautiful and profitable; children learn readily; full instruction, $5. 704 Market st., rooms 4 and 5. The art acquired in a few lessons.

Information Wanted.
ANY INFORMATION REGARDING THE WHEREABOUTS OF MR. JAMES FORAN, of Pittsburgh, Penn., will be thankfully received by his Aunt, Mrs. Sarah Nolan, corner of 4th and Mercer, Maysville. When last heard from James Foran was residing in Shinly Flat, Nevada.

Agents and Canvassers.
Make from $25 to $50 per week selling goods for E. G. RIDGEY & Co., 31 Barclay Street, New York. Send for their Catalogue and terms.

MRS. JEROME DEASEY. MRS. M. J. COBBS.
Mrs. Jerome Deasey & Co.,
CENTRAL
FLORAL DEPOT
736 MARKET STREET,
(ADJOINING SULANS.)
☞ Wedding and Funeral Decorations made to order. Bouquets, Wreaths, and Crosses constantly on hand.
ESTABLISHED 1854.

KAST'S
Fashionable
SHOE STORE,
N. E. Cor. Market & Dupont Sts.,
SAN FRANCISCO.

LITHOGRAPHERS. BOOKBINDERS
P. E. DOUCHERTY & CO.,
STEAM
Book & Job Printers,
412 Commercial St., and 411 Clay St.
Between Sansome and Battery.
PIANO LESSONS GIVEN,
305 TYLER STREET.
With use of Piano.

BANKING HOUSES.
Jos. A. Donohoe, San Francisco. | Eugene Kelly, New York.
DONOHOE, KELLY & CO.,
SAN FRANCISCO.
EUGENE, KELLY & CO,
NEW YORK.
BANKERS.
EXCHANGE ON
NEW YORK, LONDON; AND BANK IRELAND (Dublin).
Payable at all the Branches
AND IN EVERY COUNTRY TOWN IN IRELAND.

PROFESSIONAL CARDS.
JOHN M. BURNETT,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law.
Rooms 1 and 2,
507 Montgomery street, cor. Sacramento
M. COONEY,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law.
605 Kearny street, cor. Pine,
Rooms 3 and 4 ..... San Francisco.
J. D. SULLIVAN,
ATTORNEY-AT-LAW,
Rooms 8, 9, and 10.
234 MONTGOMERY ST ..... San Francisco.
WILLIAM A. PLUNKETT,
Attorney and Counsellor at Law,
530 California Street,
ROOMS 16 and 17.
Bet Kearny and Montgomery ..... San Francisco
o23-1y

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

SEND FREE on application—BRIGGS & BROS Flower and Vegetable Catalogue. Our large crops enable us to SELL SEEDS LOW ROCHESTER, N.Y. or CHICAGO, ILL.

ORGANS $20 to $1,000; $5 to $1 notes. 75 cents $125 pp. Paper free. Address Daniel F. Beatty, Washington, N.J.

THE PAPER you read, we forward on file at Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Newspaper Advertising Bureau (10 Spruce St.), New York. Estimates for advertising for 1881 for 1 to 1 in NEW YORK.

MISCELLANEOUS.

CHAS. E. EHMANN,
PEARL ART GALLERY,
115 Fourth Street,
Bet. Minna and Mission ... S. F.
CABINETS,
$2 per Dozen.
SATISFACTION GUARANTEED.

FRENCH LESSONS.
$3 a Month, Twice a Week.
1016 MARKET STREET.

C. R. HANSON & CO.'S.
EMPLOYMENT AGENCY.
Female Department, 119 Geary St.
Male Department, 634 Clay St., S. F.

PERUVIAN AN IRON TONIC SYRUP
Vitalizes and Enriches the Blood, Tones up the System, Makes the Weak Strong, Builds up Broken-down, Invigorates the Brain, and —CURES—
Dyspepsia, Nervous Affections, General Debility, Neuralgia, Fever and Ague, Paralysis, Chronic Diarrhœa, Boils, Dropsy, Humors, Female Complaints, Liver Complaint, Remittent Fever, and Ague.
ALL DISEASES ORIGINATING IN A BAD STATE OF THE BLOOD, OR ACCOMPANIED BY DEBILITY ON A LOW STATE OF THE SYSTEM.
PERUVIAN SYRUP
Supplies the blood with its Vital Principle, or Life Element, IRON, infusing Strength, Vigor and New Life into all parts of the system. BEING FREE FROM ALCOHOL, its energizing effects are not followed by corresponding reaction, but are permanent.
SETH W. FOWLE & SONS, Proprietors, 36 Harrison Avenue, Boston. Sold by all Druggists.

INSURANCE.
FIRE AND MARINE INSURANCE
UNION INSURANCE COMPANY
OF SAN FRANCISCO,
THE CALIFORNIA LLOYDS,
ESTABLISHED IN 1861.
Nos. 416 and 418 California Street.
CAPITAL ..... $750,000 GOLD
FAIR RATES.
PROMPT SETTLEMENT OF LOSSES, SOLID SECURITY.
DIRECTORS:
SAN FRANCISCO.
B. Brewster, Nicholas Luning,
R S Floyd, John Parrott,
Moses Heller, James Moffit,
N G Kittle, J Hamm,
M J O'Connor, M D Sweeny,
I Steinhart, Joseph Brandenstein,
Daniel Meyer, Hartare Tuschard,
Adam Grant, J. G. Kittle,
Antoine Borel, Geo C Hinkes,
Charles Kohler, J H Baird,
Joseph Seiber, Charles Haven,
Herbert Doe, W M Hoag,
I Lawrence Pool, William Scholle,
A Weill, John Cody,
F B Sloss, J O Eldridge,
A Britton.
GUSTAVE TOUCHARD,
President.
N. G. KITTLE, Vice-President.
CHAS. HAVEN, Secretary.
GEO. T. BOHEN, Surveyor.

INSURANCE.
I WISH TO INFORM MY FRIENDS THROUGHOUT the Pacific Coast that I am now connected with the Western Fire and Marine Insurance Co. OF CALIFORNIA. PRINCIPAL OFFICE: 408 CALIFORNIA STREET, S. F., CAL.
SPECIAL AGENT & ADJUSTER.
☞ In each I will attend to all business pertaining to Fire Insurance, furnish any information therein, that may be required, and issue Policies at the lowest rates of Premium.
JOHN KELLY, JR.,
Formerly Proprietor of the Brooklyn Hotel, S. F.

$66 a week in your own home. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Maine.

$5 to $20 Per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co Portland, Me.

LARGEST, Most Patents, Promptness, Durability.
1,000 Patents $135 to $19 Monthly, or cost. T. M. ANTHSELL & Co., Corner Market and Fremont streets, San Francisco, Cal.

1857. PROSPECTUS 24th VOLUME. 1880.
THE PIONEER CATHOLIC JOURNAL OF THE PACIFIC COAST.
THE MONITOR
Enters upon the 24th Year of Publication with the Determination of Maintaining its Position as
THE LEADING CATHOLIC JOURNAL OF THE PACIFIC COAST!
Its Table of Contents from week to week will be Elevating in Tone as well as INTERESTING —AND— INSTRUCTIVE.
Its Columns will Combine every variety of Literature Suited for
The Family, The Farm, and The Fireside!
Its aim will be to elevate Catholic Thought, to extend Catholic Faith, and to DEFEND THE DOGMAS OF OUR ANCIENT CREED against the assaults of open or secret enemies.
Among the Departments which the columns of THE MONITOR will embrace we may mention:
Religious Newsfrom every part of the World, together with an Epitome of
The Latest and Most Important Telegraphic Dispatches.
OUR COLUMNS WILL BE REPLETE WITH STORIES AND SKETCHES.
IRISH INTELLIGENCE,
SERMONS AND LECTURES, FARM AND FIRESIDE,
POETICAL GEMS,
EVENTS IN EUROPE,
TEMPERANCE TOPICS,
DIOCESAN INTELLIGENCE,
ORIGINAL CORRESPONDENCE,
CHIPS FOR THE CHILDREN,
FUN FOR THE FAMILY,
MARKET REVIEW,
LOCAL EVENTS,
BOOK NOTICES,
And a Variety of
EDITORIALS ON EVERY TOPIC OF INTEREST TO CATHOLIC READERS.
THE TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION WILL BE
One Year, by mail, (postage free) - $4 00
Three Copies to one address " " 10 00
Five Copies to one address " " 16 00
Foreign - - - - - 5 00
ALL SUBSCRIPTIONS ARE PAYABLE IN ADVANCE.
AGENTS WANTED!
We want Agents in every City and Town on the Coast, to whom a liberal commission will be allowed on all subscriptions forwarded.
AS AN ADVERTISING MEDIUM,
The MONITOR presents a profitable medium whereby Business and Professional Men can introduce themselves to a class of intelligent readers. Our terms are low, our circulation extensive and assured, and we will endeavor to promote the interests of all who patronise our paper.
☞ Address all communications, whether on Editorial or Business matters, to
S. J. McCORMICK, Managing Editor,
622 Clay Street, San Francisco, Cal

MISCELLANEOUS.
The Best & Cheapest
GROCERY STORE
In the City.
HONEST WEIGHT & MEASURE
And Good Goods Guaranteed.
144 and 146 Sixth Street,
(Near Howard.)
CONSTINE BROS.,
Proprietors.

ANTI SELL PIANOS
LARGEST, Most Patents, Promptness, Durability.
1,000 Pianos $125 to $19 Monthly, or cost. T. M. ANTHSELL & Co., Corner Market and Fremont streets, San Francisco, Cal.

MISCELLANEOUS.
C. M. BARONIDES,
Professor of Beauty,
CURES THE MOST OBSTINATE EYE DISEASES AND ALL KINDS OF BOILS.
Catarrh and Throat Diseases a Specialty
Positive cure with Protoxalid baths only. Best remedy known. Free Cure applications. Office hours from 8 to 11 a. m. and from 1 to 5 p. m. 201 Powell st.

FURNITURE ON THE INSTALMENT PLAN
550 Mission Street.
SHORT-HAND LESSONS.
THREE UNDERSIGNED WOULD LIKE A FEW MORE pupils in the art of short-hand writing (Graham's system). At a cost of 10 words per minute guaranteed in a few months practice, and forward to report at the study progresses. Private lessons at pupils residence $1 per evening. By mail, $5 for one month (3 lessons.) Refer by permission to Fred Mosler, James Coey, Hilary F. Wise, Colonel T. L. Pemple, Esq., Thomas Hill, artist. Address BOOT, R. HILL, 325 Pine street, S. F.

25 all kinds new Chromo Cards, the prettiest you ever saw, with name, 10c. HADLEY CARD CO., Rose N. Y.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Farmers Attention!

Splendid Set of Teeth, only $7.

AT THE DENTAL ROOMS OF T. BOLTON, 604 Howard street.

R. B. LEARN,
DENTIST,
1120 Third Avenue.
EAST OAKLAND . . . CAL.

DR. J. M. HUTCHINS,
DENTIST,
HAS RETURNED FROM THE COUNTRY, AND has dental parlors at the corner of Bacon and Harrison streets. Entrance, No. 9 Bacon street.

J. J. DYER,
DENTIST,
S. E. cor. Kearny and Post Sts.
☞ Entrance, 37 Post St. '23

MISCELLANEOUS.

INFALLIBLE CURE —FOR— RHEUMATISM!
PROF. JOHN WETZEL,
No. 727 BUSH STREET.

Information Wanted
Of J. J. McCAFFERTY, Esq., a lawyer of Lead Mine. It is believed he may have come to California. Address the Editor: THE MONITOR.

THOMAS DRADY,
MERCHANT TAILOR
No. 6 Third Street,
Near Market, S. F.

RAZORS!
FOR $1,000
I WILL MAKE A BETTER RAZOR AND MORE OF them in the same time than any man IN THE WORLD.
My own make (warranted) $2 50
My Guard Razors warranted not to cut the flesh while shaving 2 50
Good English Razors 1 00
Best English Razors 1 50
☞ Sent C. O. D. or by mail.
M. PRICE,
415 Kearny Street.
Grinding and Repairing.

WITH FIVE DOLLARS
YOU CAN BUY A WATCH
IMPERIAL AUSTRIAN VIENNA CITY
GOVERNMENT BOND,
Which bonds are issued and secured by the Government and are redeemable in drawings
FOUR TIMES ANNUALLY,
Until each and every bond is drawn, with larger or smaller premium. Every bond must draw a prize, as there are no blanks.
THE THREE HIGHEST PRIZES AMOUNT TO 300,000 FLORINS
50,000 FLORINS,
30,000 FLORINS,
And bonds not drawing one of the above prizes must draw a Premium of not less than 130 Florins,
The next drawing takes place on the 1ST OF APRIL, 1881,
And every bond bought of us on or before the 1st of April is entitled to the whole premium that may be drawn between now and that date.
Out-of-town orders sent in Rosenz or Letters, inclosing $5, will secure one of these bonds for the next drawing.
For orders, circulars, or any other information, address
INTERNATIONAL BANKING CO.,
No. 120 Broadway, New York City.
ESTABLISHED IN 1874.
N. B.—In writing, to us please state you saw this in THE PACIFIC MONTHLY.
☞ The above Government Bonds are not to be passed with any Lottery Bonds, and do not conflict with any of the laws of the United States.

THE BOSTON DRY GOODS STORE
N. WYNNE,
IMPORTER AND DEALER IN DRY GOODS
—AND—
FANCY GOODS,
CORSETS, GLOVES, Etc.
24 Fourth street ..... SAN FRANCISCO.

VINEYARD LAND COMPANY.
10,000 ACRES.
First-class Grape Lands WILL BE SOLD in 20-ACRE LOTS.
For One Hundred Dollars Each.
Railroad runs through the Land. Office 226 Montgomery street.
R. G. LATHROP, President.

SOMETHING NEW.
Painting on Velvet Taught
IN ORDERED PAPERS.
The Most Beautiful Work in Art.
617 LARKIN STREET.

TREES! TREES!
MARYSVILLE NURSERY.
I WOULD RESPECTFULLY CALL THE ATTENTION of the people of Marysville and Vicinity, to my stock of Fruit, Shade and Ornamental Trees, and Shrubbery. Also to my stock of Grapes, Lemons and Lime Trees, bonded from the best varieties of early bearing trees in Marysville, all of which will be sold at Sacramento Prices.
ROBERT SCHUMANN, Proprietor.
Cor of A and 9th Streets, Marysville, Cal.

$55 to $77 a Week in Agents. Samples free. P. O. VICKERY, Augusta, Me.

MISCELLANEOUS.

J. & F. KESSELER,
ONYX
—AND—
MARBLE WORKS.
WAREROOMS:
No. 7 Taylor street, near Market, opp. Sixth.
STEAM WORKS:
Brannan street, between Fifth and Sixth, SAN FRANCISCO.
ALTARS, MANTELS,
PEDESTALS,
TABLES, ETC.,
IN ONYX,
Very Rare and Beautiful.
Also, Mantels in Colored and Statuary Marble.
With Open Fire-places (Grates, of Nawest Designs.
J. H. CONGDON & CO.
(12 years with the well and favorably known firm, Miller & Co.)

(GENERAL COMMISSION MERCHANTS, 8 STEUART Street, corner Market; San Francisco, for the sale of Wool, Grain, Hops, Beans, Potatoes. Liberal advances on consignments. All orders from the interior carefully and promptly filled. Supplies, Sacks, Twine, etc., furnished customers. Personal attention given to all consignments.

The Purest

ST. PATRICK'S DAY.

(CONCLUDED FROM FIFTH PAGE.)

Declaration of American Independence and the Constitution of the United States, and the hearts of a great people tender American sympathy and encouragement to any effort Ireland may make to affect the supremacy of the national will as the ruling test of the governing power.

Celebration of the Day in other Parts of the State.

THE DAY AT SAN JOSE.

SAN JOSE, March 17.—The day was celebrated by a grand turn-out of the Hibernians and Land League. After parading the streets they attended the services at St. Patrick's Church. Father McGuire delivered a panegyric on St. Patrick, and alluded to Ireland's unhappy condition. The procession re-formed and marched through the streets to the California Theatre, where musical and literary exercises were held. Robert Ferral, the orator of the day, made an address, which was a happy effort, and received by the audience with great satisfaction.

DEMONSTRATION AT PORTLAND.

PORTLAND, March 17.—The demonstration by the Irish citizens of Portland was unusually imposing. The procession formed at half-past three and marched to St. Mary's Academy, where appropriate exercises were held by the pupils. The procession then re-formed and marched to the Newman's Theatre, where an oration was delivered by R. C. White, and other literary exercises held. The day was lively, and thronged through the streets. A great number of flags of different nationalities were floating in honor of the day.

AT VALLEJO.

VALLEJO, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated here by a steamer excursion to San Francisco by the Ancient Order of Hibernians, and a literary and dramatic entertainment in the evening by the Irish Land League.

AT MERCED.

MERCED, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated here by literary exercises, the display of flags, etc., winding up with a dance. A collection was taken up for the Land League fund, which amounted to $150.

IN LOS ANGELES.

LOS ANGELES, March 17.—St. Patrick's Day was celebrated by a procession of Irish-American citizens in which the City Council, Los Angeles Guards, Confederate Regiment Cavalry and many prominent citizens participated. The procession was followed by an oration by Colonel Godfrey.

Latest Telegrams.

Sympathy for the Boers.

CHICAGO, March 16.—A mass meeting of synthesizers with the Dutch Boers in the Transvaal was held to night in the First Dutch Reformed Church. There are some 1,000 pure Dutchmen in this city, and they largely predominated at the meeting, which was numerously attended by citizens of a democratic persuasion. Over a thousand were present and enthusiastic. Resolutions were adopted and resolutions adopted, declaring that the English nation was determined to conquer the Boers in South Africa, only because the latter are naturally freemen. The cordial sympathy of their meeting was tendered to their countrymen in the Transvaal, who are heroically vindicating their right to freedom against the tyranny and usurpation of England.

Rumored Cabinet Changes.

It was rumored yesterday that Gladstone, retaining the office of First Lord of the Treasury, would resign the Chancellorship of the Exchequer to E. C. Childers, the Marquis of Hartington succeeding the latter as Secretary of State for War, and Lord Derby succeeding the Marquis of Hartington as Secretary of State for India and President of the Council of India.

Alphonse and Dupuis.

The Queen of Cessnous Harlington said the Queen had withdrawn all Jubilee Governors from Outshoot but already been given.

Gladstone and Dupuis, the Prime Minister, consented to the postponement of the resolution of Alphonse, which the Government was received with cheers by the Radicals.

Mourning in Rome.

NEW YORK, March 17.—The Tribune says: J. W. Mackey of California has been in Rome, buying statues and pictures right and left. It is even said that he thought of accepting the Turkish mission, and talked with Marquis Tseliosis about the price.

Trouble with Spain.

MADRID, March 16.—Of the Papal Nuncio formally protesting against the return of Republicans to Spain, the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs has replied that the return of Republicans and Radicals was a matter of right, and not a favor to be sought for. The Pope's protest, which was in the form of a pastoral letter, has caused great excitement in Spain. The Pope's protest, which was in the form of a pastoral letter, has caused great excitement in Spain. The Pope's protest, which was in the form of a pastoral letter, has caused great excitement in Spain.

Trouble with Russia.

MADRID, March 16.—Of the Papal Nuncio formally protesting against the return of Republicans to Spain, the Spanish Minister of Foreign Affairs has replied that the return of Republicans and Radicals was a matter of right, and not a favor to be sought for. The Pope's protest, which was in the form of a pastoral letter, has caused great excitement in Spain. The Pope's protest, which was in the form of a pastoral letter, has caused great excitement in Spain.

The Czar Assassinated.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 17.—As the Emperor was returning from a parade in the Michael Place about 1 o'clock this (Sunday) afternoon a bomb was thrown and exploded under the Czar's carriage, doing considerable damage to the vehicle. The Czar slightly injured, but a dozen Cossacks prostrated at his feet, shattering both his legs below the knee, and inflicting other terrible injuries. The Czar was immediately conveyed in an unconscious state to the Winter Palace, where he died at 4:30 this afternoon. Two persons were injured in the affair, one of whom was killed immediately. The explosion killed an officer and a Cossack. Many policemen and other persons were injured. A few minutes before his death the Emperor received the Sacrament.

Further Details from France.

PARIS, March 14.—The Chamber of Deputies unanimously adjourn in View of the death of Leo Czar.

In the Senate Leon Say alluded to the Czar as one of the greatest reformers of this century; Czar whose benefits will alert, one who has liberated millions of slaves. The Duke De Audiffret Pasquiet declared the Czar had been a friend of France, and the Senate, and France would not forget it. The Senate then adjourned. The funeral services were held to-day at the Russian Church. All the members of the Diplomatic Body, President Grevy's military household and most of the Cabinet Ministers, Marshal Canrobert, and McMahon and the ex-Queen of Spain were present. After the service, Prince Orloff and Staff took the oath of allegiance to the new Czar.

Crowds Drawn to London.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The Herald's London special says: There was a constant succession of crowds at the Russian Embassy to-day to express condolence. Among them were Empress Eugenie, Princess Ambassadors and foreign Ministers in London, members of the Government, Lord Beaconsfield, Mr. Alexander Gait, Cardinal Manning, and Russell Lowell.

It was of the consolation was received by the Russian revolutionary party in London at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon from their friends in Paris, Dublin and St. Petersburg. It was announced in social democratic halls by respective leaders, who read it in the evening and was greeted with loud and prolonged manifestations of approval.

A London Plot.

CHICAGO, March 18.—The Times' London cable says: The Russian Embassy have offered to have evidence regarding the Czar's assassination, the assassination Finnegan, in the Fifth Avenue, glycerine, and in fact the entire scheme, originated in London.

Revolutionary Romance.

PARIS, March 18.—The Voltaire has a telegram that the estate of the Emperor literally pushed out when the bombs struck him. An anonymous letter, accompanying the intended assassination, was sent to the Prince Dolgorouki on Sunday morning. She endeavored to persuade the Emperor to stay at home.

A nihilist placard, proclaiming death to Alexander, and warning him that if he did not adopt a liberal policy he would share his father's fate, was pasted on the walls of St. Petersburg Sunday evening. The Voltaire counsels the new Czar to break at once with Pomsteff and the Ignatieff. It says: Our wishes are neither untimely nor impertinent. The new Czar will be French enough for us if he is thoroughly Russian.

Humor of a European War.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The Tribune prints an interview with ex-Governor Curtain, formerly Minister of Russia, in which he says he believes the assassination of the Emperor will hasten a general war in Europe. He adds: "The present Emperor is, or was when I knew her, very bitter against Germany. It was said she even went so far as to refuse to wear anything that was made there, because of the fact that Emperor William had taken by force two of the most important provinces of her father's kingdom. With this feeling it would not surprise me to see Russia the ally of France in a conflict against Germany, that will undoubtedly arise if France and Turkey declare war. Russia and Germany have been in sympathy with each other on the Eastern question, but now it will be hard matters for the former to assist the King of Greece, because he is a brother of the Emperor of Russia. Greece has been actively engaged of late in warlike preparations. If war is declared it is probable France will immediately ally herself with Russia as an entering wedge for declaring war against Germany. The French people are eager for a renewal of the conflict. They were never better prepared, and at the first opportunity they will certainly strike for re-possession of their much coveted provinces of Alsace and Lorraine. Such is my belief. Should it take place I think it would be bad for America, because apparent Europe war could not be otherwise. I do not think the assassination will affect the relations between Russia and this country, because I know the present Czar was very friendly to the United States. It will undoubtedly stop all reforms in Russia for some time to come.

A Message from the Pope.

ROME, March 14.—In the Chamber of Deputies, to-day, Premier Cairoli alluded feelingly to the deceased Emperor. The Russian Grand Dukes Sergius and Paul left Rome for St. Petersburg.

The Pope sent Cardinal Jacobini to express his regret to the Grand Dukes and also sent a message of condolence to the Czar.

Blamed on a Bad Boy.

NEW YORK, March 18.—A late Berlin dispatch says that Count Herbert Bismarck has certainly eloped with the Princess Elizabeth of Turn-und-Hechtbrun. Both arrived at Messina several weeks ago. The Princess is the wife of Prince Charles of Carolath-Beuthen, Count of Sebomarch, chief of one of the first Prussian families, and intimately related to the Upper Tens. The faithless wife is a step-sister of Prince Hermann of Hatzfeldt Trachenberg, head of the Catholic family bearing the title since 1741, and a daughter of the Countess of Reichenbach. She is about 40 years of age, and has now 14 years of age. Prince Carolath, who is 36, has left Parliament, and retired to his estate in Silesia. He will commence a divorce suit. Count Herbert Bismarck, whose age is 26, was until recently secretary to his father, who has destined him as the chief assistant and successor. It is said that this domestic calamity is the chief cause of Bismarck's recent irritability and bad humor.

LANDLORDISM RAMPANT.

NEW YORK, March 17th.—The World has a special cable dispatch from Dublin, containing the following points: Thirty Land League cases are now in prison. Sheridan, the organizer, was arrested yesterday at Dalkeyearry. His wife was on her death-bed. Landlordism is now rampant. Landlords are serving some prisoners with writs, and back rents, in jail. Land meetings were held last Sunday in fifteen counties. Great multitudes were present and immense enthusiasm was manifested, and there were brave speeches and strong, radical and stinging resolutions. The Irish people are most determined and

WILL FIGHT THE GOOD FIGHT

To the last. Four hundred tenants under landlord Palmer, of Mayo, have struck against the rent, on account of arrears going on. Eviction notices are falling in showers over Ireland. Twelve hundred writs and ejectments were served last week. The Land League counsels the people to stand to the last. The consequence, in all likelihood, is this general resistance, will be a large number of land sales for non-payment of rent. What the landlords will gain by such a result remains to be seen. There is a general feeling with regard to ejectments throughout the Land League that the people should allow evictions to take place, and that the Land League should then immediately provide them with houses on the evicted farms.

Michael Davitt.

A mahomedi movement is started here to present Michael Davitt with £10,000 on his release. An appeal with this in view will be made to Mahomedans. At the executive meeting of the Land League held here yesterday, Rev. Mr. Ryloff, Protestant clergyman, from Belfast, presided.

Letter from Archbishop Croke.

Archbishop Croke, of Cashel, has written to A. M. Sullivan, congratulating him on his reply to the Lenten Pastoral of Archbishop McCabe. Archbishop Croke says he unreservedly adopts Sullivan's sentiments against Archbishop McCabe's imputations.

Charge it to the Fenians.

LONDON, March 17.—At midnight, a policeman on duty at the Mansion House, observed a fire in the provisions, near the wall of the Lord Mayor's official residence, and found a wooden box which had contained a bomb, and a political paper had been recently applied. The officer extinguished the fire and took the box to the police station, when it was found to contain about forty pounds of gunpowder with a fuse in the side of it. No arrests are clear to the perpetrators.

The Lord Mayor says the explosion would probably not have injured the Mansion House, but would have damaged Egyptian Hall and the adjacent private houses, and would certainly have killed at his feet, shattering both his legs below the knee, and inflicting other terrible injuries. The Czar was immediately conveyed in an unconscious state to the Winter Palace, where he died at 4:30 this afternoon. Two persons were injured in the affair, one of whom was killed immediately. The explosion killed an officer and a Cossack. Many policemen and other persons were injured. A few minutes before his death the Emperor received the Sacrament.

Further Details from France.

PARIS, March 14.—The Chamber of Deputies unanimously adjourn in View of the death of Leo Czar.

In the Senate Leon Say alluded to the Czar as one of the greatest reformers of this century; Czar whose benefits will alert, one who has liberated millions of slaves. The Duke De Audiffret Pasquiet declared the Czar had been a friend of France, and the Senate, and France would not forget it. The Senate then adjourned. The funeral services were held to-day at the Russian Church. All the members of the Diplomatic Body, President Grevy's military household and most of the Cabinet Ministers, Marshal Canrobert, and McMahon and the ex-Queen of Spain were present. After the service, Prince Orloff and Staff took the oath of allegiance to the new Czar.

Crowds Drawn to London.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The Herald's London special says: There was a constant succession of crowds at the Russian Embassy to-day to express condolence. Among them were Empress Eugenie, Princess Ambassadors and foreign Ministers in London, members of the Government, Lord Beaconsfield, Mr. Alexander Gait, Cardinal Manning, and Russell Lowell.

It was of the consolation was received by the Russian revolutionary party in London at 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon from their friends in Paris, Dublin and St. Petersburg. It was announced in social democratic halls by respective leaders, who read it in the evening and was greeted with loud and prolonged manifestations of approval.

A London Plot.

CHICAGO, March 18.—The Times' London cable says: The Russian Embassy have offered to have evidence regarding the Czar's assassination, the assassination Finnegan, in the Fifth Avenue, glycerine, and in fact the entire scheme, originated in London.

Revolutionary Romance.

PARIS, March 18.—The Voltaire has a telegram that the estate of the Emperor literally pushed out when the bombs struck him. An anonymous letter, accompanying the intended assassination, was sent to the Prince Dolgorouki on Sunday morning. She endeavored to persuade the Emperor to stay at home.

A nihilist placard, proclaiming death to Alexander, and warning him that if he did not adopt a liberal policy he would share his father's fate, was pasted on the walls of St. Petersburg Sunday evening. The Voltaire counsels the new Czar to break at once with Pomsteff and the Ignatieff. It says: Our wishes are neither untimely nor impertinent. The new Czar will be French enough for us if he is thoroughly Russian.

Humor of a European War.

NEW YORK, March 18.—The Tribune prints an interview with ex-Governor Curtain, formerly Minister of Russia, in which he says he believes the assassination of the Emperor will hasten a

New Advertisements.

SULLIVAN'S, THE LEADING CLOAK AND SUIT HOUSE, 120 Kearny Street. Just Received the Latest Parisian & New York NOVELTIES, IN— LADIES' AND CHILDRENS' COSTUMES, DOLMANS, ULSTERS, JACKETS, WRAPS, ETC. SULLIVAN'S, 120 KEARNY STREET.

CHARLES R. ALLEN AGENT Pittsburg Coal Mining Co. WHOLESALE AND RETAIL DEALER. CONSTANTLY ON HAND: COAL ... from Great Britain ... from Great Britain ... from Maryland ... from Pennsylvania ... from Br. Columbia ... from Br. Columbia ... from Washington T. ... from Oregon. Office and Family Trade Solicited. TELEPHONE No. 308. Main Office, No. 120 Beale Street. BRANCH OFFICE, No. 200 California Street, Corner of Front.

MULLIGAN, DYAL & CO., PRIVATE DETECTIVES, 214 Sansome St., bet. Pine and California (Branch of Change.) All business strictly confidential.

WASHING. PRICES REDUCED. La Grande Laundry. LAUNDRY Thirteenth St., bet. Folsom and Howard, S. F. BRANCH OFFICE, 1106 Market Street. PRINCIPAL OFFICE: 648 MARKET STREET, Open from 7 a. m. to 7 p. m. Saturdays, 12 p. m.

Advertisements.

D FAVORITE Donnelly's YEAST POWDER Is Now Taking the LEAD of all other Brands. For Sale by All Grocers. W. F. CORNBELLIS, Jr. T. A. BOSSOM.

PACIFIC Business College, 320 POST ST. SAN FRANCISCO. Life Scholarships $70. Paid in Instalments $75. SEND FOR CIRCULARS.

JNO. KELLY, JR. (Formerly of the Brooklyn Hotel) TRANSACTS ALL BUSINESS CONNECTED WITH FIRE INSURANCE, 409 California St., S. F.

CHOKE BORE POWDER. DU PONT'S NEW AND UNRIVALED BRAND "CHOKE BORE" GUNS. Burns slowly, strong and quick; does not choke or foul the barrel. For sale by all the gun dealers, and at the DU PONT AGENCY, 115 Pine Street, S. F. JOHN SHINKER, AGENT.

HODGES CLOAK AND SUIT ROOMS, No. 10 Fifth St., near Market S. F. Ladies' Suits from $4.50 up. Also, a Full Line of Corsets, Morning Wrappers, Corsets and Ladies Underwear, Dress Trimmings, Etc. Special attention to Orders at Lowest Rates.

SIXTH ST. Suit and Cloak House Ladies and Children's Underwear AND FANCY GOODS. Mrs. Mulvey, Miss Hart. No. 26 Sixth Street.

EVERYBODY SMOKES J. W. Schaffer's GREENSEAL CIGARS GEORGE H. TAY & CO. Tay, Brooks & Backus, IMPORTERS OF Metals, Stoves, Ranges AND House-Furnishing Hardware, S. W. Corner California and Davis streets.

WINTHROP PORTABLE RANGE! (ALL SIZES.) EXPERT RANGE WRANGLERS. SINGLE AND DOUBLE OVENS. Chas. Brown, Agent, NO. 18, DUPONT ST., SAN FRANCISCO. See Advertisements.

DECORATIVE WALL PAPERS. Our New Stock of WALL PAPERS embrace an Elegant Assortment of the Newest French, English and American Patterns, and include Special Art Designs with Friezes and Dados to Match, for PARLORS, HALLS, DINING-ROOMS AND CHAMBERS. Experienced Workmen in Interior Decorating Employed. GEO. W. CLARK, 645 MARKET STREET.

JONAS J. MORRISON, LUMBER DEALER, Corner Mission and Spear Streets. SAN FRANCISCO. A Choice Assortment of Sugar Pine, Spruce' Cedar, Redwood, Puget Sound and Oregon Lumber Constantly on Hand. Also Laths, Shingles, Shakes, Etc.

New Advertisements.

DAY'S Kidney PAD ACTS DIRECTLY ON THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER AND URINARY ORGANS by ABSORPTION. It allays all pain, cures Kidney Disease, and purifies the system through the power of its medicinal properties. Sold by druggists, or sent by mail, on receipt of $1 per box. Address DAY'S KIDNEY PAD, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, giving a WONDERFUL POWER to cure at once.

PAIN IN THE BACK, SIDE OR BOWELS, WEAKNESS, RHEUMATISM AND KINDRED DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS, BLADDER, DROPSY, DIABETES, GRAVEL, BRIGHT'S DISEASE, DIFFICULTY TO REST OR EXPEL THE URINE, PAIN IN THE BLADDER, HIGH COLORED, SCANTY OR PAINFUL URINATING, DEPOSITS, GASTS OR SEDIMENT IN THE URINE, NERVOUS & NERVOUS DEBILITY, and in fact any disease of these great organs which may be induced by previous habits, climate, drink, the abuse of nature or other use.

The remarkable power of this medicine, combining healing ingredients and potencies (internal medicines) is so much sought, where, unknown, it is the body and limbs, disturb over the kidneys.

It is recommended by the purest, safest, pleasant and reliable in its effects, but POWERFUL IN ITS ACTION. IT can be worn at all times, in any climate, and is equally good for MAN, WOMAN, or CHILD. DO not be prejudiced. GIVE IT A TRIAL, and be convinced. It is a DRY VEGETABLE, and is just what your feeble and exhausted body requires and just and is daily adding their testimony to the wonderful curative powers of this great remedy, who are being relieved to perfect health after all other treatments and remedies had failed. Ask your druggist for it, and accept NO IMITATION OR SUBSTITUTE. If he has not got it, send in an and receive it by return mail.

PRICE, INSTITUTE PRICE, $1.—Regular Pad, $1; Special Pad, for Chronic, deep seated, or cases of long standing, $5; Children's Pad, for summer complaint, wash full strength and best setting, $1.00. Our book, "How a Life was Saved," containing a history of this great discovery, mailed free. Pills for 25.

CAUTION.—Owing to the many worthless Kidney Pads and Pads in the market, we do not guarantee the DAY'S KIDNEY PAD, unless it is purchased of the DAY'S KIDNEY PAD, take no other, and you will not be disappointed. ADDRESS, WATSON & CO., General Agents, 120 Market Street. San Francisco.

Catholic Mutual Beneficial Association OF THE Archdiocese of San Francisco. OFFICE OF THE ASSOCIATION HAS BEEN removed to No. 116 Montgomery street (under the Occidental Hotel) where the Secretary will be in attendance every evening from 7 to 9 o'clock, and where all information relative to the Association can be obtained. Written communications should be addressed to EDWARD GILSON, Secretary. 1319 Jones Street.

New Advertisements.

BUSINESS DIRECTORY

Architects: T. J. WELSH, N. E. cor. Pine and Montgomery streets. Assayers: W. D. JOHNSTON, Assay Office and Chemical Laboratory, 116-120 Halleck st., nr. Leidesdorff. Hats and Caps: "THE HAT STORE," 101 Kearny street, near Pine. Printing: COSMOPOLITAN PRINTING HOUSE, P. J. Thomas 536 Clay st. Wood Carvers: E. POWER, Wood Carver; church decorations a specialty, 636 Tehama street, near Ninth, S.F.

These Prices apply only to plain pieces. Goods requiring extra time and labor will be charged accordingly. WASHING CALLED for and DELIVERED to any part of the city. Orders will receive prompt attention.

BUSINESS CARDS, Neatly Printed at Reasonable Rates.

$70 A WEEK $12 a day at home easily made. Costly Outfit Free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Maine.

New Advertisements.

PIANOS, ORGANS, CATHOLIC BOOKS, ARTICLES OF DEVOTION In Great Variety at J. B. O'Connor & Co., 15 Dupont st., near Market, SAN FRANCISCO. Send to us for catalog, or prices and terms.

DR. BOLAN. OFFICE REMOVED TO— No 765 Market Street. (bet. Third and Fourth Sts.) OFFICE HOURS 10 to 12 m. and 1 to 4 p. m.

HOPE FOR THE DEAF. Garmore's Artificial Ear Drums PERFECTLY RESTORE THE HEARING and perform the work of the Natural Drum. Are Invisible, Comfortable, Durable, Cost Little. Are not to be felt or seen when in position. Sent on trial. Circulars free. Address, with stamp, Wm. GARMORE & CO., 4 W. Second St. & Race sts., Cincinnati, O.

UNDERTAKERS.

COWEN & PORTER, UNDERTAKERS, No. 112 Geary Street, San Francisco.

ATKINS MASSEY, UNDERTAKER, PRACTICAL FURNISHING UNDERTAKER, Parlor's Burial Caskets always on hand, and Agents for Fisk's Metallic Burial Cases. Everything necessary for funerals kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges. Office—651 Sacramento street, between Kearny and Webb.

THOS. FLANAGAN & M. J. GALLAGHER, FLANAGAN & CALLAGHER, UNDERTAKERS, (Late of No. 638 Market Street.) HAVE REMOVED TO No. 20 FIFTH STREET, Opposite the Lincoln School. EVERYTHING NECESSARY FOR FUNERALS kept constantly on hand. Orders from the country will receive prompt attention, at moderate charges.

THE MONITOR, A CATHOLIC FAMILY JOURNAL, DEVOTED TO THE PROPAGATION AND DEFENSE OF CATHOLIC PRINCIPLES. Published by THE MONITOR PUBLISHING CO. (Office: 511 Clay street, San Francisco, California.)

TERMS OF SUBSCRIPTION:

Single Copies	10c
Per Year by Mail	$4 00
Six months "	2 00
Three " "	1 00
To Ireland or any of the British Provinces	5 00

All subscriptions are payable in advance.

Address all communications, remittances, checks and postal orders to R. J. McGinnis, Editorial Manager. Monroe Office, Box 2302 P. O., San Francisco, Cal. Entered at the San Francisco Post Office as Second-Class Matter.

The Monitor.

For thy Soul be not ashamed to say the Truth.....Strive for Justice for thy Soul, and even into Death fight for Justice, and God will overthrow thy enemies for Thee. (Ecclesiasticus iv. 28.)

VOL. XXIV. SAN FRANCISCO, THURSDAY, MARCH 24, 1881. NO. 24.

THE MONITOR

is now in the twenty-fourth year of publication, and its subscribers without exception are satisfied and reliable Religious Newspaper, has gained for it a wide circulation and an influence which makes THE MONITOR a valuable medium for advertisers.

Advertisements inserted at reasonable rates.

To Correspondents.

Communications, to secure insertion, should be hand in not later than Tuesday of each week.

No communications will be inserted unless accompanied by the authors real name. This is required as a private guarantee of good faith.

Communications will be gladly received from all interested in the cause advocated by this Journal. Unless published should be as brief as possible, and always write legibly, and on one side of the paper only. We cannot undertake to return the MSS. of unused letters.

All contributions and communications, whether on business or otherwise, are to be addressed to the Monitor.

Poetry.

(FOR THE MONITOR.)

THE LAND LEAGUE TO MICHAEL DAVITT.

Oh, noble heart so true, so strong!
Oh, here tried and true!—
Who dared the tyrant's cruel chain,
Thy helpless land to save—
The seed sown by thy patient toil
Is ripening through the gloom.
We take thy work with earnest hands,
With hearts that curse thy doom.

Oh, true and true! Oh, brave man!
If this can cheer thy way,
Be sure our hearts, our loves, our lives,
Are at thy call to-day.

Oh, a brilliant heart, so full of love
For God and native land,
The seed of freedom thou hast sown
Shall ever proudly stand.
How can we show our love for thee,
Oh, leader brave and true?
We take with earnest heart and hand
The work you bade us do.

True man! oh, brave man!
If this can cheer thy cell—
We pledge our lives unto the cause
Which you have loved so well.

Oh, tyrant power! thy day is past—
Thy day of cruel wrong.
The God of justice sees thy crimes,
And hears our cry—"How long?"
In His good time His wrath shall fall
And crush thy sinful land;
His power shall raise His faithful sons
From out thy cruel hand.

Oh, patriot brave! oh, hero true!
God speed the moment when
Thy fetters broke, shou'll stand again
Free man amid your land!

Oakland, Cal. KATE E. QUINLAN.

How the Irish Farmers are Famished.

At a recent meeting of the Land League in Dublin, Messrs. Finn, P. P., Parnell and Four-mile-water, gave the following details of the oppressive measures used by Irish land-agents to coerce their hankibing tenants into renewing leases at exorbitant rents. To call such means and instruments of oppression "contracts" is a bad misnomer. Father Finn said:

He lived in a rural district. Some months ago he made inquiries as to the state of the poor in the district, and he might truly say that every farmer, large or small, in the district was a member of the branch; and, the Coercion Bill notwithstanding, they would hold their own. Land was the cause of all Ireland would not be one moment in connection with the Land League only that they believed that the principles in the League were just, fair, and moral (hear, hear). The Coercion Bill would give occasion to the landlords. He found in his own parish that as the Government had passed the Queen's writs were running, Lord Ashtown, who purchased five years ago from Lord Castlemaine the property, the rental of which was about £7,000 a year, had shown it got out of lease sent the agent over it, to slip quietly down and search in this field, and another in that, and when he had done so the tenants were told that there would be an increase of rent. They got three days within which to sign the new lease, on pain of eviction.

Mr. Dillon—That is the freedom of contract.

The Chairman—Was the agent Mr. Uniacke Townsend?

Rev. Mr. Finn said he was. In one case the rent was raised £7—from £84 to £91. Griffith's valuation being £48 10s. They might think, perhaps, that that was enough. But not so. Not only was the rent increased, but four acres of land were taken from him. This man had been served with a Queen's writ for the payment of that rent. He was under coercion that he signed the lease (hear, hear). There was another landlord in the district, a Mr. Perry, who had become landlord about eighteen years ago of property worth about £3,000 a year. During the last 17½ years every single tenant had been obliged to take out four leases. One man with whom the landlord had a quarrel had to take out five leases. Every time a new lease was taken out there was an increase of rent, until the rents, which at first were 20s. an acre were now 50s. an acre. These men refused to pay because they could not pay, and they would not pay (cheers).

The Chairman—Who is the agent?

Rev. Mr. Finn said there was no agent. About nine years ago the whole property was cut of lease. Each man had a notice to quit. Then a bailiff was sent to them to tell them to come in and sign. They never saw the lease, nor a copy of it; they only saw the place where they were to put their names. If the farmers of Ireland were true to themselves there would be a change in that system (hear, hear). With regard to that property of Lord Ashtown, it bounded the river Suir, and one tenant had 7½ acres of the river measured in front, and he dared not throw a line on it to catch a fish on a Friday. Another man had 16½ acres of land measured on the river side.

Mr. Dillon moved that Father Finn be requested to write out the statement he had just delivered, and he (Mr. Dillon) advised the committee to get it printed, and they would circulate ten or twenty thousand copies of it in England. He had never heard a more valuable statement. It covered the whole ground of freedom of contract.

Mr. Kettle seconded the motion. There was no fear of Ireland; there was no fear of the Irish race; there was no fear of the Land League, so long as they had men like Father Finn's parishioners, and so long as they had priests like Father Finn.

CHURCH BELLS.—Every parlor who may require bells for church and school house should secure one of the BUTLER Manufacturing Co.'s Bells. Messrs. Linforth, Rice & Co., 401 Market street, are the agents to whom to apply for terms, etc.

LATEST NEWS —FROM— IRELAND

Impression that the Mansion House Plot Originated With the Police

NEW YORK, March 18.—The World's London special, speaks of the Mansion House plot, says Lord Mayor McArthur is one of the liberal members for Lambeth, and his relations with the Irish members in Parliament are quite cordial. He receives a very large Irish vote in his constituency. If it is the Fenian policy to destroy property, why, of all places in London, did they select the Mansion House, and why make the attempt with a few pounds of powder, when a dynamite cartridge could have done the business more thoroughly? The story as told by the police authorities is doubtless true enough, as far as it goes, but the impression strongly obtains in the minds of the inner workings of the force, is that the police themselves put up the job. The public is nervous, and ready to accept the coverior of mysteries powder packages lead to the demand for extra detectives, and drafted out of the regular force. It is much pleasanter to walk about in plain clothes, with extra pay, than to trudge in uniform on a monotonous beat. Moreover, the finders of these "infernal machines" are always handsomely rewarded out of the Gratuity Fund, and put down for early promotion.

A MESSAGE OF SYMPATHY.

LONDON, March 19.—Lowell, the American Minister, yesterday received a telegram from the President of the Knights of St. Patrick, of St. Louis, expressing sympathy with Parnell, and requesting Lowell to forward the telegram to Parnell.

ADDITIONAL ARRESTS.

DUBLIN, March 18.—Two more prisoners have been lodged in Kilmainham Jail.

A DANGEROUS INTRIGUE.

DUBLIN, March 18.—The Freeman's Journal regards the appointment of a Papal Nuncio at the Court of St. James as one of the most dangerous intrigues ever attempted by England against the nation and the faith of Catholic Ireland.

THE ARMS BILL PASSED.

LONDON, March 18.—The House of Lords has passed the Arms Bill.

CARTRIDGES FROM AMERICA.

LEITH, March 18.—When the Customs officers broke open the cases of the cake from New Orleans, a box was discovered containing several thousand cartridges. It is stated it was originally intended to discharge the cargo at Queenstown. The police have taken charge of the cartridges.

A HOMESTEAD FOR DAVITT.

MONTREAL, March 18—At a concert, McNamee, President of the St. Patrick's Society, proposed that a homestead be raised to buy a homestead for Michael Davitt, and that the British Government should be asked to allow him to come to Canada, where the free air of the Dominion will soon convert him into a loyal subject. The suggestion was adopted, and many handsome subscriptions poured in on the spot, one being from the Mayor, who accepted the appointment of Treasurer.

GLADSTONE'S HEALTH FAILING.

NEW YORK, March 20.—The World's London special says: It is undeniable that Gladstone's strength is giving way. He looks like a wreck of his former self. While speaking in the House he constantly rubs his hand slowly across his forehead, as if suffering from pain or trying to collect his thoughts. Obstruction seems to have made the House a bear garden, and it is a nightly torture to him to conduct its so-called business. The troubles which have arisen in India, Ireland and the Transvaal weigh heavily upon his unstrung nerves.

ATTITUDE AND OPINION OF THE CLERGY.

NEW YORK, March 20.—A telegram from Dublin to the Times' London bureau says: The Land League never stood more firmly as now. The utterances of the leaders have more definitness than ever, and Catholic clergymen are becoming active members. The Government press demand that these clergymen be shown no favors. One journal says: "Force may impinge by the dozen the village ruffians for what they are suspected of doing before the Coercion bill passed, but what of the increased Chairman who held up Davitt to admiration and denounced landlordism in such strong language? It is now probable, in fact certain, that had some obscure persons spoken in the same way, he would have been arrested without hesitation; but the Roman Catholic clergy may, it appears, say what they like with impunity."

MORE LAND MEETINGS.

LONDON, March 21.—Several land meetings were held in Ireland yesterday. Dillon spoke at Woodford and strongly denounced the Irish Judges.

DUBLIN, March 21.—The cases of the Trales Land Leaguers are adjourned to the summer Assizes. The present juries are all said to be members of the League.

The Irish Land League has this week received £3500, being the greatest amount ever raised in any one week since the League was established.

LAND BILL DILEMMA.

The character of the forthcoming Land bill is the subject of earnest discussion. There is reason to believe there will be an effort on the part of the Government to construct something which is in the nature of a substantial remedy for Irish grievances, but the difficulty is to construct something which will not be fought by the Conservatives and thrown out by the House of Lords. It seems that in this case the Government will introduce a measure which will afford as much relief as they thin', can be passed through the two houses.

—Eggs will be sold by the dozen at wholesale prices during Lent at Cash Grocery, 519 Post street, near Mason.

The Coercion Act.

VIEWS OF AN IRISH PRELATE.

What the Result of the Coercion Bill Will Be.

The Patriotic Bishop of Meath Explains to his People.

The Right Rev. Dr. Nulty, Bishop of Meath, on his return from Rome, where he had an interview with his Holiness the Pope on the Irish land question, was entertained at a banquet in St. Mary's College, Multifarnham, by the priests and people of his diocese. The greatest possible interest is manifested in the event, and his lordship's reception was most enthusiastic. Ten vicars-general; thirty priests, and a large number of the laity were present at the banquet. After an address of affectionate welcome had been read, to which the Bishop fittingly replied, Dr. Nulty alluded to his recent visit to Rome as follows:

THE POPE ON THE AGITATION.

He said. The kindness with which he had been received by the Holy Father, who had expressed himself familiar with his writings, and had pronounced upon one of them a panegyric which he would be ashamed to repeat to them. (Applause). He rejoiced to be able to state that his Holiness did not disapprove of the just, lawful, and peaceable agitation for the regeneration of their country's rights. (Loud applause.) On the contrary, his Holiness had expressed the strongest possible desire, and had almost given expression to a prayer that they would be successful in the recovery of their rights. (Applause.) The Holy Father added that, looking to the north and the south, to the left and the right, he saw portions of his Church which gave him great anxiety and trouble; but of all the world there was not one spot to which he looked with so much affection, happiness, and comfort as their own dear Ireland. He deprecated and condemned, no doubt, any excess that might accompany the agitation—every good man did so—but they were not responsible, neither was the agitation. Speaking for his Holiness, and he had been assured by others, that there was nothing they detested, abhorred, and deprecated more than the disgraceful outrages that had brought ruin and shame on the country.

LANDLORD HUMANITY.

Now, referring to what he had in an humble way done to raise his voice against the oppressions, chapter and verse, of misery, pain and sorrow to our poor people in this country, he could only say that he had done so—and he would do so again. He never would stand by and look with complacency or even patience at the ruin and desolation that landlords had brought upon Ireland, and particularly that had been promoted to the late trials as a witness, and was prepared to give testimony to the effect that there was not a single one of

SEVEN HUNDRED PEOPLE TURNED ADRIFT AND THEIR HOUSES LEVELLED.

He had seen seven hundred people turned adrift—not in one day, nor in one week, rather in two—for it took two days. He had seen their houses leveled to the ground, and their goods, not a single person inside those houses owed one farthing's rent but one, and that one was proved and admitted to the tenant not to pay their rents. But they did pay them, and he was the crowbar brigade levelling the houses of honest men to the ground—houses that sheltered seven hundred human beings. He saw those seven hundred human beings were in two houses fever-stricken victims, and the crowbar brigade refused to take them down. Death was very busy there, and they were afraid of catching the disease. But the exterminators were determined to carry out their work. They put a hundred and sheet over those poor sick girls, took the roof from the house, and the exterminator had to do it carefully, "for," said he, "I hate the bother of coroner's inquests." (Hilarity.)

WOMEN WEEPING AT THE SIGHT OF THEIR HOME.

The house was levelled, and next day his lordship attended these girls and administered the last rites of the Church to them whilst there was no covering over their heads but the canopy of heaven. He saw the police officers, strong, rough men, but who had hearts in their bosoms, blubbering like children at the sights of horror that met their eyes. The poor girls—it was in September, with equinoctial gales blowing, saturated with wet, and with streaks of rain upon their famished faces—presented with the whole scene the saddest and most awful spectacle of suffering humanity he had ever witnessed. He was present in court to give evidence of scenes like these, but he would not be allowed. He remembered one instance where a man came forward and offered eight years rent in advance if he would be allowed to remain in his little home, but was refused.

THE Poetry.

PRAY FOR ME.

Heart misty contains of more are gray,
Day's cast is tinged with the flush of day.
Here and there dim figures pass
Some on their way to early Mass.

Maids comes from a gas-lit hall,
Beside them a wild and joyous ball
False mirth is there, the falsest smiles
Of serious hearts, and vanity's wiles.

By angels guarded, a fair girl goes,
Sweet and pure as a dew-wet rose,
Thinking of Him who rolled walls
Behind the tabernacle gates.

Out of the hall room bright and warm
Flashes a radiant, graceful form—
Raising the cup of the maiden sweet,
Hearing her sabots in the street.

"Pray for me!" she whispers low,
Repeating an instant in the same,
"I know you not, but you're good, I think,
Pray for me on temptation's brink.

Back she went in her silk and lace,
A new, strange light on her patrician face.
The maiden told her blessed beads,
And prayers are of good works the seeds,

She prayed for this woman, fair and gay;
Her prayers were answered; there came a day
When a penitent died most happily,
Twas she who had whispered, "Pray for me!"

Literary Miscellany.

The Warden of Galway.

